GERMANY, ITALY

writer Pertinax wrote:

"Germany conspires against the French Empire at the very moment when she promises to respect her continental frontiers."

May Call Conference

A number of French observers reported Chancellor Hitler would call an Italian-German conference at Munich to determine the next move of the Rome-Berlin axis.

The conference, they said, was decided upon after a reported demand by Premier Mussolini that Germany support Italy in her campaign for Tunisia and Corsica.

These reports weakened in some quarters and strengthened in others Premier Daladier's reported plan to use the international situation to obtain a favorable vote.

The Premier's associates said he had staked the life of his government on the National Defence issue.

He was prepared, his friends said, to remind Parliament that the Italian anti-French campaign began last week just as the general strike was developing in France. Parliament will convene today.

"What would Italy have done if the strike had been successful and the government powerless?" one Daladier supporter asked. "What would Italy and Germany do if Parliament overthrew the Daladier government now?"

May Increase Support

Although even pro-government observers gave Daladier little more than a 30-vote majority a few hours before the Chamber of Deputies convened, they said the International situation might increase his support.

Daladier appeared to have been strengthened by strike developments of the past 24 hours.

The Liner Paris sailed for New York from Cherbourg with naval officers and men filling out the strike-riddled crew.

Crews of the Liner Cuba and the Fort de France which arrived at La Havre yesterday voted overwhelmingly against a strike. Several vessels of smaller lines left port during the day, although the crews of the Normandie, the Paris and other French Line ships remained on strike.

Strike Collapses

Daladier found plenty of support both at home and in the colonies for his defence of France's empire.

Few well-informed sources were inclined to take the Italian demands for Tunisia and Corsica seriously, but many believed they were the opening of a campaign for other demands that would get official Italian sanction.

The demands so far have been voiced by the Press and by demonstrations, which brought a protest from Paris. Counter-demonstrations have been staged in France and by French sympathizers in Tunisia and Corsica.

Students of Toulouse University marched through the streets of Toulouse yesterday carrying huge placards labelled "we want Sardinia, Sicily and Tripoli"—Italian possessions.

At Tunis, Tunisia, 1,000 railroad workers marched from the Central Station to the nearby Italian Consulate and smeared the building with red, white and blue—the colors of France.

EASY PICKINGS

Plainfield, N.J., Dec. 9 (AP)—A sit-down bandit was sought by police today as an auto thief and holdup man. Harry Johnson of Roselle, driver of a parcel delivery truck from Newark, said the lazy bandit drove up beside his parked truck last night, nonchalantly leaned over in the seat, wafted a gun through the window and demanded: "Hand over the money." Johnson said he handed over $100.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Dec. 9 (CP)—Light snow or rain has fallen in many parts of Ontario and Quebec and it is raining this morning in West Maritimes. Except for scattered snowflurries, the weather has been fair over the Prairie Provinces. It has been moderately cold over Northwestern Ontario and East Manitoba but mild in other districts.

Lake Superior—Fresh easterly and northerly winds; partly cloudy and a little colder tonight with snowflurries. Saturday, fresh winds, shifting to southeast in west portion; partly cloudy followed by light snow.

Western Provinces—Mostly cloudy and milder with some light snow. Saturday, strong west to northwest winds; partly cloudy with scattered snowflurries. A little colder on Saturday.

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Twenty-four hour weather ser-
Science Service Meteorologist

Weather and ice! December and January is the time when the ice crop in our ponds, lakes and rivers does its growing. This crop has always been a good one in New England and New York state, where the mean temperatures are below the freezing point and minimum temperatures of zero and lower are frequent. These states began exporting ice early, 130 tons in 1806 and 146,000 tons in 1856. From these beginnings the export trade rose to about 15 million tons. The opinion that manufactured ice could never compete with that formed by nature was early expressed; but now we have not only manufactured ice from water but also "dry-ice" from carbon dioxide.

FRANCE TO FIGHT IF NECESSARY, TO GUARD TUNISIA

JUST PROPAGANDA

Massing of Troops in Insurgent Spain Closely Watched

By CHARLES FOLTZ

Paris, Dec. 9 (AP)—Sources close to Premier Daladier said today France would fight, if necessary, to defend Tunisia but claimed that Italy's military chances of attacking and seizing the colony from Libya or from the sea were "zero".

These sources viewed the Italian campaign for the French Protectorate as simply a "propaganda advance guard" for other and more temperate demands concerning the rights of Italians living in Tunisia.

Reports that Italian troops were massing in Insurgent Spain near the French frontier, however, were said to be receiving the closest attention of the War Ministry.

The French view appeared to be that the troop movements in Spain were concerned only with a future Insurgent offensive against Catalonia.

Take No Chances.

France took no chances. French military sources said that if the reports were confirmed the defence ministry might increase Pyrenees fortifications and take additional precautions by strengthening troops in that region.

These reports, received here yesterday from the border, said 40,000 Italian troops had been massed in Northern Spain.

'ELEANOR GLIDE' NEW DANCE STEP

Dance Will Make Its Debut at the Cabinet Dinner

New York, Dec. 9 (AP) — The "Eleanor Glide", a modern dance version evolved with the help of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt from the terpsichorean past, will make its debut at the cabinet dinner in the White House next Tuesday, opening the Washington social season.

Miss Chaney, who travelled with the Roosevelts on the 1936 campaign tour, said she developed the "glide" from impromptu lessons Mrs. Roosevelt gave her at the White House recently in her favorite old-fashioned steps, including waltzes, polkas, mazurkas and square dances.

Mrs. Roosevelt said that the dance looked like "great fun", but that she would not do it Tuesday because the dancing would be "wholly exhibitional".

"That is an effort," Miss Chaney explained, "to create an American dance which will be just as much fun as the Lambeth Walk.

"It can be done to any fox trot tempo."

Mayor LaGuardia Receives Bullet In Sealed Letter

New York, Dec. 9 (AP)—Mayor Fiorello Laguardia yesterday received a bullet in a letter warning him: "You will get this if you continue to attack the German Nazi Party".

A Swastika was the signature.

Departing from his usual disregard of threats, the mayor immediately asked Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine to investigate. Postal authorities also were informed.

The package was sent to police headquarters for examination of fingerprints and other clues.

A clerk opened the letter. The mayor snatched it from his hands to prevent obliteration of fingerprints.

The script was bold and upright in heavy pencil or crayon.

21 KNOWN DEAD IN HEAVY STORM

Thousands Homeless on Typhoon - Swept Island

Manila, Dec. 9 (AP)—Typhoon-swept Philippine Island Provinces reported at least 21 dead, thousands homeless and heavy property damage today. Grave concern was felt the toll of dead and damage would increase as paralyzed communications were restored.

Some of the provinces had not been heard from since the 75-mile an hour storm whirled in from the Pacific yesterday and swept across the central Philippines. No word had come from Marinduque Island in more than 36 hours.

Eighteen drowned or were killed by falling trees on Samar Island. Albay province reported two dead and Camarines Sur Province one dead.

Damage in Albay Province was estimated at $400,000 and on Samar Island at [illegible],000. The Albay Province City of Legaspi, 53,000 population, was especially hard hit. Two dredge boats valued at $100,000 sank in the harbor there and wind and waves cut in two a newly built pier and cracked another.

1,500,000 Turkeys to Pass Inspectors for Christmas Trade

Ottawa, Dec. 9 (CP)—Skilled inspectors of the Department of Agriculture are busy with Canada's 1938 harvest of turkeys, chickens, ducks and geese. They are weighing them separating the fat from the lean, the choice from the not so choice and affixing tags for the guidance of Canadian housewives.

In the four weeks before Christmas, the busiest season of the year in the poultry trade, the inspectors will pass upon some 10,000,000 pounds of poultry, made up of about 1,500,000 individual birds.

Half Graded For Export.

Approximately half the Christmas poultry has already been graded including the export shipments to the United Kingdom and other countries. Government grading is compulsory for export shipments of poultry but is optional so far as the sale of poultry in Canada is concerned although increasing quantities of poultry are sold on grade in the domestic market.

Looking over the poultry situation as Christmas approaches, officials of the Poultry Branch of the Department of Agriculture note an increase in export of chickens to the United Kingdom and a decrease in export of turkeys as compared with last year, slightly lower prices than a year ago, a sharp decline in export of live birds to the United States, a smaller poultry production on the Prairie Provinces but slightly better quality than a year ago.

Bulk of Turkeys From West.

It is Western Canada which furnishes the bulk of poultry for the export market where Canadian turkeys, particularly, have established a reputation for quality. The principal export market is the United Kingdom but considerable quantities are shipped to Newfoundland and the British West Indies and on one occasion, to Honolulu.

Mild weather experienced in many parts of Canada this month is somewhat provoking to poultrymen. For one thing it diverts the thoughts of possible customers from Christmas dinners but its chief drawback is that it complicates the business of storing and shipping dressed fowl.

21 NATIONS OF WESTERN WORLD WORK FOR PEACE

Opposed to Foreign Aggression but Without Isolation

MOMENTOUS SESSIONS

U. S. Secretary Hull Says Any Menace to Peace Concern to All

By ANDRUE BERDING

Lima, Peru, Dec. 9 (AP)—Twenty-one nations of the Western Hemisphere opened the eighth Pan-American Conference today, to work for peace at home and against foreign aggression but without isolation from the rest of the world.

Momentous developments in Europe and Asia in the past five years, which have seen the rise of Nazi-ism, the intensification of Fascism, and the Japanese invasion of China, made the conference one of the most important since the Pan-American movement began.

The delegates gathering in the Peruvian House of Representatives for the inauguration of the conference had in mind economic and perhaps political steps against the authoritarian states.

'No Regional Solution'.

But from the United States Secretary of State, Cordell Hull, who headed his delegation, came the assurance the American Republics did not seek to cut themselves from the rest of the world. He declared the Americas "do not seek regional solution for economic problems" but that they "recognize the inter-dependence" of all nations of the world."

His assurances were seen as directed to Argentina, wishing to retain old world ties, and against some agitation that the United States direct all its foreign trade toward Latin America.

Mr. Hull said the Americas were determined "peace shall be maintained on the American continents," and that any menace against peace was a "matter of concern to all" and that the conference would seek to increase the effectiveness of "measures adopted already to that end."

No New Definition.

This brought from members of the United States delegation a prediction no such projects such as a new definition of the Monroe Doctrine would be advanced. They felt also that President Roosevelt's continental defence plan would not go beyond a resolution declaring the need for such defence and the intention of the 21 republics to defend themselves from outside aggression. They believed no formal defence pact would be proposed.

German Newspaper View.

Berlin, Dec. 9 (CP-Havas)—"Gigantic opposition from every side" will hamper the Pan-American Conference opening at Lima and "doubtless will prove insurmountable," the West-Deutscher Beobachter, published at Cologne, predicted today.

Seeking to amplify divergencies of view between the United States and Brazil, this newspaper quoted President Getulio Vargas as saying no country can take offence if Brazil seeks to further friendly relations with countries which purchase the products of Brazil.

Scrambled Eggs Now Called President's Special

New York, Dec. 9 (CP)—A boom in scrambled - eggs - for - breakfast eaters—alarming to pastry dealers—was reported today by Metropolitan restauranteurs as a result of President Roosevelt's announcement that this was his favorite breakfast dish.

The President told undergraduates of the University of North Carolina in a recent address that although they "may have heard for the past six years that I breakfasted every morning on a dish of 'grilled millionaire', actually for my breakfast I am a devotee of scrambled eggs."

The proprietor of a down-town cafeteria said consumption of scrambled eggs had almost doubled.

"They have a name for it already—they holler for a 'president's special'."

The headwaiter of a fashionable midtown eatery was close-lipped on the breakfast trends but he said some of the silk-hat trade was beginning to ask for "grilled or scrambled president".

Hawaiian Costume Takes Fire, Boy Fatally Burned

Edmonton, Dec. 9 (CP)—Burned when a Hawaiian costume made from binder twine caught fire at a rehearsal for a Christmas concert, Arol Soldberg, 13, of Ryley, Alta., died in hospital here.

The costume caught fire when the lad passed in front of a gas fire place on the stage of the community hall where the rehearsal was taking place.

THREE DROWN IN SOULANGES CANAL AS CAR UPSETS

Three Others Escape Through Windows and Doors

INQUEST ORDERED

Coteau Du Lac, Que., Dec. 9 (CP)—Inquest will open today into the drowning of three young men in the Soulanges Canal near this upper St. Lawrence River town last night.

Albert Leger, 22, Tolen O'Shea, 22, and George Crevrier, 18, died in the icy waters when the automobile in which they and three companions were driving plunged over a bank after Leger, the driver, had missed a turn from a side road onto the highway, and continued down to the canal.

Wilfrid Villeneuve, 20, his brother, Ernest, 15, and Lawrence St. John, 19, reached shore in safety after they had freed themselves from the sink-

2 CIVIL ACTIONS ON THE DOCKET

No Criminal Cases Will Come Before Court at Sitting

Only two civil actions are listed for trial at the Non Jury Sitting of the Supreme Court of Ontario, which is scheduled to open in Belleville on Monday next before the Honourable Mr. Justice C. P. McTague, Sheriff J. D. O'Flynn revealed today. No criminal cases are entered for trial, however.

A case of damages against the Board of Education of the City of Belleville, arising out of alleged injuries received by Ronald Legett, of this city, while at play at the West Belleville playgrounds, has been entered with young Legett as the plaintiff. It is alleged by the plaintiff, that certain injuries were sustained by him while at play at the city playground. The firm of Porter, Payne and Arnott represent Legett, while A. B. Collins, K.C., city solicitor for the City of Belleville, will represent the defendants.

In the case of Wasmund vs. Armstrong, the action is one of the question of title, an action for the declaration of ownership of a certain property named. The firm of Porter, Payne and Arnott represent the plaintiffs, while Frank Baalim, Madoc barrister, will represent the defendants.

CHINESE FORCES ROUT JAPANESE

Blocking Way to Nanchang, Cross River and Engage Enemy

Shanghai, Dec. 9 (AP)—Chinese forces blocking the way to Nanchang for months were reported to have crossed the Siao River today and routed the Japanese at Yungsui.

The Yungsui is on the Kiukiang-Nanchang Railway thirty miles north of Nanchang, important Chinese air base and capital of Kiangsi Province.

The Chinese have fought the invaders stubbornly every mile down the railway since the occupation of Kiukiang July 26, with the result that the Japanese have advanced only fifty miles in 135 days of fighting.

The Chinese also reported the Japanese drive westward from Hand bogged down along a zigzag line through Tsaoshih, 50 miles to the west.

Chinese military advices from Chunking, the temporary capital, reported fighting in South China near Tsungfa, 35 miles northeast of Canton.

ONE OF BANDITS FIRED AT CLERK WHEN HE MOVED

R. A. Bryan Hit on Arm but Not Seriously Hurt

QUICKLY EXECUTED

Two Customers in Bank When Three Men "Pull Job"

Port Credit, Ont., Dec. 9 (CP)—Three armed men robbed the Port Credit branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce today and one of them shot a bank accountant, R. A. Bryan, before escaping. Port Credit is ten miles west of Toronto.

Bank officials estimated $2,500 was stolen.

They said the three men carried out the robbery quickly and efficiently. One of them fired at Bryan when the accountant made a move that the robbers believed was towards a gun. Bryan was wounded in the arm and his condition was not serious.

Armed and masked, the three robbers held up the bank staff and two customers. P. Clarke of Port Credit was cashing a cheque when the holdup took place and Miss Hilda Bloor entered the office while the robbery was in progress.

Miss Bloor was ordered to raise her hands and was sent into the manager's office. Two bandits kept the staff covered and the third entered the teller's cage, stuffing his pockets with bills.

Harry Clarke, son of one of the customers, sat in a truck outside the bank and did not know a holdup was taking place until the trio fled in a truck stolen earlier from B. Stannah of Long Branch.

South America A Fertile Field For Nazi Propaganda

Cardiff, Wales, Dec. 9 (CP-Havas)—South America has become a fertile field for Nazi propaganda, which seeks to undermine British relations with South American countries, Col. Reginald Tristram Harper, director of the Buenos Aires Great Southern Railway, declared last night.

In Chile, nationals of German blood have been organized into semi-military groups by Nazi "missionaries", Col. Harper said in a speech. In other South American republics, German and Italian professors volunteer, and in many cases are accepted, to teach without pay in schools and universities, he added.

Propaganda from Berlin and Rome is flooding the entire continent, he said, while the Fascist movements are growing fast, he said.

Colonel Harper stressed it is to the interest of British exporters that South American railway companies and other public utilities remain under British control.

Jews 'Victims of Explosion of Man's Inhumanity,' Says Baldwin

London, Dec. 9 (CP)—In a nation-wide broadcast, Earl Baldwin of Bewdley last night appealed to "men and women of goodwill of all classes and creeds" to help victims of German anti-Semitism by contributing to the refugee fund bearing his name.

Officially opening the campaign, the former prime minister spoke as the accredited representative of Roman Catholic, Protestant and Jewish organizations. The money received will be apportioned among various refugee relief organizations irrespective of race or religion.

'Explosion of Man's Inhumanity'.

"I have to ask you to come to the aid of victims not of a catastrophe in the natural world, not of an earthquake, nor flood, nor famine, but of an explosion of man's inhumanity to man," Lord Baldwin said.

With thousands of men, women and children "despoiled of their goods, driven from their homes and seeking an asylum and sanctuary on our doorsteps, a hiding place from the wind, a covert from the tempest," it is now Great Britain's turn to help, Baldwin said.

The first task, he continued, is to rescue at least 50,000 "unfortunate children with the utmost speed and care for them while waiting for their transit to countries of settlement."

Goodwill Aroused.

"Mass migration to any sparsely inhabited territories is difficult and costly and must demand preliminary spade work and must take time, but the goodwill of many nations has been aroused," he declared.

In the United States, the Netherlands and other countries, he said, "men and women of goodwill of all classes and creeds are coming forward and I trust that Great Britain will not lag behind."

"I am no longer a minister of the crown," he declared. "I do not speak tonight as a politician or member of a party. I am an ordinary Englishman who is shocked and distressed by the plight of these despised and rejected people and their innocent children.

"Our Fellow Men"

"They may not be our fellow subjects, but they are our fellow men. Tonight I plead for victims who turn to England for help. For the first time in their long and troubled history they have asked us in this way for aid. The honor of our country is challenged. It is up to us to meet that challenge."

The former prime minister closed his appeal with the whimsical statement that in the present situation he was a "poor beggar".

"For long years I have been more used to receiving requests than making them," he said. "Others may carry on the campaign and collect money more effectively than I.

"My task is only to speak tonight to the hearts of our fellow countrymen, to the hearts of those who speak my tongue across the seas. I know their hearts. Their hearts I understand, and I am confident they will respond."

Drew, Lawson, Rawson And Heighington Allow Names to go to Ballot

Balloting Starts at 3 p.m. Lowest Candidate to be Dropped

CONVENTION PLEDGES

Candidates for Ontario Conservative Leadership Address Gathering

Toronto, Dec. 9 (CP)—Four nominations for the leadership of the Ontario Conservative Party were in the hands of Chairman Cecil Frost when the party's convention, called to elect a successor to Hon. Earl Rowe, reconvened here today.

The four were:

Col. George Drew, Toronto, nominated by Mayor William Morrison, Hamilton, and G. Elmer Johnston, Brockville.

Wilfrid Heighington, Toronto, by A. V. Waters, Cochrane, and May Wilson, Toronto.

Rev. Norman Rawson, Hamilton, by D. S. Stephens, Toronto, and Charles Stevens, Coldwater.

Hon. James Earl Lawson, Toronto, by A. R. Douglas, London, and Ellen Fairclough, Hamilton.

Balloting will start at three o'clock. Elaborate precautions to ensure its fairness were outlined to the convention. Should the first ballot elect, the result will probably be known by four o'clock.

Lowest To Be Dropped.

Beverly Matthews, chairman of the elections committee, said the lowest candidate on each ballot would be dropped from the next. If on any vote more ballots are cast than are issued by the elections committee, that entire ballot will be voided.

"We've done our best to anticipate anything that might be unfair and to stop that sort of thing," said Mr. Matthews.

"The primary need of the Conservative Party in Ontario is unity," said Chairman Frost, exacting from the delegates a standing pledge to support the chosen leader. From the candidates then was taken a pledge to support the victor.

Mayor Morrison, moving Col. Drew's nomination, said his candidate could go into any riding and fight his own fight. He had a chance to win Ontario. It was not a case of friendship. It was one of common sense.

"There is only one man the opposition is afraid of," said Mr. Morrison. "That is the man we want. We don't want a man the opposition wants. This man who is claimed to be disloyal went to the front and was wounded for his country and loyalty."

Mayor Morrison held up an anti-Drew pamphlet distributed to the delegates which, he said, questioned Drew's loyalty. It was the "last-minute, dying kick" of the anti-Drew element, he said.

Appeal to Youth

The most important problem was that of youth, said Col. Drew. In Ontario 75,000 came to voting age annually.

SWIFT ROBBERIES CARRIED OUT IN ONTARIO COUNTY

Several Escapes Made While Police Bullets Whined

$3,000 ROBBERY

Toronto, Dec. 9 (CP) — Thieves ran wild throughout Ontario County last night, carrying out swift robberies of garages and stores in Port Perry, Whitby, Caesarea, Blackstock, Uxbridge and Bowmanville.

They were interrupted at work three times during the night and escaped with police bullets whining around them. One was believed to have been wounded as the gang fled after a $3,000 robbery at Uxbridge.

Police pursuit was only seconds behind the fleeing gang's car at times during the night, which was unequalled for crime in the history of the county.

Escape Under Bullet Shower.

At Uxbridge the thieves smashed their way through the front door of the J. F. Brownscoombe Department Store and escaped under a hail of bullets. They took more than $3,000 worth of men's suits, coats, women's stockings and other wearing apparel.

Discovered by Nightwatchman Joe Murray as they left the store, the three robbers jumped into their car, waiting at the entrance with the engine running, and drove west. Murray phoned Chief Constable Wm. Vesey, who lost the trio on the outskirts of the town.

He notified County Constable William Miller, at Claremont, who flagged the car to stop as it sped through the town limits. Instead of slowing up, the car increased its speed. Miller fired three shots, one of which is believed to have struck an occupant.

Gasoline Locks Broken.

At Blackstock the locks on the gasoline pumps at Taylor's garage were broken and entry attempted at the garage doors. William Taylor, the proprietor, heard the noise and, armed with a light calibre rifle, he scared off the thieves and sent a couple of shots flying after them as they headed west.

From there they went to Port Perry, where shortly before 1 a.m. an attempt was made to enter the Port Perry Dairy, owned by Glen Owen, on Water street. The locks on the gasoline pumps at the Port Perry Wreckers' Service Station, just south of the dairy, were also broken.

Disturbed At Work.

The thieves were disturbed in breaking into the dairy when Owens heard them and got up to investigate. Chased along Water street, they sped through the village and circled back, again to come through the village and go east. Chief Constable Roy St. John and Art Jamieson, bakery proprietor, were in full chase.

City and District News

MANY GIRLS TAKEN ON AS STORE CLERKS

Further notes on the employment situation in Belleville, which outlook appears considerably brighter this season for the majority of shop and factory workers than for some time past, indicate that not all those affected just now are the latter class of trades. During the past week or so dozens of unemployed girls of Belleville have been given jobs in Front Street stores as the first of the Christmas rush of buying and shopping starts. In the larger establishments the pay roll has been considerably increased and augmented by the hiring of new counter assistants, and in many instances the single counter girl has now two or three helpers to care for the buying surge during the busy days. Even the mail order departments have been forced to expand their staffs to take care of this end of the business, which is reported extremely good.

WOLVES INVADE APSLEY DISTRICT

Reports from the district north of Apsley in Peterborough section, and near the Hastings County border of that district, reveal that settlers and bush workers have been hearing the cries of wolf packs on the hunt during the past several weeks. The carcasses of two fawns which had been partially eaten, have been found on Long Lake and Star Lake.

WRECK OLD BARN

Workmen are engaged in the removal of the old sheet iron barn at the rear of the Kyle House, preparatory to the demolition of this latter large building. As yet no definite announcement has been made by the contractor as to the date of work on this latter project, though daily numbers of the city's unemployed have been haunting the location anxious for work.

NO WORD RECEIVED

"No word has been received from the department as yet", it was stated by J. Arnold Thomson, Registered Architect, in charge of plans for the construction of the new Stirling high school, regarding the award of tender for the work. "Most of the tenders have been returned to the unsuccessful bidders, but the successful firm has not been announced."

S. A. BAND TO START YULETIDE SERENADING

Yuletide airs of Old England, and other favorite seasonal airs will be played throughout the city by the Salvation Army Band which will commence its Christmas serenading on Thursday, December 15th in the vicinity of Station St., Bleecker Avenue and Pine, Chatham and Alexander Streets. Other sections of the city will be visited as the season progresses.

Shipment of Parasites Received Here From Czechoslovakia

Despite the troubled times in Czechoslovakia, entomologists of that country are still pursuing their placid way, even yet taking an international part in the sciences of parasitical culture for foreign countries.

This week further shipments of spruce saw fly parasites, which Canada will use next summer in her unceasing war on the timber saw fly in the Gaspe Peninsula and Maritime Provinces were received at the local Dominion Entomological Laboratory on East Dundas Street from Czechoslovakia. The insects which arrived here by fast express in carefully insulated boxes will be placed in the "cold rooms" of the laboratory here where they will remain dormant until next summer.

Shipments of wheat stem saw fly parasites have also been received this week from England. The total shipments contain approximately 30,000 of the helpful insects.

Cheesemakers Plan For Larger Cheese Exhibit Next Year

Ambitious plans for bigger and better cheese and dairy show, which will be even more worthy of the title "British Empire Exhibition" than that which was concluded one week ago, the world's largest exhibition of cheese, as conceded by Canada's dairy experts, are already being entertained by officers of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association.

Certain plans which have not been announced for publication as yet will make the 1939 exposition of dairy products, without question the largest ever held in any country, including the London Dairy Show in London, England, at which Canadian cheesemakers may exhibit next year if given sufficient assistance by the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

The 1939 exhibition being arranged by the Central Makers' Association is expected to include all classes of dairy products. All that is needed to have Belleville named as the site of next year's show is the active interest and assistance by local residents, it was stated.

Firemen Drop Hammers, Saws And Brushes, Toys Are Ready

Exhibition of Re-Made Playthings to be Held at No. 2 Hall

READY FOR CHRISTMAS

Culminating weeks of work, painting, repairing, remodelling and generally overhauling hundreds of dilapidated toys presented to them by a generous public, for their Christmas Toy Fund, members of the Belleville Fire Department will throw open their "showrooms" at No. 2 Firehall to the general public tomorrow where results of the efforts of the boys in brass and blue may be seen.

There the public will see, mama dolls, gleaming in brand new complexions and in some cases new limbs and heads, toy autos and trains spick and span in new coats of paint, wagons, funny men, whistles, hockey sticks, in fact practically everything known to Toyland that has been undergoing minor and major operations during the past three weeks.

These fire laddies are nobody's fools when it comes to working with hammer and saw. They gave of their time, both spare time and while on duty unselfishly to the cause that will bring happiness to the hearts of hundreds of children to whom Christmas ordinarily would be just another day. They toiled faithfully at work that demanded patience and skill and their success is exemplified in the gleaming parade of Toyland that will be on exhibition tomorrow and the ensuing days.

Shelves have been erected and the toys have been tastefully arranged. There brilliant scarlets, yellows, greens and blues merge into a kaleidoscopic ensemble that will bring joy to the hearts of the grownups as well as the kiddies.

Fire Chief William Lynch extends a cordial invitation to the general public to visit the display which will open officially tomorrow at the Upper Front Street Fire Hall. "The public should visit our show", he said, "especially those who in their generosity present us at Christmastime with a great number of toys for these children. It will give them a chance to see what members of the Fire Department are doing at Christmas time."

SLIGHT CONCUSSION SUFFERED IN CRASH

Found lying in an unconscious condition in the ditch near his overturned truck, Harry Callaghan, 44 Edgehill St., Kingston, was rushed to the Belleville General Hospital by passing motorists shortly after 3.00 a.m. today. Upon admittance to the hospital it was discovered Callaghan was suffering from concussion, body injuries, shock and an injured right arm, Dr. R. S. Gibson stated after examining the injured man.

The accident was investigated by Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Eryine who discovered that Callaghan was proceeding easterly on Highway No. 2 as he approached what is commonly known as "Avis" Curve, two miles west of Deseronto. Apparently the fuse of the vehicle blew out and the lights failed. The light delivery truck crashed into the ditch, where it turned over. Callaghan was thrown out of the vehicle, where he was knocked unconscious. The name of the motorist to stop and aid the injured man was not available.

PAIR REMANDED ON CHICKEN THEFTS

George Coul, 29-year-old Cooper laborer, and Edward Gifford, 19, of Queensboro, appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., in today's police court charged with the theft of eight leghorn chickens, the property of John Tracey, 47 Cemetery St. The pair were remanded for one week in custody without being asked to plea.

"There is another man who is associated with this matter," revealed Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., as he intimated the third man sought by police was the ringleader of the alleged chicken thieves.

Coul and Gifford were arrested in North Hastings yesterday following the theft of Mr. Tracey's chickens. At the time of the robbery the birds were killed on the Tracey premises, police revealed following investigations of complaints.

GERALD WYCOTT GIVEN 6 MONTHS

Convicted on Charge of Criminal Negligence at Tweed

Gerald Wycott, Trenton, was sentenced to serve six months in the Ontario Reformatory, after being convicted on a charge of criminal negligence before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd in County Police Court held at Tweed yesterday. The sentence was dated to commence from the time of Wycott's arrest on October 20th last, however. The conviction followed a four hour trial, during which considerable arguments ensued between counsel. Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C., prosecuted the case, while Robt. Pringle, local barrister represented Wycott.

In his reasons for judgment, Magistrate Lloyd stated that "instead of feeling remorse or concern for the deceased, this man acted badly to police. This is something that cannot be passed over lightly."

The charge arose out of an accident on Oct. 20, in which a car driven by Wycott turned over about three miles east of Stoco. Kenneth Moore, a passenger, was pinned underneath the car and suffered fatal injuries. Evidence was brought out at the trial that Moore was standing on the running board when the car turned over.

Differ on Condition

Evidence on the state of Wycott at the time of the accident was conflicting. A number of farmers who aided in lifting the car off the body refused to say that Wycott was intoxicated. Constable McBrien, Chief Hayes and Dr. Dale were definite in their evidence that Wycott was intoxicated.

Constable McBrien testified that Wycott staggered when he was brought to the police office. "He used ambusive language, called Chief Hayes and myself boy scouts and told his lawyer over the telephone that we were using third degree methods on him. When we asked him to consent to a blood test he changed his mind three times," said the constable.

Wycott testified that Moore had opened the door and was standing up immediately before the accident. "I asked him what he was doing. This distracted my attention and before I knew it the car went in the ditch and turned over. Moore was pinned under the car and I was helpless to release him. I called for help and soon a number of men arrived and we were able to lift the car. I had had only four glasses of ale," he said.

Youngster Starts Business Career Early

And he means it literally too. The other day a determined-looking twelve-year-old youth strode into his store. "Anything I can do for you, son?" Reeve West asked.

"Yeah, there is, Mr. West," answered the youngster. "Say," he continued, "will you let me have a pair of overalls on credit?"

Reeve West stroked his chin. "No, I don't think I will, but I will let your father have them for you on credit."

"No," came back the youth, "I want them on my own credit."

"Er—how do you expect to pay me if I did advance you credit," cautiously inquired the reeve.

"Well, it's like this," explained the young financier. "My father has a pig that is going to have a lot of little ones, soon, and he has promised me two of them for looking after her. When they grow to be quite big pigs I will sell them and pay you the money."

"You now have the honor of being the youngest person on my books," he smiled, as he made out the bill.

Wolf is Shot After Battle With Hounds

A savage battle between a large wolf and two hounds ended in victory for the wolf on Wednesday afternoon at Trent River, but the wolf died a few minutes later from four bullets fired at close range by H. Revoir of Trent River, owner of the dogs.

It is the first time in a long period that a wolf has been sighted in that section.

It was first seen on the farm of John Scott on the edge of the hamlet, and H. Revoir and W. J. McLaughlin called their dogs and set off in pursuit. Headed toward Mud Lake the wolf had travelled about a mile when overtaken by one of the hounds, and was delayed briefly until the second dog could come up. Both dogs immediately entered into the snarling fray, which continued until both animals were badly ripped by the sharp fangs of the wolf. During a brief lull in the fighting, Revoir managed to get a clear shot at the intruder which was later found to measure four feet eight inches from tip to tip, weighing well over one hundred pounds.

LOST ELECTION

Delegates considered Col. Drew and Mr. Lawson the ones that would be in at the finish though the other candidates may have considerable strength. Real election campaigns—committee rooms, badges, literature—were being waged by the Drew and Lawson committees. Balloting for the new leader was set for 2 p.m.

Great Activity.

In the hotel at which the convention is being held there was great activity last night. Convention committees were meeting and delegates were being beseeched for this or that candidate.

It is expected 1,500 or more delegates will ballot. Great care is being taken to prevent all but delegates from getting on the convention floor. Alternate delegates will be in a roped-off section.

Loudest cheers yesterday were for Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, former leader and premier, who announced he was going to renew political campaigning in Ontario and then proceeded to wade into the Hepburn government record.

In 1920 he started out as Conservative leader with nothing but a shotgun and few shells, said Mr. Ferguson. But in 1923 he had the government's hide on the fence. "We can do it again," he proclaimed.

Pleads For Support.

Mr. Ferguson pleaded for support for the leader to be chosen today. Differences should be sunk after he is chosen.

Mr. Rowe delivered his valedictory as provincial leader. He said he lost an election but saved a party. He pledged his support to the leader to be chosen. Canada needed a united Conservative party.

"The same party that united Canada in the last century, can re-unite it in this. But if we are divided against ourselves, how can we."

Mr. Ferguson, not quite so vigorous a speaker as when he retired as prime minister in 1930 to become Canadian High Commissioner to London had the delegates cheering his good-natured sallies. In an extended criticism of Premier Mitchell Hepburn's administration he called him "Mitch" every time.

"I ask you as your retiring leader that tomorrow no matter who you may elect, you join with Mr. Ferguson to keep the Conservative party a great united force in Canada," Mr. Rowe said.

Made Only One Reference.

There was an expectation among the delegates that Mr. Rowe would say something about Col. Drew's candidature. The latter resigned as Conservative organizer just ahead of the 1937 election because he disagreed with Mr. Rowe's labor policy.

What most delegates considered was the only reference to Col. Drew by Mr. Rowe was in these words: "Who is here among you so doubtful a Conservative that he would form a coalition with our common enemy, for him alone have I offended."

(Col. Drew in his letter of resignation to Mr. Rowe urged the Conservative leader to enter a coalition government with Premier Mitchell Hepburn in order that there might be united opposition in Ontario to the Committee for Industrial Organization, militant labor body, now called the Congress of Industrial Organizations.)

FRANCE TO FIGHT

for Italy's chances of seizing Tunisia, pointed out that Tunisia had been the eastern outposts of France since 1883 and, as such, had long been well protected.

A line of fortifications modelled after France's famed Maginot Line covers the flat approaches to Tunisia from the seacoast to the rise of the desert plateau. Beyond the "African Maginot Line" Southern Tunisia's eastern frontier is well spotted with block houses manned by some of France's finest native and continental troops.

Particularly Vulnerable.

On the other hand, Italy's adjoining colony of Libya was said by French military experts to be particularly vulnerable from Tunisia.

Northern Tunisia, including the capital, has its coastal flank protected by the foothills of the Atlas Mountains. Libya, however, has no such natural defences, the French said, and would be easy prey to mechanized and horse units of France's North African forces.

A high source said every French military man, including Premier Daladier who long has been Minister for National Defence, believed that "until France is ready to surrender her African and eastern empire" Tunisia must remain French.

"That time has not yet come," this source said.

Prepare For Offensive.

Hendaye, France, Dec. 9 (AP)—Spanish Insurgent sources indicated today that in a movement of Italian troops to just south of the French-Spanish border was only a part of preparations for an offensive against Catalonia.

Without confirming border reports that 10,000 Italians were concentrated at Logrono alone, these sources said the French had no cause for alarm.

Although the Insurgent border remained closed, reports drifted in through the Pyrenees that General Franco's offensive awaited completion of naval preparations.

This report led Insurgent sources on the French side of the frontier to predict that General Franco planned to subject Catalan coastal cities to heavy sea and air bombardments.

The main target for such bombardment, Insurgents said, would be Tortosa in southernmost Catalan territory and a base for government crossing of the Ebro last spring. Supported by sea and air, the Insurgent attack might be concentrated on the Ebro delta near Tortosa.

THREE DROWN

ing vehicle, Ernest through one front door, Wilfrid and Lawrence through the rear window. The others were trapped in the car and their bodies were not recovered until several hours after the accident.

Missed the Turn.

The youths were on their way to Cedars, Que., home of Chevrier, from St. Clet, Que., when they missed the turn onto the highway in the gathering darkness heightened by a heavy rain. Front of the car was tilting into the canal before young Ernest, in the front seat with Leger, saw disaster ahead and shouted a warning. The next instant the car was under water.

All were from Apple Hill, Ont., near Ottawa, with the exception of Chevrier, whose home was in Cedars but who had worked in Apple Hill for some time.

Pressure Slams Door.

Ernest Villeneuve fought his way to safety through the right front door of the car. Pressure of water slammed the door after him and his brother, in the back seat of the two-door sedan, was unable to open it again. He crashed his foot through the opening to safety.

The three who drowned were all good swimmers, the survivors said, but apparently they had had no chance to escape from the car.

Collegiate News

For the last few meetings the Collegiate Art Club has been working on clay models. Some very good beginnings have been made, but we are leaving them now to do some work on Christmas Cards and novelties. We will continue work on the clay models after the Christmas holidays. At the last meeting, Wednesday, December 7th, we began our Christmas projects; and some very artistic pieces were started which will be finished next meeting.

MARMORA VILLAGE PROMISED REBATE BY CO. COUNCIL

W. R. Linn, Reeve, Claimed Municipality Was Entitled to Same

REPORT ACCEPTED

Actuated by the success of Dr. S. S. Lumb, Reeve of Bancroft, who secured a $393.00 rebate of 1937 county rates paid for road purposes yesterday morning, and feeling that his municipality had a right to demand a similar rebate, Reeve William Linn of Marmora presented a motion to County Council yesterday afternoon asking for a 75 per cent return of county rates paid by that village in 1938.

The motion precipitated the second heated debate of the day that ended with its being referred to the Ways and Means Committee.

Marmora and Bancroft were the only villages in the county that have not got pavements, Reeve Linn stated in support of his motion, adding that "as Bancroft was given its rebate, I feel that Marmora is just as much entitled to it as her sister village."

"We are in the same category as Bancroft," he continued, "and we should be dealt with fairly."

Application should have been made for this rebate prior to the month of April, Reeve George Jordan, Hungerford stated. He felt that council could not deal with the motion this year. Later, however, it was brought out that applications for such rebates are not necessary, according to the municipal Act.

All Might Get Rebates

Reference made by members to agreements cancelled this year between certain villages and the county brought a suggestion from Reeve Thomas Cranston, Stirling, "that if this rebate business is going to be general we all may as well get one, I understood", he said, "that beginning next year, all municipalities not having county road work done will get the rebates."

The fact, that Reeve Linn did not make the supposedly necessary application for the rebate furnished the basis for strenuous objection on the part of several members. Further argument regarding this point was halted temporarily as County Clerk Denyes read that part of the Municipal Act pertaining to this particular subject. The Act or section of the Act, revealed, that no application was necessary.

Reeve John Bell's objection to the motion in that Marmora has a county road running through it, brought a spirited reply from Reeve Linn, to the effect that a county road running through a municipality does not affect its right to the rebate.

Opposition to the motion continued as member after member rose to his feet to speak. Then the fist of the Marmora representative pounded on his desk. "Why make fish of one and flesh of another," he demanded. "It is our rightful money, just as it was that of Bancroft. We pay twice the county rate that that village does and we get absolutely nothing from the county in return."

Mild laughter ensued when Deputy Reeve Rush, suggested that Marmora wait until next year as "Reeve Linn already has an acclamation and he does not have to hold out anything to his constituents. He should not mind waiting a month or so."

The Reeve of Rawdon agreed with Reeve Linn, but "if that is the case all municipalities not affected by the recent cancellation of paving agreements should apply for and get the rebate" Reeve William Davis of Bangor countered.

"This council will promise Reeve Linn payment of his rebate before April 1st next year, I am sure" Reeve George Jordan declared, "if he is willing to accept that, then this discussion is closed.

The motion was referred to the Ways and Means Committtee.

House of Refuge Report

Erection of a new wing, installation of a new pipeline extending from the city limits to the Home, and completion of construction by the Department of Highways of passes across the highway and fences and slide gates, were some of the important features embodied in the report of the House of Refuge Committee presented to council by Chairman Reeve James Nickle of Madoc Township.

In reference to the new wing now nearing completion at the east end of the Home, Chairman Nickle stated, that it was being built to replace balconies, that had been condemned years ago.

"It will include sun-porches and sick-rooms" he added, "a much-needed want in the institution. When it is finished this council will be proud of it" he added, stating that a similar wing will in all likelihood be erected at the west end of the building next year.

Touching upon the installation of the new watehrmain, Reeve Nickle told council that a six-inch pipeline now replaced the old four-inch one. "Three hydrants now are ready to furnish an adequate water supply in case of fire, in place of the single one available for the past years. The watermain cost this council $1950 for material, but the government paid the cost of labor and installation. The labor was secured from six southern municipalities of the county, he declared, as it would cost far-away labor too much to live.

He recommended that additional cellar-room be furnished for the Home, while enlargement of the barns to house additional cattle that would consume the large stock of feed that accumulates every year, was urged by the chairman.

He complimented Mr. and Mrs. E. Sandercock, superintendent and matron of the Home for the splendid manner in which management of the institution has been carried on during the past year.

Bylaws

Three bylaws providing for the appointment of county auditors, to make through roads in the county system, and to confirm a bylaw of the Township of Mayo to close a road, received their first reading.

Northern Grants

Motion for grants to northern municipality without county roads, namely; Mayo, $200; Faraday, $300;; Carlow $200; Bangor et al., $300; Monteagle and Herschel, $400; payable in January, was made by Reeve W. J. Davis of Bangor, and referred to the Ways and Means Committee as was the application for a special grant of $200, to the townships of Tudor and Cashel.

OBITUARY

PETER BANFIELD
(Trenton)

Peter Banfield, age 63 years, late residence, Richard Street, Trenton, died in the Belleville General Hospital shortly before nine o'clock this Friday morning, Dec. 9th. He entered the hospital yesterday and underwent an operation.

CLARA MAUDE PATRICK
(Frankford)

Frankford — (Special)—The funeral of Mrs. Blake Patrick, who passed away on Monday, was held on Wednesday afternoon, service being held in Frankford United Church. Rev. J. F. Lane officiated at the church service as well as at the grave side in Frankford Cemetery.

The late Mrs. Patrick was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Seeley and had lived in Frankford for 38 years. She was a member of the United Church and her passing has cast a gloom over the entire community. The profusion of beautiful flowers and the large attendance at the funeral bore testimony of the great esteem in which she was held by all who were privileged to know her. Surviving besides her husband are, her mother, Mrs. W. Seeley, five sons, William of Campbellford; Lorne of Peterborough; Gerald of Frankford; Grant of Sidney and Reginald of Frankford. Also surviving are two half brothers, Messrs. Manley and Walter Rosebush of Oshawa and Colborne, and four sisters-in-law, Mrs. Gilbert Seeley, Mrs. Viola Waltier, Mrs. Nora Leslie and Mrs. Dorothy Henderson all of Toronto.

The pall bearers were Messrs. William, Lorne, Gerald, Grant and Reginald, sons, and Mr. Hugh Patrick, nephew.

Six members of Glenford Rebekah Lodge and six members of the Frankford L. O. B. A., of which lodges Mrs. Patrick was a member, acted as a guard of honor for the services.

FLIZABETH (BETTY) J. REID
(Formerly of Thomasburg)

Friends in this district of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Reid, former residents of Thomasburg, now of Watsonville, California, will sincerely regret to learn of their bereavement caused by the death of their seven-year-old daughter, Elizabeth (Betty) Jean, which occurred on Dec. 7., as the result of diphtheria, at Watsonville. Announcement of the sad event was received by the grandparents of the deceased, Mr. and Mrs. John Geen of Fuller.

Surviving to mourn her loss are her parents; two sisters, Mrs. Charles Myrick and Miss Annie Reid; one brother Jack, all of Watsonville, California.

JACK P. NIGHTINGALE
(Vancouver, B.C.)

Word has been received in the city of the death at Vancouver, B.C. on Dec. 2nd., 1938, of Jack Preston Nightingale, a former well known resident of Prince Edward County. He leaves a widow, one son, Preston, and two sisters, Mrs. Jas. P. Anderson, Avondale, Trent Road, and Mrs. Ridley Anderson, Wellington. Friends here will regret to learn of his passing.

Police Blotter

Belleville police today detained a 14 year old boy pending investigations and looking into the theft of $3 from the premises of the Odorless Cleaners premises on Front Street.

Some time after closing hours last night entrance was effected into the premises of the Odorless Cleaners and the sum of $3 removed from a small bank, used for petty cash. Today local police apprehended a teen-aged youth and following questioning at the police station, revealed the fact they had recovered $2.25 of the loot. The matter will be heard in a subsequent Juvenile Court.

An automobile owned and operated by C. H. McDonald, Belleville was badly damaged on the 4th concession of Sidney, late yesterday afternoon when it was struck by another automobile driven by Leslie Frost, Frankford. The two vehicles met at right angles at an intersection in the road. Provincial Constable A. A. Stark investigated and found a high bluff of land obscured the view of both drivers as they approached the intersection. No charges had been preferred today.

Local police hastened to the Government Dock where it was said a motor car was in danger of going off, the end of the cement pier. Upon the arrival of the police Arthur Horton of this city, was found they said sitting in the car. Today Horton was arraigned before Police Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C. charged with driving a motor car while intoxicated. He was remanded in custody for one week.

IN THIS SEASON

This is a fruitful time of the year for generous thoughts. At no other season does man so feel he would like to have plenty of money to benefit many causes and perform good deeds. Somehow generally he finds means enough to do a great amount of good in gifts to children and others, in helping the funds of various kinds, philanthropic and religious, all looking towards the benefit of conditions among which people live.

It is the time when the spirit or soul enlarges and takes in the widest range of humanity.

In every city and town and village there are the good samaritans who individually and collectively bear a great share of their brothers' burdens. There is the woman who undertakes of her own accord to see that some person in less fortunate circumstances is cheered at this season with a gift, that will give the assurance that one is not forgotten. There are many such persons who make up hampers of their own selection to present to those who have fallen on unfortunate days. The households they visit glow with an unusual radiance and faded faces light up with smiles as the spirit of brotherhood enters their doorways with the tokens which are not forgotten year after year. Many a benefactor's name lingers among folk they have helped long after the benefactor has passed to his or her reward. To have one's memory so cherished by the poor and unfortunate is true immortality of fame.

There are the great organizations with philanthropic aim, like the firemen's association, the veterans, the service clubs, and other bodies which distribute cheer and the churches which send their nameless gifts from church members to lighten the poorer homes.

This proves man is kindly at heart, that he does not forgot, that he is not dismayed if generosity and brotherhood are betrayed and beguiled by some unworthy persons, because he believes that all are brothers and sisters, whatever the difference in place or circumstance.

Interest in an individual case provides possibly the best and closest approach to the heart of another. There one learns but keeps to himself or herself every detail of the struggle which is being waged against sickness, distress, and other forces. There the benefactor learns the story of a daughter's or a son's sacrifice for a sick mother or father or sister or brother, the sacrifice of a parent for a child. There one learns life's values in the sight of that spirit of divine self-surrender for beloved relatives or friends. There the visitor comes to know the ramifications of the unemployment problem which in the last analysis finds its saddest expression in the struggle to keep a job, to keep working when not well, to seek for work when one is idle and when it cannot be found.

These homes may be humble but they are shrines of devotion in which are buried the devoted lives of relatives. Stern circumstance, ill-health, inherited or acquired; play havoc with the outward life but in so many cases they are met with heroism which knows no end of suffering but fights on.

Into homes such as these where children and parents and others, some alone in the world, dwell, great encouragement can come at this season. To forget these when one is enjoying everything which friends and happiness and means can bring would reveal a sad lack of love and sympathy and human interest.

ANOTHER TREATY IS SIGNED

Students of international affairs will probably withhold their comment upon the new German-French treaty signed in Paris at the very moment that a large section of the Italian press and other Italian factors are staging a clamor for French Mediterranean colonies as rightly Italian. When Italians projected themselves into the territorial demand attitude the action was so sudden as to puzzle the world, which yet does not know for certain the causes.

The Italian Government has disassociated itself from these clamors but there is something strangely familiar in the tactics—it would seem to be an Italian version of the Nazi method.

Has Italy feared closer French relations with Germany or has Germany smiled upon the Italian agitation at this very time so that no one will expect too much of the Franco-German treaty? Do Italians feel it is their time to acquire lands from others?

Will the treaty bring about a weakening of the Rome-Berlin alliance as France no doubt hopes, and are the Italians afraid that it will or do they refuse to believe that any change is likely?

If the Italian clamors were against the plan of the Fascist regime they would likely be suppressed. There is no doubt that Mussolini would not permit anything to interfere with his plans.

The issue will seem clearer than the Czechoslovakian problem should the Italians press the claim for Mediterranean territory. There could be no doubt then about the issue. It would be a straight attempt at grab without the slightest justification. The Mediterranean must remain free for trade and domination by any power will not be endured.

COURAGE

Because I hold it sinful to despond,
And will not let the bitterness of life
Blind me with burning tears, but look beyond
Its tumult and its strife.

Because I lift my head above the mist
When the sun shines and the broad breezes blow,
By every ray and every raindrop kissed
That God's love doth bestow;

Think you I find no bitterness at all,
No burden to be borne like Christian's pack?
Think you there are no ready tears to fall,
Because I keep them back?

Why should I hug life's ills with cold reserve
To cure myself and all who love me? Nay!
A thousand times more good than I deserve
God gives me every day.

And in each one of these rebellious tears
Kept bravely back, He makes a rainbow shine
Grateful, I take His slightest gift no fears
Nor any doubts are mine.

Dark skies must clear, and when the clouds are past
One golden day redeems a weary year;
Patient, I listen, sure that sweet at last
Will sound His voice of cheer.

—W. KNOWLES.

JIMMIE ROOSEVELT, SON OF PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, is now a big shot in Hollywood, being no less than assistant to Samuel Goldwyn, perhaps the biggest job open at the film city at the present time. Jimmie has been going places and seeing things, and has been accused of capitalizing upon being his father's son to get into Big Business. Samuel Goldwyn, head of one of the biggest of the moving picture companies in Hollywood, certainly must see some advantage in having the son of the President of the United States as his right bower or he would never part with the tremendous salary that goes with the job. Jimmie broke into the insurance game not so long ago and was accused of making a million or so dollars in one year in commissions. This Jimmie denied but admitted making a considerable sum, but hardly in the millions. Several magazine articles and much newspaper publicity came out of the insurance story, but Jimmie denied vigorously that being his father's son had anything to do with the big policies he sold. Now, just what Jimmie will do to Hollywood remains to be seen.

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING HAS GROWN INTO A MIGHTY FORCE FOR GOOD since the early days when patent medicine makers were largely the pioneers of anything like sustained and consistent nation-wide advertising. McAree in the Toronto Globe and Mail tells a story about Timothy Eaton taking a chance on a fur coat sale, with a newspaper taking an even bigger chance, one R. C. Smith, veteran advertising man who had the faith that moves mountains was the party of the first part. In the days of the Christmas Globe, an institution when it was in its prime, selling at fifty cents the copy, in magazine form, with advertising scattered judiciously through its pages, and a favorite in many families for its Christmas stories, etc., R. C. Smith sought a man's size advertisement from Canada's merchant prince of that day, Timothy Eaton, no less than a two-page spread at a cost of $1400. That flabbergasted the careful Timothy Eaton, who accused his caller with being crazy or suffering from hallucinations of grandeur. Bob Smith suggested that the space might be used for a fur advertisement with profit. You're crazy, said the merchant, we wouldn't even sell enough garments to pay for the advertisement, let alone cost and profit. The argument waxed warm until the advertising solicitor made a sporting proposition, to publish the fur advertisement without charge unless it sold enough fur coats to warrant the expenditure of $1400. Timothy Eaton was a smart trader and accepted the proposition. The solicitor had a hard time selling the proposition to the Globe management but finally succeeded and the deal was on. The issue of the Christmas Globe reached Northern Ontario on Thursday. Next day the Eaton Company received orders for four coats, average price about $700.00, and by the following Tuesday the sales were so many that the Globe had its $1400 assured, and within the next eight days the Eaton Company had a small fortune. The day is past, says McAree, when it takes sales pressure to sell successful merchants newspaper advertising. All large department stores have large staffs of experts preparing advertising matter, and when annual appropriations are made a prosperous store would no more think of forgetting necessary advertising disbursements than it would forget to set aside a sum for wages. Indeed we have arrived at the stage where advertisements constitute news value, and make reading matter as interesting as anything else to be found in the paper. From a typographical and pictorial point of view many of them are works of art.

ANIMAL HUMOUR

Animals love, hate, fear, live and die but only man can laugh," said some psychologist before he heard of the hyena. Probably the hyena's "laugh" is the least mirthful of the many forms of articulation synonymous for laughter that animals have to express their moods. Animals do not laugh like we do, nor do the various species have a common tongue. But anyone who presumes that the higher animals are devoid of humor and joy has missed a world of delight.

Is there anything that quite surpasses the experience of arising at dawn to the tune of hundreds of songbirds awakening? A veritable symphony lasting only until the brightening day, but surely nobody could be entirely immune to the heartening appeal of these carefree, joyous little creatures.

Have you ever surprised a fluffy little chick by picking it up and listened to the reproachful trill it emits? What could be more articulate? The cluck, cluck of the mother hen speaks volumes and the answering "cheep, cheep," registers childish levity. Let us not forget the old rooster's pompous crowing in the morning nor the hen's triumphant cackling over a freshly laid egg. These sturdy little birds lend joyous color to any farm-yard.

The dog is one of the smartest of the domestic animals and most breeds enjoy showing off. Some will not wait for a command to do their "tricks" in an effort to attract attention and approval. They, too, like to play. If their masters are in a playful mood, the dogs are too. Do I hear someone say that all dogs look sad? Certainly, if you look only at their eyes, for they have but two expressions, wide attendance and sleep. But when their tails wag, you can be sure they are pleased. If we should shave a dog's head (I never tried it) I suspect we should find them very adept at facial expressions. We humans would look rather dull if only our eyeballs gleamed from a mass of beards.

No animal laughs as we do, nor smiles coyly, sweetly or smugly, giggles, guffaws, chuckles, snorts, nor "tee hees." Yet we may not be as merry as we seem, but you can always be sure of a dog when he wags his tail.—Lewelle Reimer in Our Dumb Animals.

VENERABLE SOCIETY

One of the most venerable and distinctive of scientific societies in North America—the Entomological Society of Ontario has just held its 75th annual meeting at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph. It was presided over by Dr. Arthur Gibson, Ottawa, Dominion entomologist. Messages of congratulation on the occasion were received from leading scientific societies, universities and colleges throughout Canada, the United States and the British Isles, several of which were represented at the meeting.

The Society was founded in 1863 and it has had an unbroken record of active service in the cause of entomology, ever since. This society has been a contributing factor in connection with the remarkable development in the study of insects in their relation to man and his welfare that has taken place in comparatively recent years and the subject of scientific and economic entomology has attained a position of interest and importance as it deserves.

Those who were responsible for the establishment of the society were principally men who as amateurs devoted much time to the study of entomology. Among the original members were the late Dr. William Sanders, first director of the Dominion Experimental Farms, and Dr. James Fletcher, first Dominion Entomologist.

Philadelphia claims the distinction of having the first organized entomological society in North America, and the Entomological Society of Ontario is the oldest in Canada. The first similar society in England was the Entomological Society of London, which was formed in 1833, one year after the establishment of the Societe Entomologique de France.

Oswald Pirow of South Africa

He is German by blood, German by education, has a wife of German descent, has been outspoken in admiration of many things the Germans do, and is even called "The Prussian" by his political enemies.

Yet Oswald Pirow these days is playing a large part in consultations with the British Cabinet. For Pirow, as minister of defence and minister of railways, airways and harbours in the self-governing dominion of South Africa, has become an internationally important personage.

Despite all this Germanism and despite the fact that several years ago he went out of his way to meet Adolf Hitler, Pirow is known as one of the strong men of South Africa who very definitely object to the Nazis as next-door neighbors. Hence, he is rated as opposed to former German Southwest Africa being returned to Germany. He wants it kept as a mandate by his dominion. He is also supposed to harbour plans for giving Germany colonial domain elsewhere in Africa—but far removed from his South Africa.

Pirow is still in his forties and is generally considered as a future prime minister of South Africa. Born on a farm, his father sent him to Heidelberg university, in Germany. Graduating from there, he then went to London to study law and won top honours in the Inner Temple. He set up practice at Pretoria and was soon one of the leaders of the bar there.

But politics called him. In those days the field was dominated by the two former Boer generals—Botha and Smuts—who now led the party which was all for the British Empire, since South Africa had been granted full self-government. The main opposition was led by another Boer general—J. M. B. Hertzog. Pirow joined Hertzog's party and led several hopeless contests for election to parliament. He was finally elected. When Hertzog became premier — a job he still holds—he made Pirow minister of justice in 1929. Five years later Hertzog made his young lieutenant minister of defence and of railways, airways and harbours.

Pirow soon showed the people that while his enemies called him "The Prussian" he could give them value received by some real Prussian efficiency. The railway system of South Africa is owned by the state. It employs 110,000 men and has an invested capital of over $800,000,000. Pirow got on well with the men, thus avoiding labour troubles. He modernized the lines, with the result that South Africa has more miles of electrified railway than any other dominion. In recent years he has been turning into the treasury healthy surpluses of over $10,000,000 per annum. An airman himself he has developed an air service which reaches over the vast sub-continent at the southern end of vast Africa.

As minister of defence he has already given Pretoria a modern factory for the manufacture of munitions for small arms, another experimental factory for artillery, the construction of many miles of strategic motor roads along the coast for use by mechanized defence forces, and the improvement of the port of Simonstown, near Cape Town, which is to be used as the main base for the African squadrons of the Imperial navy.

He is to discuss, while in London, further defence plans with the Imperial general staff. He contemplates expenditures of about $30,000,000 for this purpose. One of his defence schemes is the quick mobilization of 150,000 men, complete with machine guns, field artillery and armoured cars.—Milton Bronner in Hamilton Spectator.

WHY DO THEY DO IT?

There is something in what was said by H. Glenn Hatfield, international president of the Kiwanis, at Kingston. He suggests that many foreigners, now busily engaged in preaching communists and fascist doctrines in Canada and the United States, would be spies in the event of war. Strange is it to find men who have found prosperity under our system preaching communism or fascism, either of which would put them out of business.—Niagara Falls Review.

RIDERS OF THE PLANES

The horse was still being used in 1914, but the automobile were beginning to run away from the man on horseback. And so, reluctantly the Mounted Police began to take to motor cars. Today most men on detachment depend on the automobile for transportation. There are no more horses in the Mounted Police except for a few used for ceremonial occasions.

And now it looks as if the motor car might follow the horse out. For Deputy Commissioner Dann of the Mounted announced in Ottawa the other day that there will be established in the North West Territories next spring an airplane base, and patrols will be done from the sky. There where, in the days gone by, the dog sled and the canoe furnished transportation through the north country just as did the horse, and later the automobile, carry the Mountie on his law enforcement errands in the older parts of the former North West Territories, the Mounted Police will take to wings to run down wrongdoers and keep law and order in the hinterland of the Dominion.

But wings or not, we'll venture to say that the public will still think of them as Mounties, the scarlet-coated "riders of the planes."—Lethbridge Herald.

DEPENDABLE RAILROADS

The first snowstorm of the season showed unmistakably how much the western provinces depend on the railroads. Here's an instance: Last Friday, standing at the C.P.R. wicket an hour before train time, the first contingent purchasing tickets included a number of people brought from the west on a bus. It could not proceed further east and the bus company necessarily had to purchase railroad tickets to carry the passengers further east. The hockey club, which had arranged to travel by bus to Calgary to practice on artificial ice, also had to fall back on the railroad.

Presently the train came in, with two powerful engines pulling five passenger coaches and a few baggage cars. Unlike the conveyances using the highways, the railroad does not wait for government snow ploughs to clear the tracks. That expense is borne by the railroad, which can usually be relied on to get passengers to their destinations under their own power. Were it not for the railroad, none of those wishing to travel last Friday eastward from Coleman could have found any other way to travel except by plodding through snowdrifts or falling back on horses and sleighs. And that is out of the question when long distances have to be travelled.—Coleman Alberta Journal.

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton M.D.

Bleeding Hemorrhoids or Piles

When bleeding occurs anywhere in the body it naturally causes concern, if not fear. To lose some blood, the life stream, not only weakens the body but the sight of the blood may bring on a fainting spell.

Bleeding from the lower bowel in a great many cases is due to hemorrhoids or piles, and because the piles do not come out, the individual may not suspect that he has a pile or piles.

Dr. Charles J. Drueck, Chicago, in 'Clinical Medicine and Surgery' says:

"Bleeding, in some degree, is a symptoms of all internal hemorrhoids. It may be slight (a mere streaking of the stools) or profuse or severe enough to cause fainting. Frequently bleeding follows each movement of the bowels for a while, then stops for several days or weeks, only to return just when the patient thinks he is cured."

This constant loss of blood produces an anaemia or thinning of the blood which may suggest cancer to patient and physician. The patient may describe the symptoms as follows:

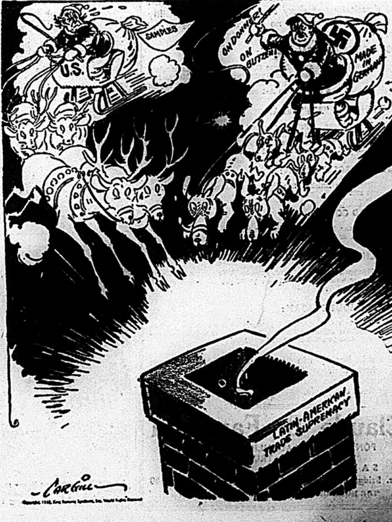
"While at stool and perhaps before the bowels have moved completely, a more or less severe bleeding occurred, which lasted for some time after he had finished his toilet; the blood came in spurts and was quite red; a dizzy feeling came on and he became clammy and pallid; there was little or no pain and no pile protruded".

In other cases there is just a dropping of blood. Other cases give the sensation of the bowel being only partly emptied and so the individual strains in trying to expel "something". In still other cases the blood is a steady stream.

In trying to find a bleeding pile the physician uses a small round instrument two or six inches long which enables him to see the portion of the lower bowel where these hemorrhoids, which are just varicose veins, are located. It also enables him to see any other condition present that may be causing the bleeding—tear or cut, ulcer, inflamed surface, or the soft growth called polypus.

The treatment of internal hemorrhoids is by the injection of a liquid which causes them to dry up, or complete removal by surgical operation. When the piles are outside, surgical operation is the only treatment.

CHRISTMAS IN LATIN AMERICA



Thurlow Friends Honor Popular Residents

2nd Thurlow—About fifty friends and neighbors of Mr. Wm. Bennett gathered at his home on Friday evening to spend a social time together before his departure from the community. The following program was enjoyed: Duet by Mrs. Harry Grills and Mr. Fred Mitchell; Solo, Mrs. F. Haight; Piano music, Mrs. S. Grills and Miss Lorena Haight.

The following address was read by Mr. Douglas Atkins:

2nd Thurlow, Dec. 2, 1938

Dear Mr. Bennett:

We, your friends and neighbors of the community have gathered here tonight to spend a social time together and express to your our regret of your departure from our midst.

For the past 38 years you have lived among us in the neighborhood. You have proved yourself to be an honest, true friend and neighbor.

We shall miss your ever willing ways to help when ever your assistance has been required. You are not going so far, that we may often meet and spend many more pleasant times together.

We trust that God will spare you and that you may live to enjoy many more years of happy and contented life.

We ask you to except this gift not for its value, but as a slight token of respect, and may it ever remind you of your life spent among the friends and neighbors of the second line.

We will meet from time to time,
To see you in your home
To sing a while and
Perhaps to chatter some.
And now we'll end our little rhyme
With wishes all sincere.
We'll hope you'll like your present
And ever use it with cheer.

Signed on behalf of your friends, Mr. D. Whalen, Mrs. D. Atkins, Douglas Atkins, Benedict Whalen.

Mr. D. Whalen and Mr. J. Bunnet presented Mr. Bennett with a lovely reading lamp and leather aeropak. Mr. Bennett thanked all for the lovely gifts. All sang "For he's a jolly good fellow.

Miss Alice Cross was asked to be seated and the following address was read by Mr. Geo. Whalen:

2nd Thurlow, Dec. 2, 1938

Dear Alice:

As your friends of the community having learned of your departure from the neighborhood, have gathered here tonight to spend a social time with you. It's true we have not known you long, but you have made many friends in the past two years you have lived among us.

You will be missed by us at our social gatherings but hope you can come sometimes to see us.

May God ever be your guide and help in times of trials and strife.

We ask you to accept this little gift as a slight token of respect of your young friends of the second line.

Signed, Lulu Mitchell, Flossie Terry, Alma Snider, Vera Gray, Lorena Haight, Doris Atkins, Whalen Boys, Edith Donaldson, Mrs. G. Atkins.

Miss Doris Atkins presented Alice with a gold bracelet, to which a suitable reply was made. All sang "For she's a jolly good lady."

The young folks enjoyed a couple of hours dancing. Coffee, cake and sandwiches were served and a social time enjoyed by all.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Garrison and grandson Billy, North Park St., spent Wednesday with Mr. and Mrs. Ted Howe.

Mrs. E. Loucks of Napanee spent Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. J. Bunnett.

A large number of ladies, members of the Neighbor's Aid met at the home of Mrs. Geo. Conners on Thursday evening in honor of Mrs. Wm. Taylor, who is taking up residence in Toronto where her husband, Mr. Wm. Taylor and daughter, Miss Jean Taylor, are associated with the Alberta Coal Co. After an enjoyable program consisting of readings, solos, community singing, speeches, etc. Mrs. F. Doxtator read an appropriae address and Mrs. Taylor was presented with a lovely floor lamp.

Dear Mrs. Taylor:

Your friends and neighbors from the 2nd line, have the liberty of invading the home of Mrs. Conners tonight to spend a social intercourse. In this way we wish to express our sincere best wishes for your future happiness and prosperity and our regrets of your removal from our midst. We wish to remind you we are not forgetful of the fact that you have lived and labored among us faithfully. It has been our privilege to know your household in general friendship. We have always found you genuine and true in your friendship, fair and just as a neighbor, always ready to lend a helping hand in time of need. As a token of our esteem and love we would ask you to receive this lamp. May it at times remind you of your friends on the 2nd line. We say good bye for now, but hope to still have the privilege of greeting you many more times.

Signed on behalf of the Neighbor's Aid.

Mrs. Taylor, although taken by surprise, made a very suitable reply. Coffee, cake and sandwiches were served and a very enjoyable time spent by all.

Mr. and Mrs. Ted Howe and Jack had dinner on Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Ray Toppings.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Ray and family had dinner on Wednesday with Mr. and Mrs. J. Bunnett.

Mr. Wm. Bunnett and Miss Alice Cross had tea on Sunday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Atkins.

Mr. and Mrs. Ted Howe and Jack Mr. and Mrs. S. Geddes, Front Rd., had dinner recently with Mr. and Mrs. R. Bunnett, Holloway.

Mr. and Mrs. Cameron Bunnett called on Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Keene one evening last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Ted Howe and Jack had dinner on Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. S. Geddes, Front Road.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Fargey and Barbara, West Huntingdon, had tea on Thursday night with Mr. and Mrs. D. R. Atkins.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Taylor had tea on Thursday evening with Mrs. Geo. Conners.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Bunnett called on Mr. and Mrs. S. Geddes, Front Road, on Sunday.

A large crowd attended the sale of Mr. Chas. Taylor on Wednesday afternoon.

Miss Doris Atkins spent the week end with Miss Doris Fox at Madoc.

Mrs. Geo. Fenn and daughter Miss Dorothy Fenn spent the week end in Toronto and attended the graduation classes on Friday evening where the latter received her diploma.

Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Taylor and son Billy of Madoc had tea with the former's sister Mrs. T. Howe and Mr. Howe on Sunday.

Mrs. B. Jordan spent the week end with her brother Mr. Jeffery at West Huntingdon.

Aikens' W. M. S. Officers Elected For New Year

The December meeting of Aiken's Woman's Missionary Society was held on Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Albert Page. A Christmas program was presented, opening with quiet music. Appropriate hymns were sung and Mrs. Wm. Hamilton led in prayer. Mrs. Earl Bush sang "The church by the side of the road" and a reading was given by Mrs. S. Westover "A tired woman's story."

"Planting the Church," the second chapter of the Study Book was given by Mrs. H. Hamilton, Mrs. Perry Hamilton, Mrs. H. Hubble, Mrs. Leon McMullen and Mrs. S. Westover. Prayers were offered that a more Christ-like spirit may prevail in all the life of Canada; that within the United Church of Canada we may achieve real Christian fellowship, and that in the presence of Christ, we may treat each other as brothers.

At this Christmas season, Christians from all over the world are coming together in Madras, India, for a meeting of the International Missionary Council, which last met in Jerusalem in 1928. Christian leadership will on Christmas Day gather round the Christ child in adoration and worship.

Men of the East and West of Europe, Asia and Africa have yet to realize that they are all the children of one Father whose inescapable love is at the centre of the universe operating ceaselessly and unerringly in all the affairs of human history. The manifestation of this love in Christ Jesus is the ground of our faith and hope that a Kingdom of Heaven based on love is coming, in spite of everything that seems to the contrary. The Kingdom will remain incomplete and less than God has purposed it to be, if any race or nation of the East or the West does not bring its contribution to it.

The election of officers was in charge of the 1st Vice President, Mrs. Wm. Hamilton.

Officers, 1939: Hon. President, Mrs. A. Finkle; President, Mrs. Thos. Irwin; 1st Vice President, Mrs. Wm. Hamilton; 2nd Vice President, Mrs. Stanley Spafford; Rec. Secretary, Mrs. Fred Westover; Corresponding Sec., Mrs. S. Westover; Temperance and Christian Citizenship, Mrs. Earl Bush; Community Friendship, Mrs. Arthur Saylor; Christian Stewardship, Mrs. Bruce Hogie; Supply Sec., Mrs. Albert Page; Assoc. Helpers Sec., Mrs. L. McMullen; Miss. Monthly Sec., Mrs. H. Hamilton; Press Secretary, Mrs. E. K. Hubble; Treasurer, Mrs. Fred Moon; Mission Band Supt., Miss H. Card; Baby Band Supt., Mrs. P. Hamilton; Literature Sec., Mrs. C. McMullen; Organist, Mrs. Lee Grills; Auditors, Mrs. A. Bunnett, Mrs. W. Bush.

Timber Wolf Throws Hound 8 Feet in Air

Peterborough, Ont., Dec. 9 (CP)—A large timber wolf was killed by H. Revoir of Trent River, a hamlet 28 miles east of this city. The animal maimed two valuable hounds in a battle, before Revoir and a hunting companion named McLaughlin arrived and fired four shots. According to Revoir, the wolf tossed his dog about eight feet in the air, during the fight. The dog is suffering from severe lacerations of the head and jaws, and the other dog has injured legs.

HEIRS PULL FORTUNES OUT OF HAT

To save heavy litigation costs, the heirs of the late David Lesseur, New Bedford, Mass., millionaire, who died without leaving a will, agreed to draw their respective shares in the $137,500 fortune in real estate from a hat. The monetary residue having been split-up previously. First the fortune was divided into five lots as nearly equal as possible. Sylvia and Rosario Lesseur, nearest of kin to the deceased each got one of these envelopes. The contents of the remaining three envelopes were then divided into 23 shares, to be drawn by children of dead sisters of the deceased as shown here.

MARRIAGE NOTICE

HERITY—EMERSON — At the West Huntingdon United Church parsonage on Thursday, December 8, 1938, John Franklin Herity of Moira, was united in marriage to Mrs. Mary Emerson of Moira, by Rev. Tristram.

Friends of Mr. Thomas Clare, 264 Albert Street, will be sorry to learn he has been removed to the hospital with a broken shoulder.

Mrs. C. Sneath of Napanee, was a guest of Mrs. A. Gillen, while in town to address the Women's Canadian Club.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mills, Grove Street, will leave Belleville tomorrow for Walkerville, Ontario, where they will spend the winter with Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Henthorne.

Mrs. Frank O'Connor, 19 Everett Street, who underwent a serious operation at Belleville General Hospital on Friday, December 2nd, is progressing satisfactorily.

Mr. T. H. Dredge, manager of the Belleville Branch of the Bank of Montreal, has returned to the city after spending several days in Montreal, where he attended the annual meeting of the Bank of Montreal, at the head office.

Miss Joan Rashotte, Tweed, was one of the medallists at the graduating exercises of the Ontario Hospital, Kingston.

Mr. Robert Templeton, John Street, is celebrating today the anniversary of his birth which occurred 85 years ago in Perth, Ont. Sixty-five years ago, Mr. Templeton came to make his home in Belleville and during his long residence here he has occupied a high place in the regard of all citizens. At the time of his arrival in Belleville the city clock had just been installed and the event was of considerable importance in the history of the city. During the past few years Mr. Templeton has been living retired after a busy life in the drug business with store situated at the corner of Bridge and Front Streets, now occupied by the Bank of Montreal. Many friends and acquaintances will be pleased to extend congratulations to Mr. Templeton and to express their good wishes for his continued good health and happiness.

HOLLOWAY STREET CHURCH W.M.S.

THE MARGIN OF MODESTY

The Seattle University of Washington's Varsity ball committee ruled that strapless evening gowns would be banned from the affair as "immodest." All co-eds who attended in strapless gowns were presented with suspenders and were forced to don them before appearing on the floor. ABOVE we see edict-defying Virginia West being made "decent" by sister co-eds.

Your Christmas and You

Help Your Child Plan His Christmas

The thoughtful mother sits down with her child and helps him to make a list of persons he wishes to remember. It is wise and co-operative to let even the tiny child of four or five plan his own gifts and be responsible for choosing them and buying them. If you wish, you may assign an allowance for these gifts, and have him keep within this allowance.

You can give your child a very valuable sense of discrimination and thoughtfulness if you talk over with him what he thinks Father would like, or grandmother or Sister and Brother.

It isn't necessary to take the child on shopping trips with you, for these are tiring and baffling to a child. But there are many things that you can go with him to buy at neighboring stores.

Many mothers do their children's Christmas shopping, assigning the gifts with a fairly impersonal at least, to the child), "This is the gift that you are to give to Daddy", or "Grandmother will like to have you give her this". This cheats the child out of the thrill of planning his gifts, buying them with his own thoughtfulness, choosing them with what he likes to think is his own appreciation of what the recipients would like.

There is something about this way of having a child give his gifts through someone else's choice which seems to emphasize the fact that he is anticipating getting gifts in return, rather than giving the gifts or the joy of giving them. On the other hand, there is inevitably something lovely in spirit that gets into a gift . . . a child's gift, as well as an adult's gift. . . that is chosen by the giver himself. Anyone would prefer to receive a simple, inexpensive something chosen by the child himself, rather than an expensive something something chosen by an adult proxy for the child.

Let the child have the delight of wrapping his own Christmas presents . . . . providing himself with the wrappings, ribbons, stickers, cards to be enclosed or attached.

Tomorrow—Practical Gifts

Proper Gift

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Would it be proper to send a young lady friend a box of candy, flowers or just a card for Christmas? I have known this young lady for about a month, and I would like to hold her friendship.
E.

Any of these thoughts will be appropriate. These gifts of candy or flowers are always proper for a man to send to a woman, and they are especially appropriate for sending at Christmas-time.

Weddings

COXON—JACKSON

The marriage was solemnized in Halifax, Nova Scotia, on December first of Miss Lillian Jackson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred C. Jackson, who was united in marriage to Mr. Thomas Coxon of the Royal Canadian Navy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Coxon, Belleville. Reverened Dr. L. J. Donaldson officiated.

The bride's gown was of blue velvet with matching accessories. The matron of honor, Mrs. A. C. Jackson, sister-in-law, of the bride wore blue taffeta with matching accessories.

Mr. A. C. Jackson, brother of the bride, was groomsman.

Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Coxon will reside at 437 Brunswick Street, Halifax, N.S.

LANE—MELCHIOR

The marriage took place at St. Michael's Church at eight-fifteen this morning of Georgia Alan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter A. Melchior and John William Lane, C.P.O., of H.M.C.S. Saguenay, Halifax, Nova Scotia, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Lane of Montreal, Que. The ceremony was performed by Rev. C. E. Baker.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was attended by Miss Helen McQuaid while Mr. Patrick Melchior, brother of the bride, was groomsman.

PRESENTATION

On Wednesday evening, December 7th., Miss Anne McEathron of Bancroft, bride-to-be, was honored at a delightful miscellaneous shower, at the home of her aunt, Mrs. Dan Stewart, 89 Octavia St. There were about twenty-five friends in attendance, and cards, games and contests were played during the evening.

Miss Olive Rutledge read the following address:

Dear Anne—

Having learned that you are about to depart from our midst, to set sail on the sea of matrimony, we have gathered here this evening to present you with these gifts which we hope will be useful to you, and also remind you of the happy times we have spent together.

We shall miss your cheery smile, but we trust you will always enjoy, health, happiness and prosperity.

Now will you kindly accept these gifts as a token of our sincere wishes for your future happiness.

Miss McEathron then opened her many beautiful gifts for which she graciously thanked her friends.

ST. ANDREW'S W.M.S.

The women of the Presbyterian W.M.S. held their annual meeting on Wednesday p.m. Mrs. Fargey announced the opening hymn "Trusting Jesus That is All". All other hymns were Christmas carols. The Scripture was the "Story of the Nativity". Mrs. Maurice led in prayer in a way that brought that "heart searching and spiritual quickening" atmosphere over the meeting. Each officer had her report for the year. There was some humor and much interest in these reports which showed a steady growth in this organization of the church.

The officers for the coming year are:

President—Mrs. J. Fargey.
Hon. Pres.—Mrs. Tower, Mrs. Maurice, Mrs. Campbell and Mrs. Fenwick.
1st Vice President— Mrs. (Rev.) J. W. Walker
2nd Vice President—Mrs. A. Cameron
3rd Vice President—Mrs. H. Hill.
Secretary—Mrs. Fleming
Treasurer—Mrs. Ranson
Pianist—Mrs. Mantle
Clothing Secretary—Mrs. Baird and Mrs. Bateman.
Flower Secretary—Mrs. Reid.
Library Secretary—Mrs. Fargey
Birthday Secretary—Mrs. Bell and Mrs. Mantle.
Glad Tidings Secretary — Mrs. Bell.
Welcome and Welfare — Mrs. Carson
Mission Band—Mrs. V. Weir, Mrs. Mac Hill and Mrs. Walker.
Home Helper—Miss Blair

Mrs. Alex. Moore, who was leader of the nominating committee addressed the officers for the new year. She referred to the desire of the old members to have an entirely new staff, which in some ways might be a benefit, though seemingly impossible. Then she spoke kindly of their efficiency and their willingness to serve, which willingness was the thing which makes all W.M.S. work possible. She closed by reading "Oh Master let me walk with Thee".

Mrs. Moore, Mrs. Maurice, Miss Blair and Mrs. Worrell served tea at the close of the meeting.

Undernourishment is Danger Writer Warns Growing Girls

(By HELEN FOLLETT)

GROWING girls must guard against undernourishment. If the complexion is pale, spirits low and nerves acting up, the chances are that the digestive works aren't getting enough fuel. Or possibly it isn't the right kind of fuel.

Girls in their teens are inclined to place too great a stress on make-up, not enough on health. Rouge is a blessing, but it cannot hide a lifeless skin condition or facial eruptions. When a girl realizes that health is the foundation of good looks, she pays more attention to what the mama has to say about nibbling between meals and keeping late hours.

JANE WITHERS
Guards constantly against undernourishment.

In the matter of hair dyeing a woman must be wise, practical and far seeing. She can't just scamper into a drug store, say "Gimme some hair dye", run home, spread the coloring agent over her frosted head and come forth youthful and lovely. It's not that simple. There are hundreds of hair dyes but maybe very few that will do for her particular beauty problem.

In some large cities there are shops that do nothing but dyeing, bleaching and tinting. That is as it should be. Only an operator with training and wide experience will know how to get results that will defy the searching eye. Experts they are who restore the pristine loveliness. They know their chemicals. They examine the hair carefully. They decide upon the shade that will not be a give-away.

Dyeing or bleaching is not for the experimenter. The application must be evenly distributed, carefully timed. Even more difficult is the touch up which must be had every six weeks if sprouting gray threads are not to reveal themselves.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)
Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Prevaricator Traps Himself in His Own Web

Unlike the philanderer, who is born and not made, the LIAR is a made product. Fear is the chemical chiefly responsible for him—or indeed, her. Ladies are quite as proficient, or even more so, at the art of prevarication, as men.

The Liar is more often than not, a weakling who objects to coming out and facing the music. It's so much easier to invent an alibi. At least, it seems easier at the time, than being caught. Not all liars, however, have the imagination, talent and skill to put through a good lie. Professional liars are adept at the art. The amateur flounders about and convicts himself.

We're talking about the synthetic liar, the recipe for which is about one-fourth fear, one-fourth the dislike of causing pain, one-fourth the desire to escape an awkward situation, and the last fourth, cowardice.

Bitter experience has taught the Liar to avoid scenes. So, if he happens to meet an old sweetheart, downtown, and has had the urge to invite her to lunch, he has a little lie all ready when he calls on his best girl.

First, he describes his boredom at the date he has had thrust upon him. The boss' niece, or the boss' wife's cousin came to town, and the boss didn't want to be bothered taking her out . . . "so he parked her on me, and she sure was a bore. Ought to get a raise in salary for having to do a chore like that. She made me think about you, darling, because she had none of your beauty, sweetness, or jolly sense of humor, etc. etc. etc."

The Liar is apt to build too many stories for the foundation, and ruin the structure. A girl with a grain of sense will not believe him. How much more easily could he have saved his skin if he had had the courage to come out and say "Today I ran into Marge Jones; we used to be in high school together, and saw a good deal of each other then. So I asked her to lunch. I'd like to have you meet Marge some time".

The sweetheart, probably not without a touch of the green-eyed monster, feels that she'd rather meet Satan himself than Marge. Still, she has to admire her young man's courage in telling the truth. And he's removed the danger from any chance remarks dropped by friends who happened to have seen him lunching with the old girl.

There's another class of Liar, whose affliction is mental. This individual can't tell the truth about anything—the day of the week, the weather, whether or not hens have teeth, or anything else that is self-evident. His lies are the result of a brain quirk. They're dangerous folk to get tied up with.

This thirty-third degree Liar you may have known all your life. You may have gone to school with him or her, lived in the same apartment house, or in the other side of the same street, and yet, he may entertain with an account of his journey to the Himalayan Mts.

He alone succeeded in climbing Mt. Everest. His flight across the Atlantic preceded Lindbergh's. Or he may claim to have uncovered a nest of spies, and be high in the counsels of the Government.

An unstable mentality is the sole reason for the "nut liar". And yet, the pity of it, people often believe in him, invest money in his crazy schemes, marry him, and live unhappily ever after. One would think this man carried his warning like a miner's headlight. But you've only to read the papers to see how easily he dupes people and gets his victims.

Fashion Flashes

(By ALICE ALDEN)

Life savers for frocks are many this season. There are tiny flowers made of white point de Venise lace and black velvet that may be clipped onto any dress or collar. There also are boleros made of row on row of looped woollen fringe in all sorts of lovely colors.

A big hand went to a smart, beautifully cut and styled coat of honey brown woollen, beltless but with a long, molded look. With it is worn a tuck-in scarf and a big barrel muff of sheared beaver.

It's hard to find the cloth on a cloth coat these days. Molyneux does a cloth coat trimmed with silver fox and all of the cloth that shows is at the waist and hemline. Vertical bands of the fur make the bodice panels and the entire sleeves and almost entirely cover the skirt.

Plenty to watch in this season's evening ensembles. An exquisite gown of rust-colored silk with a nubby surface goes to dinner worn beneath an invisibly fastened matching jacket embroidered all over in gold thread worked in a scroll design. Neck is high, tight sleeves long.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

What of Vitamins?—Vitamin A

Our study of vitamins, started yesterday, brings us first, and naturally enough, to Vitamin A.

I have only to say that this vitamin is essential to growth to gain the interest of every mother in the ways of giving your child this Vitamin A. What I do know is that anyone whose diet contains cream, milk or butter, green or yellow vegetables needn't worry about Vitamin A. Those simple articles of diet take care of that worry for them.

I know that cod-liver oil is high in Vitamin A content, and anyone who has been reading these columns knows what a great advocate of it I am. But I have known people to let themselves get run down,, taking colds as a result. Their next step was to take large doses of this cod-liver oil in the belief that it would supply the vitamin they lacked.

All I can say is it would be much better for these people to keep a balanced diet at all times. If they are going to take cod-liver oil, they shouldn't wait until they are sick before they do it. Of course I know there are people who can't take dairy products; the vegetables they eat probably don't contain enough of this vitamin. To these people, capsules containing this vitamin in other forms are valuable.

Before I finish with Vitamin A I should add for the benefit of all in general and mothers in particular, that it is very beneficial to the eyes, preventing diseases which might affect the sight of those precious organs.

Perhaps I ought to warn mothers what happens when there is a lack of Vitamin A in the diet. First of all there is a marked depletion in resistance to infection of all kinds. Then normal growth is interfered with, and very often the victim is afflicted with a form of night blindness.

I hope no mother will become alarmed at what I say and set out to give her child an overdose of the foods that contain this vitamin. What I am striving to point out is that the system can only absorb so much of this as well as its sister vitamins. All that is needed is that same old balanced diet I've been harping on. That is the reason parents should see to it that their children learn to eat and relish vegetables like carrots, either cooked or raw, spinach, lettuce, pumpkin —almost any of the vegetables.

Early in their lives the Quintuplets were given these things to eat. Although they were never forced to eat them against their will, a liking for them was encouraged. The result is that today there isn't a vegetable they aren't fond of and won't eat when it is placed before them. The result is that we never worry whether Emilie is getting enough Vitamin A or whether Yvonne is lacking in Vitamin C. We know they are eating the foods that give them all those things.

Madoc

Madoc—On December 3rd at the home of Mrs. O. Thompson and Mrs S. Ashley, the W.M.S. of Trinity United Church met with a fine attendance of members and visitors.

The spirit of Christmas was made manifest in the devotional exercises by the reading of scripture passages by the leader, Mrs. A. H. Corrigal and also by the singing of hymns as "Hark th herald Angels sing." and "Joy to the world" with Miss A. R. Wood as organist. Prayer was offered by the leader.

IN POOR HEALTH

General Cornelius Vanderbilt, head of the famous family, is pictured as he arrived in New York after a 16-day cruise in the Caribbean, in poor health. The general announced he would enter the hospital for observation.

The necessary items of business were dispensed with, by the president Mrs. F Dafoe, with the secretary, Mrs. Earl Burnside assisting. Reports were received from the treasurer, Mrs. S. Ashley and the Mission Band Leader, Mrs. T. E. Burnside. An appropriate Christmas message for the aged members, read by the president, was a pleasing gesture.

The introduction and synopsis of the first chapter "Weaving a strong web" of the Study Book, by Rev J. I. MacKay was offered by Mrs. Jack.

Prayer was offered by Mrs. W. McBain after which Miss A. Wood related facts concerning the International Missionary Council meeting on Christmas Day in Madras, India, at which representatives from all parts of the world shall assemble.

Preceding the election of officers for the coming year, at which he presided, Rev. Mr. Kennedy offered prayer. It was with much pleasure that the members learned of Mrs. Dafoe's willingness to accept the presidency for the second term. The complete list of officers shall be listed in January.

Following prayer by the leader, Miss A. Wood and Mrs. McDougal assisted the hostess in the offering of hospitality.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymonr Rivers and Mr. Gray Rivers of Toronto visited friends in Madoc on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Reid spent Sunday with relatives at Ivy Lea.

Second Year Players They Are Making Good for Patrick

RANGERS WIN

Defeated Canadiens and Amerks and Wings Play to Draw

(By Jack Calder, Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Last year it was Gordon Drillon and Syl Apps of Toronto Maple Leafs who, as sophomore forwards, established themselves among the National Hockey League's highest fliers. Now over the hill come little Clint Smith and Bryan Hextall, a couple of New York Rangers making their second season in the big time a great one.

Drillon and Apps poked away at rival goaltenders all last winter and at the finish Drillon led the league in scoring, Apps in assists. Smith and Hextall are given more to bursts of goal-getting, but they're buzzing up near the top in the individual totals.

Smith, a tiny hustler between Cecil Dillon and Lynn Patrick, paced Rangers with three goals last night to a 6-5 victory over the Canadiens at Montreal that lifted them to within a point of the league-leading Boston Bruins. Hextall, who on a recent night bagged five scoring points against Toronto, got two of the other goals.

Liscombe Going Well

Another sophomore to keep your eye on is Carl Liscombe, flashing wingman with Detroit who scored the Red Wings' goal last night in a 1-1 overtime tie with New York Americans at Detroit. Liscombe was one of the few Wings who kept pace with the opposition when the club was slumping; his score last night put them within a point of the fifth-place Maple Leafs.

It's not the freshman year that's hardest, men close to hockey will tell you, but the second season when the player has to prove he wasn't a flash in the pan. Smith, Hextall and Liscombe so far have shown themselves to be just about the pick of the group of youngsters who played their first full N.H.L. semesters last season.

Smith and Hextall were responsible for breaking a Canadien streak of four games without defeat. The Habitants rallied gamely with a closing three-goal burst but couldn't match the early footing of the western kids, who two seasons ago were members with Bobby Kirk of a Philadelphia forward line, that broke minor league scoring records.

Clint bagged the first goal two minutes after the start and Hextall made the score 2-0 in five minutes. Stew Evans and Johnny Gagnon pulled Canadiens level before the period closed but a minute after the second began Smith was at it again, nicking a goal that was augmented by another from Art Coulter's stick.

Listless at Detroit

Smith started things again in the third and Hextall completed the Ranger total before five minutes of the period was over. Then the crowd of 10,000 saw young Bill Summerhill lead a Canadien reprisal. Pee-wee scored three minutes after the Ranger sniping had ended and again nine minutes later. Herbie Cain added to the mounting total but not until only 46 seconds remained and the issue was virtually decided.

The teams played listless hockey for three periods at Detroit, then Liscombe opened up the game with a 10-foot shot that beat Earl Robertson four minutes after overtime's start. Two minutes afterward Eddie Wiseman camped near the Detroit net and slapped a relay past Tiny Thompson just when the former Bruin star was counting on his second shutout in two games.

The tie may have been costly to Detroit, for Eddie Wares, gifted wingman went out in the second period with a ruptured kidney. It was not known immediately how long he would be on the injured list with Charlie Conacher, another Detroit star.

While the teams were preparing for the night's games, Toronto and Chicago stole a share of the spotlight with a trade that sent Bill Thoms of the Leafs to the Hawks in exchange for Doc Romnes. Both are centres and entered the league in 1932-33, and both are clean, conscientious playmakers. Romnes is 28 and Thoms 27.

Sports Roundup

(By Sid Feder, Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, Dec. 9 (AP)— Jack Dempsey is predicting Joe Louis' downfall—not right away, but not too far off either...."He'll go back all of a sudden, same as me," says Jack...."He's out of the ring a lot, he'll get fat and out of shape and take things easy...Then along comes some young fellow and belts him one."

If ever a guy is on the spot, it's Ray Carlin, Lou Nova's manager... There he is sitting with Lou at the Fight Writers' party yesterday, when Gene Tunney upped and said —right out in meeting—that Nova was being brought along too fast.. That if he knocks out Tommy Farr next week, the only clouter left will be Louis—and he's not ready for that yet....Then Dempsey came along and said the same thing.... So Carlin hopped right back at 'em insisted he's carefully thought over every match his youngster has had, and that all contenders today are third rates—except Nova, of course.

When they awarded Dempsey the Eddie Neil medal, a lot of the boys remembered that Eddie's first fight assignment with the AP was covering Jack's training camp before the second Tunney fight....Ham Fisher, Joe Palooka's boss, pointed out how well Dempsey wears the gravy on his vest these days .... Nova sported a swell shiner, a gift from a sparmate....Jack, all choked up and grateful, spluttered like a kid caught playing hockey when the award was announced.

Columbia University's Sid Luckman, who played the season's last two weeks with a busted nose, has about decided to pass up any pro football chances so he can start a business career.

WINNIPEG CLUB SUBMITS FINAL GAINOR EVIDENCE

Middle Winger Considered for Physical Director's Job

SURE OF ELIGIBILITY

Decision of C. R. U. is Expected Later, Just Before Game Time

Toronto, Dec. 9 (CP)—The defence in the Martin Gainor eligibility hearing rested its case today and Winnipeg Blue Bombers awaited a decision on their best defensive player, while Winnipeg fans and Winnipeg money poured into town for the Dominion senior final with Toronto Argonauts tomorrow.

With the eligibility of the charging middle-wing in the air, Chairman W. A. Cuddy of the Winnipeg School Board telegraphed C.R.U. officials last night, that the board was "seriously considering" Gainor for a position as physical education director in a Winnipeg school. That was the Winnipeg football club's answer to a C.R.U. request for a further statement on Gainor's right to play against Argos.

Point Proved is Claim

"I think this conclusively proves our point in assuming from the start that Gainor was eligible and we were not trying to put anything over on anybody," Manager Joe Ryan of the Bombers said. "We were sure of his eligibility."

The C.R.U. had said Gainor would be allowed to play if he "has established a continuous residence in Canada by reason of a position he has been promised as a physical director and that his absence from Canada was to finish his course and obtain the necessary qualifications to accept that position."

Cuddy's telegram to the C.R.U. said: "Martin Gainor being seriously considered by Winnipeg public school board as a director of physical education for a Winnipeg high school. The board is favorably impressed with his voluntary assistance previously rendered at Gordon Bell high school, and his prospects for a position are good."

2 NEW PLAYERS JOIN BRANTFORD

Cliff Chisholm and Red Dunne Will Add Scoring Punch

Toronto, Dec. 9 (CP)—Brantford's fighting Indians, roaring down the victory path on the lookout for scalps, may be a strengthened band of braves when they take the ice here tonight against the undefeated Toronto Goodyears in a Ontario Association senior "A" tilt.

It was announced today that Cliff Chisholm and Red Dunne, formerly of Hamilton, possibly will don war paint and join the Redskins in their skirmish with the league leaders. Cellar occupants of the six-team league, the Brants took their first win after five defeats by beating Niagara Falls Brights 7-5 in overtime Tuesday.

Now they're on the right road, Brants are going to be tough to beat. They've shown revived enthusiasm in ice drills and intend to upset the highly-touted Goodyears, short four players through injuries.

The four are Johnny Inglis, high scoring forward who has a shoulder injury; Frank O'Brien, veteran winger suffering a severe chest bruise; Ted Manorek, defence, sore hip, and Captain Blon[illegible] Sutcliffe, defence, two cracked [illegible].

In another game tonight, Port Colborne travel to Niagara Falls. The teams are tied for third place, each with five points, and the winner will jump over the idle St. Catharines Chiefs into sole possession of second place.

The official league standing is:

Team	W	L	T	P
Toronto	4	0	0	8

Nine Out of Twelve 'Experts' Call Argos To Defeat Bombers

Toronto, Dec. 9 (CP)—The "experts" went out today on the limb they've fallen from so often and by a margin of nine-to-three called Toronto Argonauts to defend successfully their Canadian football championship against Winnipeg Blue Bombers Saturday.

The Canadian Press asked a dozen sports writers and coaches who would win and why. These are their answers:

Art Massucci, coach, Sarnia Imperials—On the basis of last Saturday's performance against the Imperials, I pick Argos. (Argos beat the O.R.F.U. champions 25-8 last Saturday).

Doug Vaughan, Windsor Star — Argos but it will be close. Change in rules plus Argo razzle-dazzle plus better kicking will decide it.

Red Wilson, Sarnia Observer — All Winnipeg had to do is outkick Isbister, stop Teddy Morris, Art West, Annis Stukus, Selkirk, Storey and MacPherson on Toronto's own field. I don't think they will.

Better Than Last Year

Eddie Armstrong, Winnipeg Free Press—Bombers as a unit are so far ahead of last season's team, which lost by only one point, that I look for them to take the game. Our charging ends should stop that end run of Argos.

Hal Walker, Toronto Globe and Mail—Argos on their backfield and kicking. Their line has been underestimated all season and I believe it will hold its own against Winnipeg's.

Fred Jackson, Toronto Star — Argonauts are too fast. They are one of the best teams ever developed in the east.

Change of Rules Will Hurt

Vern DeGeer, Toronto Globe and Mail—Argonauts because of their backfield power and because they have a stronger line than most people think. Change of rules won't help Bombers.

Ted Reeve, Toronto Telegram — Argos by a few points because they have the advantage of home grounds and a better knowledge of the rules.

Red Burnett, Toronto Star — If Winnipeg are half as good as they are confident they should win but it will be awfully close. Winnipeg.

Alex Ponton, coach, Toronto Balmy Beach—Unless the westerners have something exceptional, I look for an Argo win. Change in rules will handicap Bombers.

Wrestling Last Night

UNKNOWN TEAMS MAKE SHOWING IN ENGLISH CUP

Runcorn and Horden Earn Place in Second Round

MINORS ON SATURDAY

Derby County and Everton Have Hot Fight in First Division

London, Dec. 9 (CP Cable)—The fight being waged for English Cup honors by two comparatively "unknown" teams has caught the imagination of soccer fans. Among the 4 clubs playing in the second round of the tournament at the week-end, Runcorn and Horden welfare are outstanding examples of the spirit that carries minor-league clubs through qualifying rounds into competition with big time elevens.

Runcorn's ground will be crowded to capacity when the Cheshire league entry clashes with Aldershot. The team is maintained by two collieries whose employees pay six cents weekly into a recreation fund. Players with big league experience are included in the eleven which in the past few days has been in special training.

Run Team For $52

Up in Durham, supporters of Horden, a mining village team, are not dismayed by the forthcoming visit of Newport County, powerful leader of the league's Third Division, Southern Section. The team has been training by floodlight and practically all the inhabitants of the village turn out to see the nightly practices. Horden's running expenses last year amounted to 11 pounds ($52).

Seven other minor league outfits and 23 representatives of the Third Division take part in the second round. The winners will enter the third stage of the competition, Jan. 7 when the giants of soccer get into the battle for the first time.

Derby and Everton

League interest lies in the efforts of Derby County and Everton to stay out in front in the drive for the First Division championship. Both teams play away from home against tough opposition. Leicester City entertains the league-leading Derby outfit while Everton figures in a Lancashire "derby" with Preston North End.

Glasgow Rangers are setting a dizzy pace in the Scottish League and expect to register their seventh straight victory at Hamilton. The Light Blues, outstanding aspirants for the title, are at the top of the table with a four-point margin over Celtic who in turn top Hearts by a single point.

The Celts are due at St. Johnstone, Saturday, where the home team usually put up a rousing game. Hearts are away to Clyde who have slowed up considerably since a long series of victories in the first two months of the campaign.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

Ken J. Colling

Major Gelley, O.H.A. convener for Kingston and district, notified Eddie Thomas he was calling a meeting of group No. 1. in the Junior O.H.A. for tonight at Kingston. The group originally was composed of Queen's Jrs., R.M.C., Kingston City and the Belleville Junior "B" squad. Yesterday Manager Thomas was in communication with 'Sandy' Burrows, local O.H.A. executive member, and voiced his disapproval of the grouping. "The three Kingston squads have the advantage of artificial ice and will doubtless be in midseason form when the group opens. I do not intend tossing my kids in against seasoned squads at the outset," flatly came out Skipper Thomas. After long distance telephone communications with Secretary Billie Hewitt it was agreed to give the Belleville junior "Bees" a bye into the group play-offs. In the meantime, however, the Belleville Junior "C" entry, the Quintes, will continue in their five-teamed loop, giving Belleville two senior and two junior squads in the O.H.A. this season.

Those two ancient enemies of the N.H.L. ice lanes, Toronto Maple Leafs and the Chicago Black Hawks tangle in an important league fixture at Maple Leaf Gardens Saturday night. Ever since the last Stanley Cup series "Red" Horner, Toronto's veteran defenceman, has come under a concerted attack by the Windy City press, who brand him as the paramount cause of the "dirtiest series in modern Stanley Cup history." Canadians who know Horner personally are taking exception to the Chicago press blasts, as we know the "big sorrel top" took much more than he deserved. Horner was made captain of the Leafs this year and in fairness to him the professional hockey fans of Ontario could do worse than take in Saturday night's game and at the same time show their appreciation of Red's fine hockey ability to vindicate him from the Chicago press attacks.

Norman "Flat" Walsh, coach of the various Queen's University hockey teams, was in the city yesterday on business and invited us to Kingston on Dec. 15th when his Queen's seniors meet a hockey team from the University of Southern California in an International College puck fixture. It seems the U.S.C. hockey team is touring across Canada, meeting various university and college team in exhibition games. The University of Southern California hockey team has played five games in Western Canada to date and won three of them. "The U.S.C. squad boasts of several Canadians from Western Canada and are a well coached hockey team," Coach Walsh assured us. The appearance of a California hockey squad so near at hand will doubtless prove to be a feature sports attraction. In the International Intercollegiate league, however, Queen's go to Harvard and Dartmouth, while Yale and Princeton appear in Kingston this year.

Connie Mack, veteran manager of the A's and the grand old man of baseball, threatened to innovate a plan to eliminate baseball slumps. Mister Mack suggests a "summer vacation" for players who fall by the wayside in slumps. Maybe Mister Mack has struck a keynote and if he puts it into practice (and there is nothing to prevent it in his own ranks) there could be some interesting developments which might run as follows: "Joe Gruff—"Mr. Mack, I'd like to have my vacation early this year, so I can get into a golf tournament down home."....Bill Sideburns — "The family is going north for the summer, Mr. Mack, and I'd like to spend two weeks with them sometime in July."....Henry Whipple —"Mark me down for June, I gotta fishing engagement."....Joe Soko—"I feel a slump coming on, so forget about me for the next two weeks."....But the plan may have its advantages. For instance, should it spread to the National League, the Cubs, or which ever N.L. club won the pennant, could go on a vacation when it came time to meet the Yanks in the World's Series.

Remember—Way back when the New York Yankees were as docile as the St. Louis Browns and there was a football team coached by Hurry Up Yost which went undefeated and scored 550 points to 0?

There are several angles to tomorrow's Dominion football final between the Toronto Argos and the Winnipeg Blue Bombers. Last year Argos eked out a 4 to 3 victory over the same opponents, but this year both squads are reputed to be considerably stronger. We know Argos are much stronger, but to what degree have the Blue Bombers increased their strength—is the question which confronts us. The Winnipeg mentors claim they will blast their way through the Argo line. Mabee—Ottawa Rough Riders and they were no sissies, failed to drive through with power plays. Are the Blue Bombers so much better at line plunging than the Rough Riders? The loss of Martin Gainor driving Winnipeg linesman, will not help the cause of the Blue Bombers, so we'll close by saying the Argos should win, if they continue to play the same class of football which saw Ottawa and Sarnia literally wiped out of competition.

HODGE PODGE — Although the Canadiens staged a belated scoring spree, with three counters in the dying moments, the Rangers had piled up a sufficient margin to win last night's game 6 to 5....It was Les Canadiens first loss in five games....In the remaining N.H.L. struggle the Red Wings and Amerks confined all of their goal getting to the overtime period to finish one-all....Winnipeg football fans are sold on their Blue Bombers, at least it would appear so after hearing they had wagered $20,000.00 on their favorites....At that we feel the Argos will have a much better chance if the field is hard, so we'll have to hope or pray for a drop in temperature tonight....Glad to see "Speedy" St. Louis and Cy Barriage received their O.H.A. transfers from Thorold to Belleville without question....The O.H.A. is going to insist on its players refraining from fighting and rough play, they say.

Old Fight Manager Goes Sour on Football Players

(By Gayle Talbot, Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, Dec. 9 (AP)— Dumb Dan Morgan, the old fight manager, has given up on college boys and said today he wouldn't give a split infinitive for all these big, husky football players being turned loose right now—not as fighters, anyway.

"It's a shame," said Dan, "because there's probably a world champion amongst 'em, and he and I could get together and make ourselves a bag of money. But somebody else can collect the headaches from now on. No more college football players for me."

Dan, dressed up like a Christmas tree, watched Lou Nova, best of the young prospects, work out for his 15-round battle with Tommy Farr a week from tonight. He admitted, relucantly, that he liked Lou's looks, despite the fact the coast kid has a football playing record against him.

"Maybe he's different," Dan ventured. "So far he doesn't show any signs of this football affliction I'm telling you about, and that short right of his is a beauty."

What, Dan was asked, did he mean by this mysterious affliction that had blighted the gridiron crop?

"The truth is that they just don't like to get hit on the ears," sighed Dan. "They can't stand to get their ears messed up. Outside of that, football players are the best bunch of fighters the world ever saw.

"When I discovered their weakness—they don't want to carry around a couple of scrambled ears even if they make a million dollars —I swore off football players and went back to truck drivers and stevedores."

AT THE BELLE

"SUEZ"

Produced with the magnitude possible only on the screen, one of the most memorable pictures ever to come out of Hollywood, "Suez" comes to the Belle Theatre.

"Suez" is truly a great picture. In spectacle, emotional experience and sheer entertainment it is unsurpassed. It is said that into its production Darryl F. Zanuck has poured all his skill and 20th Century-Fox's resources—and "Suez" looks it.

The story is of heroic proportions. It tells of the amazing Ferdinand de Lesseps, who dreamed of creating the short route to the East, sought vainly by Columbus and Magellan, by tearing continents apart and joining the Mediterranean with the Red Sea. The great canal he built has become the jugular vein of the world.

Out of choking sand, from the clutch of the raiding Bedouin, in the face of the terrifying Sahara s'moon—with blood, tears and passion—de Lesseps built his canal driven by the love of two women to realize the dream men scoffed at.

Tyrone Power gives thrilling realism to the central character, with Loretta Young and Annabella stirringly appealing in the feminine leads. Allan Dwan directed "Suez", which is one of the Movie Quiz $250,000 contest pictures.

"Glass Slipper", a funny cartoon in color and Paramount News presenting latest world events will be presented on the same program. A new and thrilling chapter of "The Fighting Devil Dogs" Serial will be presented Saturday Matinee.

Grand Show Tonight

A grand program of screen entertainment embracing romance, fun, chills, adventures and thrills will be presented at the Belle tonight for the last times. Barbara Stanwyck and Henry Fonda are featured in the romantic comedy drama "The Mad Miss Manton." Ann Shirley, Lee Bowman and Edward Ellis are featured in "A Man to Remember", a human and appealing drama presented on the same program with a very interesting "March of Time." The last complete show starts at 8.30 p.m.

AT THE McCARTHY

52nd Street

Opening to capacity attendance at the McCarthy Theatre, New York's world-famous night club sector, between Fifth and Sixth Avenue on 52nd Street, sometimes called the street of swing and the Montmarte of America, achieved glorious immortality in Walter Wanger's filmusical "52nd Street".

Ace entertainers from Manhattan's hot spots and stellar personalities from movieland merged their talents to create the maddest, merriest, most engrossing entertainment treat of the current season.

The roster of talent reads like a who's who of Broadway and Hollywood, and all of them are adroitly and expertly woven into a convincing and effective entertainment pattern.

Kenny Baker, whose outstanding tenor voice has made him a coast to coast sensation on the air is featured as the male lead. He registers a decided hit not only in the several musical and song numbers which he essays, but in the romantic sequences opposite attractive Pat Paterson.

An excellent stage and screen cast of Broadway and Hollywood stars render fine support to the screen's new musical-comedy team and the picture never lets up on a continuous round of merry entertainment that all will enjoy.

"Walt Disney Revue"

On the same program in addition to the above musical-comedy "52nd Street", the McCarthy presents Walt Disney's "Academy Award Revue", in technicolor, five times the size of any other Disney picture —and five times the fun, the cream of all the Disney masterpieces combined into one great feature-length entertainment bringing you, in one hour's magical screen treat, the outstanding animated cartoons that won the highest praise possible and presented with the Academy Award, the highest honor any motion picture can be given. This attraction combines into one, the following: "Three Orphan Kittens", "The Country Cousin", "Flowers and Trees", "Three Little Pigs" and

MASS OF DEBRIS BLOCKS TUNNEL

Wearied Search Crews Continue Digging to Effect Recovery

By WILLIAM STEWART

Thetford Mines, Que., Dec. 9 (CP) —A mass of debris blocking the mouth of an asbestos-mine tunnel still concealed today the bodies of four men buried by a rock fall that took seven lives here Wednesday.

Wearied search crews, who yesterday had pulled the mangled bodies of three of the miners from the pile of rock and dirt, continued digging into the jammed tunnel entrance.

Mining experts in charge of the search, already 36 hours old, said there was "no chance" any unlocated man might have survived the accident.

The avalanche of asbestos rock and earth had crushed down without warning on the handful of miners cleaning out the tunnel-mouth.

Two of Nine Escape.

Two of the party of nine, working just inside the entrance, escaped. In open air, just a few feet away, a dozen other miners witnessed the fall.

Though the fall was outside the tunnel, the brittle mass of serpentine rock piled up outside the "portal" and swept in on the men inside "like sugar would spread", witnesses explained. In the act of loading a spring of cars which were to have been pulled up the 1,500-foot inclined shaft from the deep pit to the Bell plant yards, the victims were caught without time to save their lives.

Killed were: Albert Lemieux, 37-year old town councillor; Adolphe Theberge, 35; Edmond Emery, 43; Donat Gregoire 42, Ludger Aubut, 46; Louis Nadeau, 54; and Joseph Verron, 44.

The three bodies recovered were those of Aubut, Emery and Perron.

The two in the tunnel who escaped were Phillippe Nadeau and Rerard Morin. Morin, crew brakeman, survived by good fortune of being under one of the cars at the moment of the fall.

The Stars Say

For Saturday, December 10

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

THE PROGRESS of this day seems to be threatened by a tendency to "fly off the handle" or do things of a tempestuous reckless or impetuous character, which possibly may have detrimental consequences in business or in the private life. With proper control of strenuous and turbulent inclinations, there is prospect of many decided benefits of a definite nature. New contracts, speculative enterprises and personal adventures in a social or romantic manner are likely.

Those whose birthday it is may enjoy a very active, progressive and prosperous year if they will not attempt to put over promising matters by main force, high pressure or impetuosity. These will react in quarrels, hostility and defeat. With moderation and calm deliberation, there are benefits from new contracts or speculation. There should be happy adventures of a private or romantic character.

A child born on this day may have a very determined and probably wayward and reckless character, attempting to win out against all obstacles and stresses. This attitude may incur much opposition, enmity and consequent defeat of many excellent prospects.

George's Wild Oats

By

Allen Eppes

CHAPTER XXVII

Lucy May was trailing after the farmer, tugging at his sleeve, begging him to reconsider his intention of having George arrested, when she saw a car stop on the highway.

A yellow roadster! Lee! Oh, thank heaven!

"Wait a minute," she said to the farmer. "Here comes a friend of mine. Let him talk to you."

"If he's anything like your other friend," the farmer growled, "I don't want to talk to him."

However, he did stop.

Then, Lee and Mrs. Carter were running across the field toward them.

"Oh, my poor darling!" gasped Mrs. Carter. She clutched Lucy May in her arms. "Are you all right?"

"Slightly black and blue—but all in one piece," said Lucy May. She turned to Lee, and said shakily, "Gee, you don't know how glad I am to see you! How did you and Mother find me?"

Lee grinned, and put his arm around her. "I've been chasing you so long, it's become a habit I could find you anywhere! But never again do I leave you all alone in the wilds of a country club terrace. Boy, did I get a shock when I came back to find you kidnapped by a wild man—and your mother having hysterics."

"He was wonderful, Lucy May!" her mother said effusively. "I don't know what I should have done without him. So calm and comforting!"

Lee glanced toward George's car and the surrounding wreckage. "Gosh, he sure did raise havoc!" Then, anxiously, "Sure you're not hurt, Lucy May?"

"Just a little shaky. But what a ride!" Lucy May described what had happened.

"I don't think he's hurt, but he seems to be kind of stunned. Just sits on the running board and holds his head."

"It would serve him right if he had been killed!" Mrs. Carter said bitterly.

"Now, Mrs. Carter—don't be too hard on him," Lee said soothingly. "I happen to know that he has been under something of a strain."

"Strain! And what do you think I've been under for the past half hour? Besides, that's no excuse for his outrageous behavior. Getting dead drunk, and then endangering my daughter's life!"

At this point, the farmer, who had been standing quietly by, cleared his throat and stepped forward.

"Oh!" said Lucy May, remembering. "Lee, this is the man who owns the corncrib. He—he wants to have George arrested."

"I do — and I will," the man said grimly

"Well, now, look here," Lee placated. "I promise you that all damages will be paid. In fact, I'll pay you something right now if you like—"

"It ain't only that," the farmer said stubbornly. "That fellow ought to be in jail—driving in his condition! He needs to be taught a lesson!"

"That's true," Lee agreed diplomatically. "But how about being easy on him? You may not believe me, but it's the first time he's ever been in this condition—and I expect his lesson will be learned when he wakes up tomorrow morning!"

The farmer looked skeptical, but said, "Well...."

Lee reached in his pocket and produced a bill. "Here—take this as a token payment on damages. And we'll leave Mr. Martin's car here as security."

The farmer grudgingly gave in "Okay."

They proceeded, then, to the scene of the accident. They found George still seated on the running board, with the hay-wagon driver standing guard over him, while the other country folk looked on curiously.

Lee got him to his feet and, supporting him, started him across the field toward the highway. Mrs. Carter gave him a look of cold and haughty disdain, but it was wasted on George. He glanced at her vaguely, but seemed not to recognize her.

When they reached Lee's car Lee helped him into the rumble seat, where he promptly lay down and curled up. Then, with Lucy May and Mrs. Carter in the front seat with Lee, they turned homeward....

As Lee bade the two ladies good night at their door, Mrs. Carter gushed over him as though she had never in her life said an unkind word about him. Lee, pleased though he was over this, was more interested in Lucy May's soft-spoken thanks. He gazed into her shining eyes, hesitated, then glanced uncertainly at Mrs. Carter.

"Go ahead and kiss her, dear boy!"

Lee needed no further encouragement.

It was with a song in his heart that he drove George home. He helped him upstairs and deposited him on his bed but, when he started to undress him, George suddenly came to life.

"Don' want any help! No child!"

Lee started to argue but, when George became belligerent, he shrugged and departed.

George, left alone, sat for a long time just staring into space. After a while, his eyes focussed on something on his bureau. He rose, moved unsteadily across the room, picked up the object of his curiosity, and found it was a letter.

With much difficulty, he tore the envelope open and removed the single sheet of paper. He stared at it, but the writing on it blurred—he couldn't read it. Finally, by peering closely, he made out the signature—"Ted Lane."

"The heck with him!" He crumbled the letter into a ball, flung it to the floor, and ground it under his heel. "More threats! Who cares? I'll sue him!"

Then, it occurred to him, that, if he were going to sue Ted Lane, he might need the letter for evidence. He bent, nearly lost his balance, but managed to pick up the crumbled ball of paper, and stuffed it into his pocket.

After that, he laboriously undressed, got his pajamas on backwards, and fell into bed....

CHAPTER XXVIII

George awoke at noon with only a vague recollection of the events of the previous evening, but with plenty of evidence that things were very, very wrong.

His head felt as though a dozen blacksmiths were shoeing as many horses in the vicinity of his temples. His tongue felt as though it were made of flannel. And his eyes seemed to be trying to go through the back of his head.

He lay in bed and tried to piece together what had happened. He couldn't. He remembered crashing into a barn or something with his car, he remembered a lot of people shouting at him, and he remembered being brought home by Lee, but just what had happened before all that, he wasn't quite sure.

Groaning, he slowly sat up, only to clasp his throbbing head and fall back again against the pillows. Gosh! If this was what was known as a hangover, it was certainly a pippin!

After a while, however, he succeeded in climbing out of bed, and struggled into his clothes.

When he went downstairs for breakfast, he found his housekeeper-cook puzzled and concerned over his late appearance.

"Mr. George ....are you ill or something?"

"No!" he snapped.

Mrs. Simmons retreated to the kitchen, shaking her head. What had happened to her young master? Last night, he hadn't even appeared for dinner and hadn't let her know he wasn't coming home, and now today he got up at noon looking like a thundercloud. Never had she known him to behave so.

Lacking a car, George had to call a taxi to take him into town. As he entered his office building and climbed the stairs, he could hear Lee singing at the top of his voice. Humph! He was glad some one could be cheerful!

He dismally poked his head into Lee's office. "What are you singing about?"

"Well, well!" Lee grinned. "The prodigal son returns! How do you feel?"

"Rotten!" George movevd into the office, and sank into a chair. "Lee....why didn't you tell me it was like this?"

"What was like what?"

"Hangovers. Why didn't you warn me?"

Lee threw back his head and shouted with laughter. "His first hangover—and he doesn't like it! Well, George, if you sow wild oats, you know, you've got to pay the price!"

"Stop laughing," George said irritably. "Listen, Lee—just what happened last night?"

"What happened? What didn't happen!"

Lee proceeded to give him a vivid account of the havoc he had raised.

"Good night!" George moaned. "So I knocked Peters down, did I?"

"You sure did!"

"I suppose," George said forlornly, "that Ellen will never speak to me again."

"Probably not," Lee agreed cheerfully. "Look here, George — just why did you do it? I mean, what started you off in the first place?"

"It was Ellen," George told him. He related the circumstances that had driven him to desperation. "And now," he ended bitterly, "I've just made things worse than ever."

"I'm afraid you have."

"I should think you'd be sore at me, too, after what I did to Lucy May." George looked at Lee curiously. "Why aren't you?"

"You're right—I should be hopping mad. But I'm not." Lee beamed. "You see, I owe you something. Thanks to you, old man, I'm now sitting pretty! I'm a hero!"

He told of his complete conquest of Mrs. Carter as a result of George's fall from grace.

"Well, that's something, anyway," George said gloomily. "Congratulations."

"Thanks!"

George brooded a minute. "You are probably the only friend I've got left. From the town's model young man, I suppose I've turned into the town pariah."

"Oh, that reminds me," said Lee. "I have some messages for you Katrine Buxton phoned to say that her bridge party for Thursday night is called off. Aggie Burt and Doris Thomas also called, and there were a couple of other girls. I've forgotten what they all said, but it all had to do with cancelling invitations. The messages are in there on your desk."

George stared at him. "I guess they view me now as a dangerous character." He shrugged. "Well, I don't care about that — I didn't want to go to their parties, anyway."

"That's the ticket," said Lee. "Look at the silver lining. Why be so doleful? You'll be completely free now from social engagements —which is exactly what you wanted."

"Yes—and free, too, from business engagements, in all likelihood. I see myself losing all my clients."

"Don't cross bridges before you reach them. You haven't lost any business yet."

George buried his head in his hands. "But what bothers me most is Ellen. She'll never forgive me. I've lost her friendship...."

"Oh, come, come!" said Lee. "Cheer up, old fellow. Things are never as black as they seem—"

"They are black!" George raised his head and glared at his friend. "They couldn't be blacker — and you know it!" He ran his hands through his hair. "Lord, how I wish I had never seen Rita Roselle! If it weren't for her—"

He stopped suddenly at the sound of footsteps out in the hall. He heard some one open the door of his office.

"Lee.... see who it is."

Lee cautiously opened his own door a crack, peeped out, then closed the door again.

"It's her!" he reported, in a stage whisper.

George leaped up. "Get rid of her!" he said frantically. "Blast her, anyway! Get rid of her, Lee— I won't see her—"

ARMS USELESS ON A WET DAY

Rheumatic Pains Relieved by Kruschen

Here is a noteworthy instance of the manner in which damp weather can effect the joints of one who is subject to rheumatic pains.

"I had been suffering from rheumatism very badly," a man writes, "and had such pains in my joints that I could hardly bear it, on a wet day especially. It pained me terribly to use my arms, and I was hardly able to work. I tried two different remedies, but I was still as bad after the treatment.

"Then I was told to try Kruschen Salts, which quickly brought relief. So of course, I have kept on with it, and I am now much better and have never felt so fit for years. I used to feel so miserable and sluggish, but now it is a pleasure to be able to work."—S.B.

The pains and stiffness of rheumatism are often caused by uric acid crystals in the muscles and joints. The numerous salts in Kruschen assist in stimulating the internal organs to healthy, regular activity, and help them to eliminate excess uric acid.

RHEUMATIC PAINS

Backache, Lumbago and Rheumatic pains are often due to congested kidneys. 8 medicinal ingredients in Gin Pills stimulate kidney action, eliminate excess acids and tone-up the bloodstream. If toxic waste matter in your system is making you tired, achey, depressed, take Gin Pills.

Six to One

By CLAUDIA MAY FERRIN

His return to the city caused a panic among those who had known him at the beginning of his career. Sidney Martin had gone to the Pacific coast 20 years before, an adventurer amid the scenes of gold in the virgin state and in its coined glory. He had done business in Oregon, principally, on the basis of theories learned at a New England centre. But theory and practical worth were not the same, he had discovered. He must needs gather his dollars by sheer toil and careful management. At last he had become comfortably well off ready to take a glimpse at life in its more leisurely channels.

"We must invite everyone we can find who ever knew him," declared Mrs. Russel. The husband, a college chum of the prodigal, assented heartily. The two daughters smiled schoolgirl style. The novelty it was thoroughly interesting.

But Miss Damie Russel, spinster, who had been given refuge in her nephew's home, gazed blankly at nothing while the discussion progressed. Her namesake demanded finally a word of sanction.

"What a conglomeration you will bring into your parlor if you do that Widows, old maids like myself—many of them more or less failures. Ridiculous!"

"Auntie, you are horrid!" Mrs. James Russel returned the jollity. "We'll try a quiet dinner party first; no doubt, Mr. Martin would prefer something purely unconventional."

Miss Damie hied to her room when the schoolgirls and the man of the house had gone for the day. She closed the door, as if to tell the congenial madman not to disturb her just then. A huge trunk was unlocked—its musty treasures must be reviewed once again. A glimmering white satin with an unfinished bridal veil lay just beneath the tray. She had not touched the garment for years. Hitherto a glance had been sufficient, with a hasty use of her kerchief and a relocking of the time-worn trunk.

True to schedule, the absentee made reappearance. He called hurriedly, on the day of his arrival in the city. He tried to remonstrate, to find Mrs. James Russel the more determined to make the day of open welcome a busy one. He spent one flitting hour in the cozy parlor, with Damie the elder smiling as serenely as might any other whom he knew. He paused during the good-bys to send one keen, searching glance into the depths of the blue-gray eyes. For the moment the past loomed delectably before the pair. Mrs. Russel broke in vivaciously.

"You shall have the pleasure of greeting again a half-dozen more. We've planned every retail, Damie and I. Do forget business long enough, please, to make yourself agreeable?"

"You'll frustrate me," he retorted. "I've known little but the office for the past 20 years."

The party in the Russel parlor proved a veritable reunion. The atmosphere of the generation previous came with the first guest. Miss Damie mischievous forecast held true. Widows, some yet with a dash of black; spinsters prim and forbidding; matrons, too, who smiled at the world from their environments of content; men of serious mien, and a few whom experience had not yet sobered all ready to recall and to remind their mates of the good times that used to be.

And then—one of the girls was requested to preside at the piano. A few dance numbers were in order, to break up the stiffness that seemed to creep in despite Mrs. Russel's planning. Woe unto the polished floors—a bit of actual rehearsal became necessary before the idea could be carried through. Miss Damie sought the nearest alcove to rest after the first heroic effort.

She was followed immediately, as if the man had been awaiting the opportunity. It was the honored one of the hour—Sidney Martin.

"I did not mean to slip away from you, 20 years ago, without a real good-by. But I had a chance to go with a party of young fellows. One who had paid the fare was prevented by illness and offered me his place—to pay when I could. I meant to write on the train, then when I reached the coast. I tried it again when I found quarters, but I did not know just how to explain. You were nearly ready — weren't you, Damie?"

She recalled the satin wedding dress—the undraped veil of gauze. He had not realized, somehow, that the hour of announcement had been set—but postponed.

"I've come to beg forgiveness. A bit late,"—both smiled; "but we might give these a chance to know something of the realities of this reunion. Why not?"

SO YOU'RE HERE AGAIN, YOUNG MAN, I THOUGHT I TOLD YOU TO STAY OUT OF TILLIE'S OFFICE
THAT'S WHAT I'M DOING
BUT YOU CAN'T STAY THERE — IT'S TOO DANGEROUS
I'M SAFER HERE THAN IN THERE NOW
I TOLD ANDY TO GET OUT THERE WHEN I HEARD YOU COMING, MR. SIMPKINS, BUT I THINK IT WOULD BE BETTER TO HUMOR HIM, IF YOU WANT TO GET HIM INSIDE — JUST TALK TO HIM ABOUT DANCING
SAY, ANDY, JUST BETWEEN YOU AND ME, I'M A JITTERBUG AT HEART AND I WANT YOU TO TEACH ME THE SHAG
I MAY BE A GOOF, BUT I'M NOT GOOFY ENOUGH TO BELIEVE THAT

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 9 (CP)—Renewal of the rally in the western oil shares on Toronto Exchange today provided the main interest. Base Metals held steady to a bit firmer and the golds and industrials weakened.

Action in the oils boosted the volume figures to 421,000 shares for the first three hours, showing sharp expansion of Thursday's corresponding period. Home advanced 15 cents to 1.68 and Okalta, Dalhousie, Calgary-Edmonton, Davies, Anglo-Canadian and Foothills posted moderate gains.

Nickel, Smelters and Sherritt were up and Noranda slightly lower. lower. Exceptions to the general weak tone in the golds were Madsen, East Malartic, Kirkland Lake and God's Lake.

Steel, paper and food issues were the weakest of the industrials.

WALL STREET

New York, Dec. 9 (AP)—Buying was selective in today's stock market and many issues were neglected as traders searched unsuccessfully for trend clues.

A few rails, steels, rubbers and specialties attracted mild support in dealings which were even slower than in yesterday's dragging proceedings. Transfers were about 700,000 shares.

Attempts to rally the stock market today drew only faint response from buyers and, with the exception of a few rails steels and selected industrials, many leaders either stood still or drifted moderately lower.

Favored the greater part of the time were Great Northern, Santa Fe, U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Goodyear, United Aircraft, North American Aviation, Chrysler, Anaconda, Dupont, American Can and Pathe Film. Backward were American Smelting, General Motors, U.S. Rbber, Schenley, J. C. Penney and Western Union.

Interest Lags in Butter and Eggs

Some improvement was noticed in trading on the egg market, which was attributed to covering for week-end requirements. Buying was still not brisk, however, but the feeling is that consumptive demand will pick up next week when the lower prices have reached the ultimate consumer. Although fresh receipts were not heavy, they were ample for the demand. Graded shipments declined to the range of 31c to 32c for grade A-large, 26c to 27c for medium, 25c to 26c for pullets, 25c for B's and 22c for C grades. Other divisions were unchanged.

Traders continued to purchase odd small lots of the Ontario make on the butter market, but displayed little interest in the Western product. While sales were not being forced, the light offerings were sufficient for the buyers' needs. Ontario creamery solids sold at the easier prices of 21 3-4c to 22c for No. 1 grades and 21c to 21 1-4c for 38 score.

Montreal, Dec. 9 (CP)—Potato prices dropped 5c a bushel during dull transactions on open produce markets at Montreal Thursday, and first-grade eggs followed the downward trend, easing 1c per dozen, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported.

Creamery butter prints to retail dealers sold for 23c to 23 1-4c a pound and solids for 22 1-2c to 22 3-4c.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases were offered at 33c a dozen for A-large, 27c for A-medium, 26c for A-pullets, 25c for B-large and 21 1-2c for C. Receipts: 384 cases.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford By Financial Service

Important accumulation is reported from certain quarters in Waite Amulet at around the $8.00 level. The Company recently gave a summary of the ore reserves indicated to date which amounted to 4,208,260 tons which would be equal to more than 10 years production on the basis of 1,000 tons daily, a rate which a semi-official statement mentions as the first step-up from present output. It is said, however, that it is very likely that in a short time production will be increased to 2,000 tons daily; such a rate would become effective very rapidly should future results add to presently indicated ore reserves. On the basis of 2,000 tons daily and present prices for copper and zinc, the company could earn $2.00 a share net on its capital stock.

Amongst the strong spots of the week were East Malartic, Bralorne, Wright Hargreaves, Macassa, Kerr Addison, Chesterville and Waite Amulet. In each case there are special developments of sufficient importance to justify the statement that the outlook for these Companies is extremely promising.

EAST MALARTIC GOLD MINES

A few weeks ago this column carried the information that the shares of East Malartic Gold Mines were about to receive aggressive sponsorship, and, that the property was looking exceedingly attractive. This stock is at the time of writing quoted 2.65 bid, as against a low of $1.05 for the year. From the north comes the news that the mill is handling 900 tons daily at the present time with the grade running in the vicinity of $7.

Although the company is heavily capitalized, people who have studied the possibilities have it estimated that profits for the next twelve months could very easily exceed 30 cents a share on the common stock. Ore reserves are unofficially placed at 3,000,00 tons. Before the end of 1939 East Malartic will be handling 1500 tons daily and eventually it is hoped that this figure will be stepped up to 5,000 tons daily.

HUNTINGDON FARMERS MAY LOSE EYESIGHT

Little hope is held by physicians for the saving of the eyesight of Richard and Percy Fleming, Huntingdon Township farmers severely injured a few days ago by a dynamite explosion on their farm while blasting stone.

While the eardrums of the injured men were destroyed, they will suffer but a slight loss of hearing, their physician stated today.

Their general condition is improving, and they got out of their beds for the first time today.

India, Delightful Land of Mystery And Romance, Says Mrs. Sneath

Napanee Speaker Addresses Women's Canadian Club

SPEAKER THANKED

"Impressions of India" by one who had looked upon India as a delightful land of mystery and romance and who, after a seven months' visit found it quite as interesting and fascinating in reality as in anticipation was the subject of Mrs. Caroline Sneath's address at the meeting in Bridge Street Church parlor of the Women's Canadian Club.

Mrs. Sneath, who resides in Napanee, was presented to the audience by the president, Mrs. G. G. Wright. The speaker gave an informal and engrossing talk on interesting points in her visit to India. The voyage of twenty days from London to Bombay was replete with interesting incident. At Tangiers Mrs. Sneath encountered a most unusual means of shopping. Traders in tiny boats swarmed out to the ship and began attracting attention to their wares. Prospective buyers were allowed to examine the articles by means of long lines and if the sale were completed the money was transferred to the small boat in a basket.

Beauty and Color

Arriving in India, the visitor is struck with the beauty and colour of the costumes of the native men and women. Each religion is distinguished by special garb. The costumes of the women are enhanced by the great variety of jewelry. Even the poorest tries to have at least a few of the heavy necklaces, massive armlets, beautiful anklets, nose studs, earrings. The Indian's method of banking is to put his money into jewelry, which his wife wears.

Mrs. Sneath described the various methods of transportation by horse and bullock drawn vehicles. The condition of the animals, excepting the sacred animals, is wretched, due more to the ignorance and stupidity of owners rather than cruelty.

Streets of cities in India present incredible sights . . . coolies sleep there at night in the hottest weather, sacred cattle wander about with no fear of traffic . . . and sleep in any convenient spot day or night . . . coolies with huge baskets, containing every type of merchandise, on their heads run along the roadway . . . barbers equipped only with razors and without benefit of soap and water casually shave their customers, seated on the side of the pavement . . . native shops, the size of cupboards, some entirely open, offer their fascinating wares. . . .

Calcutta with its beautiful Maidan. Benares visited by millions of Hindus each year on pilgrimage to Holy Mother Ganges, the walled city of Fathepur Sikri were described by Mrs. Sneath in a manner which made the audience seem to see and hear the wonders of these cities of clamour and fascination.

Rugged Beauty

Mrs. Sneath told of the rugged beauty of the Khyber Pass, one of the most famous points of entry in the world, known as the key to India. Its twenty-seven miles are guarded by four forts, and beyond whose walls, and block houses, tribal villages which no white man dare

In native cities, white people have to be within their part of the community at four o'clock in the afternoon and venture out again at their own risk. Many stories are told of the strange happenings in native centres One tells of a native in a movie house who requested the man in front of him to remove his turban. "Why should I, I can see all right," said the man in front. The man behind concluded the discussion by taking out his knife and cutting off the head of the other patron . . . . "well, you can't see now," he remarked.

Mrs. Sneath told of the beauties of the temples, and beauty of the Taj Mahal, transcending all others. She not only had beautifully tinted slides to illustrate her address but had also brought three lovely native costumes which were displayed by Mrs. Taylor Franklin, Mrs. D. Cleland and Mrs. Nora Gulliver.

The appreciation of the audience was expressed by Mrs. Wright and the meeting concluded with afternoon tea, Mrs. J. W. Kinnear presiding at the tea table.

AMATEURS HEAD BILL AT CAPITOL

Second in Series of 'Tour for Talent' to be Held

The second in a series of amateur contests at the Capitol Theatre will resume at the Capitol Theatre this evening when Ken Soble's "Tour for Talent" program will again bring anxious youthful amateurs before the microphone.

In addition to the eight amateurs to appear on tonight's program seeking honors on Ken Soble's "Tour for Talent" program, Manager S. L. Blane, of the Capitol Theatre, has arranged to have Glen Haggerty, 14-year-old Madoc boy tenor, winner of last week's show, present as a guest artist. Walter Taylor, who came second last week will also be present.

These weekly "Tour for Talent" programs met with spontaneous success during the inaugural program last week. The ultimate winner of the series of programs at the Capitol Theatre will earn the right to appear on Ken. Soble's well known all-Canadian amateur radio hour and compete in a subsequent contest, from which the winner will earn a trip to England. A capacity house welcomed the amateurs at the Capitol last week.

New C. O. Takes Over Trenton Command

Ottawa, Dec. 9 (CP)—Wing Commander C. M. McEwen of the National Defence headquarters here, will leave today to take over command of the Royal Canadian Air Force Station at Trenton, Ont. During the Great War, he served in France and Italy with the Royal Flying Corps and had 30 air victories to his credit.

DREW, LAWSON

the older generation, we could win the next election if we convinced youth we were doing right by them," he said.

The way to convince youth was to show courage and faith in Canada. Give youth courage, hope and reason to believe the Conservative party stood for national welfare and not party intrigue and it would follow the Conservative party.

The Bren gun inquiry was a provincial issue because the province controlled the sale of stock, said Col. Drew, predicting "there will be no Bren gun contract with the Canadian Government when the next session of parliament opens."

"We want no salesmen of death peddling their stock around the streets of this province again, telling people they're going to make money because Canada needs arms. There will be no profiteering on the weapons of war if you choose me leader of this party."

Col. Drew said five legislature members had offered to resign in his favour should he be elected leader. He would ask Premier Hepburn to call a by-election the minute a seat was opened.

"I do not believe he dares to refuse this request," Col. Drew added.

Believes in 2-Party System

The candidate said he was a believer in the two-party system. "I was one of several prominent Conservatives who believed it was wise to have a coalition under the terms offered us a year and a half ago," he added. "I may have been wrong. I was honest.

"That is past. No matter what may have been possible in the past, what has been done in the last year has precluded all possibility of coalition with the man who in the last year has sought to destroy respect for the British crown."

Col. Drew urged Conservatives to show their loyalty when the King and Queen came to Canada. "One empire is our greatest assurance of future prosperity," he said.

No Magical Solution

Col. Drew said there was no magic for the solution of economic and social problems. They all traced to unemployment. Jobs took care of everything.

Prosperity could come only if the Ontario Government was made up of competent executives. Some had the opinion the best qualifications for the premiership were those of a minstrel show end-man. It hadn't worked.

In dealing with problems of agriculture, mining and other occupations, Col. Drew said he would go to farmers, miners and others for advice. For farm advice he would call farmers. For Northern Ontario he would seek and be guided by men from the north. "I wouldn't go to Bay Street offices to learn about the north," said the noted barrister, soldier and writer.

For advice on business, he would not go to the theorizing professor. He would go to the practical businessman.

Mr. Heighington Introduced

Speaking on behalf of Mr. Heighington, Mr. Waters said the former member of the Ontario Legislature had a record which entitled him to serious consideration as party leader.

There were no buttons, brass bands or synthetic enthusiasm on Mr. Heighington's behalf but there was a worthy career. He would be a sane, steady, serious and sober statesman. Government by snappy epigrams and wisecracks would be ended.

Mr. Waters criticized the appointment of a lawyer as Ontario Health Minister (Hon. H. J. Kirby). "I suppose the next typhoid epidemic will be checked by injunction," he said.

Says Glamor Not Enough

"You can't win an election with cheap clap trap," Mr. Heighington told the convention. Glamor on the platform wasn't enough for a leader. The ability to lead the legislature also should be considered.

"I want to offer myself to you as a man experienced in the legislature of Ontario who can meet the charges of our opponents and beat them on their own ground," he said in terming Premier Hepburn a "master of superficiality."

"Consider the record of people when you vote," he urged. "If you are pledged to any one candidate, forget about it. It won't do. We learned that. Cast your ballot on your own discretion."

The most important thing in Ontario was to bring all Conservatives into the fold again, said Mr. Douglas in nominating Mr. Lawson. The candidate was the one who could reunite all factions in the party.

Mr. Lawson was ready to leave the Federal arena to weld the Ontario Conservative party into a fighting force again. He knew the organization business from bottom to top.

"There is only one way the Conservative Party can depose the present government," said Mr. Douglas. "That is by the unity of all Conservatives."

Hon Earl Lawson Speaks

"I am not the nominee or favorite of any group, clique or class," said Mr. Lawson. "Had Mr. Macaulay (Hon. Leopold Macaulay, Conservative House Leader) been a candidate, I would not have been."

He had been urged by many Conservatives to be a candidate to give the delegates an opportunity to vote "for a man who had never been a party to any intra-party quarrels or strife."

Mr. Lawson repudiated the anti-Drew pamphlet mentioned by Mayor Morrison. It was not the way he played the game.

If the Ontario Conservative Party wanted to get anywhere it had to take a definite stand on definite problems. As a starter Mr. Lawson proposed the province should relieve the municipalities of all cost of relief or employable unemployed.

High Municipal Taxes Blamed

High municipal taxation, caused largely by relief budgets, was retarding building. At the same time nearly 50 per cent of those on relief were formerly dependent on the construction industry. "This is a vicious circle. Assumption of relief by the province would stimulate building and remove this class from relief.

Premier Hepburn, charged Mr. Lawson had scuttled every effort made by the Dominion government to deal with the problem of unemployed youth. It was neglected entirely in Ontario except for the training of a few girls for domestic service.

Marketing Act

The personal feud between Premier Hepburn and Prime Minister King had cost Ontario farmers the benefits of the Natural Products Marketing Act. Had there been friendly relations between the two governments, a way would have been found to make the Act effective.

"The only farmer who has benefitted by Hepburn policies is Farmer Hepburn. He has added 700 acres to his farm since 1934. How many of you have added ten?"

The real pals of Premier, Hepburn were the Bay Street mining barons. He was given to flying to Florida and other places with the biggest baron of all. Mr. Lawson suggested that at the next election every billboard in the province should be plastered with the title "Baron Mitch of Bannockburn."

Rev. Rawson Speaks

"I am at a Conservative convention today," observed Mr. Rawson in opening his address. "Sunday I preach to Christians. I have achieved the ultimate.

"I come before you free and unfettered with no political past whatsoever. Therefore I have no dirty linen to wash. If I had, I wouldn't wash it on the front lawn for the envious neighbors to see."

Mr. Rawson said there was no campaign on his behalf to "bludgeon" the delegates. It was a mistake to pledge delegates before they sized up the candidates.

"I come to the convention impelled by a sense of duty and at the risk of my future career. Great political parties should not be left to the mercies of ward-heelers."

Canada today was nine provinces, not one nation. Mr. Rawson wanted to see Ontario back in Confederation and Canada "back in the Empire with force and verve."

Prime Minister King should learn that the spiritual home of Canadians was not to the south. It was across the Atlantic.

Against All Dictatorships

The great problem before the Province and Dominion was the training of unemployed youth to enable them to face and defeat life's challenges. If war had come, money would have been found to equip them for battle. Money must be found to save them in life.

Communism and Fascism could not be defeated by denunciation. Democracy must "out-program, outlive and out-think them— and if necessary, out-die them."

What has mining to do with STARTING YOUR CAR?

ONE of the most important operations in a mine is hauling. Far underground, the old mule is becoming a thing of the past and train-loads of coal are drawn by electric locomotives propelled by Exide Batteries. Operators know of Exide dependability from many years' experience. They have found that Exides mean efficient hauling and freedom from wasteful interruptions. Their low operating cost, their tremendous, tireless power and long, trouble-free life are features of vital importance.

These features are equally important in a battery for your car. Perhaps you feel that buying a battery is guesswork—all batteries look so much alike. But the experience of the mines is proof that you take no chances with Exide—proof that Exides are unfailingly dependable. Is there any other automobile battery which so thoroughly merits your confidence? Exides are priced for every car-owner. Look for the Exide sign-symbol of honest service.

NEWS ODDITIES AND BRIEFS

BRITISH GUIANA WOULD MAKE GOOD HAVEN FOR JEWS

Georgetown British Guiana, Dec. 10 (CP-Havas)—British Guiana could easily absorb, and would welcome the settlement of 500,000 Jewish refugees, stated an article published in the Daily Chronicle yesterday, written by Theodore Orella, stock-raiser, and Vincent Roth, retired civil servant. The article praised Jews for turning sandy Palestinian wastelands into fertile orange groves. British Guiana would profit greatly if Jewish refugees were to apply their industry to the fertile Essequibo Valley, it added.

BOY HAS HEART AND LIVER IN WRONG POSITIONS

Ottawa, Dec. 10 CP)—Medical examination of a 12-year-old boy charged with truancy in Juvenile Court here yesterday showed that his heart and liver were reversed in position in his body, the heart on the right side and the liver on the left. Considered a rare condition by medical science, it is known as dextrocardia.

LARGE TREE A TRAFFIC HAZARD

London, Ont., Dec. 10 (CP) A tree four feet in diameter in the centre of a West Williams Township road worries Middlesex county officials. Road Superintendent Charles Talbot told County Council there would be "almost a rebellion" in the district if the tree were cut down. He warned it was a traffic hazard.

GIRLS! GIRLS!

Alma, Mich., Dec. 10 (AP)—A month ago a pay telephone was installed in a girl's dormitory at Alma College. When a collector opened the coin box this week for the first time out rolled 99 pennies, 47 slugs—and four nickels.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Dec. 10—(CP)— Rain, with part snow or sleet in more northern districts, has occurred in many parts of eastern Canada. Also light to moderate snowfalls in some sections of the west. It is a little colder this morning in Saskatchewan and Alberta. A moderate disturbance is moving northeastward from eastern New York and other low areas are centred over northern Manitoba and Kansas with high pressure in the southeast states and over British Columbia.

Lake Superior: Fresh southwest to west winds; mostly cloudy with some light snow or part rain. Sunday—strong westerly winds; partly cloudy with a little lower temperature; scattered snowflurries.

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Science Service Meteorologist

Winter flying! This winter has bad enough weather for the air services to cancel some of the trips. Winter flying is, of course more difficult than summer flying; but study and observation have done much toward solving the difficulties. The Air Corps has had to study the clothes problem or pilots and the ground crew clothes should be warm but not cumbersome. It has been found that cold starting breaks the starters and now engines are heated up by covering them with a kind of 'pup tent' under which are firepots. Heavy oil can then be used. Landing skis have been redesigned to stand the various loads of different types of planes.

Nazi Posters Depict Soldiers Firing on Arabs

Berlin, Dec. 10 (AP)—Huge illustrated posters on bulletin board of Nazi precinct headquarters today depicted British soldiers firing on Arabs and destroying Arab villages.

Readers were informed that "world conscience is asleep when England's soldiers mow down Arabs with their guns, but it is awake when a few windows of Jewish junk shops and synagogues are smashed in Germany."

The posters close with a warning that "the more insolent attempts of meddlers at interfering with internal German problems become, the more radically we will solve these problems."

CHINAMAN VICTIM OF ATTACK IN MARMORA CAFE

Marmora Restaurant Proprietor Slugged on Head With Hammer

'IKE' NEAL HELD

Marmora, Dec. 10 (Special)—Lem Lung, Chinese proprietor of the Glossy Cafe here, is in the Belleville General Hospital today as the result of n attack upon him allegedly by "Ike" Neal, elderly native of this village early today, police stated after arresting Neal on a charge of assault causing actual bodily harm.

Staggering to the street, bleeding profusely from seven wounds and lacerations of the head, Lung was picked up as he fell to the sidewalk, by early-morning workmen to whom the Chinese restaurant proprietor mumbled something about being attacked by "Ike" Neal. The injured man was taken to the surgery of Dr. Crawford where first aid was given. Seven wounds were found on the man's skull and a fracture of the skull is feared, Dr. Crawford stated after Lung was taken to the Belleville Hospital.

Constable Percy Gray and H.T.O. Hatch of this village later arrested Neal. The police alleged Neal went into the cafe and ordered breakfast

WILL EXTEND ALBERTA TO THE ARCTIC OCEAN

Edmonton, Alta., Dec. 10 (CP)—Premier Aberhart disclosed today the Alberta government will seek extension of the northern boundary of the province to the Arctic Ocean.

The extension would double the size of the province from 248,000 square miles to approximately 500,000 square miles; add the gold and radium mining areas, fisheries and fur producing districts of the present North West Territories.

Hon. R. B. Bennett's English Home Undergoes Extensive Alterations

By GUY RHOADES

Mickleham, England, Dec. 10 (CP)—Groundsmen are taking dead timber from the 95-acre "Juniper Hill" estate of Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett these days while architects and draftsmen work on detailed drawings for modernization of the 18th century rectangular brick mansion which the former Canadian Prime Minister soon will call home.

A dozen men using two trucks are tidying the parks and the woodland estate which has been unoccupied for the last three years and architects expect to start renovating the interior of the house in February.

At present it is filled with dead leaves and mud tracked in on the boots of workmen. Repairmen already are fixing the roof and drain pipes, seeking out possible leaky spots.

The former Canadian Prime Minister will live halfway up a hill at the foot of which are Mickleham Church and the Running Horses Pub where his village neighbors drink quiet beers after their day's work.

From the great terraced, triangular lawn of Juniper Hill or the front windows of his home, Mr. Bennett will be able to look over Mickleham valley which resembles parts of the Gatineau valley north of Ottawa.

Below the house run two electric railway roads. Neither can be seen although traffic sounds can be heard from the house on the hill, which is between 3,000 and 4,000 feet above sea level. The estate includes three cottages, large garages and a gate lodge.

The bare interior of the Juniper Hill mansion shows considerable work will have to be done before it regains its homelike atmosphere. Mr. Bennett intends to have the primitive central heating plant and archaic plumbing replaced and a small motion picture theatre built in the great rambling basement.

Architects say the theatre is the only major operation involved in the renovation of the house but the vast expanse of wall surface will have to be recovered and the great floor area improved.

The house has four reception rooms and a study, nineteen bedrooms and a large winter garden with an artificial grotto extending to the ceiling. The library is a 25 by 16 foot room and other main floor rooms contain fine chimney pieces carved by the Adams brothers.

The great rectangular staircase hall is supported down the centre by a row of fluted columns and is heated by a great fireplace.

The house contains no room designed especially as a ball room but it is considered likely Mr. Bennett could use the winter garden for that purpose if he wished. The garden has a large mosaic floor space a few feet above paths that wind between giant ferns and small palms set in rockery.

WORSHIP OF STATE GREATEST THREAT DECLARES EDEN

U. S. Manufacturers at New York and Radio Audience Hear Britisher

'STATE MADE FOR MAN'

Britain Does Not Seek to Have Others Pull Chestnuts Out of Fire

New York, Dec. 10 (AP)—Anthony Eden, former Foreign Secretary of Great Britain, spoke emphatically last night for the preservation of democracy which "we in England and you in America cherish most", and saw as the greatest threat to that democracy "a new form of idolatry, the worship of the state".

Eden's address to the National Association of Manufacturers was a ringing defence of democracy as "a university in which we learn from one another". It never could be a barracks where blind obedience was the first essential, he said.

"It would indeed be the greatest irony in human history," he told the 4,000 persons at the banquet and a radio audience, "if mankind were to allow all progress to be stifled by the setting up" of this "worship of the state to which all men must bow down, and to which they must sacrifice their freedom of faith, of speech, of worship".

State Made For Man.

"Man was not, in our view, made for the state. The state was made for man," he said.

The British statesman, who resigned his cabinet post in a difference of opinion with Prime Minister Chamberlain over policies toward the totalitarian states, stressed that Great Britain and the United States must stand firm together against the enemies of democracy and "we are acutely conscious of the need to defend ourselves."

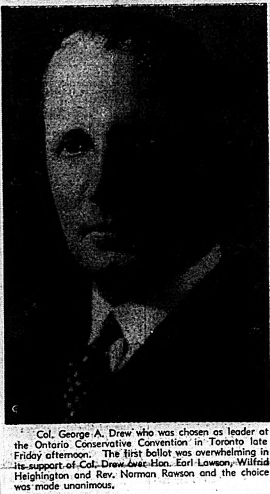
Gainor Granted Permission To Play

Toronto, Dec. 0—(CP)— Martin Gainor, Winnipeg's star middle wing, has been granted permission to play in the Canadian football final today—but was not declared eligible.

The statement on the Gainor dispute issued last night by Secretary Bobby Hewitson of the Canadian Rugby Union said: "the C.R.U. has granted Martin Gainor, Winnipeg football player, permission to play in the Canadian final game on Dec. 10, 1938."

Today Secretary Hewitson added this comment: "it is significant to note that this statement does not declare Gainor eligible but merely grants him permission to play."

New Leader of Ontario Conservatives



Col. George A. Drew who was chosen as leader at the Ontario Conservative Convention in Toronto late Friday afternoon. The first ballot was overwhelming in its support of Col. Drew over Hon. Earl Lawson, Wilfrid Heighington and Rev. Norman Rawson and the choice was made unanimous.

PREMIER DALADIER GIVEN MAJORITY TO RULE NATION

Three Roads Open After Vote is Counted in Deputies

TO SMASH STRIKE

By CHARLES FOLTZ

Paris, Dec. 10 (AP)—Premier Daladier won a new but slim majority in the Chamber of Deputies today, enabling him to carry on his strike smashing and his fight against Italy's colonial ambitions.

In a riotous session of the chamber, the best Daladier could wring from the quarrelling, shouting deputies was a majority of 74 votes out of the chamber's 618. The vote of confidence was 315 to 241.

His new majority was based on Conservative support, ranging from his own Radical Socialist party to the extreme right French Social party — Colonel Francois De La Rocque's group.

Three Roads Open.

The premier seemed to be faced with three possible roads — all fraught with danger:

1. He may continue with the present shaky majority.
2. He may ask President Lebrun and the Senate to dissolve the Chamber and go back to the people for new elections.
3. He may resign in the hope of forming a new government based on

LADY ANNE GRENFELL DIES

Brookline, Mass., Dec. 10 (AP)—Lady Anne Grenfell, wife of Sir Wilfred Grenfell, famed medical missionary to Labrador, died yesterday after a long illness. Funeral service will be held tomorrow.

A native of Lake Forest, Ill., Lady Grenfell met Sir Wilfred on an Atlantic liner during a trip from England in 1908 and they were married the next year.

REAR-END CRASH CAUSE OF DEATH TORONTO WOMAN

Mrs. J. F. McDonald, Riding with Husband Who Was Driving

CHARGE IS LAID

Mrs. John F. (Molly) McDonald, 73 Dixon Ave., Toronto, died in the Belleville General Hospital early last evening as the result of fatal injuries received, when the automobile in which she was riding crashed into the rear of a parked and loaded truck three miles west of Belleville on Highway No. 2. The automobile was driven by her husband, J. F. McDonald. The McDonalds were rushed to the Belleville General Hospital in Martin's ambulance, where Mrs. McDonald succumbed to her injuries a few hours later. The accident occurred shortly before 5.30 p.m. last evening.

According to investigating police the fuse on a truck, hauling a large load of straw to Trenton, blew out, forcing the driver, Kenneth Flindall, Wooler, to stop. Flindall and his partner, Clifford Dalmas, also of Wooler, replaced the burned out fuse and had dismounted from the cab of the parked truck to examine the wire couplings between the tractor and trailer. Both men were between the tractor and trailer, when the McDonald-driven car crashed into the rear of the parked truck loaded with straw. The force of the impact turned the lighter vehicle around the entire right side of the motor car being demolished. Both vehicles were

YOUTH HELD ON MURDER CHARGE

Detroit, Dec. 10 (AP)—Gordon Rowland, 21-year-old Great Lakes sailor hunted since the fatal shooting of a Northeastern Michigan resort manager, was held here on a charge of murder today.

Captain Donald Leonard of Michigan State Police, who with other officers arrested Rowland in Windsor, Ont., last night, said the youth admitted he shot and killed Earl Bergman, 55, Thursday in a attempt to obtain money to finance his marriage to a girl he met during a drinking party a few hours earlier.

MODERATE TONE OVER TUNISIAN ISSUE IS SEEN

Italy Said Now to Seek New Negotiations With France

ITALY'S STATUS

Anti-Italian Disturbances Spread Throughout Tunisea

Rome, Dec. 10 (AP)—The Italian campaign for Tunisia appeared to be letting up today as the press adopted a more moderate tone in its anti-French articles. No new street demonstrations were reported.

One of the papers to continue the attack on France was Il Popolo Di Roma, which said Tunisian "Jews of the Ghetto" were bringing pressure on French authorities to curb Italians in Tunisia.

The authoritative Fascist editor, Virginio Gayda, indicated in Il Giornale d'Italia that Italy wanted new negotiations with France to settle the question of Italian rights in North Africa.

He blamed France for not having negotiated a special Tunisian accord as contemplated under the 1935 agreement signed by Premiers Pierre Laval and Benito Mussolini.

Tunis, Tunisia, Dec. 10 (AP) — Anti-Italian demonstrations spread westward through France's Arab empire today as crack North African troops guarded the Tunisian-Libyan frontier.

Hundreds of mobile guards and mounted police patrolled the streets of Tunisian cities to prevent the demonstrators from getting out of hand.

In Algiers, Arab and French students took up the cry against the Italian campaign for Tunisia. Algiers is the capital of Algeria, French North African Protectorate adjoining French-governed Tunisia.

Several thousand citizens joined the students who marched through the streets chanting "Sicily and Sardinia for France—Italy for the Negus."

CHURCHILL SEEKS 'NATIONAL GOV'T'

Critic of Government Asks Comparison With Chamberlain

Chingford, Essex, England, Dec. 10 (CP)—Winston Churchill last night appealed for a "real national government—not an outworn sham".

In a speech to his constituents that was repeatedly interrupted by a man who shouted "you can trust Chamberlain", the veteran Conservative, long a critic of the government on foreign policy, called upon his audience to place his own judgments and those of Prime Minister Chamberlain side by side and then decide where British policy was leading.

"He (Mr. Chamberlain) told us that he believed that after Herr Hitler had gained the Sudeten region (of Czechoslovakia) he would have no more territorial ambitions in Europe," Mr. Churchill said.

"Well, how does that stand now?"

A Policy That Unites.

A foreign policy should be agreed upon that "does not divide, but unites, the nation," he affirmed. He attacked the Anglo-Eire agreement under which forts on the southern coast of Eire, "vital to our food supply in time of war," were handed over to Eire."

Europe Needs International Loan, 'A Little Co-operation From Hitler'

Southampton, Dec. 10 (AP) — Joseph Kennedy, United States Ambassador to Great Britain, said today the major need in solving Europe's refugee problem is "cooperation for an international loan and, above all, a little cooperation from Hitler."

"You can stop worrying about where to put the refugees now," he said. "That problem will be solved."

Mr. Kennedy discussed the refugee problem along with the war debts and debutantes before sailing in the liner Queen Mary for the United States. About war debts he said:

"I think we can probably make a deal with Great Britain about war debts, but I am afraid it will have to be a deal that public opinion in the United States is not prepared to accept. Britain is not prepared to pay the whole debt and many people at home are against anything but a 100 cents on the dollar settlement."

He said he had never discussed the question officially "with any member of the British government for the simple reason that I had no instructions to do so."

'We Are a United Party' New Leader Declares As Convention Cheers

SEES PARTY TRIUMPH

Warns Against Communism Which Paves Way to Naziism and Fascism

Toronto, Dec. 10 (CP)—The Ontario Conservative party girded today for future political warfare under the guidance of the aggressive Col. George A. Drew, barrister, soldier and author, elected yesterday to succeed Hon. Earl Rowe, party leader for little more than two years.

Swept into the leadership on the first ballot at the end of the two-day convention called to choose a new leader, Drew said "the past is past; we look to the future." Now he has to find a seat in the Provincial Legislature, opening early next year, and already five members have offered him their seats.

Drew, 44 and former Mayor of Guelph, Ont., rolled up an overwhelming verdict over his three opponents in yesterday's balloting. The vote was not announced, but unofficial figures gave him 796 votes, against 413 for Hon. J. Earl Lawson, former Federal Minister of Internal Revenue, 42, for Wilfrid Heighington, former Toronto Conservative member of the legislature, and 13 for Rev. Norman Rawson, Hamilton Minister. Only eight of the 1,293 ballots issued were spoiled.

Election Unanimous

Col. Drew needed 647 to have a majority but Mr. Lawson, member of parliament for York South, moved the convention make the election unanimous. Heighington and Mr. Rawson seconded the motion and the delegates, from all parts of Ontario, cheered, yelled and sang. Col. Drew's election was unanimous.

DR. ROBERTSON CONTRIBUTES $1,000.00 TO FUND FOR MINERS

Halifax, Dec. 10 (CP)—The Halifax Chronicle announced today receipt of a telegram from Dr. D. E. Robertson of Toronto, one of three men entombed in Moose River Mine in 1936, announcing a $1,000 contribution to the Chronicle's fund for those affected by the Princess Colliery disaster.

"Mrs. Robertson and I are sending you one thousand dollars for the fund to help those affected in the Sydney Mines disaster," the telegram said. "Deepest sympathy to those bereaved."

SPEAKS IN NEW YORK

Capt. Anthony Eden has just arrived on his first trip to the New World. Last evening he spoke on the test which is facing democracy.

HEPBURN WILL WELCOME DREW

Will Facilitate His Entry to Ontario Legislature

Toronto, Dec. 10 (CP)—Premier Mitchell Hepburn today said he was prepared to facilitate in every possible way the entry into the Ontario Legislature of Col. George A. Drew, chosen Ontario Conservative leader here yesterday.

As soon as a Conservative Member of the House relinquishes his seat for the benefit of Col. Drew, Mr. Hepburn said he would call a by-election. Furthermore he will urge the local Liberal organization in that riding not to oppose the Conservative leader. "I can't guarantee however, that the entry of a third party candidate will not prevent an acclamation," he said.

"I welcome Col. Drew to the House. He is a colorful figure, a man of unusual ability. I am sure he will add to the dignity of political life in Ontario," the premier said.

PILOT DIES IN CRASH

Dorchester, England, Dec. 10 (CP-Havas)—Corporal John Ribert Daniel was drowned when a Royal Air Force bomber he was piloting fell to the sea off Chesil Beach, near Abbotsbury, today. The body of the pilot, the plane's only occupant, was washed ashore along with wreckage of the craft.

Explosion of a New Star Would Turn Night into Day Say Astronomers

By STEPHEN McDONOUGH

Washington, Dec. 10 (AP)—Some day, astronomers of the Carnegie Institution of Washington say, a star in the Milky Way may explode, throw off light equivalent to that of 100 moons, and turn the earth's night into day for weeks, or months.

The probable time of the occurrence of such a nova, or new star, or a super-nova is unpredictable. It might occur tomorrow, not for hundreds of years, the astronomers said at the annual exhibition of the Carnegie Institution of Washington.

Eighty-five novae and ten super-novae have been observed since 1917 in the distant regions of space.

It is also probable that the Crab Nebula and its central star are the remnants of one of the giant explosions of a super-nova which appeared in the year 1064, he added. No other evidence of star eruptions has been found in the earth's galaxy. Indications are that they occur only once in about 600 years, the astronomers said, but admitted that such an assumption involves some guesswork.

Such novae flame up within a few days to a luminosity 100,000 times greater than that of the sun and then fade away within a few days or few months to their original state. The super-novae are often 1,000 times brighter than ordinary novae.

Thus if a nova, or a super-nova, occurred in the Milky Way galaxy it might create light of an intensity disastrous to all life on earth, or if it was sufficiently far away, only cause continuous daylight at the peak of its brilliance.

CAPT. HEFFERNAN'S FREIGHTER LAST SHIP OF THE SEASON

To Captain Ted Heffernan of this city, will probably go the record of being one of the last skippers on the Great Lakes to enter port for the season. His ship, the Captain C. D. Secord, one of the largest of the grain carriers which has experienced a busy season, is expected to return from the lakehead to the Soo on Tuesday of next week, according to Toronto despatches. She will be the last ship of the season on Lake Superior, it was stated.

IMPROVEMENT WORK CONTINUES AT BEACH

Low water levels of the bay at the present time and ideal weather conditions for outside work have resulted in greater concentration of workers at the civic bathing beach east of the city where the construction of this project has been carried on for some time past. Twenty men from the relief lists have been employed during the latter part of the week on the work of grading and levelling of the beach, assisted by a scraper. Twenty other men also from the relief rolls, are engaged in cleaning up residential streets on the east side.

R. C. A. F. OFFICERS GIVEN SEND-OFF ON EVE OF DEPARTURE

Officers of the various district militia units and a sprinkling of civilian friends gathered at the R. C. A. F. base, Trenton, last evening where they were guests of the Air Force Officers' Mess on the occasion of a farewell send-off to Wing Commander Cuffe who has been transferred to the Toronto headquarters, to Group Captain Godfrey, who is soon to leave for England, and to welcome the new Officer Commanding, Wing Commander McKewen, who has been transferred to the Trenton Port from Ottawa.

The address of the evening was given by Mr. W. A. Fraser, M.P., who gave an interesting account of defence measures now being employed by the Canadian Government.

DRIVERS WARNED OF STATE OF ROAD

Highway Department officials today issued warnings to the motoring public relative to the condition of Highway No. 2 immediately east of Belleville. Motorists are advised to proceed with caution as this new section of highway, constructed this summer east of Belleville, is settling and in a serious condition. Last night two large trucks were mired while proceeding over this portion of the highway. Deep muddy ruts make progress hazardous at these points, several motor cars also being in difficulty this week. Highway Department officials urge motorists to proceed with caution while proceeding over this particular section of Highway No. 2.

MINISTER PRESENTED WITH FINE NEW HOME BY CONGREGATION

Paid for by voluntary subscriptions of the members of his congregation, a new house was presented this week to the Rev. P. Wicks, pastor of the Gospel Tabernacle at Coe Hill.

Rev. Mr. Wicks, under whose leadership the Tabernacle work was founded seven and one-half years ago, is already in occupancy of the house.

Mrs. Phoebe Rorabec, P. E. Co. Centenarian Dies Suddenly Today

Twenty-seven days after she had received congratulations of a host of friends on the attainment of her one hundredth birthday, Mrs. Phoebe Jane (Palen) Rorabec, Wellington's grand old lady reached the end of a century of a life well and truly lived. She died suddenly at her cottage home in the lakeside village this morning.

The deceased was the widow of the late Hiram Rorabec, and the mother of the late Fred Rorabec, who died in his Orange, N. J. home a few months ago.

The late Mrs. Rorabec was the exemplification of a true Christian spirit. She was a lifelong member of the Methodist and United Churches and devoted much of her time in her early days to its organizations.

Possessed of a cheery disposition she was beloved by all who knew her and her passing will be regretted by a host of friends. A few weeks ago she fell and fractured her arm while walking, but even this failed to quench her spirit. She received the congratulations of a large circle of friends and well-wishers on the occasion of her one hundredth birthday in November when the Village council presented her with a bouquet of one hundred American Beauty roses. She was an aunt of Mrs. (Dr.) W. Philip, Picton.

The funeral will be held in Wellington United Church on Monday afternoon at 2 p.m.

Obituary

LATE PETER LIGHT
(Tweed)

Tweed—(Special)—Peter Light, a well-known resident of Tweed for the past forty years, passed away at his home early on Thursday morning at the age of seventy. Death followed an illness of some duration.

The deceased, who was born in Bogart, was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Louis Light. For many years he was engaged as foreman of various lumber companies in Ontario and Quebec.

During the past few years, until forced by illness to give up his post, he was Sexton at St. Carthagh's R. C. Church. He is survived by his widow, formerly Harriet Dagenis, and two brothers, Louis and Remi, of Hungerford.

The funeral was held on Saturday morning, December 10th., to St. Carthagh's Church where Requiem Mass was celebrated by Dean D. A. Cullinane.

BYRON PERRY
(Wooler)

Wooler, Dec. 10—(Special)—Death came suddenly to Byron Perry late Thursday afternoon, Dec. 8th., at his farm in the 2nd. concession of Brighton Township, Northumberland County. He was engaged in milking and had finished milking two cows and was moving over to milk another, when he was seized with a heart attack and died almost immediately. He was a very active man for his advanced years and had been cutting brush during the afternoon prior to his death.

The late Mr. Perry was born 83 years ago in Brighton Township, Northumberland County, and had resided there all his life. He was well-known and highly respected in the community. His sudden passing has brought sincere feelings of regret to all who knew him. In religion he was a member of the United Church at Wooler.

Surviving him are one son, Mr. Harry Perry, Brighton Township; five daughters, Mrs. J. A. Ruttan, Wooler; Mrs. Malcolm Waite, Hilton; Mrs. O. Tripp, Trenton; Mrs. May St. Onge, Hamilton, and a daughter in Cobourg. His wife passed away some years ago.

The funeral will take place Sunday afternoon, Dec. 11th., from his late residence at 2 o'clock.

MISS ELLA S. OWENS
(Picton)

Picton, Dec. 10 (Special)—On Wednesday, December 7th, Miss Ella Owens, an elderly, and highly esteemed resident of Picton, passed away. For the past few years the deceased had resided at the Globe Hotel, previous to which almost her entire life was spent in the family home on Bridge Street. Possessed of charm, and a youthful spirit, the deceased had a large circle of friends. She is survived by one brother William Owens, of Toronto, who with Mrs. Owens and his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Charlie Owens, came to Picton for the funeral. The service was conducted by Rev. A. J. Anderson in St. Mary Magdalene's Church on Friday afternoon, and interment made in Glenwood cemetery.

CHINAMAN VICTIM

for three miners who were said by him to have been coming off work this morning. While Lung was preparing the meal, police allege Neal struck him over the head with a hammer several times. Any possible reason or motive for the attack could not be suggested by the police, however.

Neal was arrested in his boarding house and lodged in the village lock-up pending further police probes.

At the time of Neal's apprehension Constable Hatch and Gray say they found a pair of blood-stained overalls in his private room and also a hammer, which the officers allege was used in the attack. Neal was brought to Belleville later today and remanded in custody on the preferred charge. Bail was denied. Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., subsequently revealed.

Christmas Trees

Victoria Ave. Baptist Church auditorium was packed to overflowing Friday night when the annual Christmas entertainment of the Sunday School presented.

The large audience enjoyed a lengthy program that included all classes, from tiny tots to adults. Little wriggling giggling girls and diminutive boys with simulated stentorian voices captivated their hearers as little hearts gave the best they knew how in the spirit of the season. Following is the program:

Carol
Prayer—H. O. Trusdale
Chairman's Remarks — H. O. Trusdale
Recitation — Welcome — Ralph Neal.
Recitation—Her Christmas Present—Barbara Girling
Chorus—The Sweetest Bells of All—Primary and Beginners
Recitation— Merry Christmas — Douglas Soule
Recitation —Tiny Tots — Irene Morrison
Star Drill—Mrs. Lloyd's Class
Recitation—Donald Wynne
Recitation—Ties—Bruce Neal
The Christmas Story—Miss Dorothy Aselstine's Class
Recitation—Writing Santa—Jimmie Bray
Recitation—An Early Greeting—Russell Soule
Play—How the White Christmas brought Happiness— Miss Looker's Class.
Recitation —I Haven't any Dollars—Helen Arnott.
Offering
Recitation — Santa's Mistake — Audrey Jobson
Recitation — Winding up the Clock—Donald Dixon
Pantomime— Miss Nurse's Class
Recitation and Chorus—The Clock —Joan Wynne and Primary and Beginners.
Recitation—Billy Abbott
Campfire—Mr. Jury's Class
Chorus—Christmas Stars — Primary and Beginners.
Recitation—Billy Moore
Tiny Tots Chorus—Here We Go.
Recitation —Joan Wynne
Carol
Pageant—Mrs. Hogle's Class and Young Men's Class "Star Gleams".

The pageant "Star Gleams" with music, under the capable direction of Miss Mildred Lloyd, told again the Christmas story in all its simple beauty and appeal.

The scene opened with a modern maiden (May Hobson) dressed for an evening party, entering a living-room elaborately decorated for Christmas. Mysterious voices can be heard to the strain of "Holy Night". She listens, not knowing from whence come the voices but realizing that there is something in the spirit of Christmas which she has not fully appreciated before. A concealed Christmas spirit tells her that if her heart had not been so attuned to Christmas revelry she would have heard the true spirits of Christmas before. It had existed for centuries, accepted or ignored by human hearts and one need only to listen to its call and follow its gleam.

Christmas Star (Della Anderson) then appears bearing a lighted star and proceeds to unfold the story of the nativity. Shepherds are shown watching their flocks and then appears to them a heavenly host, suffused with brilliant light singing "Glory to God".

The Christmas Spirits then present themselves to the modern maiden, representing Joy, Goodwill, Peace and Worship and make known their purpose.

The three wise men are shown following the star to Bethlehem and finally the manger scene springs into light at the back of the stage and Mary (Edna Jobson) sings to the accompaniment of "Away in a Manger". Shepherds, wise men, angels and spirits kneel to the new-born King, singing "All Hail to the Saviour, our Lord and our King".

The modern maiden, realizing now the true meaning of Christmas affirms "But now, I think I shall never again become so blinded by the material Christmas that I shall forget the Christ-Child Himself and the ideals His coming gave to the world. It is my purpose now and all through the coming year, to follow these bright gleams of the Christmas Star.

Lighting and stage effects were beautifully arranged, the manger scene especially eliciting rapt sighs of approval from the audience.

The concert was closed when Mr. E. A. Hogle offered prayer.

QUINTE CIRCLE OFFICERS NAMED

TOUR FOR TALENT SHOW PLEASING

Barbara Neal, Gananoque, Lustily Greeted by Capitol Audience

Of the eleven amateur entertainers seeking recognition for greater honors in their chosen field of endeavour before the microphone at the Capitol Theatre on Ken Soble's "Tour for Talent" program last evening it remained for the winsome and petite six-year old Barbara Neal of Gananoque, to captivate the hearts of the capacity-filled theatre with her song and dance act.

Dressed in a scarlet and silver dancing costume, the six-year-old lass from the Island Town to the east walked before the microphone with confidence and literally won the hearts of her audience with her winsome smile before she sang "The Merry-Go-Round Broke Down" and then added color to her performance with a tap dance act, that left nothing to be desired. Her act brought the only encore of the evening, despite the fact encores are not supposed to be the order of the night on Ken Soble's "Tour for Talent" programs.

Tommy Mason, Belleville's well known orchestra leader, was pressed into service in a dual capacity last evening, capably handling the master-of-ceremonies work as well as playing accompanist to all numbers. Aside from the eight contesting numbers presented for the approval of the large audience, the winners of last week were presented before the footlights. Glen Haggerty, Madoc's boy-tenor and winner of last week's show, was presented with a gold wrist watch, while Walter Taylor, Belleville, was presented with a camera as winner of second place. These two winners duplicated their presentations of last week as a special favour at the request of S. L. Blain, manager of the Capitol Theatre.

The complete program of last night Ken Soble's "Tour for Talent" contest at the Capitol Theatre was as follows:—Miss Bernice Button, Belleville, song and dance; H B. Hebb, R.C.A.F., Guitar and Banjo; Ilene Bowler, Belleville, tap dance; Len Fraser, Trenton, trap drum swing solo; Hazel Neal, Gananoque, song and dance; Barbara Neal, Gananoque, song and dance; Billie Marsh, Belleville, solo; Ken Dougan, Trenton, baritone solo.

WEE CRIPPLES EXCITED -- WILL SANTA COME?

Will Santa Bring the Gift Supreme This Christmas? Promise of Care and Cure of Infirmities?

As the season of Peace on Earth and Good Will to Man approaches the sympathy of the community goes out more than ever to the crippled children of Belleville and district in the desire that these unfortunates be given the most happiness possible during the Christmas season.

Belleville Rotary Club should be proud of its record of assistance to crippled children, who have been given specialist treatment and supplied where necessary with appliances to assist nature in restoring perfect health and opportunity for usefulness and self support. Medical specialist treatment has been provided in hundreds of cases and in many complete cures have been effected. Happiness and health have mingled to breathe prayers of thankfulness that there are people in the world who care for the welfare of even the littlest of God's little crippled children.

Rotary is doing a great work for the crippled children, and the friends of Rotary are glad to assist in this great work. Tuesday evening another opportunity will be afforded of assisting crippled children to shuffle off their handicaps and take their place as useful citizens of this world.

Tuesday Night is Rotary Night at McCarthy Theatre when the third of a series of Amateur Night competitions will be held. This is the final of this series and a special program is being arranged to make the evening long to be remembered with pleasure by patrons.

Clever amateur entertainers will contest for championship honors and there will be guest artists and some surprises in the entertainment line—with a Master of Ceremonies who is a little bit of all right. In addition there will be a motion picture program which promises to hit the high spots of this form of entertainment.

CHRISTMAS SHOPPING, REPORTED GOOD TODAY

The old theory that snow is needed before merchants of the city can experience any Christmas buying rush is apparently headed into the discard.

Today Front Street merchants reported buying almost as good as during the Christmas week season. A decided rush of shopping was noted along the business section, with the majority of shops and stores well filled with customers.

ROSS ROBLIN HEADS AMELIASBURG LIBS.

For the second year in succession, Ross Roblin will guide the destinies of the Ameliasburg Liberal Association, members of that organization decided at the regular meeting held in Roblins Mills this week. Other officers elected were: 1st Vice-president, John Anderson; 2nd. Vice, Cecil Blakely; Secretary, Lee Rowe and Treasurer, Jay Sprague. Poll-chairmen elected were: No. 1, Hobart Adams; No. 2, Donald Spencer; No. 3, Blake Rowe; No. 4, Norman Tyler and No. 5, Ross Burr.

Highlighting the meeting were addresses by Howard Weese who gave a brief talk on the meeting of the Edward-Lennox Liberal Association meeting, and Gerald Thompson, and Jack Delong, members of the newly-formed Young Liberals Club.

Another feature of the meeting and indicative of the enthusiasm that marks members of the association was the large number of nominations offered for the various offices. Members decided to hold an "At Home" at Quinte Inn in the near future.

DISTRICT HOLSTEINS ARE SHIPPED TO U. S.

The first shipment of its kind from this district to cross the new Ivy Lea International Bridge by truck, forty head of purebred Holstein cattle representative of some of the best herds of Hastings, Prince Edward and Northumberland counties, left this week for purchasers' farms in New York state.

The sale was made through the efforts of Dunham Foster, prominent Prince Edward breeder, who acted as agent for Thomas J. Lonergan, of Homer, N.Y.

School Concert, Presentation Of Prizes Held at St. Michael's

Monsignor J. F. Nicholson Presents Awards to Various Scholars

MUSICAL PROGRAM

Prizes for scholastic attainments of the school year ending in June were presented to successful winners in St. Michael's Academy last evening at an interesting school concert of musical and dramatic numbers which were keenly enjoyed by a large audience.

The concert, the various parts of which were announced by Harry Taylor, was opened with choruses by seventy boys and girls whose singing showed the result of careful training at the school. Featured in the musical program was the group by St. Michael's band. At each appearance this band of about twenty tiny musicians shows marked progress. Their instruments are of regulation size and the audience was amazed at the expert handling, the fine tone achieved by the individual performers, and the splendid harmony of the ensemble.

Miss Barbara Forhan conducted.

Dances and readings were included in the program and were given with decided success by the youthful artists. "Thirty Minutes with Stephen Foster", was a well presented musicale which introduced the music of this famous composer of favourite American airs. The interesting costumes of those taking part and their fine singing voices make this production a very popular part of the program. A number of boys including some members of the St. Michael's Boy Scout Troop presented an operetta "The Boy Scouts" with the scene taking place at a Scout camp. The act was very well done by the boys and their singing added to the interest of the play.

Pastor Presents Awards

At the conclusion of the program, Rt. Rev. J. F. Nicholson, V.G. presented awards to the prize winning scholars. He congratulated them on their efforts during the past year and their teachers on the success achieved by the students. He spoke briefly on the value and importance of education. On behalf of the audience Monsignor expressed appreciation for the wonderful concert. He also thanked the audience for their attendance on this important occasion in the school year and the donors for the fine prizes awarded each year. Mrs. A. B. Collins, president of the Catholic Women's League which had donated many of the prizes, assisted in the presentation.

The ten dollar prize donated by B. J. Black and Sons was won by Rose Healey for highest standing in first year High School.

The Gruen watch presented by Angus McFee, Jewellers, for the student winning the highest Entrance standing, the five dollar gold piece donated by the Knights of Columbus and the five dollars presented by Mr. John Hayes were all won by Grace Wilkinson.

The pen and pencil set presented by McFee's to the pupil with the second highest entrance standing was won by Alice Callaghan.

Patrick Logue, Grade XIII, graduation, with Upper School; Ruth Belair, Grade XII, completion of Jr. Matriculation with Scholarship; Mary Healey, Grade XI, partial matriculation; Robert Allore, Grade X; George Shepherd, Grade VII A; James Jenkins, Grade VII B; Marilyn Donovan, and Kathleen Callahan Grade VI, (Equal); Mary Agnes Wilkinson Grade V; Mary Dunlop, Grade IV; Roger Whyte, Grade III; Florence Sword, Grade II A; Gordon Blaind, Grade II B; Frances Shrieder Grade I A; Robert Hatfield, Grade I B; Anthony Ritch, Grade VII C.

ANGLE FOR PICKEREL IN CERTAIN WATERS

There will be no closed season for the angling for pickerel in certain designated waters in Ontario, Inspector Herb McCabe of the Game and Fisheries Department announced today.

Those waters from which pickerel may be taken from include the Great Lakes, St. Lawrence River and all international intervening waters, which include the Bay of Quinte, the order stated.

There will be closed season for pickerel in all inland waters from January 1st to May 15th (inclusive), the department ordered, however.

Conservatives Advocate System of Provincially Owned Cold Storage Warehouses

Toronto, Dec. 9 (CP)—A system of provincially-owned cold storage warehouses in which farmers might store their perishable products until market conditions are right was advocated today in a resolution passed at the convention of the Ontario Conservative Party.

The resolution also deplored the "present condition" of agriculture in Ontario, advocating it be given greater governmental assistance than it received at present. Governmental assistance in establishing co-operative selling associations in Ontario and in obtaining increased markets for agricultural products was urged.

In another resolution, the convention urged that real estate be relieved of taxation for social services including unemployment relief, hospitalization, health and secondary education. The cost of these services should be borne by the Dominion and Provincial governments, the resolution said.

Amendment of the Assessment Act to provide that the "revenue-producing ability of real estate be the basis of taxation" was proposed in the resolution.

Seaway Is Approved.

A resolution on the St. Lawrence seaway, also approved, read: "While recognizing that the St. Lawrence seaway, as such, is the concern of the federal authority, the Conservative Party of Ontario pledges itself to the preservation for the benefit of the people of Ontario of provincial power reserves in connection therewith, and is prepared to cooperate with the Dominion Government to that end."

Other resolutions pledged the party's co-operation to a scheme of federal unemployment insurance; urged further governmental encouragement of the mining industry; the processing in Ontario of the province's timber and other natural resources; establishment of medical and dental examinations for school children and encouragement of voluntary health insurance plans.

The convention of the Ontario Conservative Party adopted a resolution today which said the party "views with alarm the threat to national unity involved in the present disputes between Federal and Provincial governments."

The resolution added that the party "believes that as the senior province of Confederation, Ontario should take the lead in promoting constructive co-operation amongst all parts of the Dominion."

Daladier's friends appeared to be convinced he would take the first road for the present, sounding out the parliamentary ground as he goes.

Integrity Depends On French.

The Communists and Socialists greeted the new rightist majority with bitter oral and journalistic attacks, leaving no doubt that they would do everything they could to overthrow the premiar.

"Daladier has chosen to fight the workers of France," said the Socialist newspaper Le Populaire, while the Communist l'Humanite asserted "Daladier now serves the bankers".

Daladier, in calling for a vote of confidence, warned that "the integrity of France depends first on the French".

"It is only when a country is strong that it can rise to prevent anyone from touching its territory," he declared.

"We are at an hour when brutal frankness is better than all hypocricies. You must decide today to overthrow me or to permit me to continue my efforts."

NORTHERN REEVES GIVEN ONE-HALF OF GRANT ASKED

Lengthy Argument Results in Compromise at County Council

COUNCIL ADJOURNS

Members Pay Tribute to Fine Work of Warden Larkin

A strategic attempt on the part of northern municipality representatives to obtain heavy special grants for the purpose of road clearance during the winter months, was met by stern opposition from a determined united south yesterday when the annual verbal battle between the two factions, that usually characterizes the closing moments of the regular December session, got under way.

After the smoke of verbal conflict had cleared, victory rested with the southern reeves, when the north compromised with an acceptance of half the grant amounts originally asked for.

Greatly outnumbered, the northern reeves put up a stern argumentative scrap before bowing to the edicts of the south. Attempts to pass motions, while council was in committee on Ways and Means resulted in cries of "out of order." Council had to go into committee on Special Orders before a satisfactory settlement was made.

Demand of twice the usual amount of grants generally given the north for purposes of this kind, in view of the fact that the county rate had been greatly reduced from that of last year, brought fire to the southern eyes. Arguments and more arguments went back and forth, with the motion for the original amounts being defeated 17-6.

Compromise Effected

Compromise, however, was effected when County Clerk Erle Denyes told the northern members that council desired to be fair, and suggested another motion asking for one half the amount demanded in the original motion. This was passed and received the unanimous affirmative vote of members in session.

With reference to the grants, Warden Larkin, prior to the debate, asked the northern representatives to consider the fact that the county subsidies had been drastically reduced. Supporting him, Reeve William Linn, Marmora, declared that the county tax for his village this year was $1,900 while a year ago it was $3,600.

"The north is endeavoring to pay the county what it owes," Reeve Hubbell said, but Reeve W. H. Sayers countered with "What will happen if all municipalities got more out of the county than what they pay in." "We are doing our best to get out of the hole, and pay the county off," the Faraday reeve persisted.

"If you get these grants every year, ones that exceed what you pay in, it won't take long to pay off the county," Reeve Robson, Thurlow, retorted.

Sticks to Guns

Reeve Hubbell stuck to his guns, "We can't get our taxes paid, because the people in the north have not got the money," he insisted.

"Then we are giving the north grants so that people won't have to pay their taxes. Is that it?" Reeve Robson demanded.

Reeve Hubbell threw up his hands. "There are only a few here from the north. I cannot fight alone and I feel like moving to lay these grants over until the January session," he said.

Deputy-Reeve Charles Rush, Hungerford, told council that the county has its difficulties and financial troubles. "Last year the north was given grants to keep its roads open, and I suggest that the north cut this year's demands in half, and bring them to the same level as last year," he said.

But Reeve Hubbell was not easily defeated. He appealed for the grants in full, saying "That after all the north is paying them back to you in rates."

Cuts Grants in Half

Reeve Jordan immediately moved that the grants be cut in two but was ruled out of order. Motion was called and the bill to award the grants in full was defeated by a 17-6 count.

At this point Reeve McWhirter and another northern reeve entered the chamber. County Clerk Denyes poured oil on the troubled waters when he suggested the council go into committee on Special Orders so that another motion could be made. "Let us be fair," he appealed.

Appeal for Harmony

There was an ominous silence as Reeve McWhirter rose to his feet. "I ask the gentlemen of the south, who defeated this motion, why they did so, and why the north should not get something in return for the money they pay in county rates and county roads."

Reeve Jordan, "I tried to be reasonable when I suggested the grants be cut 50% but the motion was on the table and had to be defeated or carried. Why was the north not reasonable, when it asked for these grants in view of the fact the county rate has been considerably decreased?"

Deputy Reeve Bedford, Rawdon, "Reeve McWhirter is mistaken if he thinks the south does not want to give the north anything at all. That is not right."

Deputy Reeve Rush, "There should be no such thing as north and south. We should live together and work for each other's best interests."

Northern reeves immediately demanded that council go into committee on Special Orders whereupon Reeve McWhirter promptly moved that half the amount of the original grants asked, namely, Mayo, $100; Faraday, $100; Carlow, $100; Bangor et al, $150; Monteagle and Herschel ,$200, and $100 to Tudor and Cashel, be made, and payable in January. The motion was carried unanimously.

Marmora Rebate

Reeve William Linn of Marmora, in an eleventh hour attempt to secure a rebate of 75% of county rates levied on his village for 1937, withdrew his motion when council offered to pay rebate on 1938 levy to be applied for before next April.

Other Business

The motion for the county to assume one hundred percent cost of hospitalization of patients from the House of Refuge and industrial schools was carried, while bills for maintenance of county wards in Childrens' Aid Societies in Toronto, Belleville and Trenton and the Bowmanville Industrial School, were ordered paid.

A grant of two hundred dollars was made to the Short Course in Agriculture and Home Economics now in progress in Stirling under the supervision of County Agricultural representative H. L. Fair

Disposition of a number of aged people throughout the county who refuse the privileges of the Hastings County Home, formed the basis of discussion during yesterday morning's session of the County Council.

A number of reeves voiced complaints and demanded to know what procedure could be taken to arrange for the transfer of these people. Bylaws for each individual case must be passed by County Council in order that these aged residents can be taken to the home, it was pointed out by County Clerk Denyes.

Compliments Reeves

Chairman Roscoe Robson, in further comment on the report of the Finance Committee of the council, voiced his appreciation of the fine cooperation of reeves of the county in the collection of upwards of twenty-five thousand dollars collected and paid during the past year against outstanding indigent hospitalization accounts.

"Some of these accounts had been standing for years" he said, "and it is a source of gratification to both this committee and the representatives of the hospitals, that reeves are getting some results in collections. The twenty-five thousand dollars collected represents the largest amount collected in years" he said.

Appoint Auditors

The appointment of Don Whytock, Madoc, and Stillman A. Gay as auditors for the coming year was ratified by council prior to going into committee on By-laws. During this session, bylaws for the appointment of the auditors; to arrange for through-roads in various parts of the county, and for the closing of a road in the Township of Mayo received their third reading and adoption.

Council's Tribute

Council paid tribute to retiring Warden Henry Larkin in a motion "that this council go on record as being highly appreciative of the fine cooperation and possessing a sense of high personal character of its warden, and also bears testimony to the efficiency and fairness that has characterized him as head of the municipal affairs of this county for the past year."

The Warden in a brief characteristic speech, voiced his own appreciation of the fine co-operation accorded him by members of the council, and county officials, and with cordial wishes and seasonal greetings adjourned the body to meet sine die.

COL. DREW AS LEADER

The choice of Col. George A. Drew as Conservative leader in Ontario is impressive to the party and to the delegation who voted him the post of party chieftain. On the first ballot he secured larger support than was given to the three other contenders. So marked was his support that the convention at once made the decision unanimous while the convention broke into cheers. Col. Drew had made a powerful speech at the convention when Messrs. Lawson, Heighington and Rawson also spoke before the balloting. He also spoke after the election and at the banquet which followed.

The selection of a leader who would carry the united support of the party had been stressed upon the delegates at the convention. By the people of Ontario also it was felt that it is essential to government that there should be the best possible and strongest man in the party at the head. It is generally accepted that a strong opposition is always to be desired and that the party leaderships should be in the hands of the strongest men.

The delegates made it clear by their votes and their enthusiasm on the announcement of the result that in Colonel Drew they believed they have the best man for the office. He is a man of wide experience in the public life and bears the marks of sincerity. He is at all times frank and outspoken in his utterances and he convinces everyone of his sincerity and earnestness.

The new leader is one of the most vigorous and fearless men before the public. He comes to the position with the confidence of the party and so his enthusiasm and the knowledge that he has the united support of his followers and the party should go a long way to make a spirited Opposition in Queen's Park.

The success of the leadership is now in the hands of the new party chieftain who will have opportunity to put to the test his qualifications for the active leadership of one of the two great political parties who have directed the destinies of Ontario.

CHRISTMAS FINDS A WAY

In Russia it is said that the religious people are asserting themselves and that communism cannot crush the spirit of the people seeking to mark Christmas in their accustomed way. Nazis' repressions have no doubt moulded many in Germany but in past years Christmas has been observed. How will Germans mark Christmas in this year when the Nazis have launched the most savage treatment in history against the Jews who come of the land where was born the Child who lived to become in little over thirty years the most influential figure in all history. Nazis have claimed that Jesus was an Aryan but the world knows that He came of the Jewish race and that He offered the way of life which would cure the ills of individuals, of the society of nations and of the world. Now the Nazis have inflicted upon this people, the Jews, the worst of pogroms, which will mean the exile of hundreds of thousands of them permanently to become refugees, trusting to the humanity of other peoples to take them in and make for them a home. Two weeks from now how can the German Nazis celebrate Christmas in the spirit in which it should be celebrated or in the way to which they were accustomed! Yet no doubt many a German will celebrate in spite of the iron hand of dictatorship. Word comes that there will be gift-giving in this harassed land of Germany which is overridden by a colossus of narrow nationalism.

The world cannot forget that the spirit of Christmas is expansive, that it knows no boundaries, that its circle widens more and more. So there will be Christmas abroad, perhaps even poor Chinese sufferers of brutality of the militarism of Japan will remember in their woes the story of Christmas as they have heard it from the missionaries and as they have read it in their translations of the Gospels, and will celebrate, though Japanese planes zoom over their heads.

This instinct of man for the essence of Christianity as seen in Christmas is wider than the boundaries of any vast dictatorial conception of empire, stronger than their Siegfried lines, any totalitarian terror such as breathes out of Japan across upon the poor Chinese republic, or that cloaks Russia in mystery. It crosses frontiers, it is celebrated in the very heart of repressed states. Christmas remains the great festival.

IF HE HAD KNOWN—

The man who first introduced the saxophone to America is sorry about it now. He is Mr. Edmond Hardy, an eighty-year-old Montreal orchestra conductor.

He'd have left the saxophone severely alone, he says, if he had known how the "swing" orchestras were going to use it.

They've "swung" it on him.

SOME BUILDING UNDER THE NATIONAL HOUSING ACT has taken place in Belleville this season and there would likely have been a great deal more if information could be readily obtained as to the working of the act. Those responsible for the operation of the National Housing Act should take leaf out of the book of the Home Improvement organization which was featured by its abundant publicity. The appointment of a representative in Belleville well versed in the National Housing Act, able to explain its every feature, would mean much more interest being taken in it, and the possibility of a worthwhile home building campaign which would give much employment. One of the insurance companies interested in financing under the National Housing Act advertises that its representative in Peterborough will give all information as to the working of the Act and make the necessary financial arrangements. Unless greater publicity is arranged the National Housing Act will necessarily function very slowly and the chances of success will be small.

WE KNOW A LADY OF BELLEVILLE WHO FINISHED HER CHRISTMAS SHOPPING DAYS AGO. In fact, she always completes her Christmas shopping at least two weeks before Christmas, and what a satisfaction is hers. So, now, wake up folks and get busy right away on that Christmas shopping. Start now. Get your lists made out and put your shopping clothes on Monday morning and stay with it until the lists are completed.

SERVICE CLUBS IN BELLEVILLE WILL PLAY SANTA CLAUS to many children and grown-ups this year. Many heavy Christmas baskets will be distributed and meet hearty receptions in homes where the Christmas menus might be more or less limited, and certainly not very fancy. Nor should there be any serious objection if a bit of overlapping occurs. Some folks always see some terrible menace in a bit of overlapping at Christmas time. That isn't the Christmas spirit at all. Gosh all hemlock we just go all out to provide extras one day of the year, let's rejoice if our neighbors get a bit extra of Christmas cheer on the one day in the year when Good Fellowship reigns supreme and man's humanity to man makes countless thousands cheer. Of course it would be better if the Christmas Spirit were spread over a greater portion of the year, but let's be thankful there is one day when selfishness is buried fathoms deep under avalanches of a great Peace on Earth and Good Will to all Men of Good Will.

DO YOUR CHRISTMAS SHOPPING EARLY — for your own benefit and the benefit of the businessmen and clerks who are determined to give the very best shopping service possible. Do your Christmas mailing early — [illegible]n't kill the post office staff, augmented for the Christmas season to give the best possible service — and the best possible service is only possible with the full co-operation of the public. Ship your express parcels early and help the staffs of the express companies to give the best possible service for everybody, — and if you purpose to travel during the Christmas season get your tickets early and avoid last minute rushes, thereby saving yourself a strain and the ticket office staffs as well.

SANTA CLAUS IS CERTAINLY GOING TO HOLD HIGH CARNIVAL IN BELLEVILLE the next two weeks. Every store is crammed, jammed full of the swellest ideas for Christmas gifts, and no better entertainment can be imagined than shopping tours in Belleville's business district. There is no longer any sense going to Toronto to enjoy the peak of Christmas shopping delights — Belleville business places have everything Toronto can boast of and more. More room and more leisure to shop comfortably, and the finest of goods in the most attractive surroundings— that's what Belleville offers Christmas visitors and shoppers, and more. Do your Christmas shopping in Belleville for the greatest satisfaction, with the people you know, neighbors all. Do your Christmas shopping early and enjoy the most satisfactory Christmas in your history.

20 YEARS AGO

December 10th., 1918.

The bicycle department of The Quinte Battery and Bicycle Store, has been taken over by Mr. Stephen Licence and a first class bicycle man has been engaged to look after that end of the business.

A regular monthly meeting of the Children's Aid Society was held yesterday afternoon at the Y.M.C.A. and was well attended. The President, Mr. A. E. Bailey, presided. After routine business had been transacted, the Rev. Dr. Scott, Pastor of Bridge Street Church, was called upon and in a few well chosen remarks he presented a beautifully framed and illuminated address to the Rev. A. M. Hubly, Vice President of the Society, who is leaving the city to reside in Toronto. Short addresses relative to the good work performed in this city by Mr. Hubly, were made by Rev. Dr. Scott, Rev. H. H. Wallace, Mr. E. R. McBride, ex-Mayor H. F. Ketcheson, Mr. T. D. Ruston and Mrs. Holmes.

30 YEARS AGO

December 10th., 1908.

Last night was the coldest of the winter so far. During the night the mercury dropped to four degrees below zero. This morning it was about zero.

A special committee of the city council is negotiating with Mr. Harry Burrell of the Mac Machine Company in an endeavor to arrive at some arrangement which will be an inducement to the company to remain in Belleville.

Mr. Harry H. Clarke left today to spend some time in the Old Country.

Sergt.-Major William Blaind of this city will celebrate tomorrow the 89th. anniversary of his birth. Congratulations.

40 YEARS AGO

December 10th., 1898.

From a paper on "Our Early Newspapers" by Mr. E. H. Britton of Kingston, we take the following: "The first paper issued between Kingston and York was the Free Press, published at Hallowell, now Picton, by Joseph Wilson in 1830. Mr. Wilson did not remain long in Picton, but removed to Belleville, where he was connected with the Victoria Magazine. This was the most pretentious monthly in Upper Canada, edited by Sheriff J. W. Dunbar Moodie, and his wife, Susannah Moodie, some of whose books are still remembered."

Mr. Edgar Minter has recovered from his recent illness.

Capt. Woodhouse of Port Hope was a visitor in the city today.

Mr. Lew. Pringle has returned to the city after spending some time in the country.

December 10th., 1888.

Mr. George H. Pope has gone to Watertown, N.Y., on business.

A sacred organ recital will take place in St. Thomas' Church on the evening of Dec. 13th. The celebrated English organist, Mr. Frederick Archer will be the organist and he will be assisted in the programme by Miss Waltz, Miss Burdett and Mr. Milburn.

Ald. Hay will be a candidate for re-election in Bleecker Ward.

The Madoc train brought a large number of people to the city this morning, most of them remained on the train until it reached the market. A large amount of produce was brought in.

The nails in the sidewalk on the east side of Front Street are popping up their heads. This morning a boy in the employ of Joe Morgan, furrier and hatter, hammered down the nails in the walk in front of his emloyer's store with an ax. The corporation should do this work.

An International Incident

They grab a portion of a neighbor's territory with much less fuss in North America than they do in Central Europe. If people had only studied an official American map more closely during the past few years they would have seen, for example that Canada took over one of the Thousand Islands that used to belong to the United States, and the fact did not even make a headline. Now the island has been taken back by the United States and the matter scarcely rates a paragraph.

It was all a map maker's mistake. In Europe they are continually making map maker's mistakes but they are all deliberate ones. In the case of the Barnhart Island in the St. Lawrence there is no suggestion that the error was anything but an accident. The island has an area of 400 acres and is located near the town of Massena, St. Lawrence County, New York. The map in error was in the New York Legislative Manual. The map maker had neglected to color the island yellow to show that it was American territory. It was left white, the way all the rest of Canada was left. Now the mistake has been corrected. No armies marched. And neither the American nor the Canadian Government was aware that it had an international incident on its hands for several years.—Kingston Whig-Standard.

QUEBEC'S TRI-COLOR

Use of the French flag seems to have led many tourists to believe that French-Canadians imagine they have some kind of political bond with France and occasionally toy with the idea of establishing a miniature French republic on the banks of the St. Lawrence.

Nothing is further from the truth, which is briefly as follows: In 1842, a Swiss Protestant named Aubin proposed to the general assembly of the Saint-Jean-Baptiste Society of Quebec that the Tricolor should be recognized as the flag of French-Canada, but the motion was rejected. The French - Canadians wanted none of it.

Twelve years later, however, in 1854, the British Empire was celebrating on three different occasions the victories of Alma, Balaklava and Inkermann—episodes of the Crimean War—won by the allied armies of England and France. Throughout the English-speaking world the Union Jack and the Tricolor were flown together, and the capital letters of V and N—the initials of Queen Victoria and the French Emperor, Napoleon III—were displayed along with the names of the two victorious generals, Simpson and Pelissier.

In July, 1855, the British Admiralty allowed a French warship "La Capricieuse," to penetrate the waters of the Saint Lawrence as far as the port of Quebec. To welcome the man-o'-war the population, English as well as French, brought out and hoisted the French flags left over from the previous year. This event, of course, profoundly touched the French-Canadian people; it was the first time in ninety-five years that a naval unit from France had appeared in Canada, and a wave of sentiment was set up.

That is how it comes about that the Tricolor of the French Revolution introduced by the English is still flown in the Province of Quebec. It was originally a matter not of politics but purely of feeling. It is still a matter, not of politics, but of habit and half-conscious sentiment.—The Seigneur Magazine.

SUPERMEN AND APES

The idea that we ought to call a halt on new inventions until we have learned how to use intelligently the ones we already have is not new. But with the world in its present state, it is hardly surprising that C. E. M. Joad, a British philosopher, should have suggested at a recent meeting of London teachers that there should be a board of scientists and philosophers empowered to give or refuse permits for inventions likely to affect human life.

"Science," said Prof. Joad, "has given us powers fit for gods, yet we bring to their use the mentality of schoolboys and savages. The symbol of this is the aeroplane, the greatest of man's inventions, which nevertheless threatens his civilization with destruction. The supermen made the aeroplane, but the ape has got hold of it."

In view of the things the aeroplane has done in Spain and China this is hardly an overstatement. Yet it is hard to believe that we must look for a remedy through cutting down on new inventions. Hard as the job may be, our hope can only lie along the line of living up to our inventions, no matter how far-reaching their effects may be.

It would be rpetty hard, for one thing, to look at a brand new invention and say just how greatly it would eventually affect human life. It would have taken rare foresight, for instance, to deduce from the first coughing gasoline engine our present network of paved highways and teeming motor traffic.

What we usually fail to realize is that the whole tangle of inventions which constitute the "mechanical age" has brought about the most profound revolution in human history. But we cannot call a halt. We cannot put an embargo on new inventions. Our best hope lies in developing a human intelligence which will enable us to make the best possible use of them.—Winnipeg Tribune.

Urge Unity for Conservative Party

"I'm going to use my voice in Ontario hereafter," declared Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, right, former Ontario Premier, as he pleaded for party unity in his address to the Ontario Conservative convention, assembled in Toronto to select a new leader for the party. Mr. Ferguson told the convention that the future of the party lay in cohesion and that "the attitude that I may disagree with you, but I'm going to stick to you," should be the motto of any dissenters against the new Ontario Conservative leader. Dr. J. M. Robb, Dominion organizer, also addressed the convention, left, urging cohesion for the Conservative party.

Trailer Travel

Ed. Note: This is the seventh of a series of letters written by Arthur Jones who is now staying for a while at Jacksonville, Fla.

Trailer Village, Jacksonville, Fla., Dec. 5, 1938—Yesterday was Sunday. This special writer for the Great Family Journal has a guilty conscience — Yes Sir — there is no doubt about it. He is fully aware he should have attended Church yesterday instead of making visits to the Jacksonville Airport, the Jacksonville Zoo and the Jacksonville Gun Club. All in the warm sunny morning of this Florida climate. We found great activity at the Airport. Air traffic conducted by traffic cops, planes coming and going,— all kinds of air ships, tri-motored, fast and powerful, single seaters, many colored ships with the giant silver passenger ships used in carrying smartly dressed passengers to all parts of this great nation. We find if we desire to see ultra smartly dressed women, we visit a large airport. Jacksonville Zoo set in a tropical setting, a most pleasant place — well kept — all animals and birds in splendid condition. Everything at hand to make your visit happy. "Miss Cutie" the female India pachyderm extended her trunk in a warm welcome. As usual the Primate section had the most attention. At the Gun Club we found "nothing doing", hunting season on. However it is smart two street layout — two automatic traps — cement walks — green — lawn — large club house — plenty of shaded seats for onlookers. We were surprised to find two batteries of floodlights which provided good light for night shooting.

We now make an open confession about the evening. We visited the heart of the city to see Jacksonville by electric light, gaze at the shop windows. Everything in a blaze of light. Wander into a nice grill and in much comfort order two poached eggs on toast from a pretty waitress who asks: "Will you have the eggs on white or whole wheat bread, Sir." The short order cook puts these poached eggs up in appetizing style, served with a few French fried Irish potatoes. A glass of milk and some vanilla ice cream completes the meal. The check calls for 30c. We then attend the 7 P. M. show at the Palace, a first run house. In person we see the "Jitterbugs" in their swing dances along with a splendid feature and many shorts. Two hours of fine entertainment at a cost of 40c.

SPORTSMAN DIES

Joseph Cattarinich, executive officer of the Montreal Canadiens Hockey Club and race-track operator of the United States and Canada, died suddenly while undergoing an eye operation in New Orleans. In his 58th year at the time of his death, Mr. Cattarinich formed a partnership with Leo Dandurand nearly 30 years ago which quickly won a prominent position in sport promotion in Canada and the United States.

Keeping a Food Diary to Find Cause of Asthmatic Attacks

Now that it is known that, in many cases, asthma is due to sensitiveness to various substances—pollen of plants, fur, feathers, house and other dusts—a test for these substances is made by scratching the skin and rubbing some of the suspected substance into the scratch. What are called patch tests are made by putting some of the substance on the skin and covering it completely with a small square of adhesive tape. A number of scatch and patch tests with various substances can be made at one time. If, after application of the substances of the skin, the red inflamed spot is of a certain size, this food or other substance is considered to be the cause of the attacks.

Many who have frequent attacks of urticaria (hives) are able to trace the attack to a certain food eaten and many attacks of asthma can likewise be traced to certain foods if a careful watch is kept. Such everyday excellent foods as wheat and eggs may cause attacks of hives and asthma.

When the starch test fails to show just which food is causing the asthmatic attacks, what is called the "elimination" diet is used. A diet of 'innocent' foods, foods not likely to cause attacks, is used and foods suspected of causing attacks as arranged by Dr. Walter Alvarez of the Mayo Clinic.

A very satisfactory method of finding which food or foods are causing the asthmatic attacks is by keeping a food diary. A simple system of keeping the food diary is suggested by Dr. K. P. Turrentine in Southern Medicine and Surgery.

"The food diary consists of a cross-ruled sheet of paper, the foods being written on the left margin and the dates on the top margin. Thus the patient need only make an X in front of each food under the line for the day on which it was eaten. If an attack of hives (or asthma) occurs on a certain day, that day should be checked and attention drawn to the foods marked for the twenty-four hours before attack occurred."

Dr. Turrentine points out that this keeping of a food diary is simple and inexpensive and will give results in some cases where the skin tests did not locate or show which food was causing the attacks.

WOMAN-TAMED

Alfred Staples, the 65-year-old man who has spent other winters living in a cave on the Blue Mountains minus underwear, has delighted to gambol nude in the snow, and swim in the icy Georgian Bay, has married and settled down. He is not the first cave man who has been tamed by a woman.

Poor Alfie! Now he has to wear store clothes like the rest of us, although his spouse has relented enough to let him do without underwear if he really wants to. He has to use a towel, however, and he is wearing oxfords and a wrist watch for the first time in his life.

Well, Alfie, we sincerely hope you find it's worth it.—Exchange.

NEW LEGISLATION WILL AID CHINA

British Government Introduces Bill to Increase Export Guarantees

By J. F. SANDERSON

London, Dec. 9 (CP Cable)—The British Government yesterday introduced a bill in the House of Commons increasing its powers to grant export guarantees, including a new provision which could be used to send material assistance to China.

The bill would increase from £50,000,000 to £75,000,000 ($235,000,000 to $352,000,000) the total export guarantees which the Board of Trade could grant. An entirely new section would be incorporated empowering the Board of Trade to make guarantees of an additional £10,000,000 on political grounds as distinct from other guarantees, which are limited to commercial risks.

Aid to Chinese Government.

It is understood the main purpose of the new part of the legislation is to grant financial assistance to the Chinese government over a period of five years. Credits under the new provisions are not limited to commercial goods and it is taken for granted that munitions, as distinct from arms, will be exported.

For months the Chinese government has been working feverishly on a highway from Yunnanfu to the Burmese border and it is understood it is now completed. This back door route to China by way of Iangoon will be used for any shipments under the scheme.

POLICE COURT

William Richardson and Gordon Richardson, both of Belleville, appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., at the opening of Friday's local police court charged with the theft of a quantity of brass and copper, the property of J. Samuels, local junk dealer. Both men were remanded in custody for one week in order to permit them the advice of counsel.

"Have you men a lawyer?" asked Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C. before seeking a plea from the accused men. They both replied in the negative and intimated their desire to procure the services of counsel.

James Van Nort, former Belleville chef, pleaded guilty to a charge of the theft of $20.00 and was given a one year's suspended sentence, upon making restitution and paying the costs of the proceedings, which amounted to $36.60.

"The accused stole this money from his grandmother. It was her Old Age Pension cheque," revealed Mr. Donnan, while Robt Pringle, local barrister appearing for Van Nort, asked for a suspended sentence. "This young man has never been in serious trouble before and the crime was committed last February. He will make restitution," promised Mr. Pringle.

Theft of Bicycle

Henry Shaw transient, was sentenced to serve two months in the common jail after being convicted of the theft of a bicycle. "He was intoxicated at the time he committed this offence and is serving 14 days for that offence now," interrupted Chief Kidd when Shaw asked to have the sentence dated from the time of his arrest. His request was denied by His Worship.

Stanley Archer, 20-year-old Belleville youth, was convicted of the theft of a gold watch, valued at $35.00, the property of James Hart, Grier Street. The accused youth stated he had found the watch in an outhouse on the Hart property. "Why didn't you take the outhouse too," commented Mr. Donnan as Archer was remanded for sentence.

Robert Hardman, R.C.A.F. employee, appeared charged with the theft of an overcoat and also of a suit of clothes, alleged taken from fellow employees. Hardman pleaded guilty to the theft of the suit, but denied the charge pertaining to the overcoat. He stated he purchased the overcoat from a stranger in Trenton. Mr. H. Mansonan, R.C.A.F. identified the overcoat as his property and stated he saw Hardman wearing the coat.

"I questioned the accused as to where he got the coat and he said it was purchased in Detroit. Later I found the coat left in my room at the Airport," stated Mansonan.

Didn't Believe Tale

Robert Pringle, local barrister appearing on Hardman's behalf pointed out there had been no evidence presented to contradict Hardman's story relative to his having purchased the coat from a stranger.

"I don't believe such concocted tales and find the accused guilty on both counts," replied Magistrate Butler as he postponed sentence until Monday.

"It sounds like that well known 'red-headed gentleman' who crops up in this court every so often," prompted Mr. Donnan.

A charge of using obscene language was preferred against a local woman. Much contradictory evidence was heard before His Worship dismissed the case without comment.

SIGNING OF EPOCH-MAKING FRANCO-GERMAN PACT

West Huntingdon

West Huntingdon — The lovely spring weather is much appreciated by all the citizens here. The farmers are busy doing the odd bits of work around the farm, such as cutting brush around fences, building fences, etc. All of the local organizations are preparing for their Christmas entertainments.

A large congregation greeted the new minister, the Rev. W. H. V. Walker at St. Andrew's Church on Sunday afternoon. The subject chosen by the new minister was very appropriate: "Three Virtues of a Sterling Man". Miss Annie Fleming gave a solo, which was much appreciated.

The citizens of Huntingdon township are sympathizing with the Fleming family in this their time of much suffering.

A special meeting of the Orangemen of the district No. 3 of Central Hastings was held on Tuesday evening in the Orange Hall here. There was a good attendance from all the various lodges of the district. Mr. Harry Graham, grand organizer for Eastern Ontario was the special speaker and gave an outstanding address on the latest up-to-the-minute information relative to the organization. District Master Mr. John Geen was chairman for meeting and Co. Master Webb also addressed the gathering. At the close the members assembled in the dining hall where a banquet was enjoyed by all.

COULDN'T SLEEP COULDN'T WORK

What a relief to settle down to a real night's rest, and awake fully refreshed, ready for the day's duties. I was tortured by fretful nights—tossing, turning—never comfortable. Half awake days—over-tired, driving body and mind to work when they needed rest. "Try Dodd's Kidney Pills," said a friend—"it may be your kidneys". I'm glad I followed his advice as now I'm sleeping like a top—thanks to 111

An interesting supper meeting arranged by the staff of Queen Mary School was held in the Y.M.C.A. Wednesday evening by the Belleville branch of the Ontario Women Teachers' Federation. Miss Fay Young, president was in charge of the business meeting at which it was decided to send a sum of money in aid of the teachers of Saskatchewan.

Mr. Barney Smith, 8 King St', who underwent an operation for appendicitis at Belleville General Hospital is progessing favourably.

Misses Marjorie Lashbrook and Florence Wallbridge will be hostesses at the Badminton Club Party tonight.

The regular monthly meeting of the King George Home and School Club was held on Thursday evening with Mrs. R. Ashbury, president in the chair. Miss Wedden's and Miss Smyth's rooms won the attendance awards. After a short business session the evening was spent in social activities with Miss J. Smyth, Miss N. Wedden and Miss H. Thompson in charge. Prizes were won by first, Mrs. Leeman; second, Mrs. Howard; third, Mrs. Ashbury and consolation Mrs. Adams. Refreshments were served and the meeting closed with "God Save the King".

The "Happy Six Club" of six little girls, eleven and twelve years of age, who have been spending leisure time preparing a Christmas treat for a poor family, held a tea yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. R. S. Hamilton, 139 Charles Street to supply funds. The club members proved themselves capable and charming hostesses. The guests were received by the President, Miss Joan Hamilton. The tea table was a picture with its Christmas centrepiece and tall tapers. Mrs. John Watson poured tea. Misses Joan Watson, Jean Meyers, Barbara Cook and Margaret Ann McGuire served and Miss Muriel Hibbard replenished the tea table. A sum of $8.05 was realized and this will be devoted to providing a Christmas dinner with roast beef and a hamper of goodies. The little girls have been very busy for weeks sewing, mending and laundering articles to be included among the gifts. Their elders were astonished with the industry of this energetic club which has captured the true Christmas Spirit.

One of the most enjoyable dances of the season was given last evening by the staff and students of Ontario Business College at Johnstone's Academy. There was a very large attendance, including many former students from Belleville and the surrounding district. The guests were received by the Principal of the College, Mr. I. L. Moore and Mrs. Moore and by Miss D. Grant. The splendid music for the dance was furnished by Bud Haines and his Commodores.

Weddings

DOAN—LINDENFIELD

A pretty but quiet wedding was solemnized at the Centennial parsonage, London, Ont., by the Rev. Walter Craw, B.A. on December 9th., when Evelyn Frances Lindenfield, Reg.N., only daughter of Mr. Walter Lindenfield, Stirling, and the late Bertha Stickney Lindenfield, was united in marriage to Mr. Wilbert Robertson Doan of London. After a short honeymoon spent in Detroit the happy couple will take up residence in London, Ontario.

Animated Mind, Good Health Ways to Make Eyes Attractive

(By HELEN FOLLETT)

IT IS only the daring honey ready to demonstrate her cosmetic convictions who can flaunt eye shadows without self-consciousness. She knows they're there and realizes that they give her soul orbs an air of mystery. She lives up to them.

There are other means of making eyes attractive. The most effective is the animated mind. When the old brain is sparkling, eyes do likewise, sending out the beams. Good health is a factor. Lack of vitality dims the pretty lanterns.

Certain colors will bring out the loveliness of the eyes. When buying hat or frocks, consider their relationship to the eyes as well as to the complexion. Now that bonnets are trimmed for all they are worth, with feathers, flowers and dodads, it is possible to find one that will glorify the eyes. A bit of bright blue, jade green or one of the deep rose shades may do a lot to help eyes make grade 1.

Don't powder the eye lids, that makes them look heavy. Film them lightly with vaseline or a liquid cream. Its good to make eyelashes grow thick and long. Make eyes look dewy; it is understood that dewy eyes make slaves of men.

Look at the flesh just in front of your ear lobes| If there are tiny crinkles there, you must take time by the cowlick, do everything possible to make firm the facial tissues. If you don't you'll go to seed before your time.

LYNN BARI
Her sparkling eyes register good health and vitality

The generous use of oily cosmetics, applied with light tapping and slapping movements, will nourish fibres under the skin and so arouse the blood streams that they will do rebuilding work.

Ice rubs daily and cold rinses after the facial tubbing are of benefit.

First Birthday Of St. John's Mission A. Y. P. A. Group

The A.Y.P.A. of St. John's Mission, Herchimer Avenue, celebrated its first birthday at a gala Christmas party on Wednesday evening. Each member invited friends. The first part of the evening was devoted to games. For the exchange of Christmas gifts, the parcels were heaped in a green and red decorated basket and guests had to "pay, say or sing" to receive a present. Supper was served, the tables being most attractive with blue crepe paper star spangled and centred with Christmas decorations and a birthday cake. The A.Y.P.A. colors of blue and white decorated the hall. The singing of carols completed an enjoyable program. Much credit is due the officers and Miss Jones for the success of the evening.

The Stars Say

For Sunday, December 11

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

SUNDAY'S horoscope holds excellent promise for all affairs of the church, the clergy and all old-established matters. But sudden events also obtrude, upsetting plans and causing irritations and disturbances in both private and business affairs. There are signs of a sudden estrangement.

Those whose birthday it is are confronted by a year of excellent opportunities or promotion, advancement honors and the aid of those in high places. But with this there is an omen of irrating and unwelcome upheavals, which may react on the private emotions as well as in business dealings.

A child born on this day may have an adventurous ambitious and dramatic nature, clamoring for thrills and stirring exploits. But a jealous and possibly eccentric nature may bring defeat to a promising public career. Similar proclivities disturb its romantic experiences.

For Monday, December 12

MONDAY'S astrological forecast holds promise of much activity and possible excitement or agitation. This relates to the launching of important projects in which there is hope of support from those in prestige and authority. While such enterprises may gain by strenuous methods and bold strokes, a degree of "policy" or finesse would likewise assist.

Those whose birthday it is are on the threshold of a very lively and progressive year. Those in power seem disposed to offer substantial aid in launching important projects, either of a speculative nature or those that are practical and constructive.

A child born on this day may be particularly talented and brilliant, with strong inclinations to exploit hi stalents in a showy or bragging manner. However, it may have a bold and forceful character, with many social and humane graces and inclinations, which may be exercised with finesse and charm.

Arabs Oppose Italian Campaign.

Many leading Arab organizations sent signed statements to French authorities in Tunis declaring their opposition to the Italian campaign. Leaders of some of these groups declared that if Italy tried to seize Tunisia by force Arab tribes in Libya would revolt.

Police magistrates, sitting in Tunis handed down true bills against four of the twelve demonstrators arrested Thursday, including three leaders of the Italian colony.

Two other Italian Fascist leaders in Tunis, Luigi Spano and Catalanotti Francois, were charged with insulting policemen and resisting arrest.

Ladies Auxiliary To Y. M. C. A. Holds Annual Meeting

The December meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Y.M.C.A. was held Thursday, December 8th., with Mrs. J. E. Shortt presiding. The various reports given showed a very satisfactory year's work for 1938 both financially and socially.

Mrs. Arbuckle read the Christmas story from the second chapter of St. Luke's Gospel and spoke on our most important preparation for Christmas from a spiritual standpoint.

Miss Sulman and Miss Maraskas each gave a pleasant and interesting reading.

Mr. Shortt reported on the improvements recently made on the Y.M.C.A. building. He expressed his appreciation of the willing assistance given by the Ladies' Auxiliary.

The nominating committee presented the following slate of officers for 1939— President, Mrs. J. E. Shortt; 1st Vice President—Mrs. Scantlebury; 2nd Vice—Mrs. Lee; Treasurer—Mrs. Greenleaf; Secretary—Mrs. Arbuckle; Devotional—Mrs. Baker; Dormitory Com.—Mrs. Roblin and Mrs. Calnan; Social Com.—Mrs. Price, Mrs. J. Boyd, Mrs. W. Boyd; Flower Com.—Mrs. Gilroy; Pianist—Miss Forman.

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Six Ways to Lose Her

Stinginess Sheds Sweethearts

Are you a skinflint, a tightwad, a penny-pincher, a miser, even a chair-warmer?

You see, I know all the hateful names girls apply to men who are thirty-third degree misers. These gentlemen have taken to heart much too seriously the proverb, "A penny saved is a penny earned.' They do not take into account the fact that while they may save their pennies they lose sweethearts and friends.

Stinginess sheds friends as a duck's back sheds water. The miserly persons who take and never give are the male equivalent of the daughters of the horse leech, mentioned in the Bible, who cried: "Give, give."

Please bear in mind that not a word of this diatribe applies to men who have plenty of generous impulses and would gladly yield to them, if it were possible' These include the jobless, those working for low salaries, men who are martyrs to responsibilities in the parental home, helping to support aged parents or younger brothers and sisters, and men who are paying old debts. None of these is invited to our pillory party.

Sometimes when I get letters full of sympathy for such men, written by girls who want only the friendship of those who are temporarily hard-up and object to a penny being spent on treats or amusements, I have a feeling that there's a bright side to poverty after all. Take this letter, for instance:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"If he would only understand that I don't want him to take me places. When he had his car, he was so good about taking mother and me everywhere we wanted to go, and now we'd like to do our part since he's lost his job and seems so unhappy. But I can't get him to come over in the nice friendly way he did once.

"We've asked him to have dinner with us, time and time again, as a slight return for all the nice things he has done for us, but he always makes some excuse. I know he's a victim of his own stubborn pride. He's too good a boy to remain unemployed. And we wish he'd understand how we feel about him.

"Mary"

I wish there were space to print more such letters, which prove conclusively not all girls want to have money spent on them as the stingy brethren seem to think. The type who is more than welcome to our pillory party is the one who turns up smiling for meals and never thinks of taking the one who prepares them to even a half-price movie.

The week after Christmas is the time when I get true confessions from girls about their tightwad and skin-flint boy friends. Sometimes a girl almost puts her eyes out embroidering beautiful monograms on fine linen handkerchiefs, and Mr. Close returns the compliment with a ten-cent compact.

Gifts that cause outbursts of indignation from girls are pound boxes of candy, costing around nineteen cents. Mr. Tighwad's sweetheart—possibly with an eye on the future—has presented him with a Morris chair, a set of leather-bound books, or a brocaded dressing gown.

A niggardly present may be given by a man with method in his meanness. The expensive gift may have scared him to death. Such a lavish handout means that the girls' intentions are "strictly honorable". He declines to be shanghaied into matrimony, and decides to sell his life dearly. The box of cheap candy is his escape valve.

Again he may give nineteen-cent candy because he's a nineteen-cent sort of man, and giving even that has caused a terrific collic in his pocketbook. He is amazed that his sweetheart hasn't written him a charming letter, commending his generosity, and he wonders why she is out, out, out, when he calls. If he's a genuine skinflint, however, the handsome present the girl sent him will prove a great comfort, even if he never hears from her again.

GOOD MANNERS

Your Christmas and You

Practical Christmas Gifts

Practical gifts may be given to a household, especially a house hold with children, in very thoughful and exquisite ways. Some of these gifts have been developed in the past two or three years so that, while they are essentially practical and useful, they are also decidedly artistic. And the wrappings or packagings can be so gay that they give a Merry Christmas feeling, even before we see the "goodies" within.

Boxes of all kinds of cookies will be a welcome gift for the children of any household. There are delightul boxes of gaily-wrapped jars of jams and jellies. Boxes or baskets of fruits are excellent gifts, with the boxes or baskets dressed up with a few packages of "surprises"—small boxes of stuffed dates or figs, preserved ginger, candies, mints, slices of candied orange or grapefruit slices.

Another practical and decorative present is a box of all kinds of hors d'oeuvres, cans and bottles of delicacies to be served at the family table or at parties.

Cellophane envelopes or "see-through" boxes, filled with herbs of various kinds, are finding special favor this year, now that we Americans are getting better acquainted with the palate-delights of herbs.

Included in these practical gifts are boxes of all kinds of nuts, and a box of various kinds of cheeses.

In Mourning, She Wants to Send Gifts

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

I have recently lost my mother. Will you please help me to settle a problem that has me worried? Would it be the proper thing for me to send out Christmas greeting cards and give Christmas presents this year? I want to do the proper thing and yet I do not want my family and friends to think I am slighting them. Perhaps some might understand but others would not. Also, I do not want to do anything that would reflect on the memory of my mother.

W.

So close to your heart and feeling is this problem, that if I were you I should do exactly what I really wish to do about this. I am sure that all your friends would thoroughly understand whatever you decide to do. Your loss is so devastating, that they will realize and understand.

It would probably be especially difficult for you to send presents, for this means much thought and much shopping. So I do think that you should forego this, to be kind to your feelings.

You might, if you wish, send a few Christmas notes, a sentence, or two written on your own letter-paper. These to your closest friends those easy to write to. Or you might buy some Christmas cards with an especially simple message on them—and sign these with your name. —Christmas Greetings for instance This wouldn't mean much energy, and still would register your thought. But, dear friend, don't do any of these things if it is going to mean too much effort and trouble to you.

Card to Fellow Teacher?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

I would like to know if it is proper to send a Christmas greeting cards to a teacher who is teaching in the same school?

M.

Yes, proper and a charming thing to do.

A Torpid Liver
Brings Many Ills

All down through the history of medical treatment there persists the idea that by keeping the liver healthy and active you escape many of the common ills of life and some of the most serious and most painful diseases as well.

A healthy liver filters poisons from the blood and converts them into bile which as Nature's cathartic is poured into the intestines or bowels to keep them regular and active.

It is only by keeping the liver active that you can really overcome constipation and relieve the most serious forms of indigestion.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are, above all else, regulators of the liver. They quickly arouse the torpid, sluggish liver to healthful activity, ensure action of the bowels and proper working of the kidneys. Put this time-proven medicine to the test when you are feeling out-of-sorts from constipation or indigestion, when you have headache, or backache or the tired feelings which come with sluggish action of the liver or kidneys. 35 cts. a box, at all druggists.

The Irreparable

By MYRA A. WINGATE

"Do you suppose I can't see how you are prying and spying? If this were the only time it happened! But it has been so many times. I suppose it's curiosity—"

"Oh, not so bad as that," protested the older girl, with slow, humorous intonation. "Call it a misguided interest."

"Or else you think I'm not to be trusted. I will not tolerate it longer. I want neither your company nor your friendship. Do you understand?"

"You make it singularly clear," the other answered, with pale lips. She stood holding her half-opened book, the crayon poised as if she waited merely for her caller to pass out before resuming work at the schoolroom slate.

The silence deepened. Cleo felt suddenly at a disadvantage. With an effort at dignity, she turned and walked out.

Bill had set the room to rights and drawn the curtain to the meeting-rail.

"Good-nights over?" he asked. "She looks like a friend to tie to—your Miss Leighton."

"If I believed so once, I don't now," said Cleo, grimly. "She's a disappointment."

"So?" asked Bill, in surprise. "I shouldn't have thought it."

They passed down the stairs and out through the corridor, where only a line of light showed under Carey Leighton's door. The other rooms were dark.

Cleo's heart ached for a moment, but only for a moment—she was too full of her new-found happiness in Bill. The older teacher had been kind when Cleo came, a stranger, to the village where Carey lived and taught. Gradually a strong friendship had grown up between them.

Then Bill came. Carey had known Bill almost as long as she had known Cleo. Bill had thick, light hair and ruddy cheeks, and an illuminating grin. His firm had sent him north on a surveying job and for a month his office would be in that village.

Cleo's engagements multiplied, and the after-school visits were very brief indeed though Carey never allowed them to lapse.

Things had come to a pass where there was need of a quiet meeting-place and much deep conversation. Cleo's room at the school building offered such opportunity.

Absorbed in each other, they took no thought of outside opinion. To be sure, Cleo had caught a troubled look in Carey's eyes when first she met Bill there. Cleo's gathering resentment over her suspicion of espionage had culminated in her outburst of displeasure, on the night when she and Bill had finally settled matters.

Bill was leaving next day, and, after the few remaining weeks of school, he and Cleo would be married.

Cleo spent those weeks in a happy daze. She met Carey to be sure, but paid her no attention, and thought but little about her until one of the long fall evenings which she and Bill liked to spend in their new home.

Bill was reading aloud while Cleo a pleasing picture of the dutiful wife, mended socks. She insisted on being entertained. No entertainment, no darning. Struck by a sudden thought, Bill dropped his magazine to say:

"Cleo, what became of that Carey Leighton?"

"Home, I suppose," she replied, shortly. "We quarreled—or I did—the night before you left."

"Quarreled," exclaimed Bill, horrified. "That was tough considering that she—"

"She what?" Cleo roused instantly.

"Saved you from the consequences of my own foolishness," said Bill, deliberately. "There was a committee meeting that night. My office was next door to your superintendent's. There was a door between, and I was sitting in my desk chair, back to that door, clearing out my stuff. They were discussing reprimanding you, the complaint of some righteous old gossips.

"In comes Carey Leighton with the super, and blows them sky-high. Said she was in your room every single night, and you left the building before she did every single night, and they'd be doing a grave injustice to listen to any such gabble. One of 'em said, "If Miss Leighton says so, that goes with me,' and they all said the same. I never meant to tell you. It hit me pretty hard that I had done that to you."

"Bill," moaned Cleo, "it isn't a patch to what I did to her. Just listen!"

Bill listened, the look of concern deepening.

"I can never make it right," Cleo said. "I could apologize and she would accept, but things would never be the same. I destroyed something fine that might have lasted a lifetime."

"I get you," said Bill, soberly. "She couldn't say anything to us, so she just tried to shield us. And that's what she got for it."

The two young people gazed at each other with contrite eyes.

Our pet in the tweed jacket line is in brown, yellow and gold checked tweed with big leather buttons, leather belt and brown leather piping on the big pockets.

Picture book evening dresses continue to delight. One such model is of red velvet heavily embroidered in gold, sea green tulle lining the two ruffles of the very wide, full skirt.

Always need for a casual hat. A nice one with high manipulated crown and slanting brim is of black antelope felt laced with fuschia antelope felt bandings the lacing on either side of the crown to the brim.

Is your home prepared to greet him—and your holiday callers? How about the Curtains, Drapes, Rugs — Do they look a bit dingy at this point in the Winter season?

If they do, we are ready and waiting to give you the fine cleaning service the special equipment of our plant makes possible, and send us now the frocks you'll want to wear for the Holiday Festivities.

What of Vitamins? — The Great Beri-Beri Mystery

Vitamin B, which has since been sub-divided into at least eight parts, was really the first Vitamin to be discovered.

A group of scientists had gone to the Orient to make a study of beri-beri. This is a disease not unlike dropsy; it is marked by severe pains and swelling of the body inability to get around and, finally, heart failure.

One of the things the scientists noted was that the poorer peoples, living under the most unsanitary conditions, seldom contracted the disease. Almost invariably the victims were of the better classes, who had better food and better surroundings.

It took a great deal of time for these men to discover that sufferers from beri-beri were all people whose main diet was polished rice. The poorer classes that subsisted on the cheap, unpolished rice rarely if ever took the disease. It took a long time to reach this conclusion because there were apparent contradictions to confuse them.

For instance they found that there was beri-beri in jails, where apparently everyone got the same food. Here again, they found that sufferers were eaters of polished rice. This led to the discovery that rice polishings contained something that could be dissolved out in water and was destroyed by heat. Experiments were tried on animals, and again these rice polishings were shown to contain something that the animals required in their diet.

This something was called Vitamin B, and it is what we now know as the Vitamin B group.

For all practical purposes, about all we need to know about this vitamin is that we get it from fresh foods such as fruits and vegetables, and especially in whole grain cereals.

Where a great many people do go astray is in driving all or most of the vitamin out of the food by cooking. So I know there are plenty of people who feel that their diet is a well-balanced one; that they are eating all the fruits and vegetables they should when, as a matter of fact, they are boiling their vitamins away in the cooking.

Just how serious this is for the individual is shown by the fact that this vitamin restores growth and tones up the muscles of the bowels. If you are going short on it, you are very likely to have bowel trouble and constipation.

Very often, too, this vitamin is found beneficial in the treatment of arthritis and neuritis. Sufferers from this complaint have been known to derive relief from Vitamin B when nothing else seemed to do them much good.

I know that there are people who will say, "But doctor, I can't eat raw fruits or vegetables." To these persons, I would say that brewer's yeast might serve as a substitute.

GOODYEARS' WIN OVER BRANTFORD FIFTH STRAIGHT

Goldup, Imlach and Metz Smart Line Up from Juniors

SAILORS DRAW

McGowan Earns Tie With Niagara Fills With Lazy Shot

Professional scouts looking for a new kid line might do worse than drop in one of these nights when Toronto Goodyears are performing in an Ontario Hockey Association game.

If they haven't already been spoken for, Hank Goldup, George Imlach and Don Metz may be the answer. They showed just about everything in Toronto last night as Bob Ecclestone's Goodyears scalped Brantford Indians 8-2 in a senior "A" tilt.

The win left the undefeated and untied Goodyears far ahead in the league race with five victories for 10 points. At Niagara Falls, the Falls Brights and Port Colborne Sailors could do no better than an overtime 2-2 tie. The draw lifted Ports and Brights into a second-place tie with St. Catharines, each with six points.

Eleven Scoring Points.

Just up from junior ranks, Goldup and Imlach accounted for 11 scoring points against the Brants, cellar occupants of the six-team circuit. Metz who tried out with Toronto Maple Leafs of the National League this season, snared two assists.

Most prolific scorer was Goldup who blasted through the Indian rear guard for five goals and an assist. His centre, Imlach, scored two goals and earned three assists as the lightning line showed the best senior O.H.A. form of the season. Teddy Manorek, rearguard, shot the other tally.

Brantford's goals came in the first and third periods. Keith Cooper and Ossie Storor were the marksmen.

Badly Outplayed.

Goodyears outplayed the disorganized Brants by a large margin. Had it not been for the sensational work of Ted Beatty in the visitors' nets, Goodyears might have doubled the figure. The gallant Beatty was credited with 59 saves, while Harry McQuesten in the Toronto twine had but 21 stops.

Cliff Chisholm, forward, and Red Dunne, formerly of Hamilton Tigers, did not appear with the Brants as expected. They will join the team next week.

A lazy drive by old Goney McGowan from outside the blue line trickled into the Falls' nets to give Port Colborne their 2-2 draw. The fluke goal came in the second period with Brights leading 2-1. Lloyd Fitzgerald scored the other Sailor goal. Jack Dyte and Morrison netted for the homesters.

At Toronto, Oshawa G-Men, who hold third place in the league, took a hockey lesson from University of Toronto of the Senior Intercollegiate League in an exhibition match. The strong Varsity Blues, coached by Ace Bailey, whipped Oshawa 6-2. Two weeks ago the Blue defeated Port Colborne in an exhibition tilt.

Jack Dempsey is wowing the folks with trick stuff at his Broadway bar—cocktail glasses that light up, ashtrays that glow when you snuff your cigarette out and glass snakes that wriggle with queer lights. . . . Jack's having more fun out of it than a hotfoot . . . (and he's the all-America expert at that sport).

BOMBERS DOWN TO EVEN MONEY

Martin Gainor Declared Eligible by C. R. U. Ruling

Toronto, Dec. 10 (CP)—Overnight rains made for heavy, probably muddy footing this afternoon as Toronto Argonauts defend their Dominion football supremacy on the turf of Varsity Stadium. There was prospect of snow before the scullers will be called to meet the challenge and pride of the west—Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

But the temperature should be mild at game time and the intersectional classic will draw close to 20,000 fans. Western betters continue to show confidence in their champions and when the starting whistle blows at 2 p.m. EST, most of the wagering will be at even money. Estimates are that nearly $30,000 will change hands.

In the camp of the champions who defeated the Bombers 4-3 on the same field last year, the news about Gainor, previously declared ineligible under the residence rule, caused little stir. The oarsmen were not worried about the havoc westerners claimed the former University of North Dakota defensive star would throw into their ranks.

Tony Lazzeri, above, for a decade a star at second base for New York Yankees, and last year on the "board of strategy" with Chicago Cubs, has been given his release by owner Wrigley of the National League champions, and may sign as player or coach with some-minor or major league team. Cleveland Indians are said to be after his services.

FILLING BIG PAIR OF SHOES

Presenting the young man who stepped into the shoes vacated by Tiny Thompson in the Boston goal, after the Bruin veteran had been sold to Detroit Red Wings. It's Frank Brimsek, who in his last two starts has turned back the champion Black Hawks without a goal being scored against him. Counting the season's first two games when he was also in the Bruins' nets young Mr. Brimsek has just five goals scored on him in 5 games.

Belleville Redmen Score 5-4 Victory Over Garrison Squad

Redmen Now Leading Team in Van Horne Memorial Cup Series

LOCALS RALLY

Bill Jackson's last-minute goal, on brother Clayton's timely pass, gave the Belleville Redmen a 5 to 4 victory over the Kingston Garrison and the league leadership in the Van Horne Memorial cup series at Kingston last night. Trailing throughout the greater part of the game, the Redmen were forced to come from behind to outscore the "soldier boys" in the last period, Bill Storms ramming home the equalizer late in the stanza and the Jackson twins combining for a beautiful winning goal with only seconds left to play.

The scarlet-clad Belleville squad played inspired hockey against the heralded and sturdy Garrison soldiers. St. Louis opened the scoring, but the "soldiers" forged to the fore and led 2-1 at the end of the initial frame, 3-2 at the end of the second frame. The Garrison tallied in the third and were two up late in the stanza as the Belleville machine swung into scoring action to win the game and assume the league leadership. Belleville has not lost a game in the Van Horne [illegible]ies.

[illegible] Louis, Leary and Storms scored for Belleville, while the Jackson kids each scored on combination plays with each other. Younger-Lewis with two, Belwa and Carr-Harris were the Kingston marksmen. Ken Watt returned to the hockey wars to turn in a sensational goalkeeping effort in the Belleville nets, being afforded fine protection by Bentley and St. Louis, while the Redmen forwards checked superbly. Provost, Belleville forward, was given a major, which handicapped the Redmen somewhat early in the final period. The match was comparatively clean, however, only two penalties, both coming in the third period as the squads became anxious, were necessary.

The lineups:

Belleville: Goal, Watt; defence, St. Louis and Bentley; centre, C. Jackson; wings, Leary, W. Jackson, subs, Storms, Robinson, Provost, McElrath and Ronsky.

Kingston Garrison: Goal, Lange; defence, Carey, Smith; centre, Younger-Lewis; wings, Carr-Harris, Pelwa; subs, Armshaw, Thurlby, Levie, Mosby and Lane.

Summary

1st. period:
Belleville: St. Louis 2.00
Garrison: Belwa 4.15
Garrison: Carr-Harris 18.05
Penalties: None.
2nd period:
Belleville: Leary (W. Jackson) 10.10
Garrison: Younger-Lewis, (Carr-Harris) 19.00
Penalties:None.
3rd period:
Belleville: C. Jackson (Bentley) 3.11
Garrison: Younger-Lewis (Carr-Harris) 5.45
Belleville: Storms 13.50
Belleville: W. Jackson (C. Jackson) 19.39
Penalties: — Provost (major), Younger-Lewis.

EXPECT 60,000 TO VIEW GAME

Green Bay Packers and N. Y. Giants Meet for Pro. Title

New York, Dec. 10 (AP)—Close to 60,000 fans will bank themselves in the Polo Grounds tomorrow to watch New York Giants and Green Bay (Wisconsin) Packers fight it out for the championship of the National Professional Football League.

It is the season's real "Sugar" Bowl game, with the players of the contending teams splitting 60 per cent of the gate receipts and the respective owners also doing well for themselves.

Each member of the winning side will realize something like $600 while the losing gladiators will pocket about $400 apiece.

The game is regarded as a toss-up, despite the fact that the Giants gave the western division champions a thorough going-over on their last visit here.

WINNIPEG RUGBY PLAYERS YOUNG, HEAVY AND FAST

Average Age is 24, Poundage 184, with Threlfall .. Popular Coach

THUMB NAIL SKETCH

Team Plays Argos for Canadian Title at Toronto, Saturday

Winnipeg, Dec. 8—(CP)— When Winnipeg Blue Bombers trot onto the Eastern gridiron for the Dominion rugby football final this fall their opponents will face a fast band of players, backed by plenty of weight and inspired by youth.

Average age of the Western Canada champions is 24 with Herb Mobberley's 34 years the longest life span and 19-year-old Carl Krisko the baby of the flock. Bombers will toss an average poundage of 184 into the fray.

The large weight carrier is 20-year-old Benny Hatskin who scales 232 and the lightest of the 25 players is the veteran Mobberley at 142. That peerless running half of the west, Fritz Hanson, is only eight pounds heavier but has withstood the pounding of four years on the prairies.

A Picture of The Bombers

FRITZ HANSON, 26-year-old native of Perham, Minn., who learned his rugby at North Dakota State College; after four years with Bombers is still the dangerous running threat, a weaving, darting flash. Only 150 pounds and five feet 7 1-2 inches tall, the Blond Bomber has been on the Canadian Press Western All-Star team for the last two seasons.

ART STEVENSON, Gothemberg, Neb., product who earned his first laurels at Hastings College, Nebraska, is the fast-thinking quarter. He is 22 years old, a quarter inch over six feet and drives his 183 pounds against a line like a sledge. He has been with Bombers two years and each year reached the Western All-Stars.

JEFF NICKLIN, 23-year-old Fort William youth, who reaches six feet with 186 pounds, came up from Winnipeg Junior ranks. During his four years with Bombers the powerful outside has attained the Western All-Stars twice.

BILL CERETTI, 27, Winnipeg native, also climbed from junior circles to hold the inside post with Bombers for six seasons. Ceretti, five feet, 10 1-2 inches and 187 pounds, found himself on the All-Western this year.

MEL WILSON, Winnipeg boy who served in junior lineups, has proved one of the season's surprises at snap. In his second Bomber season, the 21-year-old youth, 190 pounds and two inches over the six-foot mark, filled a big hole at snap for Coach Reg Threlfall.

BUD MARQUARDT, 24, who hails from Hettinger, N.D., is one of the best downfield tacklers and pass receivers in the Western Interprovincial Rugby Football Union. The tireless outside, playing his fourth year with Bombers, was on the 1937 All-Stars. He is six feet, 3 1-2 inches and weighs 178.

ANDY BIEBER, born in Winnipeg 21 years ago, ranks as one of Threlfall's finds. The 178-pounder, a former junior, has proved a sensational plunging half in his first year with the team. He stands an inch over six feet.

EDDIE KUSHNER, 29-year-old Winnipegger, who plays inside, has been five years with Bombers. Weighs 182 and is five feet, 10 1-2 inches tall.

BILL NAIRN, 24, bundles 205 pounds around the field with lots of speed and power. The former Deer Lodge junior, who stands six feet, has proved a valuable inside during his three years in senior company. Nairn's line ability was an outstanding feature of the season.

BENNY HATSKIN, only 20 and still eligible for junior, sends the scale indicators to 232. The Winnipeg native has been used as reserve snap in first season with the western champions. His height is five feet, 10 1-2 inches.

LOU MOGUL, another Winnipeg product, has been an outstanding middle in western battles during six years with Bombers. The 28-year-old Lou strikes 220 pounds and is six feet three inches.

GREG KABAT, quarterback or flying wing, kicked six field goals in three playoff games, four of them from 30 to 45 yards. Kabat, born 27 years ago in Hayward, Wis., with a brilliant rugby record at Wisconsin University weighs 180 pounds, is six feet tall, was a Western All-Star this season, and is spending his sixth year with the Winnipeg squad.

C. ROSEBOROUGH, Vermillion, Alta., native, is a powerful plunging half, packing 198 pounds. The 26-year-old Cliff is a former Regina Roughrider who came to Bombers five years ago. He is six feet tall.

BILL BOIVIN, 23-year-old Winnipeg youth, is another of the season's shining lights. Bill, 165-pounder and five feet, 10 inches, joined Bombers two years ago but this year reached his peak as a half. The former junior is probably one of the best youngsters the season has produced, displaying speed and power and a sure pair of boots.

HERB MOBBERLEY, who came to Canada 34 years ago from England, is the daddy of the squad but is probably the most spirited and greatest fighter in the lineup despite his 142 pounds. Herb, six years with Bombers, has been in senior company for 12 years. Only five inches above five feet, he is a reliable performer at flying wing or outside.

CHES McCANCE, 23-year-old Winnipeg native, handles the outside position and is a brilliant pass receiver and tackler. He joined Bombers two years ago after junior experience, weighs 190 and stands five feet, 10 1-2 inches.

HERB PESCHEL, 24, middle or inside, had a brilliant season spoiled by injuries. Born in Wapheton, N.D., Peschel, 210 pounds and six feet, came to Bombers four years ago via North Dakota State College.

Eddie James, born 30 years ago in Winnipeg, is the dynamite package of the team. Weighing 185 pounds and standing six feet, James once played with Regina Roughriders. Injuries have interrupted a lengthy career but his fifth season with Bombers found him still a terrific plunging half.

LES LEAR, 21, born in Winnipeg, plays inside and has been two years on the team. He weighs 190 and is five feet, 10 1-2 inches tall.

THOMAS COOK, 22, born in Winnipeg, handles middle position in his first season out of junior play. He weighs 182 and is six feet, one inch.

PERCY DAIGLE, born in Watson, Sask., 23 years ago, is a clever halfback. He scales 155 and is five feet nine inches in height. He came to Bombers four years ago.

HARRY BADGER, 23, native of Outlook, Sask., is also used on the half line. Badger, three years with Bombers, weighs 65 and is five feet, eight inches.

JACK MANNERS, born in Ottawa 24 years ago and former member of Ottawa Roughriders, is a linesman on his initial season with the Winnipeg team. He weighs 197 and is five feet 11 1-2 inches.

MARTIN GAINOR, born in Milner, N.D., 23 years ago, was a unanimous choice for middle in the Western All-Star selection this year. Gainor, 191-pounder, from North Dakota State University, came to Bombers two years ago. He is regarded as the greatest secondary defence man in the west, but is under suspension.

REG THREFALL, 36-year-old non-playing coach, who gets the credit for shaping Bombers into a championship team this year, made his first Canadian appearance this season. He came from South Dakota State University where for six years he was head coach and Athletic Director. Threlfall, married and daddy of one child, was born in Newton, Mass., of Welsh-English parents and his alma mater is Purdue University.

First Ice Hockey Game in S. Florida Played Tonight

Coral Gables, Fla., Dec. 10 (AP)—You can drive out Coral way from Miami tonight, past streets lined with royal palms, rubber trees, hibiscus hedges, and coconut palms to the new ice palace and witness the first ice hockey game in South Florida.

The Miami Clippers are pitted against the Miami Beach Pirates. Tomorrow night the other two teams of the Tropical League meet — the Coral Gables Seminoles and the Havana Tropicals.

After the opening, three games a week will be played until a 48-game season ends April 2. The boys, dressed not in bathing suits but in regulation hockey rigs, play on ice that is kept frozen by an underlayer of refrigerating pipes. The rink is of regulation size.

Harry Taber, managing director of the enterprise, is frank in telling you that members of the Miami team, for instance, aren't from Miami. Nor the Havana team from Havana. Most of the players are from Canada.

But the director, excited over inaugurating ice hockey in the semi-tropics, pridefully points to the coaching staff and players and asserts the games will be as full of action as any seen anywhere.

Bullet Joe Simpson, former manager of New York Americans, is the coach for the Clippers. The Pirates have Stan Jackson, formerly with Boston Bruins, as coach. The Tropicals have Jerry Page, former director of hockey for the Catholic Youth Organization in Chicago, and the Seminoles have Mike Goodman, former Canadian skating champion and once with Duluth in the American Association.

Being in the newspaper business sometimes has its disadvantages. The general public seem to think a newspaperman should know all the answers regardless as to the question or its merits. In other words they seem to think a newspaperman is literally a walking encyclopaedia. Regardless as to whether the question pertains to the population of Timbuctoo or the velocity of David's stone which slew Goliath, the public seems to think the newspaperman should know all, see all, tell all and give the correct answers without hesitation. For instance yesterday a farmer approached a local "news hound" in a most lamentous manner. "I have a horse that at times appears normal, but at other times is lame to an alarming degree. What shall I do?" asked the farmer.

"The next time that your horse appears normal, sell him," was the quick reply of your correspondent, as we beat a hasty retreat, thus avoiding more embarrassing questions.

The sport-loving public of Belleville will be treated to a rare exhibition one week from tonight at the Armouries, when four top ranking badminton players of Canada will give exhibitions in the city. The public is cordially invited to attend and watch these ranking players in action. President Bob Brown of the Belleville Badminton Club, announced today that Rod Phelan and Jack Sibbald, two of Toronto's ranking players, would be two of the quartette appearing locally. "We are not prepared to say whether the remaining two will be ranking lady players or two other gentlemen," stated President Brown as he intimated he would like to have Bill Piggot, the Hamilton star included in the quartette. The Belleville Badminton Club will commence its inter-club matches with district teams in the near future, while the club championships will get under way right after the New Year. The Belleville Badminton Club has a large waiting list of applicants, indicating the increased popularity of this indoor pastime.

Arch Ward, sports editor of the Chicago Tribune observes: "The Cubs' office still is holding money for 1929, 1932 and 1935 World's Series tickets which never have been turned in for refunds. . . . Four of the 1932 tickets showed up a month ago. . . . The owner had used them for book marks. . . . Lefty Grove has been ordered by his physician to give up cigars. . . . Rip Collins, Cub first baseman, is a switch hitter on the golf course as well as on the diamond. . . . Joe McCarthy's secret for success is concise and simple: "Get good players and you win the pennant'.

Playing the most thrilling type of inspired hockey, the Belleville Redmen staged a real 'garrison finish' to defeat the Kingston Garrison soldiers 5 to 4 in Kingston last night. The Redmen were trailing the greater part of the night, but when the chips were down the local kids came through with flying colors. Last night's victory proved the advantage of playing clean hockey and remaining on the ice, a forte the Redmen are well known for. The Garrison, usually a hard-checking sturdy team, retaliated by playing clean hockey with the result the fans were treated to some thrilling moments. Eddie Thomas' charges are well fortified in the lead position of the Kingston loop, not having lost a game to date. The Redmen trounced Perth 5 to 3 and last night knocked the here-to-fore group leading Garrison sextette off their lofty perch with a thrilling last-second 5 to 4 victory. Although the Redmen played sensational hockey as a unit, it remained to have those expert workmen from Deseronto, the Jackson kids, to come to the final rescue and score the winning counter.

Recently the Peterboro scrivener told his many readers that the Belleville Redmen were not doing so well in the Van Horne series. No doubt this statement was another of his many herrings he tries to pull across the trail of Peterboro sportsdom when labouring beneath a veil of misapprehension. At any rate the Liftlock scribe will be surprised to learn the Redmen are well fortified on the top rung of the Van Horne series ladder, having disposed of two of the strongest squads in the opposition, Kingston Garrison and Perth Last night's victory at Kingston was doubly sweet as the Thomasites were minus the services of two regulars, Cy Barriage and Harry McCreary. Incidentally it looked like old times to see Ken Watt back between the gas-pipes kicking out rubber as the Belleville goalie. The Redmen meet Bill Gowsell's Kingston sextette next Wednesday.

Weight lifters will be interested to learn that the Belleville and district championships for all regulation weights in lifting will be held at the local Y.M.C.A. on the evening of Dec. 28 (Wednesday).

Tommy Pedder, the international champion, who is coaching the class at the "Y" claims there are many throughout the district who are working at the weight-lifting game.

Information, A.A.W. of C. cards, entry blanks, etc., will be available at the "Y" office or from Tommy direct. He may be found at the Y. M. C. A. each Monday and Wednesday evening.

The meet will be under A.A.W. of C. sanction.

LEAFS HAWKS TRADE THOMS ROMNES

Latest trade in a National Hockey League season that's full of them, took place when Toronto Maple Leafs traded Bill Thoms LEFT, to Chicago Black Hawks for Elwood (Doc) Romnes, RIGHT. Both players are centres and the deal was a straight player-for-player one. It was the first time either had been traded during his career in the N. H. L.

HENRY ARMSTRONG SCORES ANOTHER

There's no stopping that man Henry Armstrong! Little more than a week had elapsed after he defeated Ceferino Garcia in defence of his welterweight crown, before he had the title on the line again, this time against Al Manifredo in a bout in Cleveland. Manfredo did the Armstrong course in just about par, going three rounds with the two-crown champ before being put to sleep. The picture is typical of Hammering Hennery's fights, the champ right in on top of his opponent, arms moving back and forth relentlessly, giving his foe no chance to get set for any kind of a return.

George's Wild Oats

By

Allen Eppes

CHAPTER XXIV

Rita stood on the threshold of Lee's office, and stared at George in astonishment. She had quite obviously heard the tirade against her which her entrance had cut short.

"Why, Georgie!" she said, in an aggrieved tone. "What's the matter?"

"Everything!" he snarled.

He rudely turned his back on her and sat down.

"George, you sound so ferocious! Are—are you sick?"

"No, I'm not sick—but I don't want to see you!"

"Well, of all things!" Rita said indignantly. "I must see you George—I've got some business I want to discuss with you."

"I don't want to hear anything about it!"

"You don't! Well, you're going to hear about it whether you want to or not!" Rita was furious. "The idea of your talking to me like that! I'm your client, and you have no right to—"

"You're not my client—not any more!" George cut in." I'm dropping your case!"

Rita was taken aback. She changed her tone—became plaintive.

"But George...."

"I don't want to handle it, I tell you. I'm through!"

"Georgie...." Rita stepped close to him, and spoke soothingly. "What's happened, darling? You just can't back out on me now — what with Ted sending me threats and—"

"All the more reason for me to back out!" George told her. "His threats are meant for me, too. You'd better get yourself a lawyer with a—with a—"

"With a long gray beard," Lee suggested, smiling.

"Exactly!" said George. "Get yourself a lawyer with a long gray beard, and then maybe your husband won't be fool enough to be jealous of him!"

"So that's what's bothering you!" Rita gave a silvery little laugh, and placed her hand on his shoulder. "Oh, Georgie darling, how silly of you...."

At that instant, there was a sound in the doorway, and George turned to see Ellen standing there, her gaze riveted on Rita's hand on his shoulder.

"Ellen!" he cried, jumping up.

She cut him cold, and turned to Lee. "Sorry to have intruded, Lee, I wanted to see you about that house you're going to sell, but I'll come back, when your office is less—crowded!"

With that she turned and, with her chin in the air, walked out and started down the stairs.

"Ellen! Wait a minute!"

"Ellen!"

He went tearing down the stairs after her, caught up with her as she reached the street, and seized her arm.

"I want to talk to you!" he gasped. "Please wait!"

Ellen, however, shook her arm out of his grasp, and quickened her pace. George hurried along beside her, pleading with her.

"Won't you listen to me, Ellen? Let me explain...."

"Go away, George!" she said angrily. "Haven't you done enough without making me conspicuous on the street?"

"If you'd only stop, instead of running away from me, you would not be so conspicuous," he pointed out.

She did stop, then, and glared at him.

"I've never been so ashamed and humiliated in all my life as I was last night! How you can expect me to talk to you after what you did, I don't know!"

George hung his head. "I'm terribly sorry, Ellen—I can't tell you how sorry I am. I was drunk, of course, and didn't know what I was doing, but I want to apologize to you and—and—to Mr. Peters, too."

"It's too late, I'm afraid, for apologies. I've never been so disappointed in any one! Listen to this, George—I was sitting there boosting you to Bill Peters, and he was saying what favorable things he had heard about you, and that he wanted to have a talk with you that might have meant a great deal to your future. And then, what happens? You come in like a wild man and knock him flat on his back!"

"Gee," was all George could say as this new aspect of his offense was revealed to him.

"Now, you've not only lost the opportunity that Mr. Peters might have given you," Ellen rushed on, "but probably even the business you already had!"

"I thought you said wild oats wouldn't affect my business," George couldn't help reminding her.

"I did say that— and a little harmless gaiety wouldn't have mattered. But I never expected you to get maudlin drunk and make an utter fool of yourself! Why, the whole town's talking about the scene you made at the club, and about the way you dragged poor Lucy May off and nearly killed her! Every one is thoroughly disgusted with you!"

"I suppose they are," George said miserably. "But Ellen, I do want you to understand how it all happened. Maybe my explanation will seem feeble to you, but there is an explanation...."

"Go on," said Ellen, "but I know what you're going to say. You're going to tell me that you got mad because I had an engagement with Bill Peters when you phoned me yesterday morning. I don't see that that's any reason for—"

"Wait a minute," George cut in. "Let me finish. You don't understand. You see, I was feeling pretty bad about the quarrel we'd had, and I saw that you were right about Rita, and then she came in with this wire from her husband—a very threatening wire. Some one had evidently written him a lot of lies about Rita and me. That upset me quite a lot and I wanted to talk to you about it, and so, when I phoned and you wouldn't even listen to me—and—and said you were going out with that fellow Peters—well, I just went haywire, that's all."

"I call that a very childish excuse, George!"

Ellen turned and walked away, leaving George staring hopelessly after her.

CHAPTER XXX

For some moments after Ellen had left George, he just stood in the middle of the sidewalk, gazing in the direction she had gone. Just as he had thought, she wouldn't forgive him. Life looked very dark.

Then, he moved slowly down the street toward the Corner Drug Store. At least, he could do something about this splitting headache. It was driving him crazy.

As he entered the drug store, he was aware that several persons turned to eye him curiously. They had heard about last night, he supposed, and wanted to see what this changed George Martin looked like. Well, he didn't care. Let them look. All that mattered was Ellen.

He sat down at the counter and ordered a bromo-seltzer. Eddie Jones silently prepared it for him.

He downed it, and was sitting there, brooding, when he saw Mr. Buxton enter the store. George looked away, thinking that the other man wouldn't want to speak to him.

Then, suddenly, he received a terrific clap on the back that made his aching head feel as though it were going to split wide open.

"Well! Well!" Mr. Buxton boomed. "I never expected to see George Martin in need of a bromo!" This was followed by a roar of laughter.

George, feeling his head to make sure it was still on, turned gingerly and stared. He was too astonished to speak.

"Hear you had quite a high old time last night!" Mr. Buxton chortled.

"Funny! My boy, it's a riot." Another roar of laughter. "I didn't think you had it in you!"

George was flabbergasted. Could it be true that Mr. Buxton didn't hold his escapade against him? Why, Ellen had said that every one was disgusted with him.

"And say," the older man went on, "did I get a kick out of the shock you gave my wife by bringing that actress to the garden party on Sunday!"

"You—you're not sore about that?"

"Man, I was tickled pink! It was rich—simply rich. I never had so much fun in my life. First one of my wife's tea parties I ever enjoyed!"

George grinned uncertainly. "Well, I—I'm glad to hear it. I—I thought every one was down on me—particularly after last night."

George was thoughtful. Mr Buxton's attitude was certainly a surprising revelation. It perked him up considerably.

"Ellen Vaughan said I'd completely ruined my reputation," he said slowly. "She said I'd lose all my business."

"Nonsense! We all know what an able lawyer you are, George—so what's a little fling? Every young man has to have a fling now and then—it's nothing against him. And speaking of business reminds me that I've been meaning to come in and see you about a certain matter. When can I have a talk with you?"

"Why any time you say ......" said George, his face lighting up.

Just then, a dapper young man entered the store and strolled up to the counter. Neither George nor Mr. Buxton had ever seen him before, and as this was unusual in a small town where every one knew every one else, they both turned to look at him. He was sleekly dressed, and had a neat little black mustache, and was good-looking in a rather flashy way.

Eddie Jones was also curious about him. After serving him the soft drink he ordered, Eddie leaned on the counter and tried to start a conversation with him.

"Stranger in town?"

"Yes," the man answered curtly. "Here to see my wife. She's with the stock company."

George, listening, gave a start. His wife? With the stock company?

"Is that so?" he heard Eddie ask eagerly. "Who is she?"

"Rita Roselle—the leading lady."

The young man, who had quickly gulped his drink, slapped a coin onto the counter, and strode out.

George had gone suddenly pale. He saw Eddie looking at him with a gleam in his eye, and drew Mr. Buxton away from the counter.

"Did you hear that?" he muttered. "That was Rita Roselle's husband."

"Sure—what of it? Why are you looking so scared?"

"He — he's been wiring her threats—on account of me."

Mr. Buxton's eyebrows went up. "Really? Well, well!"

Then, a flash of memory came to George. That letter on his bureau last night! He was in such a state at the time, that he had forgotten all about it. But now, he remembered it, and remembered that he hadn't read it. What had he done with it? His pocket ...., that's where he put it....

He groped in his pocket and found it—a crumpled ball of paper. He spread it open, hurriedly read through it—and went sold.

"Look," he said, his hand trembling as he showed the letter to Mr. Buxton. "I got this letter from him last night. Look at the last sentence."

Mr. Buxton read the sentence indicated.

....and I'll shoot you down like a dog if I catch you with my wife!

To George's surprise Mr. Buxton laughed. "The man's crazy! His wife has hired you to get her a divorce, hasn't she — so why shouldn't you be with her—"

"I know, but he evidently doesn't want the divorce—and he's heard some sort of tales about us. He has come here because he thinks I'm trying to steal her while acting as her lawyer."

"You're not trying to steal her are you?"

"Of course not! But suspicious husbands aren't easy to convince."

"Well, then, just avoid seeing her while he's in town. That should be simple enough."

"Oh, no it, isn't!" said George. "She hounds me!"

Mr. Buxton chuckled. "Forget it—you've nothing to worry about." He took George's arm. "Come on over to the hotel and have a drink with me...."

George, feeling that a drink was just what he needed at the moment, obediently accompanied him—but he felt far from reassured.

Little Benny's Note Book

My sister Gladdis and Harvey came around to play bridge and ma and Gladdis started to talk about clothes, and ma said, Really, I mean really, I dont know what I'm going to wear this winter, I practically haven't got a thing, I'll have to do something about it.

Dont rock the boat, I'm in it too, Gladdis said. I scarcely have a rag to my back or a stitch to my feet, although I suppose my brown swayed shoes will putt me through, they really are like new, and I have several pairs of evening slippers that I can still wear, she said, and ma said, My tan walking shoes could be worse, for that matter, and of course my black and white pumps haven't a scratch on them, and neither have my green velvet ones, but I was thinking more of afternoon outfits, although I must say my tailored brown ensemble still excites envious glances. There's nothing wrong with your brown tweed outfit, is there? she said.

Well no, I still feel reasonably wealthy in that and the bergundy one with the fox trimming is bearing up fine, Gladdis said. Your homespun English outfit is still good for a few more beatings, isn't it? she said, and ma said, O drar yes, and so is my corduroy, as far as that goes.

How's it by you, Harvey? pop said, and Harvey said, I cant kick an inch, my other suit is at the tailors and he claims when he gets through with it I wont even be able to tell where the hole was myself, and I've got a swell 1930 model hat to wear in the rain. How are you doing? he said.

Never better, pop said. I just found the missing button for my blue serge, and my lounging slippers get more comfortable every year, how about starting a little bridge for Peet sake? he said.

Wich they did.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, Dec. 10—(CP)—A moderately soft tone ruled the Toronto market in the closing sessions of the week with trading volume fair. Turnover in the first hour reached 137,000 shares.

The action was concentrated chiefly in a few of the Western Oils and some of the cheaper Golds. Home Oil, Calgary-Edmonton and Calmont changed hands in considerable volume at a firm price.

MacLeod-Cockshutt was higher. Prices were off slightly for Macassa, O'Brien, Sylvanite, Central Patricia, Stadacona and McWatters. In senior Golds the tone was improved narrowly for Pamour, Chesterville, East Malartic, Naybob, Chesterville.

Base Metal shares were sluggish and generally steady. Hudson Bay posted a minor gain and Waite-Amulet firmed 15 cents to 8.25. Aldermac also added a minor gain. Silver issues were quiet and firm.

Ford A. Walkers Common and Montreal Power posted losses of ⅛ to ½.

NEW YORK STOCKS

New York, Dec. 10—(AP)—Stocks dug in for a modest rally today with market leaders retrieving fractions to a point or so of recent losses.

Activity picked up a bit on the come-back, although the pace never inconvenienced the ticker tape. Transfers were around 450,000 shares for the two hours.

Among stocks on the rising side were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Youngstown, General Motors, Chrysler, Douglas Aircraft, Sperry, American Can., Du Pont, U.S. Gypsum, General American Transportation, Paramount, Allied Chemical, Sears Roebuck, Montgomery Ward, North American Trans-America and U. S. Rubber.

Most Canadian issues swung narrowly and unevenly. Hiram Walker dipped a major fraction while Distillers and McIntyre Porcupine gained a trifle. Canada 4s were neglected.

Potatoes bag, F.O.B. in Toronto	.90

POTATOES STAGE 25 CENT RISE ON MARKET TODAY

Bag-lots of Good Quality Quoted at $1.50—Heavy Offering Poultry

EGGS UNCHANGED

If the steady rise in potato prices, that has characterized this commodity for the past few weeks after an epidemic of blight had taken its toll of Ontario and Maritime province stocks, continues, the homely spud may prove to be a Christmas delicacy.

For this morning on the city market, quotations rocketed with another twenty-five cent rise to bring the price of good quality potatoes o $1.50 per bag. Inferior quality potatoes however, were available at $1.25 and $1.35 with the buying public showing little taste for bag-lots although pecks moved briskly. The top price today marks a total rise in price of sixty cents per bag over a period of five weeks.

Other prices remained fairly steady especially those of dairy products. One of the heaviest chicken offerings in months was on display this morning in the inside market where the bulk of the days business was done. Vendors reported sluggish buying on the outside market.

Chickens of all sizes and varieties were offered by vendors today with choice four-months-old birds featuring the dispay and selling at from $1.25 to $1.50 per pair. Fowl was quoted at prices ranging from one dollar upwards while seven-months-old birds were offered at prices varying between $1.25 and $1.60 according to weight.

Ducks were fairly plentiful and sold at between one dollar and $1.25 each. A feature of this display was a seven and one-half pound beauty of the white Pekin variety that sold for $1.75 and resembled a young goose more than a duck.

Few Turkeys

Turkeys were by no means plentiful with vendors holding off displaying stocks due to the mildness of the weather. The few offered consisted of choice young gobblers weighing approximately ten and eleven pounds, that sold at twenty-five cents per pound. A casual survey of potential turkey vendors revealed the fact that no prices had been set as yet for their Christmas stock, although one ventured the opinion that pound quotations would range between 25 and 30 cents.

Egg prices showed little change from those of a week ago with "A" selects selling at thirty-five cents per dozen and mediums and pullets at thirty-three and thirty cents per dozen respectively. Farmers' butter was offered at fifty-five and sixty cents for two-pound rolls. Home-cooking booths were busy and catered to a large Saturday morning clientele.

Staple vegetables and winter apples form the main feature of the outside market wit no changes in price noted. Northern Spies were offered at $1.50 for tree-picked fruit with Tolman Sweets and Russets moving slowly at the same prices. MacIntosh Reds of choice quality were quoted at $1.75 per hamper-lot. Some cooking varieties sold at one dollar per bushel.

Carrots, turnips, and beets at fifty cents per bushel, onions at one dollar for the same quantity and cabbage and cauliflower at from five cents per head, with celery and radishes at usual prices rounded out fairly good vegetable display.

Whitefish at twenty cents per pound headed a good offering of fresh fish. Mudcats sold a two pounds for twenty-five cents with pickerel moving slowly at eighteen per pound. Fresh lake herring sold at six for twenty-five cents while a few pike were noticed at ten cents per pound.

Christmas trees, "fresh from the north country" as one youthful vendor puts it, were offered at varying prices. Stately spruce cuts were offered at one dollar each while the "ordinary tree" of average size could be purchased for twenty-five cents.

EYE FOR SALE

Because he needs the money to support his wife and their 12-year-old daughter, Wilbur F. H. Radeline, 36-year-old $13-a-week truck driver of Los Angeles, has offered to sell one perfectly good medium blue eye for $1.500. Radeline points to the eye he is willing to sell.

Climatic Conditions Have Definite Effect

Climatic conditions have a definite effect on the uniformity of the number of hogs marketed. Late fall and winter pigs require special housing accommodations and also rations that give them the necessary nourishment to develop, in spite of the cold weather.

This extra care naturally increases the cost of production but the trend of the English market has always been higher during the summer months when these pigs would be marketed.

Some good lots or hogs received during the week of December 9th, 1938, are as follows:

NAME ADDRESS	NO OF HOGS	GRADE A	B	C	Premium
Wm. Haines, Stirling	7	6	1		$6.00
B. Reid, Foxboro	5	3	2		3.00
R. Hubbs, Belleville	4	4			4.00
Warren Preston, Frankford	7	6	1		6.00
Geo. Striker, Belleville	6	4	2		4.00
E. Huffman, Corbyville	9	4	5		4.00

Produce Trading Remains Dull

Toronto, Dec. 10—Prices continued to drift lower for eggs on the local produce market yesterday, with butter also slightly easier. Little change occurred in cheese.

Although trading was a shade better in the graded division of the egg market, the movement was not brisk and further declines in top grades were general throughout all sections. More demand in retail channels was reported for grade B eggs, a necessary ingredient to the housewives' Christmas puddings. Ungraded eggs dropped 1c per dozen to 28c for grade A-large, 24c for medium and 23c for pullets, and this loss was reflected in the retail division of the market. Graded shipments were clearing at 31c for grade A-large, 26c for medium, 25c for pullets, 24c for B's and 22c for C grades.

Quiet trading prevailed on the butter market. Offerings were light, but were ample for requirements. Some of the trade were inclined to stay on the sidelines until after the final report on cold-storage holdings appears from Ottawa on Saturday or Monday. This intensified the already slow demand. No interest could be aroused in the Western product at 22c to 22 1-4c. Ontario creamery solids slipped back to 21 3-4c for No. 1 grades, 21c for 38 score and 20 1-4c for 37 score. Prints were unchanged at 23 1-2c to 24c for top grades and 22 3-4c to 23 1-4c for 38 score.

Produce Trading Quiet at Montreal

Montreal, Dec. 10 (CP)—Trading was quiet and prices remained unchanged on all sections of open produce markets at Montreal Friday, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported.

Creamery butter prints to retail dealers sold for 23c to 23 1-4c a pound and solids for 22 1-2c to 22 3-4c.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases were offered at 33c a dozen for A-large, 27c for A-medium, 26c for A-pullets, 25 for B-large and 21 1-2c for C. Receipts: 311 boxes.

JOINT FUNERAL FOR 7 VICTIMS

Coroner's Jury Finds Thetford Mines Tragedy Accidental

Thetford Mines, Que., Dec. 10 (CP)—Mourning the deaths of seven of its menfolk in a mining accident that struck three days ago, this industrial centre in Quebec's rich asbestos belt prepared today to bury the victims of the disaster.

A joint funeral at Thetford Mines' Roman Catholic Church was to be held for the seven miners, killed Wednesday by a rock fall deep in an asbestos pit.

All stores were ordered closed and the town's three asbestos mines were scheduled to remain idle while their workers—most of whom had taken part in a long search for the bodies of the victims—turned out for the funeral service.

Foreman's Statement.

A coroner's jury which labelled Wednesday's death-dealing avalanche of rock accidental after an inquest yesterday was told by the foreman of the ill-fated night crew how a moment's delay of the fall might have averted loss of life.

The foreman, Bernarden Bulduc who survived the accident uninjured, said he had on his lips an order for evacuation of a tunnel where the victims were at work at the moment the slide of tons of asbestos rock buried them.

Today's joint funeral service, which will close the records on the tragedy leaving more than thirty children fatherless, will be attended by Colonization Minister Henry Auger, representing Premier Duplessis, and L. A. Richard, Deputy Minister of Mines. Tancrede Labbe, Legislative Assembly member for Megantic County, and members from the neighboring counties also will attend.

WORSHIP OF STATE

party boarded a week ago, was delayed by fog and storms at sea. A special cutter met the ship and carried Eden to the Battery, from where a police escort rushed him to the Waldorf Astoria Hotel.

First Visit An Ovation.

Facing an American audience for the first time he was given an ovation which he described as "one I shall never forget".

Describing himself as "an average Englishman here only on a friendly visit and in nowise official," Eden said "we must be constantly reexamining our political faith and applying it to the conditions of the modern world.

"Every political system, be it democratic or autocratic, must continually evolve, and in the last resource the survival of democracy must depend upon the faith which it inspires, and the results which through faith, it can achieve."

"Democracy must have the strength of the best tempered steel, not rigid, but supple," he added. "It must have the strength of the highest form of discipline—self discipline."

Eden's remarks repeatedly were interrupted by applause as he lightened his defence of democracy with quips on the American revolution and English traditions.

"We in Britain know full well that we are no paragons," he said laughingly. "If we happen to forget it a moment someone will be sure to remind us of it. We acknowledge of course that there are many chequered pages in our long history. One of the worst concerns our dealings with you 160 years ago."

'Period of Emergency'

In another vein, Eden said "we know we are destined, in our land and in our time and in our generation, to live in a period of emergency of which none can see the end."

"If throughout that testing-time howsoever long or short it may be, we hold fast to our faith, cradle it in stone, and set steel to defend it, we can yet hand on our inheritance of freedom, intact to the generations that are to come."

Eden emphasized that "a false complacency is the worst calamity that can befall any nation in critical times."

"To realize then the extent of the challenge that confronts us, and to be conscious of our own shortcomings, are both necessary. But to be conscious of shortcomings is not to proclaim that we are faint-hearted, still less to suggest that we are decadent. Let me say this with all emphasis."

Speaking of "certain standards in which we believe and which we will not yield up," Eden said:

Tolerance of Race and Religion.

"In our conception, a modern democratic state must be based upon racial and religious toleration. Each citizen must enjoy individual liberty, all must be equal before the law. The rights of minorities and majorities alike must be honored and respected. These beliefs are, we are convinced, the basis of all progress. As an Englishman addressing this great American audience tonight, I tell you that these are the beliefs of our English people still, and that they will hold to them in the years that lie ahead.'

Eden looked at the modern world as "vigorous and vital, but ruthless and challenging, a world where force is for many the only instrument of policy."

"In such conditions we know that we must believe in ourselves to live. We know that we must champion our ideals and the faiths to which we hold with an equal strength, or others which we abhor will take their place.

"We know that this endeavor to achieve democracy will once again tax our strength and our endurance to the uttermost. For all this in spirit we are preparing. Nor are we calling out for help to others nor seeking to lure others to pull our chestnuts from the fire. We have no such intention."

Accompanying Eden on his first visit to this country were Mrs. Eden, Viscount and Viscountess Hinchingbrooke, Sir Martyn Beckett, and Ronald Tree.

The Edens will entrain Monday night for Washington, where they will be entertained by Lady Lindsay, wife of the British Ambassador, until Wednesday, during which time Eden will see President Roosevelt.

REAR-END CRASH

Seriously Injured

Mrs. McDonald sustained a badly lacerated and bruised face, a broken right arm and leg, fractured ribs and internal injuries. She was unconscious, when taken into the hospital and died of injuries. Mr. McDonald sustained severe facial injuries and general shock, Dr. G. S. Cronk stated after attending the pair. A preliminary inquest was held at Martin's Funeral Home this morning.

Game Inspector Herb McCabe was one of the first to arrive at the scene of the accident and assisted Mr. Flindall and Mr. Dalmas in releasing the injured persons from the wrecked car. Flindall was held by Provincial Police for questioning, during which he stated no attempt to put out flares had been made, but that the rear reflectors on his truck were in clear vision at the time of the crash.

Criminal Negligence Charged

Following lengthy police investigations by Motorcycle Patrolmen Ervine and Caldwell and Provincial Constable W. E. Smith, Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K. C., instructed the police to hold Kenneth Flindall, driver of the truck, on an open charge of criminal negligence. "According to the information given me by the investigating police, the rear portion of the truck was on the travelled portion of the highway and within a few hundred feet of a nearby service station, where the repairs to the burned out fuse could have been made without endangering the lives of motorists," was the only comment Crown Attorney Donnan made after instructing the police to prefer the criminal negligence charge. Flindall was placed under arrest and held pending possible bail today.

Inquest Opened

The preliminary inquest looking into the death of the late Mrs. Molly McDonald opened at Martin's Funeral Home before Chief Coroner Dr. J. J. Robertson this morning and followng identification the proceedings were adjourned until next week. Mr. J. Abramsky, local merchant, identified the deceased, following which Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K. C. released the body for burial.

According to hospital officials Mr. McDonald rested quietly last night, although he sustained severe facial lacerations and was suffering from shock and the loss of blood.

$2,000 Bail Asked

Kenneth Flindall, driver of the truck, appeared before H. B. Wilson, local Justice of the Peace, today charged with criminal negligence and was remanded for trial. When requesting bail, Flindall was informed bail had been set at $2,000.00. His employer intimated bail would be forthcoming.

Babson Sees Two Good Business Years But is Pessimistic As to Long Trend

New York, Dec. 9—Roger W. Babson, the statistician, predicted in an address here yesterday that business conditions would be favorable during the next two years, but he said the long-term "trend line" was headed downward and could lead only to "inflation, revolution or a change of heart on the part of the American people."

Speaking to 700 persons at the Hotel Astor in the annual conference held by the Babson Organization with New York business men, Mr. Babson advised young persons to think less of stocks and bonds and invest rather in "character, health, technical skill," large families and small holdings of land in the country.

Commenting on each of the requirements, he said the new generations would need character and health "to stand the gaff" of the hard times ahead. Technical skill, he declared, would be essential because advertising, labor unions, salesmanship and similar "rackets" would be eradicated by a wave that has swept Europe and he feels will inevitably sweep the United States.

"A small plot of land, enough to feed you, is the best insurance policy," he declared, adding that he would not own a piece of property in any large city. Mr. Babson said he believed in life insurance, "not as an investment but as insurance."

"The "trend line," which represents the growth of the country in wealth, population and activities, probably was headed downward because of neglect of the Ten Commandments and the multiplication tables, he declared.

Urging a revival of religion and a "different attitude toward life," Mr. Babson said "the ambition of the average person today is to ride in the cart rather than to help pull it."

Armaments, he said, were a necessary expenditure and would have a stimulating effect on temporary business conditions. But he expressed the belief that they would force the "trend line" down, as they do not create national wealth.

"We are taking useful goods and putting them into battleships, airplanes and other armaments which are not productive and call for constant maintenance," he said.

Mr. Babson said he had been asked what line of business he considered most promising for the future and reported that his reply had been the amusement business or the manufacture and sale of sporting goods.

'WE ARE UNITED'

two men since tney came to the parting of the ways before the 1937 election, when Col. Drew resigned as Conservative organizer and ran as an Independent Conservative in Wellington South.

Perhaps the happiest of the Drew supporters was tne wife of the new leader. Mrs. Drew, attractive and youthful, pushed her way to the platform, shoved herself through a crowd of Drew admirers and threw her arms around his neck and kissed him.

No Nursing of Old Wounds

"So far as I am concerned, there will be no nursing of old wounds," the new leader said in an interview after his election. "I will welcome the assistance of everyone who believes that the Conservative party has a purpose to serve in this province.

"Old arguments have no place in our efforts to build up for the future. Personally, I shall do everything I can to unite the party for the purpose of defeating Mr. Hepburn. This is a worthy object, not only for the Conservative Party, but for the people of Ontario. With a united party I am sure that we can do it at the next election."

After his election, Col. Drew, former Ontario Securities Commissioner whose article in a magazine (Mclean's) resulted in appointment of a Royal Commission to probe the Bren Gun contract, told the convention delegates, "one of the most significant things is that one of the first to congratulate me was Hon. Earl Rowe."

A United Party

"We are a united party," he assured a cheering gathering. "There has been today an evidence of interest that should begin to see the end in Ontario of the disastrous type of government we've had in the past few years."

Last night Hon. Dr. R. J. Manion, National Conservative leader, joined with provincial party workers in wishing Col Drew luck at a banquet honoring Col. Drew and at which he was the chief speaker.

To the banquet, Col. Drew enunciated as his highest hope as leader that he might do something to restore national unity which he saw as slipping away. Ontario should take the lead in voluntary transfer to Federal jurisdiction of things that could best be dealt with on a national scale.

If Ontario showed the way, the other provinces would follow. The Conservative policy was to retain for Ontario jurisdiction only in those things necessary to the proper functioning of the local government.

Against Communism

Ontario should waken to the dangers of the teaching of Communism to young folks. Impregnation of the young with Communistic doctrines made it unlikely they would grow up good citizens. Col. Drew expected to be labelled a Fascist for this stand. Communists applied that name to all who opposed their doctrines.

"But I have seen Fascism and Nazism. No one in Canada will fight harder or make a more determined effort than I to prevent their spread because I know them. But I also know no country in the world where Fascism or Nazism exists that didn't first have Communism to pave the way."

It would be quite proper for Ontario to say she would not allow the teaching of any form of dictatorship or anything else subversive of democracy.

Dr. Manion said he was 100 per cent. behind Col. Drew's remarks on Communism.

CHURCHILL SEEKS

"But I warned him (the prime minister)," Mr. Churchill continued, "that if we got into any great danger Mr. De Valera would demand the surrender of Ulster as the price of any friendship or aid." (Prime Minister De Valera of Eire has called for union of Eire and Northern Ireland.)

"This fell out exactly," Mr. Churchill said, "for Mr. De Valera has recently declared that he cannot give us any help or friendship while any British troops remain" to guard Northern Ireland.

Refers To Heckler.

Mr. Churchill said that the heckling to which he was subjected "is rather significant and you should keep your eyes open for it".

"There is a little group of Fascist organizations in this country who are making themselves very prominent at Conservative meetings," he said.

He reiterated his warnings to Mr. Chamberlain and former Prime Minister Lord Baldwin of Germany's growing strength and cited Mr. Chamberlain's statements of relaxed European tension.

Each time such a statement was made, he said, something happened —"either the rape of Austria, the destruction of Czechoslovakia" or Germany's anti-Jewish campaign.

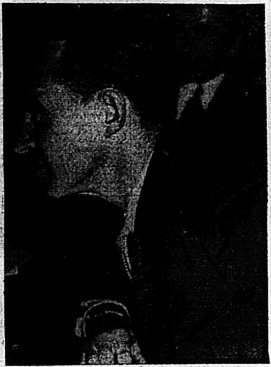
First arrivals at the scene of the tragedy are shown standing around the blazing wreckage of the air liner that crashed into the mist-enshrouded side of Mt. Dandenong, Australia, while on its way from Adelaide to Melbourne with fourteen passengers and a crew of four. All aboard died in the crash or the holocaust that followed it. The airliner was the Kyeena, of Australian airlines.

TESTIFIES BEFORE MONOPOLY COMMITTEE



Edsel Ford, president of the Ford Motor Co. is pictured here as he testifies before the Federal Monopoly committee, in Washington. He testified that his firm pursued a virtually wide-open policy with regard to patents, licensing those it owns to other manufacturers when requested to do so, aiding independent inventors in the production of their own devices, rather than trying to gain control of the inventions.

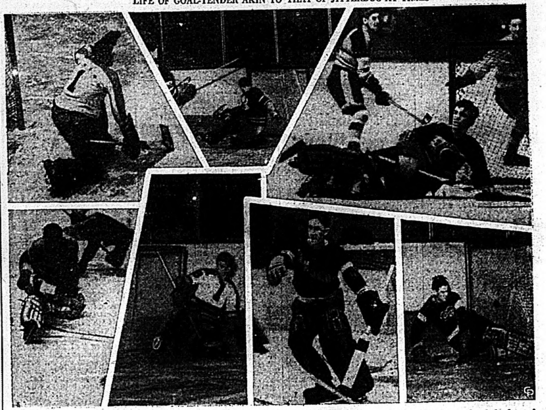
17 MINERS LOSE THEIR LIVES IN NOVA SCOTIA MINE DISASTER

Rescuers are shown here as they removed one of the victims of the Princess colliery disaster from the depth of the mine. Seventeen miners lost their lives and a score were seriously injured when the cable operating a "man-rake" carrying 250 miners broke and allowed the loaded vehicle to crash down a steep incline to the bottom of the mine. Sydney Mines in which town the colliery is located went into mourning as preparations for the funerals of the victims were made.

LIFE OF GOAL-TENDER AKIN TO THAT OF JITTERBUG AT TIMES



What does your favorite minder of the twine look like in action? During the course of a game a goal-tender assumes all kinds of positions and goes through a good many contortions that would bring applause from a gymnastic squad or a vaudeville troupe. He dives to one side, falls to the ice, shouts directions to his teammates, shoots the puck down the ice or into the corner, and last, and with the least pleasure, looks around, at time, to see little black disc denting the strings behind him. Here are presented some scenes from the heat of various National league battles, showing each of the league's seven goalies caught in poses vigorous, ludicrous, active, passive and miscellaneous. Starting at the top left and reading from LEFT to RIGHT, we have Earl Robertson, Americans; Walter (Turk)) Broda, Maple Leafs; Mike Karakas, Black Hawks; Claude Bourgue (or is it Burke?) rookie with Canadiens; Frank Brimsek, (Tiny Thompson's replacement) in Boston ;Dave Kerr, Rangers; and the veteran, and possibly the best of the lot, Tiny Thompson, Detroit Red Wings.

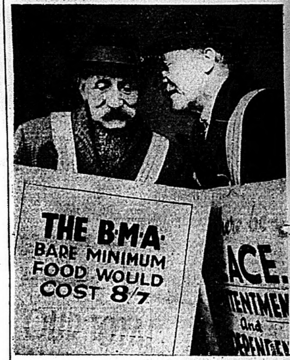
ENGLAND, TOO, HAS PENSION TROUBLE



The United States and Canada are not alone in the clamor for pensions for the aged. England, too, is hearing demands for increases in the existing old age allowances. Here are two of the pensioners who took part in the recent march from St. Paul's cathedral to the House of Commons to demand increase of their pensions to one pound ($5) a week. The placard carried by the man at LEFT, announces that his present pension barely covers cost of the minimum food required to keep him alive and healthy. That 8-7 is is eight shillings and seven pence, about $2.

HEPBURN DENIES ALLIANCE WITH DUPLESSIS

Britain 'Hopes' Memel Not to be Annexed to Reich

NEWS ODDITIES AND BRIEFS

BARMAIDS PROTEST BAN ON MISTLETOE

London, Dec. 12 (AP)—London barmaids protested today against a suggested ban on the mistletoe in "pubs" during the Christmas season.

A union official started it by telling members of the saloon section of the Transport and General Workers' Union that "many a good, honest woman behind a bar is dragged forward to be kissed under the mistletoe by some stupid, drunken man."

A barmaid of "Ye Black Friar Pub" led the girls in the retort: "What's wrong with it? Christmas is supposed to be a time of good will isn't it?"

No union action was taken.

JOE CATTARINICH BURIED

Montreal, Dec. 12—(CP)—On a slush-veneered mountain slope not far from the race tracks that helped build for him a fortune and reputation as one of the continent's best known sports promoters, Joseph ("Silent Joe") Cattarinich was buried today.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Dec. 12 (CP)—Light snow has fallen in some parts of eastern Canada, but the weather has been mild from the lower lakes eastward to the Maritimes, though it has been somewhat colder over northwestern Ontario, Manitoba and Saskatchewan. It continues fair and moderate in Alberta. High pressure covers British Columbia and the greater part of the western States with a fairly deep disturbance over the Northwest Territories. A trough of low pressure extends south-southwestward from Northwest Quebec to the Middle Atlantic coast.

Lake Superior—Fresh northwest to west winds; partly cloudy and somewhat colder today and Tuesday; snowflurries near the Soo.

Western Provinces—Fresh southwest and west winds; fair today and most of Tuesday and becoming a little milder.

Some crystals! The beginning of a snow crystal is the same as that of a raindrop, that is, condensation of water vapor in the air upon some kind of nucleus, such as a dust particle. Snow crystals assume many forms and these forms many patterns, which seem to depend upon temperature and the supply of moisture or height. The many forms and patterns in which they appear in nature have been produced to a limited extent artificially. It has been found that the first germs of ice, so to speak, determines largely the final form which is also controlled to a great extent by temperature. Some forms have, however, been made artificially, which have not as yet been observed in nature.

Ferguson Predicts Drew Next Premier

London, Ont., Dec. 12 (CP) — "I predict he'll be the next prime minister," Hon. G. Howard Ferguson said today when asked if he had any comment on the election of Col. George Drew to the leadership of the Ontario Conservative Party last week.

"We're off to a good start. We have elected a fellow full of energy and with lots of magnetism. He will be prepared to sit down and discuss plans with people who know the situation all over the province and I predict he'll be the next prime minister," Mr. Ferguson stated.

The dean of Ontario Conservatives and former Canadian High Commissioner in England passed through the city today enroute to Sarnia for speaking engagements.

CORRIGAN, JALOPY FLIER, FINDS LIFE PRETTY GOOD NOW

Busy Acting in Movie and Writing Story of Life for Book

EARNS $75,000

Hollywood, Dec. 12 (AP)—Douglas Corrigan, the jalopy flier, hardly needs to write to Santa Claus for anything.

The former $50-a-week aircraft mechanic who flew a dilapidated plane from New York to Ireland has earned $75,000 in three months. He is the star of a movie and the author of a successful autobiography in magazine and book form.

He leaves by airliner late this month for a tour of fifteen big cities to boost his book. He is leasing his famous second-hand monoplane to the San Francisco world's fair for a percentage of the admissions.

He is open to other offers capitalizing on his so-called wrong-way flight, but he listens to none if there isn't cash on the line.

He is a busy fellow, salting away his overnight fortune, personally attending to all his financial affairs, working daily before the camera, and using his spare time on Sundays to reline the brakes on his 10-year-old car.

Corrigan lives in a low-priced hotel room, comes to the studio on a bus and lunches on a nickel ice cream bar.

Celebrities commonly publish their life stories, but Corrigan fired a ghost writer and composed his own, getting a finger callous from the pencils that scrawled 55,000 words.

Corrigan who put his foot down on romancing in a movie like "The Flying Irishman", because actually, he'd never courted a girl.

WAVE OF ACCLAMATIONS

Hull, Que, Dec. 12—(CP)—In a wave of acclamations unprecedented in the city's history, 12 of the 15 members of city council, including Mayor Alphonse Mousette, were returned to office for a two-year term at the close of nominations today.

Besides Mayor Mousette, who was returned for his second two-year term, the 11 aldermen also were re-elected.

There will be contests for only three of the 14 aldermanic seats. Voting takes place Dec. 19.

MEMEL ISSUE IS RAISED TODAY BY CHAMBERLAIN

Britain Expresses 'Hope' Germany Won't Annex Memel

FRANCE CONSULTED

Germany Has Not Yet Officially Asked for War-Lost Colonies

London, Dec. 12 (AP)—Great Britain has expressed to Germany the "hope" that the Reich will not annex Memel, Prime Minister Chamberlain told the House of Commons today.

Great Britain he said was joining France in representations to Berlin concerning the possibility of a movement to absorb Memel which was German before the Great War as a sequel to yesterday's elections for the local parliament which resulted in a decisive victory for Memel Nazis.

Britain Signatory.

In reply to a question the prime minister said:

"There is reason to think that after the Memel elections demands may be made upon the Lithuanian government by majority parties in the diet which would be inconsistent with the statute of Memel (the agreement of May 8, 1924, by which Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan approved Lithuania's possession of Memel.)

"The British government, as a signatory of the Memel convention, can not ignore this possibility.

"In view of the special influence which the German government is in a position to exert in these matters, the British Charge d'Affaires in Berlin has been instructed to join with the French Ambassador in expressing the hope that the German government will use its influence to ensure respect for the statute."

Replying to a series of questions, Mr. Chamberlain also disclosed that Germany thus far has made no official request for the return of her former colonies, lost in the Great War.

History of Memel.

Memel, with an area of 1,099 square miles, was German until the Reich surrendered it under the Treaty of Versailles. It was held under mandate by the principal allied powers until 1923, when Lithuanians invaded and occupied the territory. The allies recognized this conquest by the May 8, 1924, convention (or statute) signed at Paris and ratified in August, 1925.

The question of British aid to France in the event she were attacked by Italy also came before the House and Mr. Chamberlain replied to a question that "no such specific requirement exists in any treaty or past with France."

However, on previous occasions Mr. Chamberlain has declared Great Britain would defend France or Belgium against unprovoked aggression.

JOINT ECONOMIC REPRISALS SEEN LIKELY

London, Dec. 12 (CP)—Joint economic reprisals by Great Britain and the United States against Japan as a result of Tokyo's determination to form an Asiatic bloc were regarded as a possibility here tonight.

It is understood the idea of sanctions against Japan has been discussed informally between representatives of the two countries although no definite plan of operation has been drawn up or anything concrete formulated.

One Shot of New Anesthetic Stops Pain for Two or Three Week Period

By HOWARD BLAKESLEE

New York, Dec. 12 (AP)—A local anaesthetic, one "shot" of which stops pain for two or three weeks, has been developed at the College of Physicians and Surgeons.

While the wounds of operations are healing, most of the patients have been able to walk around without pain. They have not had to stay in hospitals, and economic losses have been further reduced by returning them to work earlier.

Most of the women who had been doing housework continued part of their duties. Men and women in regular employment have resumed work within a week.

These results, verified in 194 rectal operations on 181 patients are described in the Journal of Surgery, Gynecology and Obstetrics by Dr. C. V. Burt, fellow of the American College of Surgeons, and Dr. J. Gordon Rennie, of Richmond, Va.

The anaesthetic is Neothesol. It is a mixture of procaine, two other chemicals, and refined French almond oil. The oil is the secret of the long insensibility to pain. It holds and releases the anaesthetic gradually into the tissues. Although only one "shot" is needed, the report explains that considerable skill is required to place it properly.

Long-lasting anaesthisia with the aid of oil was introduced to the medical profession in 1927. Physicians have been experimenting with the method throughout the world.

The College of Physicians and Surgeons operations were on very painful types of rectal cases. The same long-lasting anaesthetic has also proven effective for operations on the extremities of the body. It has been used on the tonsils.

First Degree Murder Charge is Laid

Seattle, Dec. 12 (AP)—Mrs. Mary Eleanor Smith, 73-year-old former prisoner of the Washington State Prison, was alone today to face a first degree murder charge in connection with the disappearance ten years ago of James Eugene Bassett, of Annapolis, Md.

Her son and co-defendant, Decasto Earl Mayer, 44, lifer in the State penitentiary as a habitual criminal, killed himself yesterday in the county jail here.

Prosecutor Gray Warner was prepared to continue the trial, but the authorities were chiefly concerned with obtaining from Mrs. Smith a clue to the whereabouts of Bassett's body.

POLICE POWERS OF LITHUANIA IN MEMEL IS ENDED

FORCE NOT POSSIBLE

Memel, Lithuania, Dec. 12 (AP)—The pro-Nazi Memel Directory, flushed with what it termed a smashing victory in parliamentary elections yesterday, decreed the end of Lithuanian police powers today in this former German territory.

The decree asserted only police of autonomous Memel would be permitted to control security of the territory lying at Lithuania's southwest corner adjoining Germany. Lithuanian police who heretofore have collaborated with Memel's autonomous force now will be regarded as private citizens.

Political observers said final decision as to any change in the territorial status of Memel, object of German ambitions to expand along the Baltic, would be made in Berlin, not Memel.

Will Bring Proposals.

The Lithuanian government which holds a somewhat nominal sovereignty over Memel awaited the return from Berlin of the German minister. It is expected he will bring precise German proposals for the future of the disputed region.

Following a state of emergency decree "for protection of the state", more than 100 students were said by private sources to have been arrested in Kaunas, Lithuanian capital. Newspapers reported many students had been released, but that they were planning a strike demonstration.

Memel's Nazi "Fuehrer", Ernst Newmann, 50-year-old veterinarian, sounded a rallying cry that "the time is ripe for a decision in Memel.

He was backed by yesterday's vote which showed more than 95 per cent of Memel's eligible voters—90 per cent of the region's 150,000 inhabitants are of German origin—had participated in the election.

26 Seats For Nazis.

Final results will be known later this week, but 26 of the 29 Landtag (Parliament) seats were expected to fall to the Nazi. That would be a net gain of two seats for the Germans and political observers said the new members would be more ardently Nazi than the old legislature which, with semi-autonomous powers, governed the 1,099 square mile territory formerly belonging to Germany.

Neumann declared: "We have begged for our rights for fifteen years and we shall beg no more."

Those words were taken as foreshadowing a new demand for return to the Reich when Memel's landtag meets late in January.

Others said that positive action for the annexation or complete domination of Memel land by Germany would come when Chancellor Hitler summons his Reichstag to meet Jan. 30.

Not Decided At Memel.

That idea was supported by Neumann's enigmatic words, "We don't know what our future will be, but the fate of Memel will not be decided here."

Whatever action is taken, none look for the use of force but anticipate the extension of German authority under the guise of demands for "the right of self determination", given voice in the landtag before the Reichstag meets.

The only casualty of Sunday election disorders was an American, Robert Sellmer, free lance newspaperman of Milwaukee, Wis., who told authorities he was beaten by three uniformed guards for not replying to the Nazi salute as he was crossing a Memel street. The incident was reported to the United States minister in Kaunas.

LINK EXCHANGE WITH MIGRATION OF JEW REFUGEES

One Wealthy and Four Impoverished Jews to Each Group

GERMANY HAS PLAN

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER

Berlin, Dec. 12 (AP)—A high German source disclosed today Germany was working out what may become a new Nazi formula for the emigration of Jews.

The problem probably will be solved, he said, by allowing one wealthy and four impoverished Jews to leave the country as enough German exports are sold abroad to yield foreign exchange to meet the costs of their emigration.

The disclosure coincided with intimation of a slight let-up shortly in the severity of Nazi anti-Semitic measures in return for which, it was indicated, Germany expects foreign Jews to provide foreign exchange.

"The government, together with foreign Jewish associations, is working out a plan of coupling emigration with exports," this source said.

He told of it in connection with a plan, official German news agency announced, which deals with aid that Foreign Jews and wealthy German Jews can contribute to ridding Germany of her entire Jewish population.

"In pursuance of this plan," he said, "every emigrating wealthy Jew should agree to take four penniless Jews with him.

"Obviously we cannot give him foreign exchange to finance such an operation.

Lending of Money.

"He should find some wealthy Jew abroad to lend him such sums as may be necessary for enabling him and his four co-religionists to start life modestly anew in some other country.

"We are willing to reimburse this foreign Jew but obviously can do it only by furnishing made-in-Germany goods.

"The emigrating Jew thus has it in his own hand to hasten the day of his departure from Germany: if he can provide additional markets for German-made products."

This source was confident that such a method promised success.

It was obvious from his manner that the DNB communique was calculated to east foreign tension over Germany's anti-Semitic drive, thus paving the way for foreign Jewish aid for German Jewish emigrants.

The announcement said that some restrictions against Jews would be relaxed after Jan. 1.

Read New Testament In 19 Hours 10 Minutes In Relays

Philadelphia, Dec. 12.—(AP)—Three hours before dawn yesterday a Baptist preacher stepped into a pulpit before pews filled with sleepy worshippers, snapped on a reading light and opened a Bible to the New Testament.

"The Book of the Generation of Jesus Christ, the son of David, the son of Abraham," he intoned, beginning chapter one of the Gospel according to St. Matthew.

And so it went in quarter-hour relays, —Matthew, Mark, Luke, John.

The listeners, all of them attired in choir robes, sat patiently as morning light suffused the church, changed to bright sunshine and faded into twilight. Women came in at intervals and served hot food.

Darkness fell. At 9 o'clock Harvey Cressman, President of the Baptist Temple's Board of Deacons, began the Book of Revelations. He was the 72nd reader.

At five minutes before 10, Dr. Daniel A. Poling, who started the reading, returned to the pulpit. At 10.10 p.m., he finished.

"The Grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all, Amen".

The New Testament had been read from cover to cover in 19 hours, 10 minutes.

203 JACK RABBITS SHOT

Meaford, Ont., Dec. 12 (CP)—The local jack rabbit population was in mourning today for 203 of its members, killed by members of the Skinner Hunt Club on its annual drive in St. Vincent township Saturday.

A total of 1,726 pounds of rabbit was checked in by the hunters. Three red fox were listed as additional victims of the drive.

No Curtsy to Duchess Of Windsor Says Countess of Pembroke

London, Dec. 12 (AP)—The Countess of Pembroke, an expert on court etiquette, emerged in the week-end London press as a forthright devotee of the "no curtsy to the Duchess of Windsor School".

"If the Duchess is made a Royal Highness," she told the Sunday dispatch, "then I shall be pleased to drop her a curtsy."

Lady Pembroke is the wife of Earl of Pembroke. She said she had scolded Lady Diana Duff Cooper, wife of the former First Lord of the Admiralty, and Mrs. Euan Wallace, wife of the Financial Secretary of the Treasury, because they told her they curtsied to the Duchess in Paris "to please the duke".

"I told them that, personally, nothing would induce me to curtsy to the Duchess at present as it is not customary in this country to curtsy to any but royal personages," the Countess said.

She said Alfred Duff Cooper seemed "rather angry" at her remark, the dispatch related.

JAMES BRONSON FOUND IN BARN OF HIS BROTHER

Rawdon Farmer Does Not Know How He Got to Barn or When

NO FOOD FOR 5 DAYS

Belleville, Ont., Dec. 12 (CP) — James Bronson, 50-year-old Rawdon Township farmer, is confined to bed today recovering from the effects of five days without food and water during which time he was in a dazed condition. He is confined to a liquid diet until he shows definite signs of progress.

Bronson, for whom a posse had searched thoroughly since he disappeared Tuesday, was found Saturday in a barn owned by his brother, Albert. He was noticed by Perry Bronson, a nephew, as he stood at the door of the barn. He said he could not account for his actions and, to his knowledge, had not had food or drink since he left his farm Tuesday to walk to Madoc, a distance of five miles. He is subject to heart attacks.

He said he could remember striking out for a spring, two miles north of his home, "but that is all." He did not know how he got to the barn or when.

"Yesterday, or the day before yesterday, I heard somebody singing and made an effort to get up, but I fell back asleep," he added.

Remembers Struggling

Later, he said, he could remember struggling to the edge of the hay mow in the barn. He slipped and fell to the floor below. Then "I got up and struggled to the door where I saw Perry."

Would Go on Hustings If Dominion Gov't Wants To Make Charges Issue

Hepburn Says He Has No Desire to Go to Ottawa

By The Canadian Press

Canada's political realm rocked today under a double-barrelled blast fired by two federal cabinet members at the Premiers of Ontario and Quebec, charging the Provincial Liberal and Union Nationale heads with an "unnatural political alliance in an attempt to oust Prime Minister Mackenzie King from the National leadership of the Liberal party.

Hon. Norman Rogers, Minister of Labor, and Hon. C. D. Howe, Minister of Transport, speaking at a Port Arthur mass meeting Saturday night, bluntly named Premier Mitchell Hepburn and Premier Maurice Duplessis as the principles in the alliance which "has its basis in personal and political animosities and in the apparent desire of two men to gain power over national affairs."

Unqualified Denial

From his home near St. Thomas last night Premier Hepburn—who 17 months ago said, "I am not a Mackenzie King Liberal any more"—shot back a booming salvo in reply. He gave an unqualified denial of any conspiracy between himself and Mr. Duplessis and declared that if the Dominion Government wants to make an issue over relations between it and the province he is "prepared to go out on the hustings and fight them to the limit."

Mr. Rogers told the Port Arthur gathering that the attempted conspiracy failed, "because it was against loyalty and against decency and dignity in the conduct of public affairs," and because Mr. Mackenzie King "has never held a stronger position than he does today in the loyalty of the Liberal party and in the respect and esteem of the Canadian people."

May Make Overtures

"It may be, however," he said, "that having failed in this first attempt, Mr. Hepburn and Mr. Duplessis were ready—and perhaps are still ready—to make overtures to Dr. R. J. Manion, the Conserva-

ORDERED TO PAY

Brantford Ont., Dec. 12 (CP)—Basin Wilson, negro, wor ordered to pay a judgment summons of $11.15 within a week or go to jail, when he appeared today. Wilson was ordered to pay the sum some time ago, and was said to have paid only $1 on it. Magistrate S. Alfred Jones said it was the first such procedure he had encountered in a long career on the bench.

WITHDRAWS FROM FIGHT

Perth, Scotland, Dec. 12—(CP—Havas)—Rev. A. W. Groundwater of Coupar-Angus, Perthshire, who on Saturday announced his intention of contesting the Kinross and Western Perth byelection as an Independent Labor candidate, today withdrew from the contest. Polling day is Dec. 21.

Winston Churchill Declares Germany Ready to Move in Eastern Europe

Chingford, Essex, England, Dec. 12 (CP) — Winston Churchill, former cabinet minister, renewed his attack on the government's foreign policy last night with a declaration Germany was on the verge of another move in eastern Europe while Premier Mussolini made trouble in the Mediterranean.

He told a League of Nations union meeting he did not know what would be next—Nemel or Danzig or the Polish Ukrainian autonomy movement or action by the Transylvanian population against Rumania.

"No one can tell," he said, "but everything points to an early resumption of Nazi aggression and no concerted resistance is being made against it."

Assailed Chamberlain.

Mr. Churchill assailed Prime Minister Chamberlain, who, he said, thinks it wise to go to Rome now "to see what further appeasement is possible" in regard to Italy's new demands, made "when the ink is scarcely dry" upon the signatures of of the Anglo-Italian agreement.

Mr. Churchill said there was still only one solution to this situation.

"We must try night and day to put this country in the position where it can no longer be blackmailed by the threat of air bombing," he declared.

Many people are asking, he said, why should "we rearm and make all kinds of exceptional exertions if it is only to grovel to dictators and aid them in their domination of democracy."

Should Do Utmost.

"I can not agree to that," he went on. "However much we may deplore the leadership, or want of leadership, we regard it is our duty to do our utmost for our country and the cause of freedom as far as we can. If the arrangements are bad we must try to make them better. If our policy is wrong we must try to alter it. If the government instrument is exhausted we must try to revive it or replace it.

"Public opinion is far ahead of the government in all matters of defence and has been for a long time. We have had to goad them on to take measures which one would have thought their honor, their duty and their tradition would have prompted them long ago to demand of us.

Death Toll in Disaster Raised to Twenty-One

Sydney Mines, N.S., Dec. 12 (CP) —Thomas Campbell, 55, died in hospital here today to raise to 21 the number killed or fatally injured when a "man rake" bearing 250 men to work in Princess Colliery last Tuesday, broke away and ran wild through the mine.

Campbell's death came as Nova Scotia government investigators prepared to seek the cause of the disaster. The inquiry opens today.

As the probe got under way, work resumed at Princess Colliery, closed since the accident.

LIFELESS BODY OF BYRON STORMS FOUND IN BARN

NO INQUEST

Picton, Ont., Dec. 12 (Special)—The lifeless body of Byron Storms, 42-year-old farm laborer was found hanging from a beam in the barn of his employer, Edward Gordon, Waupoos farmer, shortly after eight o'clock this morning.

Storms' body was discovered by Mrs. Gordon, when she entered the barn to look for her husband. Chief Coroner Dr. D. S. Lighthall called to the scene decided an inquest unnecessary and stated that Storms had come to his death "by suicide while mentally depressed".

Storms, according to Mrs. Gordon, had arisen as usual today, milked the cows and returned to the house for his breakfast. He appeared to be normal although he was not as talkative as usual.

Finishing his meal, he left the house and went to the barn where his body was discovered a few minutes later.

Storms is thought to have brooded over the death of a sister who died recently from a serious stomach disease. Troubled himself from a stomach disturbances for the past few weeks, it is believed that this caused his mental condition prior to his death.

According to authorities, Storms climbed a ladder to a high beam, fastened a rope around his neck and leaped. His body was found hanging six feet above the floor of the barn.

SENTENCED TO REFORMATORY

Brantford, Ont., Dec. 12 (CP)—Donald Curley, charged with theft of a bicycle at Hamilton, was sentenced to from nine to twelve months in reformatory today after he changed a not guilty plea to guilty. Court Clerk Reg Gullen said Curley was already serving a similar sentence for an identical crime.

The case was heard here instead of Hamilton by consent of parties interested. Today's sentence was to run concurrently with the earlier one.

DIRECTORATE CHOSEN FOR COUNTRY CLUB

The most successful year for some time in the history of the Bay of Quinte Country Club has been concluded, a number of members were told at the annual meeting of the Club held over the week end. There was a large increase in membership and many improvements on the golf course were made to make it one of the best nine hole courses in the Eastern part of the Province. The Board of Directors for the coming year will include R. H. Martin, F. H. Deacon, R. J. E. Graham, R. J. Graham, E. P. Bernstein, John McIntosh, H. W. Ackerman, Gordon Robertson and Dr. James Forrester. A meeting will be held later by this board and the officers for the year will be chosen.

ST. THOMAS' CHURCH CELEBRATES SPECIAL SERVICE YESTERDAY

Yesterday, Dec. 11, was the second anniversary of the accession of his Majesty King George the Sixth to the throne, and the special service given in the prayer book for use on such occasions was said at Matins and Evensong at St. Thomas' Church by the vicar, the Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne, and the National Anthem was sung.

DENSE CLOUDS SPOIL SHOW OF METEORS

The sky show of Geminid meteors scheduled to appear on Sunday evening, was a disappointment to celestial watchers of the city and district, many of whom made special note to observe the night skies with particular care. Though one local resident was well equipped with small telescope, and maintained a lengthy vigil, only one small shooting star was observed by him, it was reported.

The shower of small meteors which regularly sweep the skies is expected to be visible again this evening and on Tuesday evening, given clear weather. The meteors become visible early each December when their orbit crosses the earth, and for the last ten years they have appeared on December 12th, usually in disappointing numbers for local residents.

HITCH HIKER USES SIGNBOARD TO TELL OF DESTINATION

Novelty in the art of hitchhiking is still exhibited by wanderers of the road passing through the city.

At the lower end of Front St., this morning a sturdy youth carrying pack sack and small valise strapped to his back, stood with smiling gestures working his well trained thumb in the proverbial jerking manner for the benefit of motorists whizzing by without even a glance at the wayfarer.

Hung from his neck was a small cardboard placard, with large ink-written letters: "Headed for Montreal, and Points East."

ICE BREAKS UP

With the continuance of milder weather, the ice sheet in the Bay of Quinte has broken up. Sections of the bay are clear of the ice again, except for scattered floating patches. At Deseronto the ice bridge which had formed across the bay has gone. Icemen of the city in the meantime are chafing under the delay which prohibits the start of operations on annual ice cutting. Stocks from last year have become decidedly low, and a slight famine of natural ice will be noted unless a quick freeze comes, it was stated by one company this morning.

DESERONTO LEGION NOMINATES OFFICERS

At the annual meeting of the Deseronto branch of the Canadian Legion, No. 280, nomination of officers took place, and election night named for December 19th. The following were nominated: president—Richard Garratt, Jack McAfee, Harry Fraser and S. E. Putman. First vice - president—J. W. Lindsay, Jack McAfee, Hugh McQueen, A. E. Boutillier and Geo. Hoppings. Second vice-president—H. E. Putman, W. Miller, Jack McAfee, J. W. Lindsay and Charles Knight.

Harry Fraser was re-elected secretary-treasurer, and for the executive committtee, J. Webster, Hugh McQueen; A. E. Boutillier; H. E. Putman; M. Airhart; W. Miller; Geo. Hoppings; C. J. Knight; and Jack McAfee were named. For Sergeant - at -Arms, A. E. Boutillier and W. Miller; for Sergeant Escort, W. Miller; Hugh McQueen and B. Leaf.

FIXED ASSESSMENT MAY BE GRANTED TO NEW COMPANY

Subject to approval of the ratepayers, Campbellford Town Council has granted the Trent Dehydrated Products, Ltd., a new company which will manufacture alfalfa meal and similiar products, a fixed assessment of $1,000 for ten years on condition that the company erect an $80,000 plant and employ a specified number of workmen. Farmers of the district see in the completion of the plant a spur to the growing of this fodder in the central area due to the heavy production which will be needed.

LARGE BAT STARTLES LOCAL RESIDENT

The sudden whirring of wings, and a dark ghostly shape that drove at his head out of the semi-darkness of a late evening over the week-end startled Jack Cummings, as he left his residence on Everett Street.

Startled Cummings threw up his hands to protect himself as the shape repeated its manoeuvres. He finally succeeded in driving away or frightening the large bat, for that is what it was.

"It was one of the largest of its kind that I ever saw", Cummings said, relating his experience. "In the darkness it appeared to measure about twelve inches wingspread. And incidentally it is the first time I have seen a bat flying at this time of the year."

SMALL BOY ASKS FOR 'FEMALE' BACON

The grimy little fellow with a silver coin clutched tightly in his hand strode bravely into a Front Street grocery store this morning.

"I want a pound of female bacon" he told a clerk.

"You want what?" the astonished clerk asked.

The advice of other members of the staff was sought in an effort to discover what "female" bacon was, and it was not until the boy's name had been ascertained and his parents consulted that the surprised store staff discovered that "peameal" bacon was what was desired.

FORMER STUDENT GETS PROMOTION

On page 5 of today's "Globe and Mail" announcement is made of another promotion for Mr. Claude F. Mr. Dunfee received his introduction to business life through attendance at Ontario Business College here.

"Rosemarie" Grill Newest Addition to Belleville Business

"Rose Marie" is the name of new business establishment which opened its doors to the public Saturday. "Rose Marie" is a high class delicatessan and grill established on different lines from the usual restaurant and with a different appeal. The proprietor, M. Joseph Chargois, an experienced chef, was born in Holland, and has had a varied experience under the finest chefs in the cities of Europe, Paris, Vienna, Budapest, etc., as well as head chef in Toronto and other Canadian cities. In the delicatessan department a specialty will be made of Dutch sausage and other imported viands in connection with a line of specialties in high class foods, domestic and foreign. The bright and cheery dining room presents an inviting appearance and here too, the patron finds different service, different food and plenty of everything. Rose Marie Delicatessan and Grill might well be called The House of Plenty for no guest is permitted to leave with hunger unsatisfied. "Rose Marie" has an appeal which is altogether different and pleasing and to meet M. Jos. Chargois is an experience of pleasure in itself.

Twenty-Four Crippled Children Need Treatment

Urgent Cases Need Specialist Treatment at Once.

All the proceeds received by the Belleville Rotary Club through their endeavours to raise money in order that they may carry on their Crippled Children's work, is deposited in a fund entitled CRIPPLED CHILDREN'S FUND and this money can only be used for that purpose. It is held in trust by the Rotary Club, the same as any other trust fund for which the club is responsible.

The Belleville Rotary Club, through their long experience in looking after crippled children, are now in a position to do much more with the money they receive than private individuals, as we receive special consideration from the doctors and specialists in our work, together with the Hospital for Sick Children at Toronto.

At the Present time, there are twenty-four urgent cases that have to be attended to at once.

FIRM INVESTIGATED

Shown here is Executive Vice-President D. F. Michaels, of McKesson and Robbins, Inc., gigantic drug and chemical concern which has filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in New York. Sensational developments in the bankruptcy, in which assets that may exceed $10,000,000 are alleged to be mysteriously missing, are promised by investigating bodies. A statement given out by executives of the firm claims that "Canadian warehouses" which supposedly held large amounts of the company's stock of crude drugs, turned out on investigation to be only mailing addresses.

THREE SENT TO JAIL AT NAPANEE

Donald Thompson, Northbrook appeared in County Police Court, held at Tweed before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd, on four distinct charges which brought convictions and fines amounting to over one hundred dollars and costs on Saturday.

Thompson was sentenced to serve seven days in the common jail after being convicted of driving a motor car while intoxicated. A three months' suspended sentence was given the accused on a charge of obstructing a police officer in the pursuit of his duties, while a fine of $10 and costs was imposed after Thompson was found guilty of being found in possession of a revolver which was not registered. The fourth charge was that of being found in possession of illicit liquor. A fine of $100 and costs was imposed in this case. Chief Hayes of Tweed and the R.C.M.P. preferred the charges.

Fred Woodcock, Kaladar, was fined $500 and sentenced to six months in the Napanee jail after being convicted of being found in possession of a quantity of illicit liquor. The charge was that of a second offence, which resulted in the additional jail terms.

Arthur Woodcock, Kaladar, intimated he was unable to pay a $100 fine after being convicted of being found in possession of illicit liquor and was sentenced to three months in the Napanee jail in default.

Display of Toys Repaired By Firemen Well Worth A Visit by Local Citizens

Pride of achievement, and happiness in the thought that their efforts would bring degree of Christmas cheer to the hearts of several hundred underprivileged city children, shone in the eyes of members of Belleville's Fire Department on Saturday afternoon when they proudly displayed the results of weeks of hard, tedious labor to an appreciative general public in their Toy Show at No. 2 Fire Hall.

Rows of freshly "made-up" dollies, resplendent in new clothes, some with new heads, others with brand-new legs and arms, vied for the public favor with toy trains, autos, wagons, games and other children's toy delights, as proud firemen escorted visitors around the display rooms.

Colorfully decorated, the rooms present a real "Christmassy" appearance. The deft hands that are more accustomed to handling fire-reels and hose, turned to more delicate work and the result is seen in the colorful display that is now available and will be for the remainder of the week.

"We still have lots of room for more toys," Deputy Fire-Chief Gerald Vance stated this morning. "The fact that we are now displaying the toys is not an indication that our work is finished. We will work up until Christmas Eve if we can get sufficient toys. The lists of names of needy children are growing daily and we will need more toys if we are to accommodate all."

A further invitation to the public to visit the toy-rooms at No. 2 Fire Hall was extended by Deputy-Chief Vance.

OBITUARY

JEREMIAH G. SQUIER
(Trenton)

Jeremiah Gatchell Squier died suddenly at his late residence, Victoria Avenue, Trenton, on Saturday, Dec. 10th., in his 86th. year.

GILBERT WANNAMAKER
(Eldorado)

After a lengthy illness Gilbert Wannamaker passed away at the family residence at Eldorado, Ont., on Saturday, Dec. 10th.

The late Mr. Wannamaker, who was in his 79th year, was born and lived all his life on the farm where he died. His parents were the late Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Wannamaker. He was well-known and respected in the community. In religion he was a member of the United Church at Hazard's Corners.

Surviving him are his widow, who prior to her marriage was Miss Mary Gleeson; one daughter, Mrs. Russell Pigden, Eldorado, Ont.; two sisters, Mrs. Fred McMullen, Belleville and Mrs. Wilber Frederick, Belleville.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

MRS. JAMES SEENEY

Rawdon, Dec. 12 (Special)— The funeral of the late Mrs. James Seeney, of Hoards, was held on Thursday afternoon in Mount Pleasant Rawdon United Church with a large attendance of sorrowing relatives and friends.

The service was conducted by her pastor, Rev. C. S. Reddick of Hoard's United Church, assisted by Rev. J. E. Beckel of Mount Pleasant. Two favourite hymns were read "Saved by Grace" and "Some day we'll Understand." Mr. Jack Hughes sang a solo with Miss Doris Rannie giving piano accompaniment.

Mrs. Seeney passed away Tuesday morning December 6th having been ill two weeks. She was in her sixty-second year and before her marriage was Miss Margaret Elizabeth Mariam. Almost forty years ago she married and came to Rawdon to reside and a few years ago she moved to Seymour township.

She is survived by her husband, two sons, Allan at home, and Clarence of Rawdon, three daughters (Annie) Mrs. Allan Simpson, Mount Pleasant; (Myrtle) Mrs. Fred McGee, Dartford, and (Mabel) Mrs. Alfred Landberg, Toronto, also six grandchildren.

The bearers were Messrs. Oscar Merrick, Frank Bailey, Charles Hoard, Henry Farrell, Hector Whitton and Ray Williams.

The interement was made in Mount Pleasant cemetery.

LATE MRS. JOHN BELL
(Trent Road)

The funeral of Mrs. John Bell took place Saturday afternoon, December 10th., from the family residence, Trent Road, and was largely attended. The service in the home and at the graveside in Belleville Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. W. J. Walker, minister of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

The bearers were Messrs. William Leslie, Fred Chamberlain, Fred Parrot, John Chambers, Fred Denyes and Frank Reid.

There were many beautiful floral tributes.

LATE JAMES HODGEN
(Ameliasburg)

Sunday afternoon the funeral of James Hodgen, late residence Ameliasburg, Prince Edward County, took place from the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street, Belleville. The service in the chapel and at the graveside in the Hewitt Private Cemetery, Roslin, was conducted by the Rev. T. Smith, pastor of the United Church at Ameliasburg.

The bearers were Messrs. Frederick Hodgen, William Hodgen, Gibson Hodgen, William Dale, David Hubble and Wallace Simmons.

WILLIAM EDWARD BEARE

The sincere sympathy of many friends goes out to Mr. and Mrs. Jack Beare, 27 Isabel Street, in their bereavement occasioned by the death of their twin-son, William Edward Beare, which occurred at the Belleville General Hospital on Sunday, December 11th., after an illness of about ten days' duration. The child was six months and fifteen days old.

The funeral took place this Monday afternoon and interment was made in St. James' Cemetery.

MRS. ELIZABETH J. DEAN
(Shannonville)

A well known and highly respected member of the community passed away at Shannonville yesterday, Sunday, Dec. 11, in the person of Mrs. Elizabeth Jane Dean. A daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles LaRoy, life long residents of that vicinity. Mrs. Dean was in her eighty-seventh year. While not enjoying perfect health for some time, she was seriously ill only a few days, and news of her death came as a shock to her many friends.

Born in Shannonville, Mrs. Dean passed her entire life in that district and was held in affection and esteem by a wide circle of friends. Her husband, William T. Dean, predeceased her several years ago.

Mrs. Dean was a faithful member of Shannonville United Church. When her health permitted she took an active part in the work of the church and was especially identified with the Woman's Missionary Society, in whose endeavours she took an untiring interest.

She leaves to mourn her passing three sons, Mr. Zara Dean of Schenectady, N.Y., Mr. Willott M. Dean of Ottawa, Ont., and Mr. Earl W. Dean of Edmonton, Alberta.

LATE HERBERT ALLAN FINK

The funeral of Herbert Allan Fink took place from the family residence, 215 Albert Street, Saturday afternoon, December 10th., to St. Thomas' Church where the burial office of the Church of England was conducted by the Vicar, the Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne.

Interment was made in Belleville Cemetery; the committal service was said by the Vicar.

The late Mr. Fink was a prominent member of the Masonic Order and the last rites of the Order were conducted at the graveside by Wor. Bro. L. A. Kells, Master of The Belleville Lodge No. 123 A.F. and A.M., assisted by Rt. Wor. Bro. H. J. Clarke, Wor. Bros. John Andrews, W. B. Embury and Fred Chapman.

The bearers were Messrs. Fred Chapman, John Andrews, Everett Fairman, Harper McElrath, L. A. Kells and William Stork.

Clare Leavitt of Picton Arrested After Hectic Chase

Following a hectic police chase, in which gun play was brought into action by the law enforcing agents, local police arrested Clare Leavitt, Picton youth, early Sunday morning on Isabel St. Leavitt is alleged to have procured gasoline from the West Bridge St., Shell service station and drove speedily away without paying for the same. After a hectic chase over the streets of West Belleville, Leavitt was arrested in an alleged intoxicated condition. He was admitted to bail on Sunday to appear in police court today.

Constables Arnott and Ellis hastened to the scene following a report given by William Kyle, service station attendant about 1.30 a.m. Sunday. Later the police located a motor car answering the description of the vehicle to have been served with gasoline without payment. A hectic chase, over West Bridge, Cedar, Coleman, Catherine and Isabel Streets, resulted in the police finally crowding the fleeting car into the curb on Isabel St., but only after P. C. Ellis had fired several shots in warning and later directed one at the rear tire of the car. When Leavitt was finally apprehended police state a bottle of home brew wine was found.

6,000 JAPANESE REPORTED KILLED

Major Setback to Long-Heralded Japanese Drive Reported

Shanghai, Dec. 12 (AP)—A major setback to the long-heralded Japanese mop-up campaign in Shansi Province was reported today with the statement by Chinese that 6,000 Japanese had been killed there by Chinese guerrillas.

Chinese sources also reported victories in two other sectors, recapturing cities on the Sinkiang river and others west of Hankow. (The casualty reports could not be confirmed from other sources.)

The Shansi setback was said to have been inflicted by China's famed Eighth Army using day and night harassing tactics to force the Japanese to withdraw after a successful offensive against Wutaisha, the Eighth Army's fortified base at the foot of Wutai Mountain.

Large Supplies Seized.

Foreign reports said the Chinese had seized large supplies of arms and ammunition by means of a hit-and-run campaign aimed at regaining control of the northeast province.

Chinese leaders told of their gains in an interview in a Shanghai tea house where they had come after a hazardous journey through the Japanese lines to obtain medical supplies. They produced photographs to substantiate their claims.

Other Chinese guerrilla successes by the Fourth Army in Anhwei, Chekiang, and Kiangsu provinces were described. The leaders declared guerillas had lost only one major battle out of fifty engagements since they took the field.

Meanwhile a Kuomin (Chinese News Agency) dispatch from Linhsien said a major Chinese offensive to attempt recapture of Canton was expected momentarily.

FATHER COUGHLIN TOLD HIS POSITION

Cardinal Says He Is Not Authorized to Speak for Catholic Church

Chicago, Dec. 12 (AP) — George Cardinal Mundelein made it clear today that Rev. Charles E. Coughlin "has the right to express his personal views on current events, but he is not authorized to speak for the Catholic Church."

In a coast to coast (NBC) broadcast yesterday Bishop Bernard Sheil, Vicar General of the Chicago Roman Catholic Archdiocese, read a statement in behalf of the Cardinal.

At about the same time, Frank Hogan, Catholic president of the American Bar Association, warned members of his faith in a broadcast addressed from Washington, to oppose all forms of racial and religious intolerance. He said Pope Pius had denounced anti-Semitism as incompatible with Christianity.

The widely known Washington Attorney spoke on the special radio network used by Father Coughlin immediately after a broadcast by the Detroit priest who urged Jews and Gentiles "to stand shoulder to shoulder against Nazism, against Communism, from which it sprang and against Godlessness."

On Independent Network.

Father Coughlin spoke on an independent network.

Bishop Sheil was on the air only two minutes. He said:

"His Eminence George Cardinal Mundelein of Chicago, having been importuned by news commentators and correspondents from every section of the country in reference to broadcasts of Father Coughlin of Detroit, makes the following statement:

"'As an American citizen, Father Coughlin has the right to express his personal views on current events, but he is not authorized to speak for the Catholic Church, nor does he represent the doctrine or sentiments of the church'."

Cardinal Mundelein returned Dec. 4 from Rome where he attended the beatification ceremonies of Mother Cabrini, "The Little Nun", first United States citizen to be beatified.

NEVER SEEN HUSBAND-TO-BE

Liverpool, Dec. 12 (CP Cable)—Miss Amy Noble, 24, of Gillingham, Kent, is en route to Canada to marry an Ontario farmer she has never seen.

Miss Noble, a nurse, sailed in the liner Montrose Saturday after eight months' correspondence with Richard Orme, 30, of Stratton, Ont. Miss Noble sent her photograph and the farmer proposed and sent an engagement ring by mail.

SECRECY IMPOSED OVER TUNISIA

French Movements Keep Wires Humming Between Tunis and Paris

Tunis, Tunisia, Dec. 12 (AP)—The French high command today imposed secrecy over activities of the French forces in Tunisia.

Field commanders on the frontier of Libya, Italy's North African colony, have kept private wires humming between Tunis and the Paris War Ministry in constant consultation on defence plans.

The highly organized French Counter-Espionage Service operating among the 94,000 Italians living in Tunis increased activities after what police said was an attempt to burn the Italian Club building in Tunis yesterday.

Fascists Blamed.

Authorities said investigation indicated the fire was set by Italian Fascists in an attempt to provoke trouble. Secret police were ordered to do everything possible to block a well-timed "incident" which might be the signal for an increase of Italian anti-French agitation.

Police guards were kept stationed before Italian consulates and business offices throughout Tunis. The Fascist agitation led a group of Italian farmers living in the Cape Bon region of northern Tunisia opposite Sicily to file a request for French naturalization.

ALL NEWS TO ME SAYS MR. BLACK

Has No Intention of Resigning Seat for Col. Drew

Parham, Ont., Dec. 12 (CP)—W. D. Black, veteran Conservative member of the Ontario Legislature for Addington, said at his home here today there was no truth in reports he planned to resign to enable Col. George A. Drew, newly elected leader of the Provincial Conservatives, to obtain a seat in the assembly.

"It's all news to me," said Mr. Black. "I was elected by the people and will continue to serve them. I never heard of a proposal that I retire for Col. Drew."

(The Toronto Globe and Mail says in a newspage story today Addington is the "most likely choice" of Col. Drew for a seat in the legislature. The paper says Mr. Black "has been threatening to resign for a number of years".)

Don't Put Ashes On the Furnace Fire at Night

Do you bank your fire with a layer of ashes at night—or leave the fire-door of your furnace open, in order to check it? If you do, you are losing valuable heat—wasting coal—and possibly endangering your grates.

The best method of banking a fire at night is clearly explained in the book "FIRST AID TO BETTER HEATING," which the producers of 'blue coal' are offering free to all house-holders.

In this book, James Stewart, noted heating expert, gives clear directions for handling your furnace in the manner in which you will get the greatest heating satisfaction at the lowest possible cost. He tells how to choose the size of coal best suited to your particular furnace—how to light a fire—the best method of adjusting your drafts—and many more helpful hints. There is a special section on "Better Blower Operation."

A copy of this book, which may be the means of saving you many dollars, not only this winter but for years to come, may be had absolutely free from any 'blue coal' dealer, or by writing to 'blue coal', c/o 217 Bay Street, Toronto.

In reading print the eye depends mostly on the tops of words, as you can prove by covering the upper, and then the lower, part of a printed line.

Human Skeleton Uncovered Near Cherry Valley

Stated by County Coroner Dr. D. S. Lighthall to have been interred for a considerable length of time, a human skeleton was uncovered on Saturday on the farm of W. C. Haggerty at Cherry Valley.

The skeleton, lying approximately eight inches below the surface of the ground was discovered by John B. Haggerty and Harold Norton who were ploughing in a field, at the rear of the farm.

The bones were in a crumbly condition, but the finders and investigating officials had little difficulty in piecing them together.

The field was being ploughed for the first time and previous to this autumn when it was cleared of stumps and trees had been used as a wooded pastureland.

CHASED THROUGH HOUSES, CHURCH

Woman Who Left Police Station Discovered Under Church

Sturgeon Falls, Ont., Dec. 12 (CP)—Police here had a tough time when they started rounding up suspects Saturday as they investigated a shop break-in here. Michaud and Levesque's store was robbed of dry goods worth about $1,000 late Friday night.

As accommodations in the jail grew more and more limited, Mrs. Alida Levac, charged with vagrancy, was lodged in the Chief Constable's office for the night. She found an open door, and slipped out of the building. A constable spotted her as she crossed the street, and chased her through two houses and a church. He finally found her hiding under the church.

She was taken to jail at North Bay, where she will appear Thursday. Meanwhile another suspect, whom police arrested as he struggled with a large and bulging bag, was found to be carrying parts of a still and fined $100 and costs.

MUSIC

Organ Recital at Bridge St. Church

Sunday evening at 8.30 o'clock at Bridge Street United Church, Mr. Alec Gordon, organist of the church, gave an impressive organ recital before a large congregation. The program was wide in range and included a number of Christmas carols. Mr. Gordon who has earned a fine reputation as an interpreter on the organ rendered the program with his usual artistry.

The program follows—

Prelude and Fugue in E.... Bach
Le Coucou .... Daquin
"La Concertina", Humourous Suite .... (Yon).
"Resonet in Laudibus" from Cathedral Windows ....Karg-Elert
Bourree and Musette ..Chenoweth
"The Temptation" from Aus Dem Leben Christi ....Malling

MAYOR DAY SEES JOBS FOR MANY

Toronto, Dec. 12 (CP)—Jobs for several thousand unemployed men would be available if the Dominion and Provincial governments would contribute to Toronto's projected $22,500,000 civic works program, Mayor Ralph C. Day predicted today.

The plan embraces construction of a $15,000,000 sewage disposal plant, a north-south traffic artery east of Yonge street at an estimated cost of $5,000,000, and a downtown courthouse at $2,500,000.

The city, Mayor Day said, asks that the Province and Dominion contribute 60 per cent of the cost, leaving about $9,000,000 to be raised by the city. He felt Toronto would have no trouble raising its share of the cost.

The mayor said the sewage plant was urgently needed, as 20,000,000 to 30,000,000 gallons of untreated sewage were being pumped into Lake Ontario daily.

PICTON SCHOOL LOOTED; 2 HELD

Glendon and Arthur Farrington, of Hallowell, Charged with Theft

Picton, Dec. 12—Robbery of the public school at Waring's Corners, just west of Picton, Friday night, resulted in the arrest Saturday of Glendon Farrington and Arthur Farrington, of Hallowell Township, on theft charges.

The men are charged also with breaking and entering the home of Mrs. Amanda Gough Picton, and taking a quantity of bedding and other articles. The loot was recovered, and that from Mrs. Gough's home was identified by Mrs. Gough. Articles taken from the school included a block plane, jackknife, coping saw, disc, quantity of paint, three pairs of scissors, emery wheel, all of which were used for manual training in the school. The men will appear for trial Dec. 21.

OLD PLAYING CARDS

The legend that playing cards were first invented by a French courtier in order to divert the intention of his insane sovereign, is somewhat modified by a question put by H. T. Morley, who is said to possess the greatest collection of playing cards in the world, at an exhibition he recently opened in aid of Charing Cross Hospital, London. He asked:

"Where did the courtier get his symbols?" He pointed to a statue that had just been set up amid the 4,000 packs of playing cards he had loaned. They contained specimens from nearly all countries and all ages.

The statue designated was Ardhanari, a Hindu god that is half man and half woman, who holds in his and her) four hands four separate emblems—the sword, the ring, the cup, the sceptre—and these are the emblems that were on the first playing cards used in Europe.

With the inspiring aid of Mr. Morley, the expert from The London Times, who visited the show managed to write of what intrigued him in part as follows:

The English cards that are on view include some very valuable packs. The oldest is a Stuart pack of about 1680 bearing the name of the maker.

The rarest pack in the English section is, in Mr. Morley's estimation, one which was designed to illustrate the lessons that might be learned from the South Sea Bubble. Each card has a drawing, in the Hogarth style, of some incident in those processes by which fools and their money are parted.

There are other packs of a similar type, but with a map of a different English county on each card, and still others with stronomical information on them. These packs, it appears, were designed for teaching geography and astronomy.

The same idea is carried out in some of the French packs at the exhibition. Among them is a very rare pack, made about 1660, which illustrates "le jeu de la guerre" and is described as having been intended for teaching the principles of military science.

The German cards are more noteworthy for the quaint variations in the symbols of their four suits. The hearts, acorns, bells and leaves of today have had to fight for existence against such combinations as parrots, pinks, columbines and hares, or monkeys, lions, parrots and peacocks, or even frying-pans, shields, almsboxes and knives.

The cards of Italy and Spain, with their cups, swords, money and batons, are well represented, as befits these rivals to the distinction of having been the first cards used in Europe.

A SCENE OF DISASTER

The heavy loss of life in the accident at the Princess Colliery in Nova Scotia, brings to everyone the thought that accidents do take place in spite of the strictest attention to the most carefully prepared regulations. It is well-known that in countries where collieries are the backbone of employment of hundreds and thousands of workers, there is a tragic atmosphere in which the families of the workers live. They dwell in fear lest something happen and now and again their worst fears are realized, in spite of every possible effort to prevent accidents. Industry has done much to reduce the number of accidents and plants take pride in keeping their record clear. In some of them it is made an event of celebration to observe a year of operation without accident.

In the case of such a disaster as that of the Princess Colliery there is uncertainty for large numbers of families, represented at the place of the disaster by the workers. The awful suspense may end in the worst possible realization or it may be that the nerve-racked wife and family find that they have been spared a tragedy in their home.

The old refrain of "The Three Fishers", "For men must work and women must weep" seems to suit such a tragic atmosphere as pervades the scene of a great disaster.

Newspaper readers were shocked at the horror of the loss of life and feel for the victims and their relatives.

Modern relief measures in the case of such catastrophes are quick and thorough. Science, knowledge and equipment make it possible to save more lives through the very efficiency shown by the staffs and their equipment and by modern advances in medicine, treatment and surgery.

In great catastrophes such as natural holocausts of nature, as earthquake, storm and flood and coal mine disasters agencies immediately raise funds for relief of the distress.

THE PEDDLER

He is a ragged wind who walks
The dusty road when Summer ends.
He lets a richer harvest lie,
And like a lonely peddler bends
Beneath his burden. He must go
Bearing before the year grows older
The secret and amazing weight
Of ghostly things upon his shoulder:
Moth's wing, and the silver glaze
Of snake-skin shed, a blackbird's whistle,
The shadow of a broken fern,
The seed of dandelion and thistle.

Softly he takes them from his pack,
Lightly they dance before his breath:
He frees them, knowing that they are
No lighter than the touch of death;
Knowing the time is cruelly brief
When the meadow burns, and the wild geese
call,
When even before he gathers them
The leaves of the white birch fall.

BANK HOLD-UP MEN FACE A NEW PERIL — WOMEN SHOOTERS — but the women will need a little more practise to be effective on live targets. Miss Pauline Mullen, a member of the staff of the Bank of Montreal, Timmins, took a couple of pot shots with a revolver at a bank robber who held up the cashier and walked out with a satchel full of money. The robber ducked and the slugs entered the wall on a line with where his head would ordinarily be. Looks like Pauline is one of those hardy daughters of the north who, like the R.C.M.P., generally get their man—or make a darn good try.

GRAB GAME STARTED AT MUNICH bids fair to become a popular indoor and outdoor sport in Europe where the game of international bluff has worked wonders. Germany, Poland, and Hungary have whittled chunks from Czechoslovakia until that country is little more than a sliver. Italy now is yelling for chunks of France's North African possessions, taking the occasion of the visit of a high French diplomat in the Italian parliament to stage a demonstration of 'WE WANT TUNIS' in the hope, apparently, that noise, fuss and fury would throw a scare into the visitor, which would echo back on the Bois Boulonge and ensure Italy a Christmas present of a colony or two. Bluff is a mighty factor in a poker game, but sooner or later the bluff is called and it is well to have good cards when that occurs — so it is in diplomacy.

WHEN A NEWSPAPERMAN GETS INTO POLITICS HE IS APT TO FIND THE GOING ROUGH—for a newspaperman if he fails to agree with everybody, their pet ideals and hobbies, may inspire a certain amount of sourness on the part of individuals which gets even with the ballot. Deseronto Post man evidently has been trying to serve his community in the Town Council as well as with his newspaper—and finds hilmself on the outside looking in after the ballots are counted. Sez he, under the heading WE PERSPIRED! WE ASPIRED! WE RETIRED: "It would appear that five years experience and service is not enough or maybe too much) qualification for any aspirant for the mayoralty of Deseronto. So, it behooves us to gracefully bow out of the picture and say we have learned a lesson that POLITICS STILL PULLS MANY STRINGS IN THIS TOWN. Our first vote registered 200, our highest 274, and our lowest 125. Losing votes at the rate of 50 a year over a five-year period it would appear only a matter of another year or so and there would be none left. So, with no disappointments and no complaints we retire."........Continuing to dwell upon election experiences the Post editor has this:

"Declaring that he had been guided by prayer to qualify, Rev. A. H. Hoare stated he was more than surprised at the results of the poll on Monday which had given him a sweeping victory. The success was due to divine power, the result of prayer with God, the Mayor-elect told a packed Town Hall when the new councillors were heard."

Having been guided by prayer to qualify, the reverend should not have been so surprised at the outcome. And so, the preacher licked the editor, but did he not take an unfair advantage over the editor, preachers being notoriously more powerful prayers than those of the Fourth Estate? Indeed, it is worthy of consideration whether the election shouldn't be upset and the contestants made to fight it out on the level with eight-ounce gloves, with no horseshoes concealed under the leather—to a finish, a real stand up and drag out fight, no butting or knee work permitted and rabbit punches barred.

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton M.D.

Tell Your Physician All Your Symptoms

There was a time when our humorists liked to say, "The patient has had his tonsils and all his teeth removed but he still has his rheumatism." We do not hear this joke any more because practically every family has seen the very satisfactory results obtained by removal of teeth and tonsils in preventing further attacks of rheumatism although joints damaged by chronic rheumatism can hardly be expected to be free entirely of pain and stiffness.

Another joke on the medical profession was based on the 'foolish' questions the physician asked the patient—his parents' and grandparents' age when they died and any illnesses from which they suffered, did he wake up in the night and not go to sleep again readily; how far could be walk without getting out of breath, and other questions that did not seem to be related to the pain or other symptom of which he complained. This questioning or getting the 'history' of the patient before making the examination is not considered a joke any more because only the patient can accurately describe his pain or other symptoms. Thus a patient, much worried about his heart as it seemed to be beating too rapidly, visited a heart specialist. He expected the physician to immediately use the stethoscope, the sphygmomanometer (blood pressure machine), the electrocardiograph which records strength and regularity of the heart and the fluroscope which enables the physician to actually see the heart. Instead, the physician had him walk across the room and asked him how far he could walk at this rate without getting out of breath. When he told the distance that he could walk without getting out of breath easily, the heart specialist told him he had no heart disease, and to worry no further about it.

An examination with stethoscope, blood pressure machine, electrocardiograph and fluroscope was made, however, and the heart was pronounced normal.

Thus the simple question, "How far can you walk without getting out of breath?" gave the heart specialist the information that it was not the heart that was causing the symptoms.

When you consult a physician do not hesitate to tell all about your symptoms and answer his questions fully.

NEWS COSTS MORE

Since June, 1937, no fewer than forty-one daily newspapers in the United States have suspended publication, some by merger and six by reverting to weekly publication. The reasons in practically all cases have been the same, continually mounting cost of publication. It is a far cry from the day when a newspaper could be started with relatively little capital. Probably no business in the world has become as costly as newspaper production and today readers get far more for their money than ever before. It is amazing to contrast newspapers of today with those of twenty or even ten years ago.—Niagara Falls Review.

BOY'S HOBBY

There is a certain small boy who pursues a hobby which, for some reason or other, has made a great impression on us. He collects locomotive numbers. There is nothing particularly tangible about his collection—he merely copies down the numerals which he sees on the fronts of locomotives, copies them down into a small red leather notebook. Each entry is followed by a brief identifying note, as for example: "2457 — Katonah station, coming back from the country."

It is not necessary that he ride on the train pulled by the locomotive in order that the number be eligible for his collection. In fact, he doesn't even have to see the number himself—friends report numbers and he enters them in his book with eager care. Numbers which he gets from outside sources he likewise identifies with a brief note: "1956—Mr. Dodd, who went to college with Papa and got drunk and had to stay all night."

This boy, it seems to us, has the makings of a first-class collector. Someone tried to fool him once, gave him a phony number. He smelled a rat instantly and erased the number from his book, pending a checkup.—The New Yorker.

NEW HIGHWAY

Next summer there will be opened to Manitoba motorists and to tourists the longest and scenically the most interesting highway in this province, Route No. 10. Running for 427 miles from the Peace Gardens to The Pas, the new highway leads through the Turtle Mountains, across the Souris and Assiniboine valleys and the Riding Mountain, past Clear Lake, and along the flanks of the Duck and Porcupine mountains and the northwestern shore of Lake Winnipegosis.—(From The Winnipeg Tribune.)

How rapidly America has taken to drinking fruit juices is shown by the fact that in 1929 about a million cases of fruit juice were produced, whereas last year the production

He Remembers Laurier

Sir Robert Borden's autobiography, recently published, is being widely read and has attracted a lot of attention because it covers perhaps the most important period of the Dominion's history, including the war years, with their tremendous issues. Now we have another work, covering the same space of time, and by one who played a foremost part in the public life of his native Province of Nova Scotia and in the larger Canadian field at Ottawa. Hon. E. M. Macdonald, P.C., K.C., known to a host of friends and acquaintances throughout the country as "Ned", gives us "Recollections, Political and Personal," which start with early immigration days in the County of Pictou, Nova Scotia, but which are concerned chiefly with the thirty years between 1896 and 1926. It was in 1896 that Laurier came into power, and there is much about the great Liberal chieftain in the pages, for the author was on intimate terms with his leader and exchanged many letters, on public and private affairs, with him. Some of these epistles are published, and add greatly to the interest of this illuminating record of Mr. Macdonald's active years.

Few Canadian public men are better qualified to write a book of this kind than the author of these memoirs. Mr. Macdonald as a young man had experience in county politics, from which he learned much. From 1897 to 1904 he was a member of the Nova Scotia Legislature, and at the same time had connection with Federal affairs. From 1904 to 1917 and again from 1921 to 1926 he sat in the House of Commons, and for a few of those years he was a Minister of the Crown. As a lawyer he had a fine reputation and figured in numerous cases, civil and criminal. Some of the fascinating stories he tells in his book relate to trials and the actions of juries and judges in sometimes unusual circumstances.

It is in Dominion politics, however, that Hon. Mr. Macdonald finds most of the material for his "Recollections." The naval issue, Canadian Northern Railway loans, reciprocity, conscription, war graft, Maritime representation, party schemings, the fire in the House of Parliament, the big figures in the Cabinets and the characters among the private members, all come under his understanding eye. Although a confirmed Liberal, he does not let party feeling bias his judgment, so his record of events is fair and authoritative. Of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, of course, he was an ardent admirer, as was the Liberal leader's rival, Sir Robert Borden, in fact, Borden is quoted as saying: "The House never seemed the same to me after Sir Wilfrid died. What a delightful, lovable colorful character the old Liberal chieftain was!" Sir Wilfrid had vast knowledge of parliamentary procedure, an unfailing memory, broad principles, a grasp of detail, and commanding prestige and presence.

Mr. Macdonald accompanied Sir Wilfrid on a tour of the West, and then learned not only about the great strength of his character and his superb abilities, but felt the kindly and sincere qualities of the heart and mind, which, by their charm, caught and held the thousands of his fellow-countrymen who believed in and revered him. He charmed men and women of all nationalities by his eloquence and his keen devotion to Canada and her interests. He was equally at home with country people as with the most exalted here or over in London and Paris. On the Western tour Mr. Macdonald discovered that Laurier never wrote out his speeches, but thought them over and made notes of his argument as he went along, yet very often he did not use any of the notes while delivering his address. He could speak extemporaneously with very little effort, for his mind was stored with accurate knowledge on all questions of interest at the time. Some of these questions are with us yet, defence, for instance, and the Oriental question in British Columbia. When Prime Minister, Laurier organized a group of ex-ministers and others who were on the front benches to form a cabinet for consultation, and every measure that came up was considered and discussed at meetings of this gathering, with exactly the same method as would be followed in the proceedings of a regular administration. His habit was to state the proposition and ask the opinion of each indivdual as to what he considered the wisest course to take. He never indicated what his own view was until everyone had expressed his idea, and it was one of the interesting experiences to see how, when perhaps the real point and pith of the subject had been overlooked, he had the faculty, with unerring instinct, of putting his finger on the very crux of the question and suggesting the course to be adopted.

Canada's relation to the United Kingdom and its status as a nation was a matter for discussion then as now. For example, Mr. Macdonald quotes Laurier at the time of the Quebec Tercentenary in 1908 as saying: "We are reaching the day when our Canadian Parliament will claim co-equal rights with the British Parliament and when the only ties binding us together will be a common throne and a common crown." The Statute of Westminster, 1931, is confirmation of this foresight, the author holds. Again, he quotes Laurier in one of the debates on the contentious naval bill: "I am a Canadian first, last, and all the time. I am a British subject by birth, by tradition, by conviction; by the conviction that under British institutions my native land has found a measure of security and freedom it could not have found under any other regime." And in another place at the time in question: "If England is at war we are at war and liable to attack. I do not say that we will always be attacked; neither do I say that we would take part in all the wars of England. That is a matter that must be guided by circumstances, upon which the Canadian Parliament will have to pronounce and will have to decide in its own best judgment."

Among the anecdotes Mr. Macdonald tells is one respecting Sir Sam Hughes, war-time minister of militia, and Sir Clifford Sifton. The latter was quite deaf at the time, and one evening when Mr. Macdonald was dining in the Chateau Laurier, Sir Clifford came to him, handed him the speaking tube he kept for those wishing to converse with him, and asked him to come up to his room after the meal. Mr. Macdonald did so and was surprised to see Sam Hughes talking to Sir Clifford, asserting that Laurier was no good and Borden no better, and that what the country needed was a third party. He said he and his friends would rally around Sir Clifford if he would accept the leadership of a third party. Sifton sat in a rather sardonic way, smoking his pipe, for some seconds and then said abruptly, "No I can't do it." "Why not?" asked Sir Sam. "Because I am too deaf," replied Sifton. "Well," replied Sam, "if you won't go ahead and accept the leadership, will you support me if I go ahead and take it?" Sir Clifford smoked on and then said abruptly, "No. Can't do it." Sir Sam tried to reason but without success, and went out. "He is a queer fellow," concluded Sifton. Later on, Sir Sam met Macdonald and made disparaging remarks about Sir Clifford, saying the latter would never have been knighted had it not been for Sam himself.

There are studies of Bennett, Foster, Monk, Oliver, Fielding, Carvell and other parliamentarians, past and present, Mr. Macdonald generally summing up their characters well. Of Sir J. A. M. Aikins, the author says that although he was famous as a lawyer he was not a "Commons Man." For one thing, Sir James was always dropping into verse, like Silas Wegg. During a naval debate he concluded his peroration with:

> Aggressor, spare that tree!
> Touch not a single bough.
> In youth it sheltered me
> And I'll stand by it now.

Battleships and poetry, as it were.

In a foreword to "Recollections, Political and Personal," Hon. Geo. P. Graham, an old friend and parliamentary colleague, points out that Hon. Mr. Macdonald has brought to his aid authorities and historic references that are indisputable. The Senator recommends the memoirs to Canadians as the production of a great Canadian who is a big man among big men. The praise is not undeserved and the advice to read should be followed.

NUISANCE TAX

The dog tax is simply a nuisance tax, retained apparently because nobody ever has bothered to rid us of it. It is an inconsiderable source of revenue, having returned only $8,570 to the Ottawa treasury last year, but it is a source of extreme annoyance. Moreover the injustice of it is apparent, at least to every dog-owner. A five-pound canine that never leaves its owner's property unless on a leash must pay a tax, while the neighbors's cat roams the district free as the air, stalks birds, dashes through flower beds, yowls to the moon, and pays nothing.

It will be argued, perhaps, that without this tax the community would be over-run with dogs and life made miserable, but such a contention will not stand up. The laws against dogs running at large still would apply, wandering canines then and now would be liable to impounding. And as everybody knows who keeps a dog, the cost of a licence is merely one item in a considerable annual bill. But it is a discriminatory tax, an irritating tax, and no more justified than would be a tax on canaries or washing machines.—Ottawa Journal.

DOG'S LIFE

Dinner in regal style for Jo Chan and Nachi, high-bred visitors from Japan, caused quite a stir at Sudbury. Their meal, ordered by wire from Winnipeg, consisted of a basin of mutton broth, boneless fresh fish, and a pint bottle of milk—at a cost of $1.10. The travellers from the Land of the Rising Sun, near the end of a long journey by steamship and rail from Kobe, Japan, to New York, were two little Japanese spaniels worth $300 each. —Canadian Pacific Bulletin.

RECAPITULATION

The statement that "we recognize that the world today has become our neighbor" is one that should be taken to heart at home as well as abroad. Whether we wish it or not, we have an inevitable, if detached role in international affairs. During the crisis at Munich, few thoughtful persons believed that if a general war broke out America would be permanently immune. Since this is true, it is not amiss that we should let it be known what principles we consider worth defending.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

S. T. Legott of Belleville, president of the Laymen's Association of Hastings and Prince Edward District, spoke on the deliberations of the recent Diocesan Council attended by him and gave encouraging remarks for the welfare of the Marmora Association.

He was followed by Rev. W. Stocks, rector of Hastings, who with the aid of a splendid series of lantern slides, took his listeners on an imaginery trip through the Canadian Rockies. The guest speaker also complimented the Association on the nice atmosphere of its meeting. A vote of thanks to the lecturer and President Legott was then carried. Past President C. H. Buskard made an able speech in moving the vote of thanks.

A motion was also carried the Association attend St. Paul's, in a body at Evensong on Sunday.

Following benediction by Rev. W. Stocks, refreshments were served.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—
The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.
A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

Successful Bazaar Held At Frankford

Frankford.—The Guild of Trinity Church held a most successful bazaar and tea in the Parish Hall on Tuesday afternoon, December 6th. The fancy work tables were presided over by Mrs. George Arnott and Mrs. M. McLaren. Miss Eleanor MacRostie was in charge of the candy booth, while Mrs. Arthur Osterhout and Mrs. Albert Caskey conducted the sale of home cooking. Mrs. (Rev.) A. S. McConnell poured tea, while Mrs. E. E. Ketcheson, Mrs. H. T. Miller, Mrs. Wm. Todd and Miss Helena Frost assisted at the tea tables. In the evening a card party was sponsored by the ladies from outside the village.

Mr. and Mrs. Leo Murray and family have moved to Belleville.

Mr. Bob Coleman of the Bank of Montreal staff, Belleville, called on friends in town on Wednesday afternoon.

On Tuesday evening the Frankford Young People's Union and their debating team, Messrs. Hubert Foster and Lloyd Mitchell, motored to Grafton where they were entertained by the Young People of the United Church there.

The last meeting for the year of the United Church W. A. was held in Rose-Lowery Hall on Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Harry Slingerland presided. Rev. J. P. Lane led in prayer. Yearly reports were given by Mrs. J. M. Dafoe and Mrs. Harold Terry. Rev. J. P. Lane conducted the election of officers, resulting as follows:

President—Mrs. J. L. Hanna.
Vice-President—Mrs. Ada Bush.
Secretary—Mrs. J. M. Dafoe.

During the afternoon a gift of a woolen blanket was presented to Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Ketcheson in recognition of their recent fiftieth wedding anniversary.

The regular meeting of the Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Wm. Holmes on Friday, December 2nd, with an attendance of twenty-five. The president presided. The roll call was answered with "Reasons For Thanksgiving," the principal reasons being health and peace. Current events were well given by Mrs. W. Wickson.

Miss B. Jones, Belleville, was the guest speaker. She chose as her subject, "The Advent Season," relating her words to Rom. 15:4-14. In the rush of modern life we forget the true spirit of Christmas, which means 'Christ for the mass of people.' She urged all to prepare for the Advent season with Christian Service and to pray each day, "Use me in Thy service this day."

Readings were given by Mrs. J. Chisholm and Mrs. H. Jeffery. Christmas presents (10 cents) were exchanged. Letters of thanks from Mrs. Scea and Mrs. McCoy were read. Appreciation was extended to Miss Jones, also to Mrs. Holmes for her hospitality. Lunch was served and a social time enjoyed.

HOLLAND PREPARES

Singapore (CP)—Holland is hastening preparations for air defence in the Dutch East Indies. Three squadrons of new Dornier flying boats will shortly be stationed in the Molucca Islands.

New German substitute materials are plastics which resist certain chemicals and which replace copper in spring-house equipment at the spa at Neuenahr.

Instal Officers Of Tweed United Church W. A.

Tweed.—The December meeting of the Women's Association of Tweed United Church was held on Thursday evening with Mrs. S. B. McGee, past president, in the chair. Encouraging financial reports were given by Mrs. E. W. Jones, treasurer, and Mrs. M. Drinkwater, convener of the Flower Fund Committee.

Mrs. H. L. Morrison conducted the worship service. Mrs. P. Badgley read the Scripture lesson. Mrs. S. H. Connor sang a Christmas hymn, "No Room in the Inn." Prayer by Mrs. Morrison concluded this period.

The following officers for 1939 were installed by Rev. H. L. Morrison in a very impressive ceremony:

Hon. Pres.—Mrs. H. L. Morrison.
Pres.—Mrs. W. A. Beatty.
Second Vice-Pres.—Mrs. W. E. Bateman.
Rec.-Sec'ty—Miss M. Kerr.
Treas.—Mrs. E. W. Jones.
Cor.-Sec'ty—Mrs. S. B. McGee.
Organist—Mrs. J. O. Sager.
Flower Committee—Mrs. M. Drinkwater, Mrs. Morrison.
Parsonage Committee—Mrs. W. E. Tummon, Mrs. A. W. McGuire, Mrs. C. R. Porritt.
Kitchen Committee—Mrs. F. B. Foster, Mrs. McTaggart.

Mrs. F. B. Foster gave an excellent address on the life of Count Tolstoi, who was born in Russia in 1828 of German parents. He was a member of the Russian nobility and was reared in a fine environment. His noble nature rebelled against the life of his day. Following service with the Russian army in the Crimean War, he took up writing and wrote a number of very excellent works. Later he wholeheartedly supported a movement to free the Russian serfs. The world is deeply indebted to Tolstoi who died in exile at the age of 80.

Martin, an old cobbler—Evelyn Drinkwater.
Stephen, a street sweeper—Grace Reeves.
A gay, young soldier—Mrs. C. Barnett.
Poor woman and child—Mrs. E. Bateman and Margaret Bateman.
Small boy—John Morrison.
Small girl—Louise Morrison.
An apple vendor—Mrs. G. A. Robinson.
A street urchin—Alton Robinson.
A Jewish girl—Mrs. A. Davis.
Kalend singers—Mrs. S. H. Connor, Mrs. A. Davis, Ruth Foster.
Voice of the Christ—Mrs. H. L. Morrison.

Dr. W. A. Paul and Dr. J. A. Thompson of Tweed attended the Bay of Quinte Dental Convention at Belleville on Wednesday evening. Following dinner at the Queens Hotel, Dr. Paul presided at a discussion which followed in the Chamber of Commerce building.

Mr. Russell Ruttan was the winner of a three-storey Christmas cake at the Catholic bazaar.

Mr. Harry Austin attended the Provincial Conservative Convention in Toronto as representative of the local association.

Mrs. James Lamberton and Mr. A. J. Maynes were winners of prizes in connection with the Ogilvie Flour Mills' broadcast from Kingston, on Thursday.

Messrs. F. N. Beatty, S. R. Curry, Paul Rashotte, Stafford Cassidy, D. H. Morrison, T. E. Moffat, T. J. Calnan and Dr. J. A. Thompson attended a meeting of the High School Boards of Tweed, Marmora, Madoc and Stirling, held at the High School in Stirling on Monday evening.

The following officers of the Sodality of St. Carthagh's Roman Catholic Church were elected for the year 1939 at the annual meeting:

President—Miss Cecilia Quinn.
Sec'ty-Treas.—Miss Colleen La Fontaine.
Councillors — Misses Patricia Quinn, Mary Cassidy, Elizabeth Rashotte, Reta Ryan.
Organist—Miss Louise O'Leary.
Librarian—Miss Nora Rashotte.
Sacristans—Misses Dorothy McConnachie and Elaine Gehan.

An unsuccessful attempt was made to break into Kerr & Co.'s store on Tuesday morning. An axe was abandoned by the would-be thieves who were disturbed by nearby residents.

Mr. Matthew J. Johnson, resident of Tweed since June, passed away at Belleville General Hospital on Thursday morning following a brief illness with pneumonia. The deceased, who was a tinsmith by trade, was in his thirty-eighth year and is survived by his widow and three small children, Elmer, John and Jean.

The Young People's Union of Tweed was entertained at Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln Elliott's farm home at Lodgeroom on Monday evening. About fifty members of the organization attended the meeting and spent a very enjoyable evening.

Students Construct Trading Post In Miniature

Picton.—Many visitors are admiring the log "Hudson Bay Trading Post" just completed by the Junior Fourth Class of Mary St. School, pupils of Miss Marjorie Vance. The Trading Post is large enough for the children to easily enter it, and work inside. Since early fall, about nine trips have been made to the woods by the pupils, for body cedar logs, bark, moss, etc. It is of log construction, chinked with moss. The roof is of logs covered with large strips of bark. The windows are of oiled paper. Outside the post are hung real coonskins, muskrat traps, snowshoes, moccasins, etc. Inside on shelves are antique pottery jugs for sugar, molasses, beans, etc. There is even an authentic old whiskey jug. Muskets and old guns are hung inside. The antiques have been loaned to the pupils and the whole work reflects great credit to the teacher and pupils.

Mrs. Wm. Jones was able to return on Wednesday from P. E. C. Hospital to her home on Church Street. Although still ill, her condition shows improvement.

Miss Margaret Mulholland who had her tonsils removed in the local hospital early in the week, is making a good recovery at her home, Union Street.

Mrs. David Harrington is a patient in P. E. C. Hospital.

The singing of Christmas carols opened the meeting of the H. and S. Club in the Legion rooms on Thursday afternoon. The president, Mrs. Ern. Ward, presided. She announced that with $79.00 on hand the club would again furnish milk to needy schoolchildren, beginning after the New Year. Early in the year some undertaking would be underway to raise more money for this work.

Mrs. P. A. Scott next gave a very interesting talk on the highlights of the Book Fair, which she attended in Belleville.

Dr. Boudreau was guest speaker of the afternoon and held the rapt attention of the gathering, when he talked on "A Child's Religion." He chose his text from the poet Wordsworth: "But now 'tis little joy to know, that I am farther away from Heaven than as a boy." "A child is born with a body," said the speaker, "but it grows a soul." He made it plain that the home cannot dodge its responsibility in the religious training of a child. In the home the child gets his attitude towards God, his neighbor and himself. Parents must find the true balance between independence and control to be developed in the child. The speaker urged family unity in practises of faith. Many fine stories of the Bible were obtainable, to interest children in Bible reading. The speaker closed with a quotation from a wise mother, who said: "We have to take pains with our children, either when they are very young, or very old, and I prefer to take mine when they are young."

Mrs. Saunders and Mrs. Kemsley voiced the appreciation of the members to Dr. Boudreau for the very fine address. A vocal solo, "All Through the Night" by Miss Ruth Kelson brought the meeting to a close.

JAMES BRONSON

of Vida Seymour of Bancroft, who told posse leaders Friday she dreamed Bronson was asleep in a hay mow, awakening periodically but falling asleep again almost at once.

The posse, which reached a strength of 200 men, searched woods, fields and barns throughout the district since the disappearance. The Moira River was dragged in deep spots. Fortune tellers were consulted. The posse was about to abandon the search when news came, that Bronson had been found.

Mrs. Bronson, ill in bed following the birth of her fifth son, does not know her husband is in a serious condition or even that he disappeared. She was told he left suddenly on a business trip. Bronson is said to have suffered a minor heart seizure a few hours before he left for Madoc.

AGE OF SPEED

Biggleswade, England (CP)—Wm. Jordan, 86-year-old miller, charged with a traffic law violation, told the court he had been driving an automobile for 46 years and this was his first offence.

PRISON FOR HOAXER

Leeds, England (CP)—Admitting he had sent out a warning of the approach of enemy aircraft during the Czechoslovakian crisis, Henry Wood, 26, Post Office telephone operator, was sentenced to six months for effecting a public mischief.

W. M. S. Arranges Birthday Party For Miss McKeown

Rawdon.—On Tuesday, December 6th, the Woman's Missionary Society sponsored a delightful birthday party for Mrs. Sarah McKeown on her 85th birthday. The party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar McKeown with forty-two in attendance. The guests included all the members of the W.M.S. and friends.

The tables were daintily arranged and at the close of the dinner Mrs. John Holmes, Mrs. Allan Bailey and Mrs. Frank Jeffs were in charge of the ceremony of the birthday cake. During the day a quilt for Mrs. Ross Hoard was quilted.

In the afternoon, the president of the W.M.S., Mrs. Percy MacMullen presided over the following program and she extended birthday felicitations to the honored guest and also brought greetings from some of the women in the community who were unable to attend because of illness.

Mrs. Ross Hoard led in a few numbers of community singing. Mrs. Arthur Phillips recited "The Little Gray House"; Mrs. William Heath sang "When Song Is Sweet" with her mother as accompanist. Mrs. Cyrus Summers read a selection entitled "A Mother's Reward." Rev. J. E. Beckel spoke briefly. Mrs. Baldwin Reid read "I Love Old Mothers." Mrs. Percy Hubble sang "At the End of a Perfect Day."

Mrs. Frank Smith read the following address and Mrs. James Linn presented Mrs. McKeown with an electric lamp in white and silver trimming.

Mrs. McKeown, Mrs. Andrew Thompson and Mr. Edgar McKeown all graciously replied, thanking their friends for the lovely gift. All joined in singing, "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow" and the rest of the afternoon was spent in conversation and quilting.

The address follows:

Mount Pleasant, Dec. 6, 1938.

Dear Mrs. McKeown,—

We could not let this day go by without extending to you our congratulations and best wishes on the eighty-fifth anniversary of your birth.

In the years that you have lived among us you have won the respect and esteem of the entire community and we have learned to love you. We have recognized you as one of those women spoken of in the Book of Proverbs whose price is far above rubies and we know your children rise up and call you blessed.

There is an old Hebrew proverb which says "God could not be everywhere, therefore He made mothers." You have seemed just like a mother to many of us, especially to those of us who have lost our own mothers. Your friendly, sunny smile and your loving interest in us have made us feel that we can come to you with our troubles and find sympathy and understanding.

Looking on your bright face it is hard to realize that eighty-five years have passed since the blessing of your presence was given to your parents and during this time we know that you have known sorrows as well as joys.

May the richest blessing of the Master attend you throughout your journey here below and as you near life's sunset may His abiding presence ever be with you to bless and keep you.

Please accept this gift and may it serve as a permanent remembrance of sincere friends who will always love you.

On Tuesday evening, Mrs. McKeown's family, excepting one son Alfred, who resides in the West, assembled at her home on this auspicious occasion. During the evening they had a round of addresses eulogizing their mother and the family presented her with a lovely wool blanket in mauve and green.

WOULD GO ON HUSTINGS

tive leader, with the same object of using provincial forces and political organizations to control the National government. If they make these proposals I should be greatly surprised if Dr. Manion will accept their support on the terms in which it is offered."

Had the attempt succeeded "it would have had far-reaching and disastrous results," for a National government "controlled in the interest of two of the nine provinces" would be an "outright contradiction of Federal self-government" and a "political monstrosity."

The Federal government, silent heretofore despite "constant sniping and sneering from two provinces," cannot so continue "in the face of such dangerous underground plotting," said Mr. Howe.

All hopes of Mr. Mackenzie King that personal and party differences could be "eventually submerged" in the interests of National unity "seem now to have been destroyed."

Placed Before People

Ottawa was determined now to place the situation before the people, said the Transport Minister in expressing his confidence that "the people will not countenance this web of coercive propaganda.

At the same time the two cabinet members declared the government's readiness "to co-operate with all Provincial governments on matters affecting the general good," particularly regarding unemployment relief and operation of the Royal Commission on Dominion-Provincial relations.

Coldness of the two Provincial governments toward the Royal Commission was termed by Mr. Rogers "the narrow Canadian attitude of the Hepburn-Duplessis alliance."

"If Mr. Duplessis and Mr. Hepburn persist in their present attitude to that inquiry," said Mr. Rogers, "they can possibly frustrate for the time being its great national purpose. They can perhaps postpone the hope of constitutional reform and financial readjustment that are long overdue. Perhaps they want to do this, although in the interest of Canadian unity I sincerely hope not."

Policies Criticized

Denouncing the Federal Government's attitude toward Ontario, Mr. Hepburn declared recent federal policies were "half-baked, impractical and unworkable." The Dominion administration had been indulging, he charged, in "drifting" and "laissez-faire" and its ministers appeared to be "living in another age and generation altogether."

"If Ottawa wants to shirk its responsibilities, and to try everlastingly to saddle us with them, and if they want to make an issue of it, I'm prepared to go out on the hustings and fight them to the limit," he said. "If that's the sort of thing that Howe and Rogers are looking for, let them say so. All they have to do is toss the gauntlet down to me and they'll get what they're looking for — more, too."

His denial of a conspiracy was pointed.

No Attraction at Ottawa

"Let me say, here and now, there is no conspiracy whatever between Premier Duplessis and me. Ottawa holds no attraction for me. I have no intention or desire to go there. But that doesn't prevent me, as Premier of this province, and as an ordinary citizen and taxpayer as well, from pointing out that the credit of the Dominion—as the Globe and Mail (Toronto morning newspaper) has said— is such today as to cause serious alarm."

He hammered again at the Dominion government's refusal to seek United States co-operation that would enable Ontario to export surplus Hydro-Electric power. By the Dominion's stand, the province was losing $1,500,000 in revenue, Mr. Hepburn said.

"They were elected on a platform which included the recognition of unemployment relief as a national problem, but what they are contributing to relief in this province at the present time is less than the relief requirements in the city of Toronto alone, and when they blocked our projected water diversion schemes in Northeastern Ontario, they interfered grievously with the opening-up of great, inaccessible timber areas, with the establishment of industry, and with the carrying of a great measure of gainful employment to areas that could readily use it.

Asks Question.

"Who is it, I ask, who is guilty of non-cooperation? The people of this province well know, and Ottawa knows they know."

Mr. Hepburn claimed the Dominion government's farm employment scheme only tended to induce farmers to discharge their hired hands and hire new ones who would be paid by the government.

"I'm going to ask this simple question: What has the King government in its three and a half years, done to deserve the support of those who elected it in 1935? It's a strange mental attitude for Howe and Rogers, the two Maritimers, representing Ontario in the Federal Cabinet, to take, when they feel like the Lord of creation that they are above criticism."

Break Came in 1937.

Mr. Hepburn's fight with the Federal government broke into the open on June 3, 1937, when, speaking before the Canadian Life Insurance Officers' Association, he declared:

"I'm a reformer, but not a Mackenzie King Liberal any more and I'll tell the whole world that. And I hope he (Mr. Mackenzie King) hears me."

That same night he hailed Mr. Duplessis as "a great national character", adding: "I look forward to the day he will play an even more important part in the affairs of this Dominion."

At Buctouche, N.B., last night Premier Dysart of the New Brunswick Liberal administration said he had "no knowledge of any such alliance" and called Mr. Mackenzie King "the sanest leader of any party in Canada in many years." Premier Thane A. Campbell of Prince Edward Island said any plot against the prime minister "would not find favor with the Liberal party of Prince Edward Island."

Weddings

GIMBLETT—BURGESS

The marriage of Audrey Phyllis Burgess, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Burgess, 43 Dunbar Street, to Harry Curtis Gimblett, son of Mr. Richard Gimblett and the late Mrs. Gimblett of Oshawa, took place at two o'clock this afternoon at the home of Rev. L. S. Wight, who officiated. They were attended by Jean Burgess, sister of the bride and Wm. A. Holway.

The immediate relatives were entertained at the home of Mrs. Wm. A. Holway. On their return from a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Gimblett will reside in Oshawa.

SUMMERS—CLARKE

A pretty wedding was solemnized Thursday, December 8, at the home of the bride, Ranleigh Ave., Toronto, when Edna J. Clarke, only daughter of Mrs. Clarke and the late Edmund J. Clarke, was united in marriage to John Summers, youngest son of Mrs. Summers and the lae John Summers of Glasgow, Scotland. Rev. W. G. Clarke, uncle of the bride, performed the ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by J. P. Taylor, wore a gown of brocaded midnight blue taffeta, with matching doll's hat and carried red roses. Mrs. J. P. Taylor, cousin of the bride, was matron of honor, gowned in chartreuse green taffeta and carried red roses. The little flower girl, Shirley Taylor, was quaintly attired in yellow crepe and carried a nosegay of roses. The groom's brother, Andrew Summers, was best man. Following the ceremony, a reception was held. Later Mr. and Mrs. Summers left on a short trip. The bride travelled in a modish green frock with black accessories, and black coat with silver fox collar. They will reside in Toronto.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

The Philandering Husband

Dear Miss Fairfax:

For almost twenty-five years I've been married to my husband. We have a beautiful home and three lovely children. I helped my husband build up his business, and thought it a good idea for husband and wife to pull together. But now he has come to the point where he never takes me out or gives me any money for clothes. I've worn the same suit for four years, but as I take good care of my clothes, it is still wearable.

Two of my children will soon finish college, and I am proud of them. As for my husband, he seems to have lost interest in his own home, but wants to have affairs with other women—any old skirt at all will do. I've stayed with him on account of he children because I think they ought to have a home. Half the night I cry, while the rest of the family sleep.

He is at a point where he even tries to date my own sisters and my girl friends. What's the matter with men, when middle age creeps on them? He says he's going out when he's good and ready and if I don't like it. I know what I can do.

Home-Maker

There are men who make silly spectacles of themselves, when they feel they're getting old. They know it's their last call for dinner in the dining-car, and they're willing to be ridiculous if they can crowd in with the young fry for a moment longer. Look around, and you'll see them —dyed mustaches, loud neckties and all, trying to make dates with hard-boiled golders, while the wives who helped them make their fortunes go around in last year's hat and suit.

There's an old proverb to the effect that "The Lord doesn't pay all his bills on „Saturday night." Men such as your husband—who are disloyal to their families—get their desserts later on. The newspapers usually get the story. My advice is to stop crying over a man like that. Brace up and make companions of your children, and join in with their fun. Make their friends welcome at your home, and let them have parties.

A Matter of Etiquette

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Please settle this argument. Which side of the pavement does the man take when accompanied by two women? I will watch for your answer in the paper.

A. M. V.

Convention says that a gentleman, whether walking with two ladies or one, takes the curb side of the pavement, and that he should never sandwich himself between the two.

Gift Solution

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My boy friend's birthday is coming, and Christmas will soon be here, and I'm wondering what I could give him on both these days. Last year I gave him a bill-fold and a scarf. He has stopped smoking, so that lets those things out. Please help me by printing a list.

Olive

I've had so many letters along this same line, that I'm going to give general suggestions, as a help to all the girls. Nearly everyons goes motoring nowadays, so why not get him a thermos kit with space for lunch and hot coffee. They are useful when you want to go on a ride into the country, where lunch counters are scarce. A leather portfolio is good, also a brief case for his important papers; a reading lamp for his room. Books are always acceptable, but be sure to get something that he really likes. If he likes history, biography or travel, don't buy him fiction.

In cases where men smoke, these are acceptable gifts smoking stand, tobacco container, etc.; handkerchiefs, especially embroidered with monograms, also are desirable. If you know a boy very well, silk socks for evening or golf stockings for sport wear are good. If he plays golf, get him the much-wanted golf club he needs. A gift certificate, good for a certain amount in a certain store, is also good, if you happen to be the boy friend's wife.

The Clerk and the Boss' Daughter

Dear Miss Fairfax:

If a cat may look at a king, how about a humble clerk looking at his employer's daughter? I'm in love with the boss' daughter. It sounds like an old-time romance, but it isn't. The girl is modern and up-to-date and she has flirted with me furiously. I've been to their house several times on business and each time have seen the girl.

Once when her father was ill, I brought over some papers for him to sign, and while waiting downstairs for him to sign, she ran into the room, threw her arms around me and just about kissed me. When she discovered who I was, she pretended she was scared to death, and said she thought it was her cousin.

Of course, I knew it wasn't so, and said "Oh, yeah?" I really am wild about her, but I'll be darned if I'm going to let her amuse herself at my expense. I'm not in her set, and likely not to be. You know more about girls than I do— what do you thing of this?

Melancholy

Of course, if you really were melancholy, you wouldn't have written in such a jovial manner as your letter. I'm glad you had presence of mind to say "Oh yeah" when she tried that one about thinking you were her cousin. Don't lose your head, and who knows what might happen. I could name dozens of cases where, the employee married the employer's daughter.

Routing Rids Blackhead Menace

RUTH TERRY
Regular care keeps her complexion clear

By HELEN FOLLETT

WHEN blackheads are persistent, try a liquid cream instead of a heavy one for the bedtime beautifying session. Begin with a rousing scouring with crackling soap suds and have the water fairly hot. Use the washcloth first, then friction the flesh with the fingers, picking it up in little nips to arouse the blood streams. Hold the cloth close to the face so the tissues will have a steaming to soften the plugs in the pores.

Dry the face gently with a soft towel. To rub it vigorously is to take a chance of disturbing the tissues, making the skin sensitive. It is only a step from blackheads to acne. The wall of the pore breaks, germs and germesses step in and a pustule appears. Many a young thing fancies that rubbing the face with a coarse towel will scat pimples away. It is a mistake. Pimples are small boils and should be treated gently.

After the face washing, go over the skin surface with a cloth dipped in a liquid cleanser. Remove it with cleansing tissues. In the morning use clear tepid water, more of the cream. Fluff on your paint and calcimine and you'll be prettied.

Tapering fingers are a beauty asset. If yours are square and blunt, make it a practice to massage them twice a day.

Place a finger and thumb on the centre of the finger, smooth upward, pressing the finger to a point. In France they put toy clothes pins on finger tips to make them slender and tapering. Fancy that!

Bony hands can be made plumper by the free use of lanoline or cocoa butter. Put it on at night after the hands have been washed thoroughly with soap and water and well dried. Slip on large cotton gloves. Slender hands are all to the good, but those that show up the knuckles won't win any beauty laurels.

DIARY NOTES OF FASHION MODEL

Water-proofed coat.

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

I REMEMBER telling you all about the wonderful time we had at the play, but I didn't get the opportunity to tell you about myself. Well, Bill and I have reconciled! So here I am, with a brand new business career and my beau back again.

I just had a feeling that things would happen on the night of Consuelo's show. Well ,Bill looked grand in his new dress clothes and he has never been nicer. Everyone admired him so and I just had to admit that he was something extra special.

Although we were together all evening, it wasn't until we were well into the big party, after the show, that he was able to get me into a corner by myself. He picked out a nice spot, too, a little alcove in the winter garden with a fountain, flowers and singing birds in gilded cages. He was very frank and said that he had been definitely in the wrong, that he had learned how fearful is the price one pays for an unwarranted outburst of jealous rage, and how unhappy he had been through the years. It was really the first frank talk we had ever had.

Go on as Before

We talked things over and decided to go as we were before, but with not definite date for marriage in mind. But, somehow, I think if things go well, we'll be married next autumn. Why so long Well, I want to set myself first in my work and I want to have some money saved up. There's nothing like money troubles for destroying marital happiness. After all, I've been used to nice things all through the years, and I want to keep on having them.

I'll be able to keep up my work, too, since I don't have to punch a timeclock every day. Not that I had to do that at the office, but I felt when I was on the job that I should report at nine o'clock along with the rest of the general staff. But now I can make my hours, so long as I get my work done and do not neglect a task.

Se's Happy Now

I am so happy about everything. It's strange how sometimes in life everything is dark, one feels walled in, and then, suddenly, a door opens and the sunlight of happiness streams in, and there stretched before one is the wondrous world. Well, that's just how I feel these days. Everything was dull, just routine, when suddenly I get a marvelous job, and now I'm deep in romance again.

I'd like to take a long walk in the country and wear this smart coat. But it is good for casual town wear, too. The fabric is water-proofed and has a vague plaid in green and blue on a deep bordeaux red ground. The coat is fitted to the waist and the skirt has a slight flare. It has horizontal pockets in one with seaming at the breast and two slanting slit pockets at hips. It's warm enough for a real cold day.

Your Christmas and You

Inexpensive and Imaginative Gifts

In these days of limited budgets many people make a point of using their imaginations in sending inexpensive remembrances that register special thoughtfulness. One lovely Christmas candle in a white metal tray. Or a box of fragrant bayberry candles. Or one or two packages of lacey paper doilies. Or, for children, a box of gummed paper cutouts . . . . . stars, moons, planets, comets and the like . . . coated with phosphorescent material, so that, when they are pasted on the walls, they glow when the lights are turned off.

Some people make it a charming habit to send . . . . .or better, to leave at the door or to deliver on Christmas morning . . . .a Christmas wreath or branches of holly or other Christmas greens. You can send a mantel decoration, of Christmas greenery. Or packages of monogrammed matches. For a hospitable fireplace, there is a box of brightly-burning "dust" to spread on the logs, or a cradle of faggots. Or a plant in a gay metal pot. Or a package or box of tea, gaily-tied.

Tomorrow—Special Gifts

How to Address a Widow

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

How should I address Christmas cards to a widow? I have had many arguments about this, and I would be very grateful if you will clear up this point.

Tom

We address . . . .or should address. . . . . . Christmas cards to a widow precisely as we addressed any envelope to her when her husband was living. A widow should, if she knows what's what, retain all forms of her name and signature as she used them when her husband was living. She is still Mrs. John Robinson and the envelope containing the Christmas card should be so addressed.

For good measure, let me say this: women who are married or who have been married, avoid, as much as possible, if they are careful about social details, the use of the first name with Mrs. That is, a married woman and a widow use Mrs. John Robinson. A divorcee drops her husband's first name, and in its place uses her maiden surname . . . . .Mrs. Allen Robinson.

Delivering Gifts

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—Will you please tell me the best way to deliver my Christmas presents to my friends? I am living in a small town.

2—What kind of card do you advise in case I should have to send one with my gifts?

T.

1—The most charming of all ways to deliver Christmas presents to our friends is, I think, the personal delivery of them on Christmas morning. But this is a gracious trip which most of us cannot make. Usually distances are too great. Since you live in a small town, I suggest that you do this, if it is convenient. Do not ask to see your friends ——just leave the packages, gaily tied, at the door. There is something charmingly personal about this.

2—Enclose a rather informal Christmas card one on which you can write an informal, personal message of good wishes. The card that we enclose with presents should not be in any way formal, for the fact that we are sending gifts registers too personal a gesture. If you do not wish to send a card you might enclose with your gifts a note of good wishes for a happy Christmas.

At The Theatres

AT THE BELLE

"SUEZ"

As the audience began filing out of the theatre the hubub of voices paid eloquent tribute to the production genius of Darryl F. Zanuck. The 20th Century-Fox vice-president, who is already known for many of the screen's most memorable achievements is said to have poured all the resources of his company into "Suez." As a result the picture has so many spectacular elements that people of the most divergent tastes found themselves in complete accord in declaring "Suez" stirring entertainment.

Some were impressed by the amazing Ferdinand de Lesseps, who dreamed of tearing continents apart to join the Mediterranean with the Red Sea that ships might sail the desert in a short route to the East, sought vainly by such heroes as Columbus and Magellan. Driven by the love of two women, de Lesseps strove mightily against the choking sand of the Sahara, crushed the wild Bedowin, and faced the fury of the devil-wind—to wrest from the desert the waterway that today is the jugular vein of the world.

Others found themselves captivated by the great performances of Tyrone Power, as de Lesseps; Loretto Young, as Eugenie; Annabella, as a waif of the desert; and the host of stellar players, including J. Edward Bromberg, Joseph Schildkraut, Henry Stephenson, and others.

Greatest of all, perhaps, was the terrifying simoon. Twisting, torturing, all destroying—the devil-wind of the desert roars across the screen with a savage fury that makes it one of the most unforgettable spectacles ever seen on film. Levelling everything in its merciless path, the storm is Nature's last mighty effort to stop de Lesseps' great work—and Nature loses.

For sheer spectacle "Suez", is unsurpassed. The Suez Canal was reproduced—a Hollywood miracle! We see the fabulous palaces of desert princes, gay with the swirling skirts of Egyptian dancing girls. We gasp at the devastating Bedouin raid and the sight of a dynamited wall thundering down on hundreds below. We thrill to Disraeli's historic plea before England's House of Commons and rejoice in the ceremonious and glittering opening of the canal, when an Empress bestows the Legion of Honor on the man she loves.

It is his ill-starred romance that makes de Lesseps so human a figure in all the magnitude of achievement. One cannot help but share the anguish of a man torn between two women—knowing the pitiful, heroic sacrifice of one and the smoldering fires in the heart of the other.

Philip Dunne and Julien Josephson wrote the screen play of "Suez" based on a story by Sam Duncan. Allan Dwan directed, with Gene Markey associate producer.

"Suez", is one of the Movie Quiz $250,000 contest pictures.

A very interesting Belle Newsreel and "Glass Slippers," a cute and cunning comicolor cartoon precede the feature.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Life Begins With Love"

The "Seventh Heaven" comedy romance of 1938 starring Jean Parker and Douglass Montgomery with Edith Fellows, "Life Begins with Love" at the McCarthy theatre, advance press reports, claim for this gay adventure of youth written especially for the screen by Dorothy Bennett that it is an entirely new type of entertainment that actually makes one imagine that they have joined with the cast on the screen in living recklessly in breath-taking escapades, as daring as only young lovers can be when they battle to wrest happiness from this mad age. "Life Begins With Love" is the most vivacious comedy of modern youth that ever made audiences gasp, "Oh, my Goodness!" It is most certainly one of the very few pictures that never has a dull moment as the Hollywood reporters put it "It starts with a bang and ends with a roar flashing across the screen an everlasting stream of mirth and thrills".

The McCarthy Theatre short subject programme in advance of the above laugh-hit has been carefully chosen to give all patrons a show that will please them from beginning to end.

PRESENTATION

North Lakeside.—A very pleasant evening was enjoyed on Tuesday, December 6th, when over sixty neighbours and friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Chase to honour their married son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. F. Warren Chase. The evening until 9 o'clock, was passed by visiting, then Mr. and Mrs. Chase were called to be seated at a table laden with gifts. Miss Mary McConkey read the following address:

Dear Warren and Audrey,—

We, your friends and neighbors of North Lakeside, are indeed happy to meet you, who are just beginning your married life. We extend to you our best wishes and congratulate you on the venture you have begun.

You, Warren, have always lived in the neighborhood and we have found you to be a true friend and a loyal neighbor. We are glad you have brought your bride to live among us.

To you, Audrey, we extend the hand of welcome and hope that you may not feel as a stranger but as one of us.

We ask you to accept these gifts as a slight token of our friendship and may your coming years be full of happiness and prosperity.

Signed on behalf of the community by

John Jinks,
Howard Watt.

Many fine gifts were then unwrapped and all were thanked for the lovely presents they had brought.

At 10.30 lunch was served after which dancing was enjoyed until after midnight. The guests upon leaving for home, wished Audrey and Warren much happiness and they in turn were invited to come again and visit them in their new home.

What of Vitamins?— Pellagra and Vitamin B/2

While we are on the subject of vitamins, and before we leave the vitamin B group we were discussing yesterday, I think I should have something to say about the vitamin which has been called B/2, or sometimes Vitamin Nine.

It is interesting to note that this Vitamin B/2 differs form B/1, which we discussed yesterday, in that it is not destroyed by heat, but is soluble in water.

The great value of this vitamin has been demonstrated in the Southern state where the disease pellagra used to levy such a terrible toll of lives on the poorer people.

Pellagra is a disease which is characterized by skin eruptions and diarrhoea; usually before death takes the victim, there is a history of a brain condition. That great scientific foundation, the Rockefeller Institute of New York, spent a great deal of time and money tracking down the cause of the disease. They found that, like beri-beri, pellagra is caused by deficiences in the diet.

They found that these people of the South subsisted on a diet composed of pork and corn meal, for the most part. At that time very little milk was consumed, and vegetables were a scarce article. As soon as they got the people to drinking milk, to growing and eating vegetables, the ravages of pellagra were reduced tremendously.

The Institute's scientists found that it was lack of Vitamin B/2 that caused this scourge. Yet it is found in fresh meat, milk, fish, vegetables, grains, peanuts and yeast. It is not destroyed, by ordinary heat so it is found in the following canned goods: salmon, corned beef, chicken, haddock, peas, tomatoes.

This vitamin isn't stored in the body. It is up to the individual, therefore, to make certain that his body gets a steady supply of it from his diet. Signs of deficiency is often shown by an upset digestive system, by body rashes. The skin often seems to thicken, often the tongue and the mouth will be sore and irritated. Children are apt to show a loss in weight and strength when there is a deficiency in the vitamin. Very often the child will look underfed.

A large number of doctors firmly believe that children whose diet is strong in Vitamin B/2 will not contract infantile paralysis. I can't say for certain that this is the case for I haven't noticed it particularly in my practice, as we do not have any cases here of this particular disease, and the people live on simple homegrown food. But I do know this—a child whose strength and resistance is kept up with the proper vitamins certainly is in a much better position to resist that and all other diseases, and it is a very easy precation to take.

This Vitamin B/2 or Vitamin Nine has been called "the poor man's vitamin" because it is so commonly lacking in low-cost diets. These diets often have too much cereals and fats and in these there isn't enough of this particular vitamin.

How to Keep 'Em at Home

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

DO YOUR children leave home for the homes of their friends? If they do, it may be because home isn't what it should be, a place where they can "putter" and play.

Psychologists say that children learn all sorts of desirable traits when they are allowed to share in the household tasks. One of our leading progressive schools found that children liked best, not their expensive gymnasium, but the kitchen.

It may be hard on mother, but the trend seems to indicate teaching junior and sis to cook. The young ones may just as well learn a little thrift, economy and health values while they are about it. They may just as well learn to select the proper foods—and to eat the fruits of their labors. Stuffing dates is an easy kitchen lesson; making simple drinks is a good trick, too. Simple candies and cookies can continue from there, with the "diploma" course up to you.

To teach the children to make spiced dates, add cinnamon to sugar; or add cocoa to the sugar for chocolate flavor. For some nice stuffings that the children can easily prepare, cut one-quarter pound marshmallows into quarters with wet scissors. Stuff each date with a piece, leaving cut side up, then dip in shredded cocoanut. Or to one-third cup peanut butter add slowly five tablespoons fresh orange juice and one-half teaspoon grated orange rind. Stuff dates and sprinkle with chopped salted peanuts.

Easy to Prepare

Banana-orange milk shake is easy for the children to prepare. Slice a fully ripe banana into a bowl and beat with a rotary beater or electric mixer till creamy; press through a medium mesh wire strainer with a spoon. Add one-half cup each cold milk and orange juice, one-half teaspoon sugar and mix thoroughly. Serve at once. It makes one large or two medium drinks.

Beginner's muffins call for one cup sifted flour, one-half teaspoon salt, one-quarter teaspoon soda, one teaspoon baking powder, two tablespoons sugar, one well-beaten egg, two tablespoons melted shortening or oil, two tablespoons sour milk or buttermilk, and one cup thinly-sliced bananas (two bananas). Sift together the flour, salt, soda, baking powder and sugar. Combine the egg shortening, milk and sliced banana. Stir until banana is broken into little pieces. Combine liquid and dry ingredients, stirring only enough to dampen all the flour. Bake in well-greased muffin tins in 400 degrees F. over 30 to 35 minutes. It makes four large or eight small muffins.

Dirndl in Disguise

By PRUNELLA WOOD

Some think the world is made for fun and frolic, and so do you, especially if you have a wide-skirted party dress like this one designed by Henrietta Moss.

The vermilion girdle, with gold soutache braid top and bottom, shows off the tiny waist, and the puffed-up sleeves adds to one's impudence.

Velvet bows wouldn't be amiss in your hair, but don't make the mistake of wearing earrings, too.

Watch that corselet waistline. The slimmest young thing needs a girdle to score with it.

Normal Play Life For Lonely Child

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

I HAVE so strongly and so frequently emphasized in this column the desirability of free play by children of the same age, as a means of furthering mental health and personality, that I sometimes fear I might have caused some parents to become unduly worried.

Fortunately, many parents think for themselves. One keen mother, for example, wrote me that I have generalized too freely on this subject of socializing children. She reminded me that a child who has long been an invalid, or the crippled child, just because of his handicap may develop certain compensating traits, even becoming more lovely.

A Good Point

She made a good point and I'm glad she wrote me so. You and I are reminded of Robert Louis Stevenson, always sickly as a child, who never could remember, as he said near the end of his life, when he had ever enojyed a day of perfect health. It also recalls the hunchback, Steinmetz, wizard of the electric engineering field, and Theodore Roosevelt, the asthmic boy who could not play normally before the age of about 12. And there's the lifetime invalid who is the charm of hundreds who are well.

Although the odds are against the physically handicapped child who must miss the usual free play with many others of his age, his case needs not be hopeless socially. And blessed are the parents and teachers who help him enjoy his greatest possible development.

It's the child, however, who is not physically handicapped, or who has been but temporarily so, whose personality is endangered if he does not have ample early or later practice at mixing in free play with those his age.

Lacked Normal Life

Scores of young men and women, who write me about their inability now to find social satisfaction, testify to the lack of normal play life earlier.

I often wonder about the child on the ranch, miles and miles from any playmates, especially as I travel through Montana nd the Dakotas. Even he may gain much that other children miss. While his parents should lose no reasonable opportunity to go with this child to visit in home with other children, I hope no mother in a lonely place allows herself to grow distressed. Thousands of city children in "good families" would be fortunate to have such an opportunity for gaining self-reliance and resourcefulness.

Solomon's Pen Picture of the Good Wife as Modern as High Hair Do

In these times there's no dirth of information, education, advice, counsel and guidance to the young people on the subject of happy marriage. While nothing has been added to the wisdom of Solomon, the wisdom is being served up in pill doses for subway readers; in dessert dishes for the leisure ladies that can linger over their printed pages; also it is being spoon-fed to college students out of textbooks in lecture classes.

The modern wife can't excuse herself for a washed up marriage on the ground that she was ignorant of men and wedlock, nor on the ground that nobody told her what to expect and how to behave when she didn't get it. Everybody is telling her. While in olden days she had to read her Bible and sit in the pew for the preacher to expound it, in order to know what was required of the good wife, she can now pick up the morning paper and while she's drinkink her coffee read the review of the latest book which describes "Twelve Ways to a Happy Marriage."

Solomon said it first when he put the responsibility for a happy marriage largely on the wife and remarked that a husband who picked a good one wouldn't take a million for her, though he measured the price in terms of rubies rather than in dollars. And he told us what a good one was too; describing her as being well groomed and well dressed, a fine housekeeper; a hard worker, practical, economical, provident and charitable—a woman to be proud of.

While his picture of the ideal wife was distinctly on the distaff side he evidently approved of her turning an honest penny and making investments(separate from her husband) with the pin money. He suggested that real estate was a safe investment and thought when she'd bought the lot she should raise some foodstuffs—fruit perhaps.

Solomon set great store by the fact that the good wife would never let her husband down; never arouse his jealousy or suspicion nor tempt him to oggle other women in retaliation. He gave her points for common sense, for being a good conversationalist and entertainer saying something every time she opened her mouth yet always in a kindly spirit. More points for holding her husband with a light rein.

She was not a millstone about his neck, nor a clinging vine nor a henpecker. She attended to her job and was perfectly willing for her husband to go out and visit with his friends. There weren't any clubs in those days so the men foregathered by the city gates to have their comfabs. It was understood in the community that her husband was among those present when the roll was called.

Of course the good wife's last days were better than the first having made a shining success of her life. Her husband adored her and the children followed suit. Why not? she'd worked hard to make her marriage a success, been a good companion to her husband, made him believe in himself, helped him to get ahead. Consequently the home life had been happy and husband and children gave her credit which is all any woman asks of life when the final accounting is made.

Novél Ideas For Xmas Gifts

By ELEANOR ROSS

HOWS that gift list getting along? Hope you got a good start and have already snared some attractive items for your favorite friends and relatives.

Never were there so many lovely things to be had, articles that combine the practical with the beautiful. If it is a surprise gift you are looking for, what about treating your favorite hostess to a set of those mellow electric door chimes, with perhaps another set in a different tone for the back door? These are so easily installed, and it is the sort of thing that one is always promising oneself to buy, but which one seldom does.

Or how about some nice door knockers for the bedrooms? These come in various styles to harmonize with the type of house and room, from colonial brass ones to chaste modern designs. It is nice to have the first name of the room occupant engraved on the knocker, for an added personal touch. A young girl would be so thrilled by such a gift.

A Fireside Gift

If the family likes to gather round the hearth, then think up a fireside present. It might be a handsome hassock, a pair of bellows, a huge hammered brass box to hold those huge fire-starting matches, or it might be a pine bucket hold ing that lovely powder, which when strewn over the logs gives off such beautifully colored flames. Or maybe you'll want to splurge and treat a dear friends to a whole new fireside ensemble. They come in styles to match every type of hearth and are surprisingly inexpensive this year.

For the colonial house a nice Cape Cod lighter with tankard, torch and tray, and a gleaming brass coal scuttle, would be a present that always would be treasured and used.

Hostesses always are grateful for gifts that make entertaining easier. So a set of crystal ash trays, together with a matching crystal-lighter, is sure to make an appreciated gift. Or a set of plates that have a well for a tea cup would not come amiss. These come in lovely china with a deep border of color and a handsome floral motif on plate and inside the cup. The tea addict would like a handsome tea caddy, and these come in silver or Sheffield plate, beautiful reproductions of fine old pieces. Or a browse in an antique shop may reveal a fine old piece that just needs a good cleaning to shine forth in all its mellow beauty.

Games as Gifts

The hostess, too, will relish a supply of the newest games, for nowadays games furnish the excuse for many a jolly gathering. There are all sorts of intelligence tests and information games that are amusing, as well as other new games of skill or chance.

A line or so ago, we mentioned antique shops. Browse around if you have the time, and the chances are that you'll get ideas for that difficult name on your list. You may come across lovely old ivory or china figurines, just what is needed to fill a niche or space on a shelf or table. It might be a lovely old ivory fan, or perhaps an old comb or hair ornament set with paste—the sort of thing that is so in demand just now with the upswept hair-do. All we know is that we devoted two whole days to snooping in such shops in various parts of New York City and we came away with veritable treasures.

There was a time when Canada paid good money to attract settlers. But not today. We will not even let in British immigrants. The reason, of course, is tragically plain. We can no longer say to new settlers: "Make good on the land, as your pioneer predecessors did or go hungry." We have set up a system of "relief" which tempts these settlers into the towns where the various governments combine to keep them in degenerating idleness.—Montreal Star.

An Adventure in Shadowland

Maybe Punch Can't Go Because He Can't Walk

By MAX TRELL

"Would you like to take a walk?"

"AH, GOOD evening my dears," Mr. Punch, the puppet, said as Knarf and Hanid, the shadow-children with the turn-about names, walked into the playroom.

"Good-evening, Mr. Punch," the two shadows replied. "Would you like to take a walk with us?"

"To be sure I would. There's nothing in the world I like better than a nice brisk walk, especially on a fine moonlit night like this. But you must walk briskly. Will you promise me that?"

Must Have Stick

"We'll walk as briskly as you like. Let's start right away," said Knarf.

"Yes, of course—right away. But first I've got to find my—find my—" Mr. Punch was looking all over for something.

"Find what, Mr. Punch?" asked Hanid.

"My walking-stick. I can't walk without my walking-stick. My goodness! it's lost."

So Hanid and Knarf began helping Mr. Punch find his walking-stick. They looked in all the corners of the room. Finally Mr. Punch said: "Well, never mind. I'll do without my walking-stick this time."

"Hoo-ray!" shouted Knarf, "Now we can start."

"Yes," said Mr. Punch. "I'm all ready except that —dear me, I do need a hat, don't I? I can't go walking without a hat."

"Where did you leave it?" Knarf said, feeling very disappointed again.

"Why, it was hanging on a peg somewhere."

Once more the shadows helped him to look. But they couldn't find any sign of Mr. Punch's hat.

Go Without It?

"Well, I'll do without my hat," he said at last. "Walking without a hat will be fun. And now I really am ready. H'mm—" he added the next instant. Knarf, who had already reached the door, stopped suddenly.

"Have you forgotten something else?" he asked in alarm.

"Just my—ha-ha—just my shoes. I don't seem to see them on my feet. That is strange, isn't it? I guess perhaps I'd better wait right here until you come back. Then you can tell me how much you enjoyed it!"

Marriage Meddlers -:- A Sequel to "Married Comrades"

By ADELE GARRISON

SYNOPSIS: Determined to outwit Philip Veritzen, famous producer in his efforts to keep his son, Noel, and the latter's wife, Mary, estranged, Madge Graham has arranged for a secret reunion of the young couple at a New York hotel, nearby the one where she and Mary are staying while she is coaching Mary for a leading role in a play being produced by the elder Veritzen. Madge and Mary, followed constantly every time they leave the hotel by detectives thought to be hired by Veritzen, are all ready to depart and are enlisting the aid of Mary's nurse, Miss Whitlock, to help them deceive the hotel employes and elude the trailing detectives. Seeing the nurse's surprise at being asked by Madge if she could leave the hotel, Mary "dee-doo-ces" that Madge merely wants her to mislead the spies before she and Madge depart.

"You are a 'dee-doo-cer'," I told Mary, laughing at her imitation of Katie's crowning absurdity. Then I turned to Miss Whitlock.

"Here is what I have planned," I said. "You will call a taxi for yourself and ask for a bell boy. When he comes up, give him this luggage of ours, and follow him downstairs. When you are in the taxi, tell him to take you to one of the department stores. When you are well away from the hotel, change your direction, tell him you haven't time to stop at the store as you intended, that it is later than you thought, and tell him to take you to the Pennsylvania station instead. When you get there go through the station to the Long Island side. Go into the women's waiting room, and stay there until we come. Can you do that at once?"

"I only have to get my hat, coat, gloves and purse," she returned imperturbably. Rising, she started for her room.

"She's the world's best bet, isn't she?" Mary whispered as the nurse closed the door of her room behind her.

Nurse is Ready

"Pretty nearly," I assented, and then waited until in a minute Miss Whitlock returned, garbed for the street.

"Shall I telephone for the taxi now?" she asked.

"In a minute," I told her. "Before you do, I want you to make sure that you have your story ready when you return here."

"When will that be?" she returned with a smile.

"As soon as we have met you at the station, and are safely away. Then you will come back here and, stopping at the desk, say to the clerk that I asked you to give him a message which I was too rushed when I left to deliver to him. You see, as soon as you are gone, Mary and I will take our purses and go out of the hotel as if we were simply going for a walk or shipping. We will do some fancy dodging and shifting, and hope to connect with you at the station some time without a detective on our trail."

Mary Lauds Scheme

"Oh, boy! what a swell scheme!" Mary exclaimed admiringly, and Miss Whitlock seconded her swiftly.

"It sounds very good," she said, "and I'm sure you'll succeed."

"I hope so," I said gratefully. "And now for the message I want you to give the clerk."

I paused to marshal my thoughts so that I might make the matter clear to the nurse without any loss of time.

"Tell him," I said after a a little, "that Mrs. Veritzen has not been well for several days, and that her aunt decided very suddenly to take her away for a few days to friends of hers down on the Jersey coast. Tell him there is no telephone there, but any very urgent message can always be relayed through my attorney who is the only one who always has my address."

"My sainted great-aunt's first husband!" Mary ejaculated. "What a yarn! what a yarn! Wouldn't I like to be a mouse in the wall when my revered papa-in-law is handed that message upon telephoning me, as he may do any minute. Which reminds me, darling. We'd better fly. Suppose Papa should telephone while we're still here?"

Would be Better

"It will be better if he does," I told her. "Then I can put up a plausible story about your lying down with a nervous headache, and that while he may speak to you, not to keep you talking long, as you are exceedingly nervous and weak. That will prepare the way for the later report which the hotel will give him.

"Mebbe so, mebbe so," Mary said pessimistically, "but I'll be just as pleased if I don't hear him over the telephone before I go to see my husband. I think I'd be so scared I'd almost back out of the trip."

Nerve Cells Can't Ever Be Replaced

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

ONCE A nerve cell is destroyed it can never be replaced. Nerve cells are highly specialized and it is a general rule that the more highly specialized a cell is, the less likely it is to regenerate. A cell or, indeed, a thousand cells of the skin on the back of your hand can be destroyed and the intact cells at the side of the cut or burn will multiply and fill in the gap. But destroy a group of nerve cells and the surrounding cells do not divide and replace them. They have too much work of their own to do.

There is an analogy to this in society. A thousand ditch diggers might be destroyed by a flood; the next day a thousand others would take their places. But remove an Einstein or an H. L. Mencken and the loss is permanent.

Spells Tragedy

This fact makes diseases of the nervous system tragic and difficult. In infantile paralysis, for instance, if during the acute attack some cells in the spinal cord are destroyed, they are never replaced, and the paralysis of the muscles to which they send fibres is permanent.

Two things can happen to any cell or group of cells in the body. Their activity can be lowered or it can be raised. Both things happen to the cells of the nervous system in marked degree.

To the motor cells, lowered activity means paralysis, heightened activity tremor of the muscles or convulsions, as in epilepsy. To the sensory cells, lowered activity means numbness, while heightened activity means painful sensations without cause, such as neuralgia. To the cells of the intellectual area, lowered activity means sleep or melancholia, while heightened activity means delirium or mania.

Causes Numerous

All nervous disorders can be thought of in this way. The causes which operate to produce these results are numerous. The nervous system is especially susceptible to drugs. Some depress, some excite. Morphine is used to quiet nervous activity. Alcohol to a certain extent, excites and then depresses. These drugs apparently exert their influence directly on the nerve cell. That is why they are habit-forming. Largely why, at least. I have seen a great many articles lately discussing that great American disease, alcoholism, as if it were all a question of personality—a psychological problem. Much more than that, it is a chemical problem—the need of the nerce cell to be saturated.

Other causes of nervous disorders are infections and tumors. Infections, such as infantile paralysis just mentioned, paresis and encephalitis can be treated and brought to a successful termination, but with some loss of function due to destruction of nerve cells. Great advance has been made in the early recognition and treatment of tumors of the central nervous system.

Fish and Chips

Roast Leg of Lamb

Potatoes Roasted with Meat

Scalloped Cauliflower

Waldorf Salad

Layer Fruit Cake Salted Nuts

Coffee

FISH AND CHIPS—Spread potato chips with a soft paste made from mashed smoked sardines mixed with a little catsup, mayonnaise and lemon juice. Serve with the ice cold tomato juice or sauerkraut juice.

Layer Fruit Cake —One cup butter, two cups sugar, four eggs, one cup buttermilk, sour or sweet milk, two tablespoons each nutmeg, allspice, cloves and cinnamon, one teaspoon soda, two cups seeded raisins, one cup currants and one cup jam are the ingredients. Mix as usual, creaming the butter, adding sugar, then eggs, then spices, flour sifted with spices and soda, and added alternately with milk. Lastly, add fruit, sprinkled with some of the flour.

Filling for Cake —— You'll need four cups brown sugar, two cups water, butter size of good-sized egg. Boilt together until thick, then cool and add two cups seeded raisins, one-half pound candied citron peel, one pound figs, one-half pound English walnut meats, one-half pound almonds, all chopped. You can make six layers of this amount or divide in three each and make two cakes.

Scalloped Cauliflower — Cook cauliflower, either whole or separated into flowerets in salted water. Then drain and separate, if you have not done so. Make cream sauce of one tablespoon flour, one of butter, one cup milk and season well. Arrange cauliflower in buttered baking dish, pour cream sauce over it, top with bread crumbs and a sprinkling of grated cheese and bake for 15 minutes or until brown.

Women's Meetings

BURR'S LADIES' AID

Burr's Ladies Aid met at the home of Mrs. Gerald Brooks on Thursday afternoon. The president, Mrs. Ewart Harnes, opened the meeting with a hymn. Rev. Parsons offered prayer. Mrs. Frank Osterhout read the Scripture lesson. A hymn was sung. Mrs. Parsons gave a very interesting talk on Thoughts of Christmas. The roll call was answered with a Christmas message. The word for next month's roll call is "New". The theme song was then sung. The secretary read her annual report and the treasurer gave her annual report, reporting the sum of $221.57 taken in this year. The flower fund secretary reported $4.72 on hand. This being the annual meeting, the election of officers took place and the result is as follows:

President—Mrs. Gene Hubbs.

1st Vice-President—Mrs. Kenneth Vancott.

2nd Vice-President—Mrs. Gerald Brooks.

Secretary—Mrs. Clifford Hough.

Treasurer—Mrs. Merritt Adams.

Flower Fund Secretary—Mrs. Keith Blakely.

Buying Committee—Mrs. Murney Parks and Mrs. D. Parks.

Program Committee—Mrs. Keith Blakely, Mrs. Ross Burr, Margaret Huffman, Mrs. Donald Parks, and Mrs. G. Fox.

Pianist—Margaret Huffman.

Sick Committee—Mrs. Osterhout, Mrs. Bowers and Mrs. Marvin.

Cooking Committee—Mrs. Brason,, Mrs. Spencer, Mrs. Cook, Mrs. Hough and Mrs. Adams.

The retiring president presented Pyrex pie plates to the following members who had not missed a meeting during the two years she held office: Mrs. Merritt Adams, Mrs. Geo. Huffman, Mrs. Keith Blakely, Mrs. Ross Burr and Mrs. Frank Burkitt.

Miss Vera Hubbs sang a solo. Mrs. Huffman and Margaret played a piano duet.

Rev. Mr. Parsons proposed bringing in a play to be put on at Allisonville Hall in the near future, Mt. Pleasant, Bowerman's, Melville and Burr's Ladies' Aids to assist with program between acts and the proceeds to be for a parsonage fund to draw from as required. Lunch was then served. Those to assist with lunch for next meeting are Mrs. Huffman, Mrs. Burkitt, Mrs. Blakely and Mrs. Parks, and those to furnish program are Mrs. Brason, Mrs. Cook and Mrs. George Fox.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Gamble, Hillier, spent Tuesday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Hough.

Mr. Emerson Snider, Harrowsmith, and Mrs. C. J. Wright, Wellington, were guests at Mr. George Fox's on Thursday.

Mr. George Fox, Miss Irene Fox, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Fox and Mr. Emerson Snider visited Belleville on Thursday afternoon.

Mr. Donald Parks was taken to Prince Edward County Hospital on Thursday, suffering an attack of appendicitis.

CENTENARY Y. P. U.

The regular meeting of Centenary Y.P.U. was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Elwin Hart on Tuesday evening, with an attendance of 22. The worship service was in charge of Mac Holton, Christian Citizenship convener, and was opened by singing hymn 109. A very interesting reading was given by Verna Keene. Ray Hall read the Scripture lesson. The secretary's report was given by Coza Calvert. Mac Holton gave a reading on the Prairie Provinces and how much they look to the United Church for help. Mr. Platt told the Young People much more of the West. A donation of $2 was given to the M. and M. fund. Hymn 111 was sung and the meeting closed with the Mizpah benediction. A hearty vote of thanks was given Mr. and Mrs. Hart and a social half-hour was spent.

SPRINGBROOK W. I.

The regular meeting of the Springbrook Women's Institute was held on Wednesday of last week at the home of Mrs. Percy Bateman with an attendance of twenty-three members and eight visitors. Mrs. J. F. Baker presided. The roll call, "An Old Superstition" was well responded to. The sum of three dollars was contributed to the Red Cross for the fire sufferers in the Rainy River District. The Institute decided to accept the Government grant this year as in the past. It was decided to pack the Christmas baskets and also to have the Christmas gift exchange. Mrs. John S. McKeown, convener for relief, will be in charge of packing the baskets and will choose a committee.

Mrs. A. V. Brown took charge of the program in the absence of Mrs. M. Fitzgerald, who is spending the winter in California. The motto, "The world lives in two tents, Content and Discontent," was very ably given by Mrs. Geo. A. Bailey. The topic on Historical Research was taken by Mrs. Geo. E. Thompson. She gave the early history of Springbrook branch and also had an old photograph and one of the old books with the records of the meeting twenty years ago.

Mrs. J. F. Baker gave a splendid talk on the course in buymanship and explained the several samples of silk she had on exhibition. Mrs. Dave Wellman gave a short reading on the Women's Institute. Mrs. Allan McComb gave a very complete report of the Belleville area convention. Verses by Mrs. David Wellman for the branch were read. Community singing was enjoyed, Mrs. W. G. Swayne presiding at the piano. A very dainty lunch was served at the close by the hostess and a social half hour spent.

ZION W. M. S.

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of Zion United Church was held at the home of Mrs. Clifford Ketcheson, on Wednesday, December 7th. The president, Mrs. R. Bunnett, had charge of the meeting. Mrs. Percy Ray led in the devotional period and was assisted by Mrs. R. Cranston. The topic, "The Holy Land" was taken by Mrs. Wm. Tufts. The second chapter of the new Study Book proved very interesting when taken by Mrs. Lorne Brough. Rev. J. F. Everson had charge of reorganizing and the following officers were elected:

Honorary President—Mrs. H. K. Denyes.

President—Mrs. Ralph Sills.

1st Vice-President—Mrs. Harold Beatty.

2nd Vice-President—Mrs. Cecil Ketcheson.

Treasurer—Mrs. Wm. Tufts.

Record. Secretary—Mrs. Clifford Ketcheson.

Corresponding Secretary — Mrs. Myron Hawley.

Christian Citizenship Secretary—Mrs. Percy Ray.

Temperance Secretary — Mrs. Nellie Sloan.

Missionary Monthly Secretary—Mrs. Richard Cranston.

Supply Secretary—Mrs. Robert Bunnett.

Baby Band Leader—Mrs. M. Hawley.

Mission Band Leaders—Group One—Miss Ella Phillips; Group Two—Mrs. Floyd Sheffield.

Community Friendship Secretary—Mrs. Lorne Brough.

Associate Helpers' Secretary—Mrs. Fred Searles.

Pianist—Mrs. R. Cranston.

Assistant—Mrs. Percy Ray.

Finance Committee—Mrs. Cecil Ketcheson, Mrs. Myron Hawley, Mrs. Herb. Casey, Mrs. Roy Sills.

CHATTERTON W. M. S.

The December meeting of the Chatterton W.M.S. was held Tuesday, December 6th, at the home of Mrs. J. H. Frederick with thirteen members present. The meeting opened with quiet music by the pianist. Hymn 64 was followed by prayer by Rev. Mr. Cook. Scripture readings were taken from the Missionary Monthly and was conducted by the president, Mrs. B. Bleecker, assisted by Mrs. F. Campbell. Hymn 50 was sung. Roll call and minutes were given. A letter of thanks was read from Mrs. Vanderwater. The election of officers for the coming year was conducted by Rev. Mr. Cook. Mrs. B. Bleecker who has been the very capable president for the past four years retired from this office, and Mrs. B. Finkle was elected as president for 1939.

1st Vice-President—Mrs. F. Campbell.

2nd Vice-President—Mrs. F. Heasman.

FOXBORO Y. P. U.

The responsive reading of "Hear us, Holy Jesus" opened the worship period of the Young People's Union, Monday evening, after which a hymn was sung. Joyce Bell read the 90th psalm. Rev. E. M. Cook gave an instructive explanation of this psalm. Marie Bartlett took charge of the meeting which was on Christian Fellowship. Mary Hollinger told the story and everybody sang a hymn. Ruby Kelly led in prayer. Verna Sherry gave the topic. A musical duet was furnished by Lorne Carter and Bill Rombough. An interesting recreational period was conducted by Miss Milligan. The meeting closed with the singing of the Young People's hymn. The attendance was forty-eight.

CARMEL Y. P. U.

The regular meeting of the Carmel Y.P.U. was held in the church on Wednesday evening, December 7th. The meeting opened with the president, Miss Olive Howes, in charge of the worship service. Mr. Jack McCabe sang a solo followed by prayer, led by Miss Olive Howes. Hymn 307 was sung. Scripture was read by Mrs. Percy Reynolds. A poem, "The Inn Keeper Makes Excuses" was read by Miss Hazel Hicks. Hymn 304 (first two stanzas) closed the worship service, followed by the benediction. Mrs. Percy Reynolds conducted a Bible contest and Miss Monna Wright conducted some games for the recreation period.

Buster 'Red' Storey Hero as Argos Down Bombers 30-7 To Win Senior Canadian Title

Argos Run Wild in Fourth Quarter with Storey as Spearhead

HANSON IS STOPPED

Bombers Effective Until Condition Took Its Toll

Canadian Press Staff Writer

By SYDNEY GRUSON

Toronto, Dec. 12—(CP)—Every once in a while somebody streaks across the football record and leaves his mark with a standout performance that time will not erase.

Such was the case Saturday when Buster (Red) Storey raced to glory and three touchdowns that enabled Toronto Argonauts to defeat Winnipeg Blue Bombers 30-7 in the 15th meeting between the east and west for the Canadian championship. Storey's performance will live a long time in the history of the National final.

The big redhead, 200 pounds of bone and muscle, had been getting hotter since the eastern playoffs started a month ago. He was a ball of fire in the fourth quarter against Bombers, who were leading and were a shade the better team until Storey went wild.

The amazing, 24-point rampage in the final 15 minutes came after three quarters of as hard, thrilling football as the national final has produced. The lead changed hands twice, both teams staged long marches for scores and there was a mixture of heavy ground work and wide-open play to please the most critical in the crowd of 19,000 jamming Varsity Stadium.

Capitalized on Short Kick

Bombers capitalized on a short kick by Bob Isbister and two fumbles to score four points in the first quarter through Art Stevenson's single and a field goal by Greg Kabat. A 25-yard pass from Annis Stukus to Art West and a 30-yard dash by West gave Argos a touchdown in the second quarter. Kabat got part of that back with his second field goal, from 20 yards and a difficult angle, after Stevenson passed Bombers 81 yards from his 10 in three throws.

Setting the stage for Storey's performance, Annis Stukus got Argos a single from an attempted placement field goal that left Bombers ahead 7-6, with Argos in possession on the Winnipeg 40, at the end of the third quarter. Then Storey took charge as the Bomber defence fell apart.

Broke Up End Runs

Until Storey cut through on an end run around Winnipeg's left side for 28 yards and a touchdown, Bombers had made good Coach Reg. Threlfall's prediction of stopping the vaunted Argo running offensive. The powerful western line had been charging through and breaking up the end run before Ted Morris or Bill Stukus could get away the important second lateral.

Suddenly the Bomber line wasn't charging through and that was the one break Argos needed. Isbister and West made 12 on an end dash before Storey fought his way through a half-dozen tacklers for his first touchdown. Gambling through the air after the swift reverse, Bombers' passes boomeranged.

Storey intercepted one and went 40 yards to the four from where he barged over on third down. Isbister intercepted another, just a few plays later, on the Argo three, lateralled to Storey who kept pumping his big legs high and hard past half the Winnipeg team and until he reached the Winnipeg five, 102 yards away. Bill Stukus passed into the end zone to Bernie Thornton.

Evans Intercepts Pass

Art Evans intercepted for the third time on the 22. Earl Selkirk plunged for 10, then Storey got through for another touch. The Stukus brothers split the converts.

Threlfall was first to concede Argos' superiority. "They outplayed us and beat us thoroughly," said the coach, who predicted after scouting Argos twice that Bombers would win because of their superior line. It was superior for more than half the game, scattering Argo plays and rushing Argo ball carriers behind the scrimmage line.

Storey's performance reminded of Fritzie Hanson's when the west won its only National title—an 18-12 victory for Bombers over Hamilton Tigers in 1935. Then, on a muddy field in Hamilton, Hanson couldn't be stopped but Saturday, on a soft field and in mild weather, Fritzie wasn't given a chance.

Deadly downfield tackling by Bernie Thornton and Wes Cutler held Hanson to 27 yards on kick runbacks, where Argos picked up 93, mostly on a 40-yard dash by West in the third quarter. Argos made 16 first downs to seven for Bombers and gained 149 yards on eight completed passes to 146 yards on four completions. Argos tried 17 passes and Winnipeg 12.

Only College All-Star

Only intercollegiate player to make the Canadian Press all-star rugby team this year, was George Willis, above, snapback and secondary defence star with University of Western Ontario, runners-up for the championship in the college loop.

Coach of Winnipeg Not Convinced His Theory Wrong

By JACK CALDER

Toronto, Dec. 12 (CP) — After watching his Winnipeg Blue Bombers submerged by Toronto Argonauts in the national football final, Reg Threlfall still wasn't convinced that the Argo type of lateral-passing attack is unstoppable.

The Winnipeg coach admitted he was as bewildered as anyone else after big Red Storey began ghosting through the Bomber defence in the last quarter Saturday as Argos sped from behind to a 30-7 victory. Until that time the western champions were all they were supposed to be, a hard-charging team with tremendous plunging and passing strength.

"I guess I did talk a lot before the game about our big, pounding line," Threlfall lamented. "But I still maintain a charging forward line and a secondary defence that plays the runners properly can break up that stuff."

A former Purdue University star, Threlfall looked at Eastern Canada football for the first time when he scouted Argonauts in playdowns. Preparing Bombers for the title game, he told the line to charge harder and harder. The secondary defence was ordered to follow in and cover every man on the Toronto backfield.

Worked For Three Periods.

"I didn't give the Argonauts credit for being as great as they are," he admitted. "I knew that every man had to be spotted on those end runs and I fashioned a defence to meet them. It worked for three periods.

"I wouldn't want to be quoted anywhere as saying we were beaten because our defence collapsed. Argos were too hot. But when the left side of our secondary went wrong it was just a runaway."

The secondary had been ordered to cover both the second-last man and the last man on the end run, he explained. The last man was Storey and Threlfall says he wasn't covered properly.

Threlfall said he wanted to bring Bombers back next year, manager Joe Ryan echoed. "If we win the western title and the Canadian Rugby Union will let us, we'll come."

The reason Paul Derringer won't be a holdout next spring is that the Reds boosted his 1939 contract figures so high—and tossed him a bonus cheque for last year to boot—that he rushed right up there and got on the dotted line ...... Tommy Farr's fight career will be just about washed up in the U. S. if he finishes on the short end against Lou Nova Friday,

SCOTT FLATTENED IN 30 SECONDS

Mixed Bout Ends Quickly When Wrestler Applies Leglock

London, Dec. 12 (CP)—Phil Scott believed to be a record even for "Phainting Phill. ing Phil".

The one-time heavyweight boxing hope, who came to be known by such uncomplimentary Noms De Guerre as the "Somnolent Scott," recently challenged the American wrestler, Jack Sherry, to a mixed bout, gloved and trunked, Phil entered the ring with cheers whistling in his ears. He left it with assorted fruits and pop bottles whistling about his head.

The faithful scarcely had settled in their seats when Sherry whipped a leglock on Scott. Phil assumed the horizontal position that was so well known to boxing followers and beat the ring floor with his hands in seeming agony. He cried "enough."

Despite the violent "birds" the paying customers let fly at the end of the bout, the 38-year-old Scott said he would like a return match with Sherry. But no gloves next time.

"It must be with my bare hands; then I'll show him," said Phil from the safety of his dressingroom.

DOUBLE SCHEDULE FOR LOCAL GROUP

A double schedule, with a group play-off between the first and second placed clubs, was agreed upon at a meeting of all clubs composing group No. 2 in the senior "B" series of the O.H.A. held in Belleville over the week end. The senior clubs entered in the group are Peterborough, R.C.A.F. "Flyers" and the Belleville Redmen. The meeting was presided over by S. R. "Sandy" Burrows, O.H.A. executive member and group convener.

The club heads decided upon a post-schedule play-off between the first and second placed clubs to commence on Feb. 6th, with the team finishing in first position in the regular schedule having the choice of the opening play-off date.

The schedule adopted gives each team entered four home games and an equal number on the road. With both the Redmen and Flyers holding forth at the Hume Arena, Belleville fans will have eight home games, aside from the play-offs.

The schedule adopted is:

Jan. 6 or 9th—Peterboro at R.C.A.F.
Jan. 11th—R.C.A.F. at Belleville.
Jan. 13th—Belleville at Peterboro.
Jan. 16th—Belleville at R.C.A.F.
Jan. 18th—R.C.A.F. at Peterboro.
Jan. 20th—Peterboro at Belleville.

Jan. 23rd—Peterboro at R.C.A.F.
Jan. 25th—R.C.A.F. at Belleville.
Jan. 27th—Belleville at Peterboro.
Jan. 30th—Peterboro at Belleville.
Feb. 1st—Belleville at R.C.A.F.
Feb. 3rd—R.C.A.F. at Peterboro.

Green Bay Packers Defeated by Giants

New York, Dec. 12 (AP)—Professional football patterns its game to the customers' wishes and the customers want wide open football with plenty of scoring. No better case for both the customers and the pros could have been represented than yesterday's National League championship playoff, in which the New York Giants beat the Green Bay Packers 23-17.

The Packers' 17 points were the most scored on the New Yorkers by any club this season.

Having proved the best defensive team in the league during the regular season, the Giants were expected to play for the breaks. Actually they made them, blocking two kicks and recovering a fumble to set up a field goal and the first two touchdowns. Then they showed they also could put on a sustained drive by marching 61 yards to a winning score. That was made on Ed Danowski's second touchdown pass, after a field goal had given Green Bay a short-lived 17-16 lead.

New Haven Eagles Making Progress

Things didn't look so dark today for New Haven Eagles, who started slowly in the International-American League Hockey race, and although still in last place in their section can boast of a smashing victory over the powerful Philadelphia Ramblers. The Philadelphia outfit, leading the eastern division with Providence Reds, edged out the Eagles 3-2 in a Saturday clash but the New Haven boys came back strongly last night to trounce the Ramblers 6-3. Springfield Indians and Providence played to a 0-0 draw Saturday and a 4-4 tie Sunday. Cleveland Barons topped Hershey Bears, leaders of the western section, 2-1 Saturday and drew 2-2 with Syracuse Stars Sunday. In a Saturday contest Syracuse blanked Pittsburgh Hornets 5-0.

JUNIORS, PREPS ACTIVE AT "Y"

Series of Tests and Awards Made on Saturday

On Saturday a score of tests and awards were set up for the Preps (10 and 11 years) and Juniors (12 to 14 years) at the Y. M. C. A. Games in parlors and lobby, events on the gym floor and in swimming tank were carried through with keen competition prevailing.

RESULTS:

Point Standing — 1st., Barney Wright; 2nd., Billy Holway; 3rd., Stan Wiggins.

PREPS

Running (3 laps) — 1st., Predette; 2nd., Salisbury; 3rd., Bishop and Legate, tie.

Prizes were awarded all total point winners.

Next Saturday a test in five pins and candy scramble in addition to gym and swim. Through the week—Monday 4 p.m. swimming instruction; Tuesday, 7.30 p.m., public speaking and debating; Thursday, 7 p.m., handicraft, woodwork and weaving.

Now that the Giants have Zeke Bonura for first base, what's going to happen to Brooklyn's Buddy Hassett? .... the "thrust" has shown that he's definitely big league stuff, so the Dodgers ought to trade him where he'll have a shot at first basing.... instead of trying to make an outfielder of him .... the kid deserves the chance.

Boston Increases Lead by 3 Points Defeating Rangers On Goal Tending of Brimsek

Minor Leaguer Fully Justifies Confidence of Art Ross

LEAFS TRIM HAWKS

Apps and Drillon Spearhead of Four to One Victory

(By The Canadian Press)

Art Ross knew what he was doing when he allowed Tiny Thompson to go to Detroit Red Wings for $16,000. He was bringing Frank Brimsek to Boston Bruins from the minors for his first National Hockey League season, but he wasn't getting a goaltender of minor-league rating to replace the great Thompson.

Brimsek has rewarded Ross' confidence fully. Last night he scored his third consecutive shutout as the Bruins defeated the Rangers 3-0 at New York to extend their league lead to three points.

With the young Minnesotan between the pipes, the Bruins have climbed into a predominating position. After two straight wins, they seem to have the Indian sign on Rangers, their closest rivals, while the third-place club, Chicago Black Hawks, apparently are going to be too in-and-out to catch the leaders immediately. The Hawks blanked New York Americans 4-0 at Chicago last night, but that performance came on top of a 4-1 defeat by the Maple Leafs at Toronto Saturday.

Thompson Defeated

Thompson experienced his first defeat Sunday night since changing teams, when Canadiens stopped Detroit 4-2 at Montreal. The result left the two clubs tied for sixth and last place.

The International - American League critics told Ross before the season's start that he had a find in Brimsek. Arthur brought him up from Providence for a couple of games when Thompson was unable to start the season because of an eye injury, and realized then that all they said was true.

Young Frank committed his third straight shutout before a crowd of 16,218 persons in Madison Square Garden and with five Ranger attackers buzzing around him through much of the game. Jack Portland put Boston ahead early in the second period and from then on Rangers turned to a mass offensive. Brimsek never faltered, Portland and Eddie Shore gave him superb protection and finally Mel Hill and Gordon Pettinger broke through for third-period goals that submerged the Blueshirts.

Lines Shaken Up

Manager Bill Stewart shook up the forward lines for the Chicago encounter and the new combinations worked smartly. Mush March grabbed an early lead for the Hawks and they spelled off Americans' continual threats through the second period and most of the third. Then, as the New York attack grew fiercer, Joffre Desilets, Earl Siebert and Baldy Northcott broke away for easy goals.

The firm of Gordon Drillon and Sylvanus Apps, highest scoring combine in the league last season, got together for the first goal of the new campaign against Chicago. Drillon, back in the lineup only a week since he was forced out with a broken thumb Nov. 5, passed to Apps to start the scoring at Toronto in the second period. Then Drillon, individual scoring leader last winter, got his first goal of the current campaign in the third.

Leafs Breakaway

Hawks broke their long famine on Russ Blinco's goal but when they tried to press their drive the Leafs broke away for two more scores, by Nick Metz and Pep Kelly. The game marked the first appearances in new livery for Bill Thoms and Doc Romnes, involved in a Toronto-Chicago trade Thursday. Thoms was aggressive for Hawks and Romnes for Leafs but neither scored.

Herbie Cain led Canadiens' offensive and was the only player in the league to score twice during the weekend. Babe Siebert scored for Montreal in the first minute of play and Syd Howe for Detroit a minute later. In the second period Paul Haynes put the Habitants ahead again but Ebbie Goodfellow levelled the score.

Then Cain swung into action with the winning goal late in that period and added the final one late in the third.

Up With Toronto Leafs

When Bingo Kampman, defenceman with Toronto Maple Leafs, suffered a badly cut leg in a game against Canadiens, it meant a chance to move up for Jack Church, above, who had been toiling for Syracuse Stars, the Leafs' International-American League farm. Church made his debut against the Red Wings and turned in a great job.

Seabiscuit Given Title of Outstanding Horse of Year

New York, Dec. 12 (AP)—Seabiscuit, conqueror of War Admiral in their famous match race, gained another victory over the son of Man o' War today when he was acclaimed the outstanding horse of the year in the United States.

Beaten last year for the honor by the margin of only 18 points, the hard hitting five-year-old from Chas. S. Howard's stable, gained ample revenge. In a poll of 240 sports writers, conducted by the Turf and Sport Digest, the son of Hard Tack rolled up 698 points as compared to the Admiral's 489.

The writers took into consideration not only the Biscuit's easy triumph over his rival at Pimlico but the fact he was in the money in each of his eleven starts, won $130,395 and boosted his total earnings to $340,480 only some $36,000 short of Sun Beau's world record. In whipping Sam Riddle's War Admiral by three lengths he created a new track record of 1:56 3-5 for 1 3-16th mile.

Maxwell Howard's Stagehand, the third in the all-age division, was voted best of the three-year olds despite a record which shows all of his major triumphs against older horses.

Opportunity Only Is Needed.

Louisville, Ky., Dec. 12 (AP) — Charley Kurtsinger, the "Flying Dutchman" of the United States turf expressed belief today that all War Admiral needs to beat Seabiscuit is the opportunity.

"I'm just hoping we get another crack at him this winter," said Kurtsinger, jockey of Samuel D. Riddle's great son of Man o' War. "It possibly will come in the Widener Handicap at Hialeah. He's a tough horse, yes, a great horse, but I still believe we can beat him."

The "Dutchman", home on vacation, was referring, of course, to Charles S. Howard's Seabiscuit which beat the Admiral in a match race at Pimlico last month.

"The Admiral wasn't himself that day," Kurtsinger said. "The tip-off came in the first quarter."

Steven Owen says what really won his New York Giants the pro football championship over the Packers in that thriller yesterday was all the talk that his boys were so "lucky"..... "after we beat the Packers two weeks ago and Washington last week," says Steve, "everybody hollered we were the luckiest club ever ....so no one gave my kids credit for being as smart as they really are— and they fooled everybody, including Green Bay"....

When the schedule-makers of Group No. 2 in the Senior "B" series of the O.H.A. met in Belleville over the week-end there was considerable discussion relative to the advisability of adopting a double or triple schedule. After discussions pro and con some wise person suggested they allot dates for a double schedule and await developments. The suggestion ultimately proved the clubs would not have time to engage in a triple schedule, so we find a double schedule adopted, which appears elsewhere in today's issue. As noted, however, the reason for the opening game, Peterborough at the R.C.A.F. being given two tentative dates was necessary owing to the possibility of the Flyers getting into the Van Horne Memorial Cup play-offs. If such be the case the game will be played on Jan. 9, instead of the first mentioned date of the 6th.

As in former years the first and second placed clubs will play off, with the first placed club having the choice of home games to open the series. As the schedule is drawn each club, Peterboro, Belleville and the R.C.A.F. will have four home and four road games, the Hume Arena being the scene of eight games as both the Flyers and Redmen play there. The clubs are considering the matter of exhibition games to fill in any vacancies. The usual ribbing went its round of the table, Frank Buckland, mentor of the Petes being the chief goat-getter. After a few verbal cracks, however, Frank broke down and admitted Lorne Grey, who starred for the German international team two years ago, was now a resident of the Quaker Oats village along the banks of the Otonabee. The Liftlock City sports scrivener was conspicuous by his absence, due no doubt to his scarlet colored false face following his cracks about the Redmen not going so well in the Van Horne series.

Literally running wild in a last quarter attack, the Toronto Argonauts were repeaters as Dominion football champions as they snowed the Winnipeg Blue Bombers under 30 to 7 Saturday. The westerners put up a sturdy defence until the fast-moving Argos unleashed their attack in the last moments. The Blue Bombers had nothing in retaliation. The Argos stopped the heralded Fritz Hanson in his proverbial tracks while Storey literally ran amok to gain more yards than the average player will advance in a single season. Fumbles were quite marked, Argos muffing the swineskin in the early stages to give Winnipeg a lead, but muffs equalled themselves and Argos went on to win their second consecutive Dominion senior football title. Worthy champions they are.

Only one dissenting voice was heard—over the radio after the game, the veteran Fritz Hanson gave full credit to the champions, but added: "We'd like to play them under western rules". The Blue Bombers carried plenty of power along the line, but like the Ottawa squad, they could not cope with the fast plays of the Argos.

"Lippy Louey" Durocher is losing no time in the revamping of his Brooklyn "daffiness-men'. Durocher signed Tony Lazzeri, recently released from the Cubs, to bolster his Dodger infield. Larry McPhail promises to go out and completely rebuild the Brooklyn squad if necessary. It looks as though Memphis Bill Terry is about to retire permanently. Terry purchased First Baseman Zeke Bonura from the Senators for Jim Carlin, first baseman and Tom Baker, a pitcher. These are only a few of the many baseball trades expected before Christmas.

The Boston Bruins increased their advantage in the N.H.L. over the weekend with a 3-0 win over the second placed Rangers. The Canadiens returned to their winning ways with a 4 to 2 win over Detroit. The Blackhawks split over the weekend, losing to Toronto and winning over the Americans last night. Detroit, Rangers, and Americans were the clubs to fall chalking up wins over the weekend. The Leafs advanced to a tie with Rangers for second place.

BUDGE RANKED NO. ONE ATHLETE

Second Year in Succession Tennis Star Has Earned Title

New York, Dec. 12 (AP)—For the second year in succession Don Budge is ranked as the United States No. 1 athlete for 1938.

The lanky California red-head who negotiated on unprecedented tennis sweep in winning the Australian, French, British and United States titles in one year before electing to cast his lot with the professionals, was named as the No. 1 athlete by 26 of the 63 sports experts who participated in The Associated Press' eighth annual poll.

In sharp contract, however, to his run-away triumph in last year's battle of ballots, Budge was hard-pressed this time by Henry Armstrong, great negro fighter, who set up a new all-time boxing record by holding the featherweight, lightweight and welterweight championships at the same time.

Armstrong, drawing 18 first-place votes, wound up only 18 points behind the tennis ace in the final tabulation, based in three points for first choice, two points for second and one for third. Budge's total was 122 points; Armsadong's 104.

Police Blotter

Sneal thieves, plundering goods from parked automobiles on city streets, were active in Belleville over the week end. Three persons reporting the loss of purses were more fortunate, however, as the three money-containers were subsequently returned to their respective owners intact.

Fred Hudgins, Latta, was less fortunate, however. Mr. Hudgins and his family came to Belleville to make the weekly family purchases of groceries and sundries. The foodstuffs were left in Mr. Latta's parked car on Church Street, but stolen during his absence early Saturday evening. "They didn't leave us a loaf of bread," complained Mr. Latta to police.

A local citizen, after completing of his Christmas shopping parked his automobile on Albion Street late Saturday night while making a nearby call. Upon his return to the parked vehicle all of the articles left in the car were gone. The goods were of some considerable value, jewellery being included in the loot taken.

Considerable damage resulted to two motor cars on the 8th concession of Thurlow during an accident yesterday. Rev. J. W. McDonald, Roslin, was proceeding homewards when his motor car was in collision wih another car driven by B. C. Moore, Weston. Both cars were badly damaged and Rev. McDonald sustained lacerations of the forehead, Provincial Constable W. E. Smith learned upon investigation.

AFTER IRISH CUSTOMS POST BOMBING

Police are shown standing amid the wreckage of what once was a customs post on the border between Eire and Northern Ireland. Only splintered lumber remains after the explosion that wiped the building out of existence. Five other customs posts along the border suffered a similar fate. Death of two men who were working in a cottage near the border at Donegal, in an explosion and the finding of a quantity of explosives near the cottage led police to investigate possibility that the I. R. A. (Irish Republican Army) has been resurrected and may be connected with the border bombings.

POLICE COURT

As the sequel to a hectic police chase, in which gun fire was brought into action before an arrest was effected, Clare Leavitt, Picton, appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., charged with operating a motor car while intoxicated.

Leavitt pleaded guilty and was sentenced to serve 12 days in the common jail, His Worship suspending Leavitt's driving permit for three months.

"Any man caught driving a motor car drunk and convicted in this court can expect no leniency. They can't drive while drunk in this district if, I can help it," warned Magistrate Butler. "It's not only your own life, but the lives of the public that are endangered," added His Worship.

As a sequel to International differences and complications during which several foreigners engaged in an affray at Point Anne some weeks ago, four men appeared on charges of assault today.

The plaintiff in the case was Joseph Chaykoski, who was taken to the hospital as the result of injuries sustained, alleged at the hands of his assailants, who he named and charged today as being John Germanovick, 36-year-old native of Jugoslavia, William Yosepenko, 54 of Austria, Sam Gurniak, 42 of Poland and Robert Mulick, 36 born in Jugoslavia. All concerned informed Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C., they were naturalized Canadians, however. The alleged attack occurred early last month following altercations, which resulted following International arguments, Provincial Police were informed by the complainant.

Kenneth Findall, Wooler, who was arrested on Friday night on a charge of criminal negligence, following the death of Mrs. Molly McDonald, Toronto, appeared before His Worship today and his bail bonds renewed. The case was enlarged until Dec. 23rd. Mr. Charles A. Payne, K.C., appeared on behalf of the youth.

"There has been no attempt to make restitution in this case and I suggest the accused be remanded in custody," asked Crown Attorney . C. Donnan when Ray Dickie, Halloway, appeared on a charge of fraud. The case had been presented in a previous court and Dickie was given time to make restitution. He only demonstrated indifference today, which prompted Mr. Donnan to suggest the remand in custody, he stated.

REMAND CHICKEN THEFT CHARGES

Five Appear in Police Court for Theft of Fowl

Each year before Christmas farmers throughout the Belleville district are confronted with continued night raids upon their fowl flocks. This type of marauders was active in Belleville and environs last week, but not more so than city and Provincial Police, who arraigned five men in city police court today on charges of the stealing of chickens and turkeys.

Charles Carter and Alton Williams, Rawdon farmhands, were arraigned on charges of the theft of two turkeys, gasoline and a quantity of rope, the property of Robert Mathews. Both men pleaded guilty as charged when they appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., today. Sentence was postponed until the 16th instant, the pair being held in custody on remand.

Lester Coul, Edward Gifford and George Coul, all of Hungerford Township, appeared today charged with the theft of eight Leghorn chickens, the property of John Tracey of this city. Lester Coul entered a plea of guilty while George Coul and Edward Gifford denied the charges with pleas of not guilty.

Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., suggested to the court that all cases be enlarged until Friday. "I want to use Lester Coul as a Crown witness in these matters," concluded Mr. Donnan as the adjournment was granted.

Seven Miners Killed in Quebec Mine Disaster

Seven miners lost their lives in a rock slide at a 50-year-old asbestos mine at Thetford Mines, Que. Hundreds of men, under the direction of experts, toiled to remove the tons of debris which blocked the entrance of a 1,500-foot tunnel in which the miners were working at the time of the slide. This picture, showing the tons of debris, was taken shortly after the fatal rock slide.

"Having used different methods of advertising, such as, handbills, premiums, personal letters and our Local Daily, I believe I have had a fair chance to judge what form of advertising brings the best results. After eighteen years experience, I am convinced that there is no rival to advertisements in the Local Daily.

It has been my experience too, that the products which are the quickest to move off our shelves are those of manufacturers who ALSO advertise in our Local Daily. This being true, it's only natural for us to push these products through preferred displays and mention in our own advertising. In other words it always pays to back a winning horse."

Roslin

Roslin.—The December meeting of the Women's Association of the United Church was held at the home of Mrs. James Vance on Wednesday evening, December 7th. The president, Mrs. J. Chisholm, presided and the meeting opened with the singing of Hymn No. 50, followed by the Lord's Prayer in unison. The roll call was answered by a Christmas thought or verse. Scripture was read by Mrs. P. Vance.

Mrs. Herrington, as leader, then took charge, and gave a talk on "What Christmas Means To You And Me." Mrs. H. Chisholm told the story of "The First Christmas Tree." A reading by Mrs. J. Chisholm, "Christmas In a Pioneer Hospital." Mrs. Herrington closed the meeting with prayer and a social hour was enjoyed.

The Parcel Post table was dispensed with. Proceeds $4.30. A vote of thanks was extended to Mr. and Mrs. Vance for their kind hospitality.

On Wednesday evening a progressive euchre was held in the Anglican Church Hall. There were eight tables in play and the prize-winners were: Mrs. Wm. Bates and Mr. W. Slingerland. After the games lunch was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Coulter entertained Mr. and Mrs. H. Chisholm, Rev. F. C. Beazer and Mrs. Beazer, and Mr. and Mrs. J. Goodfellow at a dinner party one evening recently.

The December meeting of the Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Harry Sills on Thursday evening, with an attendance of about fifty. The president, Mrs. W. White, presided, and the meeting opened with the singing of the "Opening Ode", followed by repeating the Lord's Prayer in unison. After a short business period, Mrs. Clapsaddle took charge of the program. The roll call was answered by "Recipes for Christmas Dainties." Mrs. Clapsaddle gave a talk on the motto, "If we cannot get what we like, let us like what we get." Several Christmas carols were sung. Mrs. A. Bates gave a Christmas reading. Mrs. W. Harrison gave an interesting paper on "Christmas". Mrs. J. W. Macdonald gave a demonstration on wrapping Christmas gifts. The members exchanged Christmas gifts. The meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem. After the meeting all joined in playing progressive euchre. Prize-winners were Mrs. W. Slingerland and Mr. C. Sills. About midnight lunch was served.

Moira

Moira.—On Wednesday evening a goodly number of people gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Post in honour of their son, Roy, and his bride, who were married recently. Mr. Milton Vanderwater called upon Mrs. Wallace McInroy to read the following address:

Moira, Ont., Dec. 6, 1938.

To Mr. and Mrs. Roy Post:

Dear Norma and Roy,—

It is with feelings of happiness that we, your friends and neighbours of Moira, have gathered here tonight to congratulate you on your recent marriage, and to spend one more pleasant evening with you before you leave our community.

Roy, you have spent most of your life in our neighbourhood and we regret that you are not going to make your new home among us.

Norma, although you are a stranger to many of us, we hope to become better acquainted. We pray that God may bless your new home and that happiness and prosperity may be yours throughout life.

As a token of our esteem for you both, we ask you to accept these gifts and may they carry with them our very best wishes.

Signed on behalf of Moira Community,

Kenneth Thompson
Wallace McInroy
Joe Williams
Burton Foster.

The newlyweds were then presented with two occasional chairs and numerous pieces of glassware.

Mr. and Mrs. Post both graciously thanked their friends for the gifts. Later lunch was served and a social hour spent together.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Dec. 12 (AP)—Stocks shifted to the rallying side in today's market and leaders advanced fractions to around two points.

Dealings slowed and prices were reduced a shade following a fairly lively first hour. After absorbing mild profit taking the market again swung upward and, near the final hour, quotations were near the best of the day. Transfers were about 1,000,000 shares.

Steels were in the forefront of the push despite a sizable drop in this week's mill operations, the fourth consecutive weekly recession. The latest set-back, however, was in line with financial expectations.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 12 —(CP)— The list ruled strong from the opening on the Toronto Exchange today, with the action heaviest in western oils and secondary golds.

Home Oil bulged to a new high for the current movement at $2, over 33 cents from the last close. Higher prices ruled for Okalta, Calgary-Edmonton, Davies, Brown, Calmont, Anglo-Canadian, Highwood-Sarcee and other penny issues.

Strong spots in the golds included Kerr-Addison, Hard Rock, Kirkland Lake, MacLeod - Cockshutt and Bralorne. Base Metals, especially the seniors, moved up. Nickel, Noranda and Smelters were gains and Waite-Amulet added 20 cents.

Foods were strong and other industrials, including the steels, papers, banks and construction were firm.

Livestock

Toronto, Dec. 12.—(CP)—Cattle sales were too few to establish a market trend by early afternoon on Toronto Livestock market today. Calf Prices were weak. Lambs were generally 25 cents higher, with sheep steady. No hog price was set by early afternoon. Cattle holdover from Thursday was 500 head.

Receipts reported by Dominion Livestock branch were — Cattle 3,790; calves 920; hogs 1,560; sheep and lambs 840.

Only a few hundred cattle were sold by a mid-session. A few lots of butcher cattle sold at $5 to $5.75. Butcher Cows brought $2.75 to $4, canners and cutters $2 to $2.50.

Some good bulls made $4 to $4.25. Stockers ranged from $4.50 to $5.25 with a few stocker calves up to $6 and tops reaching $6.25.

Veal calves made a general top of $10. Heavy calves traded at $5 to $6.50 with grassers at $4.50.

Previous close on off-truck bacon hogs was $8.50 to $8.75.

Good ewe and wether lambs moved at $9.50 delivered by rail and $9 to $9.25 by truck. Choice lambs reached $10. Heavies and bucks ranged from $8 to $8.50, culls from $6.50 to $7. Sheep were $2 to $4.50 cwt.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford By Financial Service

The Outlook for Business and the Market

Stock market charts reveal that share prices, since their flurry of enthusiasm following the elections in the United States, have turned downwards during these last three weeks.

The fact is that unless some unusually potent force is at work in the stock market at this particular season prices are almost certain to be dragging and listless at best. This is because it is the period in the United States when accounts are adjusted for the year-end. In particular, it is the time of the year when the investment and speculative community sells securities, either to take its profits or to establish losses before the year-end for income-tax purposes. Many of those who sell for such reasons do not, it is true, retire from the market. But if they wish to reinvest in the same securities that they have disposed of they must wait thirty days to do so. All else being equal, the result of such operations is an unbalanced market, with selling pressure temporarily more than offsetting the buying.

Business during the remainder of the year, the experts agree, judging from the tenor of surveys coming from the usual banking, industrial and educational sources at this time, will have to contend with a seasonal tendency to slacken. The ticker has already taken care of this condition and before long the markets should attempt, as usual, to forecast as to the longer future. A check-up reveals to Financial Service that seldom has there been a nearer approach to unanimity of opinion among the observers as to the fact of a business improvement that has gone beyond even the optimistic expectations, as the economist for the National City Bank expresses it.

There appears to be nothing in sight to warrant any immediate misgivings but at the same time the dearth of prediction beyond a few months is noticeable. That is because of the influence wielded by politicians, and naturally no one knows how they will jump.

The reason for the hesitancy over long term prospects plainly is the belief that much of the fuel that is now used by industry is being supplied by the Government's spending activities. That is causing the machine to move against the force of the lack of confidence and confusion among many business men. Naturally the markets are afraid of a business setback once the spending is reduced, and so are Government officials, having seen the coincidence between a cut in Federal outlay and the start of the depression in 1937. The answer to the problem offered by business is a change in Government policy toward taxation, profits and business in general. That is countered by the easier method of the politicians who simply would increase the pace and the duration of spending.

Instead of reassuring business, the determination of the spenders to keep it up will merely thicken the soup of uncertainty and lack of confidence in which industry is now swimming. Under the circumstances, as they are, business is unlikely to "take up the slack" when Government pump-priming halts, and as the effect of the stimulant wears off the dose will have to be increased, until the drug itself rather than the original disease will kill the patient.

HOG QUOTATIONS

Toronto, Dec. 12 (CP)—Bacon-hog prices dropped 25 and 40 cents at Chatham today and liveweights were 10 cents lower at Brantford. Other markets held steady.

Liveweights: Brantford $8.25; Chatham $8.25; Hull $8.50; Peterborough $8.50.

Dressedweights: Hull 11.70; Chatham $11.30; Kitchener $11.75; Peterborough $11.35; Stratford $11.75; Barrie $11.65; London $11.35.

Produce Markets Remain Quiet

Toronto, Dec. 12. — A slightly steadier undertone in the egg market featured produce trading in Toronto, Saturday, although no real firmness developed and storage eggs even eased a little.

Sales of storage eggs were reported by a reliable Toronto authority to be slow with buyers claiming ability to fill requirements of original grade A-large at 24c, although the general offering was a cent higher. This situation was brought about and had existed since the day before when original A-medium storage eggs had slipped from 24c to 23c at which level they were still offered here Saturday.

Bids of 21¾c a pound for Ontario No. 1 creamery solids were met by offerings at 22c, Saturday. Little or no business was done, buyers being disinclined to purchase above their bid.

Montreal Produce Prices Steady.

Montreal, Dec. 12 (CP)—Trading was quiet and prices generally steady on Montreal open produce markets last week according to reports from the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

Creamery butter prints to retailers were 23c to 23¼c a pound and solids at 22½c to 23¾c.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases were offered at 33c a dozen for A-large, 27c for A-medium, 26c for A-pullets, 25c for B-large, and 21½c for C. Receipts: 5,333 cases.

Blue Flames Leap As Short Circuit Snaps Power Lines

A brilliant flash of blue flame accompanied by a dull hollow sound, startled belated pedestrians on East Bridge street a few minutes after one o'clock this morning, when a short circuit believed to have been caused when a wet branch of a tree rubbing against exposed parts of the wires, sent two high tension lines crashing to the ground along the frontage of St. Thomas Church on Church Street.

City lights went out immediately but came on again within a few seconds. The wires sputtering and crackling sent small geysers of blue and yellow flame shooting into the air as power burned through insulation. Police detoured traffic down Church Street until Hydro officials arrived on the scene to make the necessary repairs.

Long black marks today on the grass near the church testify to the burning of the live wires as they lay on the ground. Constables Harold Taylor and Peter Thompson maintained a vigil near the wires warning pedestrians who ventured too near. Constable Thompson was the first to notice the flash, and immediately notified the police station and hydro officials.

TERRORIST GROUP CROSSES FRONTIER

Slovak Police Finally Rout Assailants with Tear Gas

Berlin, Dec. 12 —(CP-Havas) — Hungarian terrorists entered Slovak border territory Sunday and attacked people returning from a German party rally, the official German news agency reported today in a dispatch from Bratislava, Czechoslovakia.

A young girl was wounded by a bullet intended for Deputy Karmasin, Under-Secretary of State for German affairs in the autonomous Slovak Government, the dispatch said. The terrorists crossed the border at the close of the German party rally, held at Untermetzen Seifen, about a mile distant from the border, the agency continued.

"The raiders sought to cut the road over which Deputy Karmasin intended to return to Brat'slava and opened fire on the unarmed Germans. A bullet fired in the direction of the Deputy gravely wounded a young girl instead. A number of demonstrators were wounded by stones.

"Slovak police attempted to force the Hungarian terrorists back across the frontier. A Slovak military contingent, armed with machine guns, finally put the terrorists to flight with tear gas bombs.

SAYS ITALY NEEDS FR. SOMALILAND

Gayda Calls Territory 'Chronic Irritation' to Italy

Rome, Dec. 12 (AP)—Italy's need of French Somaliland for the development of Ethiopia was declared today by Virginio Gayda, the Fascist editor who often expresses Premier Mussolini's views.

Gayda, who previously had aired Italy's alleged grievances against France in Tunisia and her desire for lower tolls and a share in control of the Suez Canal, charged the French were hindering Italian colonial interests through possession of Djibouti.

That port of French Somaliland is the terminus of the railway linking Addis Ababa, capital of Ethiopia, with the Red Sea. Gayda's declaration in his Giornale d'Italia, coincided with other Italian press charges that France was arming Tunisia, her North African Protectorate, for military use against Italy.

Called 'Chronic Provocation'.

French Somaliland, Gayda wrote, "continues to nullify the policy of friendship and collaboration contemplated in the defunct Italo-French accords of 1935 and continues to be a chronic provocation which can no longer last or be tolerated."

Other Italian newspapers cited a Paris report that General Morin, who helped build the Maginot Line of fortifications facing Germany, is now in Tunisia as confirming that France "intends to transform Tunisia into a sharp war instrument against Italy."

'Derives From Munich'.

Quoting French and British newspaper reaction to Italy's claims, Il Messaggero found it strange that Britain should see "an eventual threat to peace" in the Italian agitation for Tunisia and other parts of the French Empire. Revision of Italian relations with France "derives logically from Munich", the paper declared

Gayda did not say what demands Italy would make concerning Djibouti and the railway, but he declared "it is just that the entire problem of Djibouti in its various aspects be faced as a basis of clarification of Italo-French relations and European interests."

Italy's Rights.

"Italo-French relations, like those between Italy and Great Britain, no longer end in the Mediterranean area since the conquest of the Empire," he continued. "Italy's rights and interests extend to the Red Sea and beyond."

Gayda declared French Somaliland's only importance to France is that of a doorway for expansion in Africa. Now that Italy has acquired Ethiopia, he said, the French are harboring "rebels" in the association of Ethiopian refugees at Djibouti who are carrying on anti-Italian activities.

(French Samoliland, coastal area between Italian Eritrea and British Somaliland, has an area of 9,000 square miles and a 1936 census showed a native population of 44,240. Djibouti had a population of 14,870, including 923 French. The colony is important in Italian eyes because Djibouti is Ethiopia's railway outlet to the sea and because French and British Somaliland break Italy's possession of the coastal areas adjacent to Ethiopia into two parts.)

Gayda charged the French with supplying arms to the Ethiopians through Djibouti during the Italian campaign and now refusing to let Italy have the Ethiopian consulate building in Djibouti.

PRIME MINISTER ENDORSES CHARGE

Also Says Same Sentiments Shared by Colleagues at Ottawa

Ottawa, Dec. 12—(CP)—Charges directed at Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario by Transport Minister Howe and Labor Minister Rogers in Port Arthur Saturday, were warmly endorsed today by Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

In a prepared statement the Prime Minister said references to the "alliance" between Mr. Hepburn and Premier Duplessis of Quebec, to efforts looking toward removal of Mr. Mackenzie King as Liberal leader and to the threat to national unity, were correct.

Not only were the statements of Mr. Howe and Mr. Rogers correct, the Prime Minister declared, but they were "shared by every one of my colleagues, and by the vast majority of members of the Liberal party throughout the Dominion."

The issue between the Federal and Ontario Liberal parties will be "discussed in all its implications" at a party caucus as soon as Parliament meets in January, the Prime Minister said.

IMPERIAL VETERANS COMPLETE PLANS FOR ANNUAL CONCERT

Final plans for the annual Christmas Tree and entertainment were laid by members of the Imperial Veterans' Association of Belleville at a special meeting held in the Armouries over the week end under the chairmanship of President James Shepherd.

Veterans' children under the age of fourteen are asked to leave their names with secretary Joseph Semaine or with the president by Thursday of this week. A splendid program has been arranged for the function that takes place before Christmas and will be given under the direction of Lieut. Fred Jobson.

The sale of tickets to assist in financing the tree will conclude this week and on Thursday night the prizes will be distributed, President Shepherd announced.

Enjoyable Party Marks Birthday

About forty relatives and friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. Harris, Sidney, on Tuesday evening it being Mrs. Harris' birthday. During the evening progressive euchre was enjoyed by the guests with suitable prizes being awarded to the winners. At the midnight hour a delicious lunch was served of which a beautiful birthday cake with its brightly burning candles looked very pretty in the centre of the table. Following the lunch Mrs. Harris was presented with many birthday gifts for which she thanked them all for their kindness on remembering her on her birthday. "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow" was sung, after all wended their way home in the small hours of the morning and a very happy time was spent together.

AS PRO-NAZI'S RIOTED IN SOFIA

Mounted police are shown attempting to break up a students' demonstration in the Bulgarian capital during the recent riots that accompanied the popular clamor for revision of Bulgaria's frontiers. Four hundred persons were arrested and a "curfew" was declared before order was restored. Many of the demonstrators defied the police by kneeling in the streets and shouting "Heil Hitler."

SMILE OF VICTORY FOR NEW CONSERVATIVE LEADER

The smile of victory is plainly seen on the faces of Col. George A. Drew and Mrs. Drew following the election of Col. Drew as the new leader of the Ontario Conservative party. Col. Drew was elected on the first ballot, defeating Hon. Earl Lawson, Wilfrid Heighington and Rev. Norman Rawson. When the results of the election were announced, Mrs. Drew was the first person to bestow congratulations on her husband.

WHERE 20 MINERS MET DEATH IN MINE DISASTER

Shown piled up more than a mile underground, these smashed cars are some of the 26 which carried 250 miners careening down into the depths of the Princess Colliery, Sydney Mines, N.S. Twenty miners were killed and 40 injured as a result of accident which occurred when a cable, operating the "man rake," snapped and allowed the cars to hurtle down the steep incline. This is one of the first pictures taken of the interior of the mine shortly after the fatal disaster.

George's Wild Oats

CHAPTER XXXI

Ted Lane, on leaving the drug store, wended his way toward the Elkton Theatre. He had arrived in town a half an hour before and, having failed to locate Rita at the hotel, had decided to look for her at the theatre, where she might be rehearsing.

There was a look of grim determination on his face as he strode along the street. He meant to have a showdown with Rita. Maybe all that stuff that Mazie had written him was just a lot of tripe —but then, maybe it wasn't. He was here to find out. But if it was true! His lips set in a thin line.

At the stage entrance to the Elkton Theatre, he was stopped by the doorman.

"So what?" said Ted. "I want to see my wife?"

"Which one's your wife?"

"Rita Roselle."

"She ain't in there."

"Where is she?"

"I don't know."

"Then, let me talk to Mazie Dawn. Maybe she'll know."

The doorman hesitated. "Okay —go on in. But don't make any noise."

Ted walked on into the wings. On the stage, a group of players were going through their lines. He looked about for Mazie, and saw her sitting off to one side, watching the rehearsal.

He stepped over to her. "Hello, Mazie."

She glanced at him, then leaped up.

"Ted!" she cried, a bit too eagerly. "You old darling!"

"Where's Rita?" he asked curtly.

"Shhh!" said some one on the stage.

Mazie drew him into the dressing room corridor.

"We can talk here...."

"Where's Rita?" he asked again.

"How should I know?" Mazie fenced.

"You seemed to know a lot about her when you wrote me."

"I was only trying to help you, Ted. I thought it was terrible for you to be taking all the blame, when she—"

"Okay!" he cut in. "You said all that in your letter. Haven't you any idea where I can find her now?"

"Well....she left here about an hour ago, and I don't know but I think she went to that lawyer's office. Anyway, she goes there every day—"

"Where's his office?"

"Just down the street a way. If you wait a minute until I get my hat, I'll show you. I'm through here...."

As Mazie disappeared into her dressing room, Ted grimaced. Mazie annoyed him. She was just a little snooper, and she made it only too plain that she was smitten with him and enjoyed stirring up trouble between him and Rita. But just the same....

A few minutes later, they were emerging onto the street together.

"Look here," he said. "Are you sure you didn't make up a lot of that stuff you wrote me?"

"Why, Ted! Why should I do a thing like that?" she pouted.

"Well, you've seemed from the beginning to take a little too much pleasure in butting into the disagreement between Rita and me."

"Ted Lane! I think you're terrible to say things like that!"

"Okay. Sorry."

"Besides, if you think I'm lying, you ought to hear what every one else is saying about the way Rita has been carrying on with that George Martin!"

"You mean the whole town's talking?"

"And how!"

Mazie tucked her hand through his arm. "It's a shame, Ted. You deserve a wife who'd appreciate you. You—"

"Can the sympathy," he said rudely. "Where's that lawyer's office?"

"We're just coming to it—"

Mazie halted suddenly, and so did Ted—for, at that instant, Rita came out of George's office building, scarcely ten feet ahead of them.

Ted ducked quickly into a doorway, drawing Mazie with him.

"Let's see where she goes," he whispered.

She went straight to a dilapidated taxi standing at the curb. Ted and Mazie heard her say, "Drive me out to Mr. George Martin's residence." Then, she climbed in.

Mazie looked at Ted. "Now maybe you'll believe me!"

Ted didn't reply. No sooner had Rita been driven away than he dashed across the street to another dilapidated car that seemed to be a taxi.

"Follow that other car!" he told the driver.

Jean Parker and Douglass Montgomery in a scene from "Life Begins with Love," at the McCarthy Theatre.

He hopped in, Mazie, hot on his heels, hopped in after him. They shot off down the street in pursuit of Rita....

Ten minutes later, when Ted saw Rita's taxi turn into the driveway of George's home, he ordered his own driver to stop.

"Okay—we'll get out here."

Having dismissed the cab, he and Mazie started walking up the driveway.

"What are you going to do, Ted?" Mazie asked breathlessly.

"I'm going in there and tear that fellow to pieces!"

Mazie clutched his arm. "Wait a minute—maybe he isn't home yet. It's kind of early for him to be home."

"Then, why did she come out here?" Ted demanded.

"Don't you see?" said Mazie. "The way I figure it is that she went to his office and he wasn't there—so she has come out nere to wait for him. Aynway, I think it would be a good idea to wait a while before rushing in there. Then, when he comes, you can catch them together —and —and give it to them!"

Ted hesitated. "Okay — maybe you're right."

They saw Rita's taxi coming back down the drive, and ducked behind some shrubbery. They saw that the taxi was empty.

Then, they moved closer to the house, stationed themselves behind a hedge where they had a view of the front door, and settled down to wait....

CHAPTER XXXII

George's agitation over the arrival in town of Ted Lane had not lessened when he parted from Mr. Buxton after partaking of a drink with that gentleman at the hotel bar.

Mr. Buxton had discussed a legal matter he wanted George to handle and, at any other time, George would have been elated over getting this new business—but now, he was too worried to be able to think of anything but the ominous threat contained in that letter nestling in his pocket.

As he proceeded toward his office, he wondered whether Rita would be there waiting for him, to finish the argument that he had abruptly halted by leaving her flat to go chasing after Ellen. Gosh, he hoped she was gone! Suppose she weren't and Ted Lane should come walking in on them before he could get rid of her!

Reaching his building, he climbed the stairs cautiously. He opened Lee's door, peeped in to make sure the coast was clear, then slipped inside. He held his finger to his lips as Lee started to speak.

"Where's Rita?" he whispered.

"She—she's not in my office, is she?"

"No—you're safe," Lee grinned. "She hung around for a long time waiting for you, but she finally left about fifteen minutes ago."

"Good!" said George, with a sigh of relief.

"But when she left, she seemed pretty determined to see you," Lee added. "Said she wasn't going to let you back out on her, so she's apt to come popping in again at any moment."

"Oh, lord!" groaned George. "Lee, I've simply got to steer clear of her! If I don't there'll be the devil to pay!"

Lee raised his eyebrows. "What's happened now?"

"Her husband is in town!"

"Oho! How do you know?"

"I saw him in the drug store — though he didn't know who I was. I told you about that threat he wired Rita—and now, look at this! I got it last night but didn't read it until just now."

George thrust Ted Lane's letter into his friend's hand. Lee read it, and whistled.

"Ye gods! The fellow seems rather violent!"

"I'll say he's violent!" George began to pace the floor. "A fine kettle of fish I'm in—all because I was fool enough to let you and Ellen persuade me to sow some wild oats!"

"Now, look here!" Lee said indignantly. "Ellen and I didn't advise you to take on a divorce case, kiss your client, and play the part of Romeo as well as lawyer!"

"Oh, all right — it's my own fault!" George conceded. "But Lee what am I going to do?"

"Right now, I suggest that you go home. That's the best place to hide out from Rita for the time being. Then, if she comes back here before her husband catches up with her, I'll tell her what's happened. That ought to make her see for herself that she's got to keep away from you."

George grabbed the letter, and made for the door.

"Thanks, Lee—but don't tell her I've gone home. She might be just crazy enough to come out there!"

He dashed out, and in a few minutes, was speeding homeward in a taxi.

As he drove up before his house, and climbed out, he little knew that two pairs of eyes were peering at him from behind a hedge. He mounted the porch steps, entered the house, and drew a deep breath. He'd hide out here for a week if necessary....

Then, suddenly, he froze. Standing in the living room doorway, was Rita!

"Georgie ...." She moved toward him. "Why are you looking so funny? When you didn't come back to the office, I just had to come out here to see you. I could not let you rush off like that without—"

"Listen!" he cut in seizing her wrist. "Do you know what's happened? Your husband is in town!"

Rita was startled. "What? Ted's here? But—but why?"

"Here's why!" George reached in his pocket, and once more produced Ted's letter. "Read that!"

"Oh, my goodness!" gasped Rita, as she took in the menacing words. "Why, Ted's gone crazy!"

"Maybe he has—but that doesn't alter the fact that you've got to get out of here as fast as you can! If he should find you here—"

George was pushing her toward the door.

"Oh, I'll go, George—I'll go!" She was now as agitated as he.

She never reached the door, however. She was stopped by the sound of the doorbell—a loud, imperative ring.

She and George stared at each other speechlessly for a moment. Then, George started shoving her away from the door.

"It's him! It must be! Hide! Quick!"

"But where?" she wailed.

"Anywhere But hide!"

George waited until she had fled, then fearfully approached the door. He paused to pull himself together, then slowly opened it.

On the porch, was the young man he had seen in the drug store.

"Are you George Martin?"

"Yes," George smiled feebly.

"Well, I'm Ted Lane. Does that name mean anything to you?"

"Oh, why how do you do, Mr. Lane?" George smiled again "What—what can I do for you?"

"You can produce my wife!"

"Y-your wife? W-why should you look for her here?"

"Because here's where she is!"

George forced a laugh. "I'm sorry—but she isn't."

"Oh, yes she is!" Ted grated. "Don't try to lie out of it! I followed her here, and saw her come in!"

"You — you must be mistaken. She—"

"Stop stalling!" Ted cut in. "Are you going to let me come in there, or do I have to use force? Maybe this will persuade you!"

With that, he drew a gun.

The Stars Say—

For Tuesday, December 13

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

STIRRING events mark this day, according to the planetary configurations. There is prospect of an extremely important, urgent and possibly revolutionary movement affecting the future destiny and calling for much forethought and wisdom in making decisions. This seems to relate to romance or adventure, presaging activity in the emotional life as well as reorganization of the business objectives. While all should thrive and bring happiness, there also may be jealousies and public annoyances.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a year of major occurrences, with probably decisive moves and drastic action. These relate to the private life as well as business, and may have a far-reaching effect on the future contentment and objectives. While romantic or emotional angles are stressed, business reactions may be drastic. Be wary of arousing jealousies or disagreeable reprisals of a public nature.

A child born on this day may be exceptionally talented, adventurous, original and audacious, and may attain some public recognition. However, its romantic nature may arouse jealousy and enmity.

Picton

Picton— The splendid sum of $170.00 was realized by the ladies of the Guild of St. Mary Magdalene's Church on Friday afternoon and evening. The Parish Hall was gay with Christmas decorations. The guests were welcomed by the Pres. Mrs. Geo. Hoddon and found many booths of interest. Fancy work was sold by Mrs. S. Collier; Mrs. Webster; Mrs. P. Dever; and Mrs. Colin Carter.

The apron booth, the touch-and-take table, the home cooking and candy all were well patronized. Afternoon tea was served at quartette tables. The buffet table was lovely with its bronze snapdragons, lighted candles and silver tea services. In the evening bridge was played at twenty-nine tables. The favour for high score fell to Mrs. James Walker and Capt. Thos. Heffernan while the lucky number prizes were won by Mrs. Andrew Welbanks and Mrs. Flora Hudgin. Mrs. Wm. Barker of Elmbrook won the lovely quilt that was drawn for and Miss Margaret Ward a knitted bed jacket.

Mr. and Mrs. George Miller have returned from a trip to the south.

PERPETRATOR OF HOAX DIES

Springfield, Mo., Dec. 12 (AP)— Gaston B. Means, 58, oft-time convict widely known for his $104,000 Lindbergh ransom hoax, died early today at the United States medical centre here.

Undisclosed to the end was his secret of what became of the large sum Mrs. Evelyn Walsh McLean of Washington, D.C., gave him on his promise that he could return the kidnapped son of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh alive.

We were eating supper, being lam stew without dumplings, and ma said to pop, Really Willyum, I mean really, that Blantch Hipple is the stingiest woman that ever drew a mortal breath. She had the bridge game at her house this afternoon, and really, Willyum, I mean actually all she served was tea and toast and butter, without even the saving grace of marmalade, really, Willyum, I mean without exception, she's the tightest person that ever rose on 2 feet, ma said.

Surely, that's a slite exaggeration, pop said. I heard of a man so stingy that he wrote his diary in pencil so he could rub it all out on the 31st of December and use the book again for the following year's diary, and he kept all his pencil shavings for kindling wood, he said, and ma said, I was just ready to boil, and so were all the other ladies.

I heard of a miser so stingy that he went crazy working on a scheme to save his frosted breath in winter to use for ice in summer, and his brother was almost worse, his brother could never bring himself to change the subject of conversation because he never considered it sufficiently worn out to drop, and as he always chose the cheapest possible subject, namely the weather, he finely got to be such a bore that he even yawned when he talked to himself, pop said. And then how about the woman who would only give her husband liver and onions once a year, on her own birthday? he said, and ma said, Now Willyum Potts, you had liver and onions only 2 days ago, so for goodness sakes eat your nice lam stew.

LEGLESS MAN MAKES HIS FIRST SOLO FLIGHT

Seattle, Dec. 13 (AP)—Three years ago surgeons amputated both George Copping's legs below the knee. Copping asked the surgeon what would be the "most impossible" career for him. "Flying an airplane, probably," the surgeon replied. Yesterday Copping made his first solo flight in a seaplane. Ten more hours and he will have a solo licence, he said.

Daladier's Emergency Measures Approved

Paris, Dec. 13 (AP)—The Chamber of Deputies today approved Premier Daladier's request for emergency measures to speed passage of the ordinary and extraordinary budgets for 1939.

Daladier's position has not been helped by the growing feeling among chamber circles that Chancellor Hitler was planning further moves toward the east in the near future.

Many deputies who supported Daladier on his strong policy of using troops to crush the recent general strike and restore internal order were unable to go along with him on foreign affairs.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Dec. 13—(CP)— Synopsis—A disturbance of increasing intensity is moving eastward across Cape Breton, and another deep low covers Hudson Bay with high pressure and cold weather in the upper Mackenzie Valley. Pressure is high to the immediate southwest of the Great Lakes and over the far west states. Rain and snow have fallen over the Maritimes, also snow falls or flurries in many parts of Ontario and Quebec, though it has been fair throughout the west. Colder weather is likely to extend over Manitoba and Saskatchewan from the north.

Lake Superior: Strong southwest to northwest winds and gales; partly cloudy with snowflurries. Wednesday — strong northwest winds and gales; colder with snowflurries.

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Cold front! These will be common from now on; they are weather phenomena or formations particularly of the winter months. Imagine a mass of dense, cold air moving down from the northwest. Such a mass has the form of a gigantic blunt wedge lying on the ground with the wedge-edge to the east. As this mass moves irresistibly along, it cuts under the warmer air, raising it. The boundary line between the advancing cold air mass and the warm air mass is the 'cold front'. At this meeting line occur clouds, squalls and often thunder and lightning accompanied by rain or snow. There are also marked changes in wind direction, generally from southeast to northwest, and decided drops in temperatures.

QUOTES HEPBURN AS REFUSING OFFER OF CONCESSIONS

Star Interview Says Federal Authorities Tried to Make Peace

FLAT REJECTION

Hepburn Says Gardiner Came As a Peacemaker

Toronto, Dec. 13 (CP)—The Toronto Daily Star in a newspage story today quoted Premier Hepburn as saying Dominion government authorities tried to make peace with him in the present dispute between the premier's supporters and those of Prime Minister Mackenzie King by sending Agricultural Minister J. G. Gardiner to offer "certain concessions".

In an interview obtained at Mr. Hepburn's farm home near St. Thomas, the Star quoted the premier as saying:

"I was told I could have some say in Ontario appointments, that I could name one cabinet minister, not two, as has been rumored, and that I could pass on Ontario Senators. I rejected the whole proposal flatly, saying I would have nothing to do with federal patronage if Mr. King stayed."

"Did Not Approach Gardiner".

"I did not approach Mr. Gardiner. He approached me. I told him plainly I was prepared to support any new progressive leader with a constructive platform who might be chosen by the Liberal party in Canada. But I said 'if I have to reconcile myself to another five years of the same kind of government we have had since Mr. King's return to power, I cannot and will not support Mr. King'.

"I informed Mr. Gardiner that I would seriously consider withdrawing from public life rather than disrupt the Liberal party under such circumstances, but that I could not stretch my conscience to support King. No mention was made of Mr. Duplessis or any conspiracy. I have not talked politics with Mr. Duplessis for many months. Certainly there has never been any thought of any conspiracy."

'Came as Peacemaker'

The Star said that Mr. Hepburn, questioned concerning rumors Mr. Gardiner had been proposed to succeed Mr. Mackenzie King as Prime Minister, replied:

"Mr. Gardiner came as a peacemaker. His efforts were entirely conciliatory. There was no mention of Mr. Gardiner's succeeding Mr. King. No one would expect Mr. Gardiner, as a member of the King Cabinet, to be disloyal enough to discuss himself as a successor with anyone while still under

CHAMBERLAIN TO MAKE APPEAL

To Give in Detail His Policy of European Appeasement

London, Dec. 13 (CP-Cable) — Prime Minister Chamberlain is expected to make a strong appeal for his policy of European appeasement when he speaks tonight to the Foreign Press Association.

He is believed in political circles to be ready to reiterate Great Britain's desire for a general European settlement and to appeal to other nations to substitute cooperation for friction in order to facilitate a political and economic understanding.

The prime minister may say Britain is willing to play her full part in solution of the Jewish refugee problem. One prediction heard is that he will declare Britain has done her share toward the establishment of peace and now expects gestures from other powers.

Ruth Etting Tells of Threats Against Her Life by Her Husband

Los Angeles, Dec. 13 (AP)—Torch singer Ruth Etting, who signed herself "Nutsy" in a telegram to Pianist Myrl Alderman, faced cross-examination today on her accusation that Martin Synder shot Alderman at the musician's Hollywood Hills home last Oct. 15.

Miss Etting first took the stand yesterday at Snyder's trial on six felony charges—three of attempted murder, two of kidnapping and one of carrying a gun with the numbers filed off.

In the same throaty voice which brought her fame as a blues singer, she charged Snyder, her husband and manager for seventeen years, with threatening her life and with wounding Alderman in the abdomen as he sat on a piano bench in the music room of his residence.

She said Snyder forced Alderman at gunpoint into the home where she and Snyder's daughter, Edith, were preparing dinner, and announcing "he had us all where he wanted us".

"Waving a pistol he forced us into the music room and told us this was the end of all three of us," Miss Etting testified.

"Then, Myril opened his mouth and Snyder shot—twice—and then the light went out," she said. "Mr. Alderman fell off the piano bench on his face. I screamed.

"Then Mr. Snyder said: 'I've had my revenge. Now you can call the police'."

She described rushing to the bedroom to get a revolver which "because of his (Snyder's) recent threats" she had taken to Alderman's house.

"He came after me," she continued, "and we met in the bedroom. He made a grab for me. I had the gun behind my back and it exploded."

She fled, she said, when Edith ran into the room and separated them. As she ran from the house, she heard another shot and saw Snyder dash past her and into the street.

She divulged how at the time of her divorce she gave Snyder stocks and securities valued at $75,000, a half-interest in her Beverly Hills home and paid $50,000 of his gambling debts. Since then, she said, he had tried to obtain more money from her.

TREND OF POLICY OF CHAMBERLAIN MAY BE INDICATED

British Prime Minister Is Guest of Foreign Press Association

REICH REPRESENTED

London, Dec. 13 (CP)—The diplomatic world today awaited the speech Prime Minister Chamberlain is to deliver tonight (at 4.40 p.m. EST) before the Foreign Press Association in the hope it will indicate the line of policy to be followed from now until Jan. 14 when he completes a visit to Italy.

The importance of the speech, on the association's fiftieth anniversary, was indicated by the guest list which included most cabinet ministers, leading ambassadors and ministers, and 150 foreign correspondents representing 35 countries.

Germany Represented.

Chancellor Hitler sent Gottfried Aschmann, head of the German Foreign Office Press Department, as a representative. The ambassadors included those of Belgium, Brazil, France, Germany, Italy, Poland and Russia.

Mr. Chamberlain is expected to enlarge upon the government's attitude toward Memel and may discuss the British position toward military assistance for France, political-economic agreement with Germany, and political understanding with Italy.

In the House of Commons yesterday, the Prime Minister spoke of French-British concern over the prospect of German gestures toward Memel, former German territory, but no political informant thought it likely British action now would go beyond the "concern" stage.

Reference To Military Aid.

Some uneasiness, however, was displayed over Mr. Chamberlain's reference to military assistance for France, and there were many who urged clarification of his assertion Great Britain had no pact or treaty specifically requiring her to aid France against Italy.

$1,000 SETTLEMENT ACCIDENT SEQUEL

Cobourg, Ont., Dec. 13 (CP) — Settlement for $1,000 was reached today, and by consent the case dismissed without costs, in the $5,000 damage action brought by Mrs. Agnes Sharpe of Odessa against Mr. John Moat of Oakville.

The case was listed for trial at the non-jury sittings here before Mr. Justice Hogg.

IF ACREAGE UNCUT WHEAT SURPLUS WILL BE LARGE

Only Drought Could Prevent Great Overproduction Says Wheeler

CONFERENCE AT 'PEG

By CARL REINKE

Winnipeg, Dec. 13 (CP)—If present wheat acreage is maintained by the exporting countries, those countries should reconcile themselves to producing at least 250,000,000 bushels more than there is prospect of the importing countries taking, L. A. Wheeler, chief of the Foreign Agricultural Service of the United States Department of Agriculture, said today before the Prairie Markets Conference.

If acreage were maintained anywhere near the 1938 level, the only thing that could prevent a great excess production would be the kind of droughts over extensive areas that occurred in North America from 1933 to 1937, he said.

Optimism Lacking.

Painting a gloomy picture of the future in a detailed analysis of the individual possible markets, Mr. Wheeler concluded that the exporting countries could not count on a

10 CARDINALS ARE MENTIONED

Villeneuve Among Those Noted as Possible Successor to Pope

Vatican City, Dec. 13 (CP-Havas)—The names of Rodrigue Cardinal Villeneuve, Archbishop of Quebec, George Cardinal Mundelein, Archbishop of Chicago, and Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli, Papal Secretary of State, have been brought to the fore in guarded speculation on which Cardinal may be named successor to Pope Pius XI.

Although the Pontiff has recovered from his heart attack of recent weeks, he is constantly under the threat of death due to his grave heart condition and advanced age.

Germany Troubles.

At present the church is waging a struggle against the pagan doctrines that have taken root in Germany and the racial credo in Italy. Therefore, it is thought the Sacred College will have to consider nomination of a Pope endowed with great energy

The choice might fall on a foreign prelate in order to maintain the church's independence toward various questions, including the Fascist regime.

The Italian Cardinals who seem to be likely candidates in addition to Cardinal Pacelli, whom Pope Pius is said to favor for the post, are Elia Cardinal Dalla Costa, Archbishop of Florence; Idelfonso Cardinal Schuster, Archbishop of Milan; Luigi Cardinal Maglione, former Nuncio at Paris; Pietro Cardinal Boetta, Archbishop of Genoa; Giovanni Cardinal Nasalli-Rocca, Archbishop of Bologna; Francesco Cardinal Marchetti-Selvaggiana, Vicar General of Rome, and Pietro Cardinal Fumasonibiondi, former Apostolic delegate to the United States.

The Sacred College at present has 64 Cardinals, 39 of them Italians.

'We Want Vesuvius and Venice' Cry of French Students in Parade

London, Dec. 13.—The Times today says, "another dictator applying the technique of diplomacy with agitation seems to be claiming from France certain territories which for the best part of a century have belonged to her, because they are partly inhabited by Italians. A few demonstrations are staged and then used as proof of 'national dynamism'. Here and there grievances are discovered and are promptly made the basis for 'claims of a vital nature' and aspirations which are irresistible because they are 'natural'.

"With the quick riposte of Gallic wit, students of various French universities have shown the absurdity of these methods by clamoring for Venice and parading placards emblazoned with the device, 'Vesuvius a nous'."

SUEZ CANAL CO. REDUCES RATES, IT IS ANNOUNCED

Action Has No Connection With Italian Agitation for Cameroons

DECISION IN SEPTEMBER

Officials Say They Know Of No Proposal to Placate Italy

Paris, Dec. 13 (AP) — The Suez Canal Company announced today its passage rates would be lowered on Thursday but said the action had no connection with Italian agitation for Mediterranean concessions.

Officials of the company said the charge for vessels passing through the canal, now six shillings ($1.44) a ton, would drop to five shillings ninepence ($1.38)).

Proposed In June Last.

The proposal for the new rates was announced last June at a stockholders' meeting, the officials said, and was formally adopted by the international board of directors in September.

Since this decision Italian claims have been advanced for French Tunisia, Corsica, Nice and Savoy and inferentially for advantages in the French Somaliland port of Djibouti, the French-owned Addis Ababa-Djibouti railroad and the French-controlled Suez Canal.

Officials said they knew of no further proposal afoot to attempt to satisfy the Italian demands (of the canal's 32 directors, 21 are French, 10 British and one a Netherlander.)

BILLION MARKS TO BE PAID IN

Jews in Germany Assemble Cash to Make Up First Instalment

Berlin, Dec. 13 (AP) — German Jews were assembling cash today for the first of four installments of the 1,000,000,000 marks ($400,000,000) fine which they must pay Thursday.

The fine, one of the major measures in the Nazi anti-Semitic campaign which began a month ago, was imposed after Ernst von Rath, secretary of the German Embassy in Paris, was shot fatally by Herschel Grynszpan, young Polish Jew.

Chinese Move Closer to Canton

Hong Kong, Dec. 13 (AP)—Chinese troops were reported moving closer to Canton in a big semi-circle today causing the Japanese to withdraw into the city from previously conquered territory in South China.

Japanese sources said Kwangtung Province authorities were recruiting additional troops under a new order from General Chiang Kai-shek to launch a counter-attack on the invaders.

General Rikichi Ando, commander in chief of Japanese forces in South China, challenged Chiang Kai-shek to meet the Japanese in a decisive battle. Admitting that his 300,000 troops now massed at Canton were growing restless as a result of inactivity, Ando published an open letter to the Chinese leader.

"Come at the head of 1,000,000 troops and encounter Japanese forces to determine the final issue in a decisive battle."

Rough Seas Balk Efforts at Rescue

Plymouth, England, Dec. 13 (CP-Cable)—Fruitless efforts have been made since last Thursday to rescue William Jordan, principal keeper of the towering, isolated Eddistone lighthouse marking the reef outside Plymouth Sound. He is suffering a severe hernia.

Rough seas balked the attempt of the Trinity House vessel Satellite to reach the lighthouse last night but the assistant keeper signalled with a hand lamp that his 54-year-old mate was slightly better although still needing a doctor.

Waiting ashore, Mrs. Mary Jordan has seen rescue vessels repeatedly attempt to reach the 133-foot tower ,only to return to report failure.

PRIME MINISTER DECLINES TO GIVE SPECIFIC PLEDGE

Is Asked If He Will Obtain Approval of House of Commons

COLONIAL ISSUE

Marquess of Londonderry Urges Swift Action by British Government

London, Dec. 13 (AP)—Prime Minister Chamberlain declined today to give specific assurance he would get the approval of the House of Commons before opening any negotiations with Germany over the return of former German colonies.

Asked by Duncan Sandys, Conservative, for such assurance, Mr. Chamberlain replied, "No, I do not think I can undertake it."

The Prime Minister then referred to a previous government pledge made by Malcolm MacDonald, Secretary for the Dominions and Colonies, that any colonial agreement would be submitted to parliament for ratification.

Mr. MacDonald also told the House of Commons last week that the colonial question was not one of practical politics now and was not being considered.

The Prime Minister said yesterday Germany had made no formal demand for her former colonies.

The Marquess of Londonderry, once a leading advocate of British-German friendship but recently a critic of anti-Jewish violence in Germany, declared before the Overseas League that the British government should state quickly and fully its stand on colonies.

"We are determined not to sacrifice one individual or one inch of territory and we will accept with its full implications any challenge to that policy," he said.

"I believe this should be said in no uncertain terms but I am not thinking that it will be necessary to take any drastic steps in relation to it."

CHAMBERLAIN'S WORDS PLEASE ITALIANS

Rome, Dec. 13 (AP)—The authoritative Fascist editor Virginio Gayda today cited Prime Minister Chamberlain's statement that Great Britain was not bound by treaty to aid France in case of an Italian attack as a reason why the French should heed Italian territorial demands.

Hepburn Declares Party Which He Will Support Need Not Be New Party

Refers to Federal General Election as Likely in 1939

CONFIDENCE IN POLICIES

Declares Time Calls for Action Over National Issues

St. Thomas, Ont., Dec. 13 (CP)—Premier Mitchell Hepburn said last night his support in a Federal general election would be directed against the party led by Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

The Liberal leader of Ontario said:

"My position is this—in a general election I could not conscientiously support a party led by Mackenzie King whose government, in a time when action on national issues was badly needed, holds the worst record in this respect in the history of the Dominion.

"The party I am prepared to support, and it is not necessarily a third party, must be led by a man in whom I have confidence and whose policies, in my opinion, will solve the pressing problems that confront Canada today."

Denial Given Charges.

Mr. Hepburn denied charges by Labor Minister Rogers and Transport Minister Howe that a conspiracy was in operation to force the retirement of Prime Minister King.

He said he knew of no Ontario-Quebec alliance. After Mr. King issued a statement in Ottawa, stating he believed the Rogers-Howe charges were correct, Mr. Hepburn replied briefly:

"I would suggest that Mr. King lift the blinds of his summer retreat at Kingsmere, peek out and then go back and hibernate again. It strikes me that's about all he has been doing in the last four years and he might as well continue."

Says Cabinet United.

Mr. Hepburn said it would take "only a few more provocative 'speeches' to bring the 'full weights of his administration out against Ottawa'." He declared his cabinet was united behind him.

"My ministers are 100 per cent behind me," the premier said.

Open warfare between Ontario Liberal supporters of Premier Hepburn and Dominion Liberals as represented by Prime Minister Mackenzie King, promised to furnish the most dramatic phase of the next general election in Canada, expected in the fall of 1939.

Motorist, Thrown From Car to Ditch, Is Fatally Injured by Second Car

Toronto, Dec. 13 (CP)—Dr. J. P. Cassidy, Toronto, died in hospital here today of injuries suffered when he was thrown from an automobile in suburban Scarborough Township last night and struck by another car as he lay unconscious in a ditch.

Cassidy was tossed 15 feet across ice-covered road and he was hurled into the ditch when the door flew open. The driverless car continued on its way and crashed into a truck driven by Roy Downie, Toronto. Downie and a passenger, Robert Young, suffered facial and chest injuries.

Cassidy was tossed 15 feen across the road and as Downie and Young were emerging from the damaged truck an eastbound automobile skidded, ran off the road and landed on the unconscious form of Cassidy. Its driver assisted Downie and Young removing Cassidy from under the car then left the scene of the accident without reporting his name to police.

A native of Tweed, Dr. Cassidy is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Cassidy, two brothers, Frank and Damien, and three sisters, Sister Mary Veronica, of the Order of Notre Dame, Gertrude and Anna.

5 Million-Volt Atom Smasher At Work'on Secret of Universe

By STEPHEN McDONOUGH

Washington, Dec. 13 (AP) — The Carnegie Institution of Washington began work today with a 5,000,000-volt atom smasher in a new effort to find out what makes the universe tick.

The huge electrical generator whirls particles of atoms at a target at terrific speeds. It will explore the smallest regions of space into which man never will see.

Its powerful radiations will show what goes on within the nucleus of atoms where 1/1,000,000 of an inch between two particles is relatively comparable to the distance between the sun and the earth in astronomical measurements.

Force of Attraction.

Two years ago Dr. Merle Tive, Dr. L. R. Hafstad, and Dr. N. P. Heydenburg announced discovery of a new force of attraction within the nucleus of the atom. This explained how the atom is bound together to form the basis of all elements of matter.

This force, which begins to operate when protons, neutrons, and other particles of the atom get within about one 1/1,000,000 of an inch of each other, pulls the particles together.

Under the known laws of electricity such positive and negatively charged particles would repel each other. At such infinitely tiny distances, however, electricity seems to work in reverse and pull oppositely-charged particles together.

Primary Cement.

This force, the Carnegie scientists have concluded, is the primary "cement" which holds the universe together and is fully as important as gravity, which holds larger bodies to the earth and keeps the stars and planets in their orbits.

The new atomic observatory will enable them to carry on measurements even closer within the nucleus of the atom than has been possible before.

The new instrument generates particles of atoms and carries them on swiftly-moving belts down a cascade tube into a cloud of hydrogen gas where the recoil or attraction of the particles can be measured.

Girl Walking Track Struck by Train, Fatally Injured

North Bay, Ont., Dec. 13 (CP)—Miss Eileen Filiatrault, 23, died here today from injuries received when she was struck by an eastbound Canadian National Railways passenger train less than half a mile from North Bay Station. One leg was cut off and the other crushed.

Engineer George Lusk, Capreol, told railway authorities he saw the girl walking along the track just before the train struck her. He stopped the train, and called an ambulance from a nearby residence. The girl's family resides at Iroquois Falls.

VOODOO KILLER PLEADS GUILTY

Negro Arrested at Chatham May Stand Trial in Missouri

Detroit, Dec. 13—(CP)—Earl Carl Harris, 36, pleaded guilty in court here today to the murder of Christiana Eastmond, 36, in Suburban Highland Park, Oct. 17. He was ordered held without bail to appear in Wayne County Circuit Court within 10 days or two weeks. Harris was arrested in Chatham, Ont., Saturday.

The Negro voodoo killer is wanted in connection with five other slayings, but court authorities said Harris would probably go to Missouri for trial. Penalty for first degree murder in Michigan is life imprisonment, in Missouri, the penalty is hanging.

Under Michigan court procedure, Harris may go before the Circuit Court and again plead guilty to the murder charge. If so, the facts in the case will be related to the presiding judge and the judge will determine the degree of the murder.

Harris, who told Highland Park police he cut Miss Eastwood's throat and stabbed her 37 times because "a charm prepared by a Detroit witch-doctor failed to make her love me," appeared unconcerned as he stood in court.

No Squadron Flight To Canada by R.A.F. During Royal Visit

Vancouver, Dec. 13 (CP)—Mayor George C. Miller told the City Council today he had been advised from Ottawa there was little likelihood a Royal Air Force Squadron would fly non-stop from London to Canada next spring while the king and queen are visiting the Dominion. The flight has been suggested by civic authorities here and in Victoria.

Mayor Miller indicated the idea was rejected because of possible accidents which might cast a shadow over the royal visit.

Trenton

Trenton, Dec. 13th—Death struck suddenly over the week-end to remove from Trenton three well-known persons, while the passing of a member of the R.C.A.F. in Belleville Hospital on Monday morning added one more to the already high total. The sudden death of J. G. Squier, Sr., at his home on Victoria Ave. Saturday evening cast a pall of gloom over old friends, especially as the deceased was apparently perfectly well and active as late as election day, last Monday; and others who passed on suddenly were Albert Birch, long employed by the C. P. R. locally, at his home on Heber St. early Sunday, and Peter Banfield, war veteran, who died at his Richard St. home on Friday. The fourth was a young member of the R.C.A.F., Henry Paquet, 23, who passed away early Monday following an appendicitis operation.

J. G. SQUIER
(Trenton)

The late Jeremiah Gatchell Squier, one of the best known and most widely respected figures of the town, passed suddenly away at his home on Victoria Ave., on Saturday evening. He was apparently in ordinary good health during the early part of the week, going about his business as usual; but death came suddenly after a few days of illness, which appeared at first as a minor complaint. The deceased, in his 86th. year, had been associated with the coal and wood business in Trenton for nearly a half century, still maintaining his office east of the Trent River near the Benedict Proctor plant; and there he had been in the habit of meeting old friends daily. Born in Consecon, he was a member of the United Church, and had at various times held various local offices. Funeral services will be held on Tuesday from the home with Rev. J. U. Robins of King St. United Church officiating, following which interment will take place in Mt. Evergreen Cemetery. Surviving him are his widow, a son, Jeremiah, Jr., at home, and a daughter, Mrs. W. Thompson, in Toronto.

ALBERT BIRCH

Even more sudden was the passing of Albert Birch, 60, of Heber St. for the deceased man was at his work on Saturday as usual and expired at his home early on Sunday after only a few hours' illness. Employed for many years by the C. P. R. here, the deceased was well and favourably known by hundreds of fellow citizens and workers, and his untimely death has brought many expressions of regret. Born in England, he was a member of the Masonic order, and the funeral is planned for Wednesday afternoon from the home under auspices of that society, Rev. F. A. Smith of St. George's Anglican Church officiating, and interment being made in St. George's Cemetery. Surviving him are his widow and a son, Ian, in Northern Ontario.

PETER BANFIELD

Members of the Canadian Legion Post 110 marched at the funeral of a comrade on Sunday when the burial took place of the late Peter Banfield, 66, of Richard St. The deceased had been in failing health for some time and his passing in Belleville Hospital on Friday was hardly a surprise. Known among Legionnaires as an ardent and hard-working member of the group he was respected and admired by dozens of friends. The funeral, held from Cobley's Funeral Chapel on Sunday afternoon, was widely attended and was under Legion auspices. Bearers included a group of close personal friends and included Comrades.

Surviving him are a son at Trenton Air Station, a brother in Toronto, and a step-son, Jesse Baker. His wife predeceased him only four months ago. Burial was made in St. George's Cemetery, Rev. F. A Smith officiating.

HENRY PAQUET

Succumbing in Belleville Hospital on Monday morning to an emergency operation for appendicitis, Henry Paquet, 23, of St. George-de-Beauce, Quebec, will probably be given a military service here before his body is sent to his late home. Paquet, ill for a few days only, entered the R.C.A.F. in July, 1937. His mother survives him.

$500 DAMAGES IN LEGGETT CASE

Suit Settled Out of Court and Accepted by Justice McTague

Settlement of $500.00 for damages and certain admitted costs, amounting to $221.50, were agreed upon, between the parties concerned in the case of Leggett vs the Board of Education of the City of Belleville, the Honourable Mr. Justice McTague was informed at the opening of the non-jury sittings of the Supreme Court of Ontario in Belleville yesterday.

As the court was opened by Sheriff O'Flynn, Charles A. Payne K.C. rose to his feet to welcome His Lordship on behalf of the Hastings County Bar Association.

"On behalf of the Bar Association of this County, I am privileged to welcome you here sir and also wish to congratulate you upon your appointment and elevation to the Court of Appeal", stated Mr. Payne

"I must confess I will leave the Supreme Court circuit with profound regret and my only hope is to have you gentlemen personally argue your cases before me in the Court of Appeals," replied His Lordship in thanks.

The Leggett vs the Board of Education case listed arose out of an accident at the West Belleville playgrounds last summer when eight-year-old Ronald Leggett fell from one of the recreation fixtures, sustaining a fractured arm. The action was settled amicably between the concerned parties before the court opened and the agreement of settlement endorsed by His Lordship upon the request of Mr. Payne, counsel for the plaintiffs and Gordon Robertson, representing the Board.

The only other case listed for trial was the action of Wasmund vs Armstrong, a question of land title. The action was for the declaration of ownership. At the request of representing counsel the matter was postponed until the next court of similiar jurisdiction.

R. VANDERWATER SPECIAL SPEAKER

'Farming Conditions in Ontario' is Subject of Talk

"Farm conditions as they prevail in Ontario today", was the topic ably presented to the Belleville Y's Men's Club at their weekly meeting by Col. Roscoe Vanderwater, well known Hastings County soldier-farmer last evening.

Col. Vanderwater, in his educational discourse, informed the Y's Men he was satisfied Canada had to become more "self-centred and firm-footed" in its farming projects. "We have some exceptionally fine farm lands in Ontario, but did you ever realise that only about five per cent of these farms are owned outright by their operators? High taxation and low prices for farm commodities have made the business of farming anything but encouraging to our youth. Young farm lads today seem prone to accept government camp jobs in the summer and relief in the winter, simply because of the uncertainty of farm crops and the low prices the farmers are forced to accept for their produce," stated Col. Vanderwater as he urged his listeners not to complain if butter and eggs cost an additional cent on the market occasionally. "The farmer has a hard uphill struggle with so many elements against him," concluded the speaker.

Y'sman J. O. Herity was called upon to thank the speaker. "Before moving a vote of thanks I might tell you that the farm now operated by Col. Vanderwater near Foxboro was first settled by his ancestors in the year 1792 and four generations of the family have tilled the soil on that farm. It is staple farming like this that Canada needs," suggested Mr. Herity.

President Harold Vaughan added his personal thanks and later reminded the Y's Men of next week's "Boys' Night meeting, at which time every member will bring a teen-aged lad and entertain him. A Christmas project is also being introduced by the club. The meeting was delighted with two splendid piano solos by William Connor, well known local musician and organist.

PREPARE ICE SHACKS FOR WINTER FISHING

As a thin scum of ice again formed over the quiet waters of the bay this morning following last night's heavy frosts, bayside dwellers were observed this morning repairing and patching their tiny ice-fishing shacks, ready for the first of this annual work of the season's winter fishing. Yearly the sale of mud cats, perch and sunfish caught through patient angling in the tiny houses that dot the frozen surface of the bay and for some time past residents have been chafing under the delayed freezing of the bay.

Solution of Unemployment Puts Fifty Thousand Men At Work Building Homes

National Housing Act Provides Means for Stimulating Building Industry, Thus Providing Work for Thousands at Present Unemployed in Canada—Need of Many More Dwelling Houses is Apparent, Government Provides Opportunity for Easy Financing—Speaker Tells Rotarians How the National Housing Act Works and is Being Used to Advantage in Many Municipalities.

That there is a very present need for many new houses in Canada, that the National Government has met the situation fairly in a business-like way in which politics does not figure and provided easy means of finance for those who wish to own their own homes, that general advantage taken of the National Housing Act would help to solve the unemployment question, was contended by W. J. LeClair, of Toronto, Manager of the White Pine Bureau, guest speaker at the weekly meeting of the Belleville Rotary Club in Hotel Quinte, Monday.

Mr. LeClair explained very fully in the time at his disposal the working of the National Housing Act which was initiated by the Bennett government and implemented by the present government after many objections to provisions in the original act had been met and adjusted.

Canada's problems of today were considered great but they are infinitely less than those the Fathers of Confederation had to meet and overcome. The problem of unemployment, of course, looms large, but is solvable, said the speaker, and in providing suitable houses for the many who need them work would be provided for 50,000 men who comprise the main army of employable unemployed in Canada today, deductions being made of the unemployed as result of catastrophic conditions in western Canada, seasonable workers and unemployables.

Unfair Restrictions

Restriction on frame houses imposed by municipalities in favor of brick and steel were denounced by the speaker as unfair handicap on the second greatest industry in Canada, an industry which provides employment for twice the number the mining industry does. It has been demonstrated, said the speaker, that frame houses can be made as fire proof as brick, and a model frame house erected in Ottawa was given a lower insurance rating. Housing conditions in Canada were deplorable, shocking even to overseas visitors who had experience in all type of slums. Great Britain has set a fine example in abolishing slums and providing decent homes at small cost.

Dr. Herbert Bruce, former Lieutenant Governor of Ontario investigated slum conditions in Toronto and reported that some three thousand families in that city are living in houses unfit for human habitation.

Shame of Toronto

"At a meeting recently held in Toronto when the coming visit of His Majesty the King was discussed and the suggestion was made that he might be accommodated in a private residence with a $6,000 bathroom, a clergyman present said that he could show those present over 6,000 homes which could boast no bathrooms whatsoever—said the speaker, who related a statement made by the Medical Officer of Health for the City of Ottawa, Dr. Lomer, that there are scores of houses in Ottawa which are unfit for human habitation but which he had not the heart to order closed because of the lack of alternative accommodation for the tenants who would have to be evicted.

That ramshackle dwelling houses are the most glaring blot on the Canadian landscape, was the statement of the speaker who said that his business compelled him to travel extensively in Canada, and squalid was the only name for it. Referring to the coming visit of their Majesties he expressed the hope that a similar impression might not be theirs.

Twenty Years To Pay

The Government under the National Housing Act provides for loans up to eighty per cent of the completed value of the property at an interest rate of five per cent on any priced home the design of which meets the minimum standards and specifications of the Housing Act. On homes of $2500 and under in value the Government will loan up to ninety per cent of the completed value at five percent interest—loans may be amortized on a twenty-year monthly payment basis.

Low Rental Homes

Under Part II of the Act the Government has set aside thirty million dollars ($30,000,000) to assist municipalities or associations of public spirited men who are prepared to provide low cost homes at an uneconomical rental for less fortunate citizens. Under this scheme a municipality can borrow up to ninety per cent of the cost at two per cent interest. A limited dividend company can borrow up to eighty per cent of the cost of such a scheme at an interest rate of one and three-fourths per cent, provided they agree to limiting the dividend on their investment to five per cent.

Government Pays Taxes

Under Part III of the Act the Government further helps the home builder by assuming the burden of the municipal taxes on homes of $4,000 and under in value. Assuming 100 per cent of the increased taxation during the first year—on condition that the municipality show a co-operative spirit by making available for re-sale tax-seized lots at a nominal price of fifty dollars, or the lowest price at which they can legally sell them.

Example of Burlington

Burlington, Ontario, has taken advantage of this Government offer with the best of results, turning non-revenue property into revenue producing a number of tax-seized lots, and giving employment where most needed, twenty houses being built the first year, thirty the second and a possible 36 next year. Other communities have profitted in the same way.

The average Canadian family, gainfully employed has an income of less than one thousand dollars a year, hence the Government lays emphasis on the low cost house.

In conclusion Mr. LeClair summed up his conviction that by taking advantage of the National Housing Act as it deserves "at least 50,000 additional men annually could be put to work in building homes. With the families which they would support taken off relief, and their incomes put in circulation, our employment problem would be well on its way to solution."

All Signs Point To Last Minute Sweep of Buying

All the signs pointed today to an exceptionally hectic Dominion-wide spurt of last-minute Christmas shopping this year. For the weather across the country has been so unseasonably mild this Yuletide that Canadians can't realize Santa Claus soon will be on the stage.

Reports from most parts of Canada indicate Christmas buying has not yet reached its peak, though most merchants say it's been "better than expected" considering the weather. They anticipate a brisk pickup any day now as there are only ten shopping days remaining.

The lag in retail sales of Christmas merchandise has been particularly noticeable in Eastern Canada which this year experienced an open autumn and — so far — one of the mildest winters in years. In the west, which produced a 324,000,000-bushel wheat crop this year, 165,000,000 bushels more than in 1937, sales in most centres have been almost up to last year's levels.

You have given at all times, and under all circumstances your prudent advice, wise leadership and thorfough conscientiousness in the discharge of all the many details attached to the president to decide. The members feel that in your hands no one was overloked. that you may carry a memento of our grateful appreciation as president for the past two years o fthe Neighbors' Aid, we would ask you to accept this gift, that in the hope of frequent use may call to your mind, from time to time, the happy and profitable hours we have spent together.

The months have hung with jewels bright,
Upon the golden months of the year
Which binds the swift year in its fleet to say
There was joy in the shake of your hand, there was joy in the meetings each month
Oh! its great to see the smile that you wear,
And the hand of welcome you extend
Maybe you think it don't mean much
A kindly word, and a friendly touch,
But when the test comes, and there is something to do, I believe we shall all agree, it means much to the Neighbors' Aid, and you.

Signed on behalf of the Neighbors' Aid.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Keene,

Dear Cecil and Bessie:

Once again it gives us great pleasure to be gathered here tonight, to convey to you both our very best wishes for a long and happy wedded life. As you are the centre of interest tonight, the spirit of community offers their love and respect for you.

Bessie, we are glad you are making your home in our community and may your efforts be crowned with health, success and happiness. We welcome you here and our desire is, you will find new and loyal friends. Let God be at the head of your home and lead and guide you.

Cecil, you have been here many years and made many friends and as we think of your recent marriage we are sure you will make your home one of the happiest, with your cheerful disposition expressed by you in your past associations. We congratulate you on your choice of your life partner and may God's richest blessings always follow you through life's journey.

We may live without poetry, music and art,
We may live without conscience and without heart,
We may live without friends, and without books,
But civilized men can't live without cooks.

And now with our very best wishes we ask you to accept these gifts as a slight token of our regard for you both and as you use them in your home, may they ever remind you of your many friends here.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ant Izzabel gave me a dime as a reward for telling her she was my favorite ant, and I was walking along wondering whether to spend it or whether to save it to buy Chrissmas presents with, and I reached in my pants pocket to see how it felt in there and all I felt was a hole, thinking, Gosh shang the luck, I forgot that hole.

And I started to walk back again the same way I came, only I couldn't see anything of it ,and 2 kids started to go passed saying, What's your looking for, what did you see?

O, just a button, I said.

Not wanting to say a dime on acunt of thinking they mite help me to hunt for it and claim findings was keepings, and they said O, who cares about a button, the heck with a button, you must be hard up for something to look for.

And they kept on going, making me feel lucky, only not enough to find my dime, and after a while I sat on my front steps for a rest and Lucky Leroy Shooster came out of his house, and I thought, G, if anybody can find it he can, he's the luckiest guy in the world.

And I said, Hay Lucky, do you want to make a cent? and he said, Maybe, how? and I said, All you have to do is find a dime I just lost and you can have a cent out of it.

A cent, good nite what kind of a percentage is that? Lucky Leroy said, and I said, It's one tenth percentage, what more do you want for nothing? and he said, Well if you call a dime nothing go ahead and find it yourself and keep the whole 10 percentage.

Wich just then I happened to feel in my other pants pocket and what was down there but the dime, only I didn't say so on account of not wanting to give Lucky Leroy a chance to start a argument about me owing him a percentage on account of giving me luck just by talking to me, and I hurry up went and spent it in 4 diffrent places before anything really serious had time to happen to it.

There's a Good Reason You're Constipated!

When there's something wrong with you, the first rule is: get at the cause. If you are constipated, don't fiddle around with makeshift remedies. Find out what's giving you the trouble!

Chances are it's simple if you eat only what most people do: meat, bread, potatoes. It's likely you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It's a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps a bowel movement.

If that fits you, your ticket is a crisp crunchy breakfast cereal—Kellogg's All-Bran. It contains the "bulk" you need plus the intestinal tonic, vitamin B_1.

Eat All-Bran every day, drink plenty of water, and just watch the old world grow brighter! Made by Kellogg in London, Ont.

DEMOCRACY NOW APPRECIATED

Democracy has been attacked by the enemies of democracy, charged with weaknesses and failures, especially at a time when action seems most imperative. It has been discussed by the friends of democracy and praised for its high standard of liberty which allows the individual the right to think and express himself.

People have lived in democratic lands for generations and enjoyed liberty but there is little doubt that none enjoy democratic liberty more than those who live today when democracy has been threatened by exaltation of the state over the individual in some other lands. Now they know the importance of their priceless liberty.

Capt. Anthony Eden, in United States on a brief unofficial visit, spoke on Friday night, placing the individual citizen in the chief place. He also declared that Britain would defend its conception of the relationship of the individual and the state, which, he declared, is being challenged by rival ideologies.

People living in the democracies of the world cannot but be cheered by the statement of Eden that Britain is neither decadent nor faint-hearted. No one believed she was decadent but it was encouraging to hear these words said by one of the outstanding men of the age.

The democratic outlook on life is one of the most remarkable of human developments and so precious that it must be guarded, and it will be guarded. The principle of religious and racial tolerance is one of its chief marks, and the principle of the rights of individuals and minorities is part and parcel of the very spirit of freedom.

There has been an era of emergency and Capt. Eden sees this period as one in which British endeavor will be taxed to the uttermost in a world where "force is for many the only instrument of policy."

What Eden said to the challenge which faces England and the guarantee of permanence of freedom and democracy, cannot but be studied by other nations, who face in their own way just the same problem Britain is facing. His words were "If throughout that testing time, however long or short it be, we hold fast to our faith, cradle it in stone, and set steel to defend it, we can yet hand on our inheritance of freedom intact to the generations that are to come."

One of the finest tributes paid democracy in Britain was couched in the phrase—"It is quite true we criticize one another sometimes; we have always done so, and I suppose we always shall. In itself this is no unhealthy sign in any free community, but this does not alter the fact that at heart, we all want the same things. We all want to preserve our liberties, we all want freedom and security, not only for ourselves but also for our children and for our children's children. We all want peace, however much we may differ as to the method we think best to follow in order to win the common goal. There is a unity of outlook deeper than all the more superficial disunities of expression."

It was this very disunity of expression which is so distasteful to autocrats and dictators. It was this which prompted Hitler some time after Munich to criticize the democracies. Yet such things as this disunity of expression are the very things the democratic peoples are depending on for the fullest expression of democracy.

Today with such speeches, such analyses as Mr. Eden and others give, democracies are learning the great depth and breadth of the principles of government under which they live. They have always known liberty but have not always appreciated its greatness as the finest expression of national life.

In this time of emergency democracies are strengthening. What they have is a treasure, departure of which from the face of the earth would be a catastrophe. This they are realizing.

CAPT. EDEN WELCOMED

Captain Anthony Eden has been given a wholehearted welcome in the United States which indicates in how high regard British public men are held in the great Republic. The acclaim with which he has been greeted is some indication of the reaction of the democratic peoples everywhere in an age when dictators are causing much concern in the world.

Anthony Eden brings a number of appeals to the American people. First there is the charm of his personality, Eden having seen in his young life a great deal of experience in war and in public life. He was a principal in one of the most anxious periods of modern history, at the time of the Ethiopian crisis. Such a man and especially a young man presents an irresistible appeal. Then there is the background of British democracy. British public men such fine examples of their class in the world, with so high a code of honor and so loyal and unselfish an interest in the welfare of their own nation and others.

STRAW AS FUEL ALCOHOL

Straw may be used as fuel for automobiles in the near future, Dr. J. A. Anderson of the National Research Council told a meeting of science, industry and agriculture in Toronto recently. Of course he did not mean straw in bundles or bales, but straw which had been reduced to fuel alcohol.

If this comes about it will mean a great boon to Western Canada, which produces it is said thirty million tons of straw yearly of which two thirds, it is estimated, is wasted. It is figured that this twenty millions of tons will produce more fuel alcohol than could be secured from the grain itself if distilled.

This is a day of achievements which might in other days of less of applied science have been considered miracles. And this is probably one of them. There appears to be no end to the possibilities of composition of synthetic products from all sorts of materials.

The editor of the Daily Commercial News sees perpetual motion as practically achieved if this comes for "the straw makes the fuel to drive the tractor to till the land to raise more straw to make more fuel to drive the tractor."

ONE OF THE BEST CHRISTMAS YARNS OF ALL TIME is that about the old darkey who scraped and saved every penny he could get his hands on for months before Christmas—intending to give himself a much desired Christmas gift, no less than a bottle of gin. He managed to save the required amonnt and went to the liquor store Christmas eve, a snowy, blustery, slippy night. He made his purchase and clasping it to his bosom in a fond embrace, started homeward. He had not proceeded very far when he slipped on the icy sidewalk, and BAM! went the bottle, shattering in a thousand pieces on the pavement. Rising slowly to his feet, and gazing sadly at the wreck of his hopes, while the odd tear chased another down his weatherbeaten cheeks he commented sadly: "Oh, me;.. oh my!.. woe is me!—Christmas has come and gone already, just so quick like dat."

A NEW VIEW OF THE CITY MANAGER FORM OF CIVIC GOVERNMENT is expressed by the Woodstock Sentinel Review which apparently is of the opinion that all mankind is cantankerous and is willing to put up with indifferent or even expensive civic government if it can have the main say in electing enough Aldermen to cuss at and find fault with generally. Perhaps the Woodstock editor is not so far astray at that, for men are an omery lot as a whole and there is no sense in some of their actions, but, perhaps, a lot of satisfaction to them. Says the Woodstock editor under the heading "Badly Managed Cities":

> Despit the fact that 489 cities in the United States have adopted the municipal manager form of government for their municipalities, there doesn't appear to be much inclination on the part of Canadian cities to explore the possibilities of the system.
> It is generally admitted that the theory is sound. A central authority with control over spending is advantageous in any business and makes for efficiency, but there seems to be strong sentiment to the effect that municipal electors do not want that kind of efficiency, even though they have had many proofs that the system they have relied on has been disastrously costly.
> There is no reason why the manager system could not produce outstanding business success except that the average taxpayer is not educated to it and fears that he might become too severely regimented under it. At the present time the Canadian taxpayer seems to be obsessed with a desire to have people running his affairs who are dependent on his vote, on whom he can impose his pet peeves on occasions and whom he can more or less intimidate by threatening to support someone else at election time. To be master of these prerogatives seems to be more satisfying than to have at the control in public business an individual who would be expert and efficient in relation, to the job in hand and who might stop a lot of financial leaks, collect what is owing more efficiently and eventually reduce the tax bills. These improvements are badly needed in Canadian cities. There is not the slightest doubt that public funds have been spent extravagantly and the communities have had poor value. Many municipalities are either insolvent or next door to it, which ought not to be the case if they had competent business management, with someone in control who had the authority to operate the concern in the manner that is essential in successful private companies.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

December 13th., 1918

The big boarding house at Deloro, near Marmora, was destroyed by fire on the morning of the 11th inst., together with several carloads of stores. The loss will be heavy as the building was large and cost considerable to build; it had accommodation for 250 men.

The ice coated streets in the city yesterday morning had the appearance of a skating rink to at least one of Belleville's young women skaters. Putting on her skates she left for her place of employment which is considerable distance from her residence, and arrived there in record time.

Sergt. J. L. Gunter, United States Army, Camp Levis, Washington District, is here on a visit to his wife and family.

Mr. W. J. Magrath of Edmonton, formerly of Belleville, is spending a short time in the city with friends.

30 YEARS AGO

December 13th, 1908

The ice at the arena is in excellent condition.

Messrs. J. A. Kerr and Morden Bird are in Montreal on business.

Mr. N. F. Parks of Campbellford, spent yesterday in town.

Mr. W. H. H. Ponton and Mr. George J. Ponton of the United Fruit Company of Panama, have arrived in the city to spend Christmas with their mother and sister at their home on Church Street.

The members of the Liberal-Conservative Association of Thurlow Township held their annual meeting yesterday and the following officers were elected:—President Alex Moore; Vice-President, Fred Houston; Sect.-Treas., Geo. P. Reid. The meeting was addressed by Mr. W. P. Hudson and Mr. Denyes.

There were twenty loads of hay on the market this morning; the good sleighing, no doubt, was an incentive to the farmers to bring in their loads. The prices ranged from $10 to $15 per ton.

40 YEARS AGO

Dec. 13th., 1898.

Miss Northcott and Miss Fleming, teachers in the Central School, have been remembered by their pupils. The former was presented with a handsome lamp and the latter received an easy chair.

The thermometer registered 12 degrees below zero during last night and at nine o'clock this morning it registered two below zero.

Mr. Charles McDonald of Madoc, was in town today.

Mr. Geo. H. Pope returned today from Montreal.

Mr. John Bonar and family will leave here shortly to reside in Galt.

Mr. James Rogers of Wellington, was a visitor in town today.

The new skating rink is about completed and will soon be ready for use. It was flooded today.

Mr. Harry Hamilton, teller in the local branch of the Merchants Bank, has been transferred to Prescott and has left to assume his new duties.

50 YEARS AGO

Dec. 13th., 1888.

The cold snap of yesterday and last night had the effect of forming ice entirely across the bay. The ferry steamer, however, was able to make a channel and run her regular trips.

The pupils at Gilbert's School House were publicly examined yesterday and were found to be efficient in the various subjects upon which they were tested. This reflects much credit upon the teacher, Mr. Harry Clarke, son of Mr. Robert Clarke, of this city. Mr. Clarke has been re-engaged as teacher for another year at an increased salary which is evident of his success as a teacher.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Jamieson have left to spend some time in New York City.

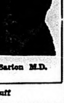
Mr. C. F. Aylsworth, Reeve of Madoc Village, was a visitor in town today.

Tomorrow a pigeon shoot will take place at Foxboro and a rifle match, with turkeys as prizes, will take place at George Vermilyea's farm in Sidney.

Sleighing is badly needed to help boom the Christmas trade.

Now is the time when a bridge across the bay would be appreciated by the farmers of Prince Edward and the people of Belleville.

That Body of Yours



By James W. Barton M.D.

Dandruff

One of the common embarrassing and sometimes distressing ailments is dandruff or seborrhoea sicca of the scalp. While the process may be arrested or stopped by treatment to control the condition.

A letter to the editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association receives a reply that may prove helpful to readers afflicted with dandruff.

"The scalp should be kept clean by washing with soap and water sufficiently often to keep it clean. The more oily the scalp the more often it should be washed. The average man's scalp may be safely washed every week and many as often as twice a week or oftener. The itching sometimes present can be relieved by simply washing the scalp. For severe cases with formation of a crust, oil cleansings are more satisfactory".

If there is any body condition present it should be treated. Anaemia—thin blood—may require iron or liver; an imperfect digestion needs attention; and always the bowels should be kept regular.

Among the remedies suggested is sulphur in the form of solution of sulphurated lime (Vlimfnckx's solution) diluted, beginning with one part to seven of water and increasing gradually so that in a few cases it may be gives full strength. It is best applied with a medicine dropper before retiring, less often as scalp condition improves. Mercury in form of ammoniate mercury in a one-half or one-third mixture with some suitable substances is often helpful. While weak solutions of the extremely poisonous bichloride of mercury are recommended, I am not recording it at this time.

The use of Xrays in skilled hands helps many cases of dandruff as it does many other skin conditions. The scalp should be washed before exposure to the Xrays thus allowing rays to penetrate more readily.

From the above advice we learn that just keeping the scalp clean is helpful and absolutely necessary before any remedy—ointment, lotion, or Xrays, is applied.

We learn also that the control of dandruff requires long and persistent care.

My Son, Anthony Eden

London,—They say that famous men are often the most mischievous as boys, but Anthony Eden was never that. He was always the quiet one. He was, and he remains, the kindest of sons. He was inclined always to be reserved, self-contained.

He was never keen about games, I recall, though he became a fair rider and a fair shot. But he never became the horseman his father was. His father was one of the finest riders in the north. My husband, Sir William Eden, loved his Windlestone estate and knew every tenant copse and tree, and almost every fox and flower. This is the background against which Anthony Eden and my three other sons grew up.

My late husband was a remarkable character—a hard rider, a soulful artist and a candid public speaker.

Like his father, Anthony, too, had a temper when a boy.

x x x

Anthony has inherited most of his father's traits. He has his father's love of art. He has a definite talent for painting, and if he could spare the time he would develop into a really fine artist.

It is strange, in view of his love of art, that as a boy he showed a frank dislike of music. Sometimes, when we were having a musical evening, either at Windlestone or on the Continent, and members of the family were engaged in a duet, Anthony would cry "Oh, stop that din," and go out of the room. He would probably be reading a book and wanted quiet.

Although he was always healthy, it used to be difficult for me to get him into the open air. He would rather read a history book.

I have none of his toys. He was not a boy who played much with toys. He played soldiers, of course, like most other boys. Often I remember him playing at soldiers outside here in the grounds of Windlestone, nearly always with his younger brother Nicholas.

x x x

My earliest recollections of him are of his keenness about political arguments. He would discuss politics with any one, and even as a little boy, at a preparatory school, he liked to keep track of events. I remember how it was when he travelled with us by train. At every big station we passed he would look up keenly, tell us about some by-election connected with the place and recall, perhaps, the name of some candidate who had stood unsuccessfully there. He was never wrong.

His younger brother, Nicholas, was his most favorite playmate. We all loved Nicholas intensely. He really did show promise of a brilliant future. But he was killed in Jutland. And he was only sixteen.

Anthony was then in the trenches and I have heard since that as soon as the news reached him he was so upset that he leaped from the trench on to the top, careless of the consequences.

I also lost my eldest son, John, in action in Flanders, in October, 1914.

One significant Eden trait my son always showed was the courage of his convictions. Coming down a lane on the Continent, others told me, he noticed a driver flogging his horse. So incensed was he that he jumped on to the cart, took the whip out of the man's hand and used it on his back. Absolute fearlessness and working up a furious temper against injustice are Eden characteristics.

x x x

I believe that the war changed Anthony profoundly, brought about, among other things, a deep, shattering change in his intimate religious beliefs.

There were only two possible futures for him, it seems, as I look back. One was politics, the other was art. Few people have seen his sketches and little paintings, but I know that, as a painter, he might well have made a name. He inherited that from his father.

When the war was over and Anthony, then twenty-two, came back from France to start life over again, I was beside him. I think that I can claim to have brought about his entry into politics after the war.

I suggested that he should go to Oxford when he left the army. When I suggested it, he hesitated. "What, go back to school, mother?" I remember him saying, with quite an amazed expression. But he went. And from Oxford I watched him pass on to the height from which he was to sway the politics of Europe.

I often read in the press that my son is the best-dressed man in England. He was certainly not a best-dressed boy. He never showed the slightest interest in his clothes.

He was only seventeen when he went to war and rose to be a captain in the K.R.R.C., and later a brevet-major on the General Staff. He won the M.C.

x x x

After the war, at Oxford, he proved himself a brilliant master of languages. At this period he contributed articles on art and on the "Parliamentary Scene" for a Yorkshire daily paper.

After college came the consideration of his career. I had mapped out a career for him in the service of some government department such as the Foreign Office. But he first went to London to work on the Stock Exchange, where he was promisingly successful.

Then came his entry into politics. He fought Mr. Joe Batey in the Spennymoor division, and lost. His next political encounter was at Warwick, where his opponent was Frances, Countess of Warwick. Beatrice, his charming and beautiful wife, whom my son married following the election, is the daughter of the late Sir Gervase Beckett, the Yorkshire banker, by his first marriage. Sir Gervase's second wife was the daughter of Frances, Countess of Warwick.

Through the crisis of recent months, naturally, I was not able to see much of Anthony. I did not expect to. I understood—and, after all, I could think of him all the while.

x x x

My son is not the sort of man who is always flying to other people for support and encouragement. He is not given to writing long letters, either. Most of his notes to me are quite short, and as often as not they will start off with something like: "My dearest Mummy, now do let us talk of something else except politics!"

Long before his resignation from the Foreign Office I had sensed the crisis was to come. I felt that Anthony was destined to make a big change, though I did not tell him so. It was simply a necessary step in preparation for the greater future that I am sure awaits him. When I heard that he had resigned I was glad.

It is impossible to prophesy, but I sometimes think that the East may have a big place in my son's future. Many people do not realize how exceptionally wide and deep is his knowledge of Oriental affairs. —By Lady Eden in an interview, reprinted by Hamilton Spectator.

The Changing of the Clans

Is your name Grant, Murray, Fraser or Sinclair? If so, even though you were born in London, Birmingham or Penzance, it may well be that your spiritual home is the Scottish Highlands. If Grant is your name you probably belong to the country south of Elgin, whence one of your ancestors migrated. If you are a Murray you belong west of Perth and Scone; if a Fraser, to the northern shore of Loch Ness; if a Sinclair, to the wild country around Wick and Thurso, south of the Pentland Firth.

Maybe you are a Mackenzie and help to make bicycles in Coventry, never seeing a mountain from one year's end to another. Yet, if you had the time and money to spare, and called upon the aid of the Scottish Heraldry Office and went to Scotland, you would probably be able to establish that some remote ancestor of yours was a minor chieftain or a retainer of the Mackenzies, west of the Moray Firth. You might well find Highland people living on the shores of Loch Luichart who are your cousins, say, many times removed. Many times indeed, probably. But still the relationship would be there.

x x x

The Scottish clans are slowly losing all their reality. Scotsmen themselves have largely contributed to this, by going into England to seek their fortunes. Also, of course, twentieth century life does not fit in with the clan system. It was evolved to perform certain functions in a more primitive age. It was a rudimentary example of men living in communities instead of in their own separate caves. Now, for good or ill, we all, even the more remote Highlanders, live in one large community. Improved methods of transport, inter-county and international trade, the postal system and, last of all, the radio, have meant that the clans, if they were to exist at all, must exist artificially, for sentiment's sake.

Nobody knows definitely how the clans originated. But as recently as two centuries ago the clansmen had very definite ideas of their rights and duties. Then, and to some extent today, all the members of a clan regarded themselves as kindred. The clan was exogamous—that is, marriage within it was forbidden—even though the most clan-proud man could not have given genealogical proof of the relationship of thousands of the clan members. Scots today are not exogamous and, from any scientific point of view, the clan is now only a vague entity. But the clan spirit is kept more or less alive by annual celebrations, games and "reunions."

As every schoolboy knows, the clannishness of the Scots cuts two ways. The intensity of your love for your kindred was matched only by the intensity of your hate for all other clans. Until comparatively recent times, the whole story of the Highlands was a story of inter-clan warfare and of warfare between the Lowlands and the clans as a whole. The clans covered all the country north and west of Stirling. The comparatively flat and fertile lands south of the Forth were fair game. And if you, say a Campbell, had the opportunity of enriching yourself at the expense of the Menzies or the Robertsons, no one (except the Menzies or the Robertsons) would hold it against you that you used your opportunity. It might be land or a bride you coveted. It made no difference. But you must never use such tactics against your own people.

x x x

The MacLeods, the Mackenzies, the Macaulays and the Morrisons inhabit Lewis today. News of their Jewish origin will probably surprise them. Ironically, the MacLeods are among the most clan-conscious of the Highlanders. Their chieftain today is Flora (Mrs.) MacLeod of MacLeod, who regularly presides at gatherings of the clan. Perhaps the best-known of the clans, however, is the Campbells, which, for generations, had a unique reputation for ferocity. Traditional homes of the Campbells are around Loch Tay and east of Oban. Their chief is the bachelor Duke of Argyll, who, a scholarly man, has not much but a love of Scotland in common with his slaughter-breathing ancestors.

In the past every clansman devoutly believed that his clan had an attendant fairy which accompanied it on its travels and guarded it from mischance. The Duke of Argyll's grandmother, the Duchess, believed in another kind of pixy and was a determined advocate of temperance reform. She banished alcohol from Iona, part of the Campbell territory, and it remains "dry" to this day, with not a single public house upon its acres.

x x x

Half a dozen things are closely identified with the clans; for instance, the kilt, the piper and various athletic games. If the clan consciousness wholly died, certainly the kilt and the piper would disappear. Like a taste for edible frogs, a taste for the pipes is an acquired one. A terrible insult was given to all clansmen recently when a London magistrate ruled that a man playing the pipes in the streets was "creating a public nuisance." Many Lowlanders, reading their papers, feared that this would bring the clans in force over the border. But, nowadays, apparently, Highlanders are more forgiving.

There are maps of the Highlands and islands of Scotland in which all the separate parts are marked with the names of the clans with which they are traditionally associated. Until, under the pressure of taxation and other influences, great estates all over Britain began to break up, a large part of each of these territories was held by the respective clans' chiefs.—John A. Smith in Hamilton Spectator.

Pigeons Become Public Nuisance

In many large cities it is a peculiar fact that in the very busiest parts there are large colonies of pigeons which do not belong to anybody and which make themselves at home amid the feet of the pedestrians. They and their descendants have been there so long that their origin is forgotten. On Boston Common, alongside the library in New York, in Trafalgar Square and outside St. Paul's Cathedral in London, and in various plazas in European cities, the pigeons congregate in thousands. They wade in and out among passers-by and even get into the streets, where they seem to avoid being run over by some miraculous instinct. All are extraordinarily tame and will clamber over man, woman or child to eat from their hands or hats, and even take grain from their lips.

The London County Council has decreed that the pigeons are becoming a public nuisance and a danger to health. They get so much food that they are sleek and fat, and their numbers are multiplying beyond reason. Every winter about one-third are trapped quietly and disposed of but more drastic steps need to be taken. It is estimated that in Trafalgar Square there are 1,500 bird nests in Canada House, the C. P. R. office and adjacent buildings. The pigeons would have a poor living if an interested and amused public did not feed them to the point of surfeit, and the first step toward compelling them to stop feeding them.

As there is no law against it that will be a difficult thing to do. The birds have so long been a source of entertainment that the public, especially children, will not willingly see the birds forced out.—Stratford Beacon-Herald.

The District Correspondent

The success of a small town daily or weekly newspaper depends, in a large measure, upon the co-operation of its country correspondents. If the correspondents in the paper's circulation area did not consistently send interesting bits of news, people in the rural sections would rapidly tire of the paper and the circulation would suffer seriously. It is not generally known that the Post has more than 100 correspondents on the pay roll. Every village, crossroad or community of any kind in a wide area is represented on the correspondent rolls of this paper and budgets of district news from each come to this office at least once a week and more often every day or so. The correspondents, if they do their work in a conscientious manner, make an important contribution to the success of a small town daily or weekly. Their efforts may appear humble to themselves. They probably don't enjoy seeing their account of the Ladies' Aid Meeting in the paper as much as they would enjoy a by-line on a front page fire yarn, but their efforts are important in the eyes of the editor and in the eyes of the circulation department.

People residing in the town may wonder at the simplicity of some of the news published from the many small communities in the district. While they might not be interested in the fate of a sick horse owned by Farmer Jones of the seventh concession, there are many people in Farmer Jones' section who are interested in the horse. They are also interested in the neighbors' visitors and they expect to get information on these and similar subjects when they read their paper. The Post values its correspondents most highly. They form a more important part of the organization than they themselves imagine.—Lindsay Post.

CAMILLIEN HOUDE MONTREAL MAYOR

Dynamic Campaigner Wins by Plurality of 20,612

Montreal, Dec. 13—(CP)—Out of the shadows of political oblivion today strode Camillien Houde, again Montreal's favorite son and ready to take up the mayoralty job where he left off two years ago.

The dynamic campaigner of a dozen hard-fought political battles swept into city hall for his fourth term, borne in on a current of electoral opinion that saw yesterday's ballotting swept two candidates into the backwash and give Houde a near-record total of 83,481 votes.

The 49 year old former mayor, contesting the office for the sixth time after being beaten in 1936, had a plurality of 20,612 over Charles A. Gascon, 'Reform' candidate. The third man—Candide Rochefort—Union Nationale member of the Legislature for Montreal St. Mary and defeated candidate two years ago—polled 4,228 votes.

For the redoubtable Houde, long one of Quebec Province's most spectacular personalities, it was a return from the political wilderness. His career had been in the doldrums since the day two years ago when J. Adhemar Raynault ousted him from the mayoralty, the last of his three political positions then left to Houde.

Union Nationale member of the Legislature for L'Assomption, Raynault gave up the mayoralty at the end of his first two year term to give his full attention to his provincial office, he said. Then Houde stepped in and, with a whirlwind campaign, wooed another term from an electorate that rarely has failed to heed his appeals.

His plurality over Gascon actually was the smallest of any in his four victories—high spot was his 54,000 in 1934. But on the other hand it was gained over Gascon's 62,689, which was 6,000 more than Raynault collected in getting elected in 1936.

JURY RETURNS OPEN VERDICT

Inquest on E. J. Simonds Held at Ameliasburg Monday Night

An open verdict was returned at Roblin's Mills last night by a coroner's jury investigating the death of Edward J. Simonds, 57-year-old farmer of Ameliasburg Township. The verdict stated that the farmer came to his death as the result of injuries received when struck by a car driven by Orbey Alyea.

Alyea, who told traffic officer Samuel Ervine on the night of the accident that he had been driving without lights and that he had felt a bump somewhere in the neighborhood of the place where the man was struck, but continued on his way until his car stopped, did not give evidence. Evidence showed that when the traffic officer failed to locate any car at the scene of the accident, he had seized a car which he located a mile and half farther down the road.

At the inquest he explained that Alyea and his son, Luther, had walked into the police station later the same evening to inquire why the car had been seized.

"Are you certain who the driver was?" he had asked.

"On finding that Alyea had driven on that highway, I placed him under arrest on a charge of leaving the scene of an accident," the traffic officer told the jury.

Woman Nearly Hit

Mr. G. A. Smith, Kingston, who found the late Mr. Simonds lying alongside the road, stated he was attracted by a dark object. "I had the lights of my car on for nearly an hour previous to this," stated Smith when questioned as to the relative darkness. Mrs. Cora Salisbury, Ameliasburg, stated a motor car without lights had nearly run her down two miles east of the fatal accident the same night. Other minor witnesses testified.

The inquest was heard before Coroner Dr. D. F. Lighthall with County Crown Attorney Gordon Walmsley conducting the investigations. The coroner's jury consisted of James Barber (foreman), James Cretney, M. Davidson, F. Juby, Thos. Nightingale, Wm. Thompson, J. A. Walker and R. Weese.

The Daily Clarion Denied Press Privileges In Toronto Council

Toronto, Dec. 13—(CP)—City Council voted support yesterday to a Board of Control motion stipulating what newspapers are to receive press privileges at City Hall.

In recommending a motion that "all daily papers in Toronto should enjoy equal facilities in reporting council meetings and the news of city activities," the council laid down a condition that facilities should be given to all dailies associated in membership with The Canadian Press, The Audit Bureau of Circulation and the Canadian Daily Newspaper Association.

Alderman Stewart Smith and Alderman J. B. Salesberg, who introduced the motion, protested against the stipulation, on the ground it would bar the Daily Clarion from equal facilities with other papers.

"Obviously, a daily newspaper is one that is published daily," Alderman Smith said.

Turning to Mayor Ralph C. Day, Alderman Salesberg asked: "Do you know how much it would cost a newspaper to obtain a franchise with The Canadian Press?"

The Mayor said he did not know and Alderman Salesberg claimed the cost was beyond reach of the labor press.

Alderman F. M. Johnston opened the argument with the declaration: "This paper (The Daily Clarion) is simply the mouthpiece of the Communist Party and the head office of the Communist Party is in Moscow."

He asked if the paper was "an organ of the Communist Party" and Alderman Smith replied: "It is not and it has the endorsation of the Trades and Labor council."

HON. H. H. STEVENS GIVES INTERVIEW

National Disunity and Discord Seen Says Member

Montreal, Dec. 13—(CP)—Since the Liberal party took office "there has been a continuous and accelerating trend to national disunity and discord," Hon. H. H. Stevens, member of Parliament for Kootenay East, said in an interview here yesterday. He predicted there would be no general election until late next year as he referred to charges of Hon. C. D. Howe, Federal Minister of Transport and Hon. Norman Rogers, Minister of Labor, that Premier Hepburn of Ontario and Premier Duplessis of Quebec were conspiring to force the retirement of Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

"Why should the Liberals go to the country urging national unity when they can't have unity in their own ranks. Since the accession of the party to office there has been a continuous and accelerating trend to national disunity and discord.

"I do agree that national unity is an essential and important factor. At the same time, in my opinion, the real issue apart from unity is a solution of the practical, economic and business problems of the country. There is a good deal in what Hepburn says. The Federal Government has failed to give a reasonable degree of leadership in the solution of practical problems."

Rotarians Mobilize for Christmas Cheer

Belleville Rotarians delved into the National Housing Act at the regular meeting Monday, guest speaker being W. J. LeClair, of Toronto, who pointed out the great need of modern housing, and the effect upon the building trades and the solving of unemployment for 50,000 workers, now idle, explaining in detail the provisions of the Act which he claimed held great promise. The guest speaker was introduced by Rotarian Fred Houston, and Rotary appreciation for a very fine and instructive address was voiced by Past President Joe Shortt. A resume of Mr. LeClair's address will be found in another column. Guests present included D. W. Reynolds, and George B. Van Blaricom, Toronto; Stan Hagerman, Belleville. President Mac Haig occupied the chair, with Fred Deacon, Sergeant-at-arms; Sandy Burrows and Leo Riggs directed the musical part of the program. Rotarian Lloyd Hicks was placed in charge of the Christmas Cheer distribution, with Rotarian Morley Duff assistant and a capable committee. Birthdays of Rotarians Jim Boyle and Bert Findlay received proper recognition.

ROADSIDE SIGNS

—There are some odd signs on the highways throughout this province and some of these signs, though well-intended, are funny. For instance, back on No. 7 Highway near Kaladar recently there was a sign announcing "Blew Berries for Sale". At Denbigh, the public was advised, "Stoppers Not Kept Here ."

These signs remind us of the story of the farmer who wanted to sell his farm and knew that his neighbor wanted it, but was rather slow about coming to the point. So the man who wanted to sell his farm put up a large sign, "Farm for Sail." The neighbor saw the sign and remarked, "When are you going to sail?" To which the other came back, "Just as soon as you raise the wind."

Between Trenton and Belleville there are perhaps a dozen tourist signs with one letter left out of the word "accommodation". A sign-writer made a sign for Dawson's Quinte Beach Camp at Deseronto, but he spelled it "Quinitie."—Harry Moore in Trenton Courier-Advocate.

MASSEY COUNCIL NOW ACCLAIMED

Four Nomination Meetings Necessary to Secure Full Board

Massey, Ont., Dec. 13—(CP)—After 30 days of campaigning and three nomination meetings, this Sudbury district community acclaimed a new council last night with J. N. Dyall, last year's mayor, as its head.

The four councillors are J. E. Hobbs, William Seeland and Henry Charette, members of last year's council, and Martin Reid. All qualified immediately.

Candidates nominated previously had refused to stand for office, declaring the town's relief problems were too acute.

"It isn't any use," Mayor Dyall said after his election last night. It seems, he said, the Provincial authorities "don't care and that is why we boycotted the public offices for so long."

MINISTER JUSTICE DEFENDS PREMIER

Opponents of Mackenzie King Flayed by Hon. Ernest Lapointe

Quebec, Dec. 13—(CP)— Opponents of Prime Minister Mackenzie King who "speak against" and "insult" him were described last night by Justice Minister Lapointe as "not worthy of tying his boot strings."

"Prime Minister King will defeat opposition out in the open or from dark corners," the minister said in a speech to his Quebec East constituents. "No conspiring will conquer him. In five general election battles, the Prime Minister was victorious four times. And he will win the next time."

Mr. Lapointe did not specify any persons or circumstances in his reference to the Prime Minister.

In a brief discussion of Canada's railway problem, he declared the Canadian National Railways will "keep its identity."

"The men seeking unification of Canada's railways will find the Liberals standing in their path," he said.

Asserting the Federal government was "determined" to establish a plan of unemployment insurance but "cannot because of the action of certain provincial governments," Mr. Lapointe said: "If there is failure in this, the people will remember and the workers will remember what caused failure."

He asked why there was "conflict between one province and another or a province and the Dominion. Some quarters hold up the constitution seeking to destroy the unity the constitution was made for."

CHAMBERLAIN VINTAGE

Chardonne, in the wine-growing district of Vevey, Switzerland, which each year gives a nickname to the local wine in honor of some celebrated person or event, this year is labelling its barrels with "Chamberlain," a striking tribute to the man who preserved the peace. Britain's Premier may regard this Alpine honor as a Nobel prize.—Montreal Gazette.

Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Marshall and John, have left to spend Christmas with Mrs. Marshall's parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Garffer of San Juan, Puerto Rico, Dr. Marshall returning after the holiday. Mrs. Marshall and son will spend the winter in Puerto Rico.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas R. Durley with their little son, Montreal, former residents of Belleville, will leave early in the New Year to reside in Boston, Mass.

Mr. Farley Faulkner whose splendid articles on life in Hollywood have been followed for several months with keen interest by Ontario Intelligencer readers, has returned to the city for the holiday season. Mr. Faulkner has been in Hollywood for almost a year and his column has brought to Canadian readers glimpses of the stories behind the screen. He expects to remain in the city until the middle of January before returning to resume his work as a columnist.

The regular meeting of the Catholic Women's League was held last evening in St. Michael's Academy. Mrs. A. B. Collins, president, was in the chair and plans were made for activities in the new year. A large box had been packed during the month and sent to the Hospital of the Sisters of Service at Vilna, Alberta.

On Monday evening, the Christmas meeting of the Presto Music Club was held at the home of Dr. Locke, 52 Bridge Street E. The program was arranged by Miss Ann Brown, and consisted of vocal selections by Mrs. E. M. Bird; Miss Phyllis May and Mr. S. M. Anglin; a violin selection by Dr. Locke and piano numbers by Florence Davis, Charles Kilgour and Wm. G. Connor. Following this, the members took part in the singing of Christmas carols under the direction of S. Alec Gordon. Then after a very tasty lunch and a social hour, the meeting was brought to a close.

S. S. Banner Is Dedicated

A service of unusual interest was held in Bridge Street United Church Sunday School when a banner, the first of its kind in the history of Junior work was presented and dedicated to the Explorer Group. During the opening hymn the Group marched to their seats, after which Explorer Bain Farnham led the Sunday School in prayer. The Banner was then raised to the platform, Dr. Semple and Mr. Burr receiving. In a few well-chosen words Mr. Burr, Superintendent of the Sunday School, told of the remarkable training each member of the group was receiving. The teaching of the finer things in life, that make a Christian gentleman and Christian lady, through the medium of the Banner was then explained by Counsellor Joe Aspden, leader of Explorer work. Dr. Semple then gave the dedication prayer, Charlotte Finkle and John Merklinger kneeling to receive the Banner. The theme hymn "This is My Father's World" was then sung by the Group, followed by the Explorer Prayer. A few words of appreciation to Miss Griffin who made the Banner, Dr. Semple and Mr. Burr were expressed by Explorer Mary Locke.

What of Vitamins?—The Scourge of Scurvy

This discourse on Vitamins brings us today to Vitamin C. Its chief claim to fame is that its presence in food prevents scurvy, that disease which used to take such a toll amongst sailors and explorers in the far north.

This vitamin is in most fruits and vegetables when they are eaten raw. Unfortunatey, it is very easily driven off by heat. Even fruit or vegetables that aren't fresh show a distinct loss in their Vitamin C content. If you wish to retain this property in your vegetables, don't cook them in open vessels.

Years ago people didn't know anything about this Vitamin C. But they did know that the juice of lemons cured scurvy, or protected from its ravages altogether. In fact, it was this knowledge which gave to the British seamen the term "Limey". The sailors, as one story has it, used to raid cargoes of lemons, then knows as limes. In fact, their fondness for these limes became well-known, hence the nick name. The reason they wanted these fruits was their need for Vitamin C.

In the early days of America, our ancestors suffered from scurvy. This was particularly true of the northern parts. Naturally in the South there were plenty of citrus fruits; these did just what the lemons did for the sailors—supplied enough Vitamin C to ward off the scurvy.

Early French explorers in Canada suffered greatly from scurvy. Even 30 years ago I saw plenty of scurvy in my practice. Of course their diet was a monotonous one—salt pork and potatoes. Was it any wonder scurvy caused much illness and death. If they had even eaten their potatoes with the skins on, it might have given them enough extra Vitamin C to keep them healthy.

The severe manifestations of scurvy are seldom seen by doctors today. It is fairly common to see mild cases of it in children, but sometimes even these aren't seen unless one is observant. Retarding of weight and height gains in the early days of a child's life is one of the signs that Vitamin C is lacking.

In infants, the reserves of this Vitamin depends pretty much on the mother. Mothers must have this reserve supplied in their food. The Vitamin C supply drops rapidly after birth, and must be supplied through the mother's milk. I have no hesitation in stating that mother's milk is the ideal food for babies. If this supply o mother's milk is not at hand, then a synthetic substitute must be devised. When this is necessary, be sure and consult your doctor; get his advice on how to make sure that the vitamin content will be in that substitute.

I have often seen children two or three days old whose stomach and bowels are upset; this is always accompanied by an alarming loss of weight. It usually indicates a Vitamin C deficiency.

We made particularly certain to give the Quints an oversupply of foods with this vitamin when they were born because premature children such as they were need more than the average. But all children must have it.

Your Christmas and You

Special Christmas Gifts

We all have certain friends whom we go to see on Christmas Day. Some are ill, some are in mourning, some are elderly, some are just friends to whom we wish to pay a special compliment by taking our remembrances. However, perhaps in none of these cases is it appropriate that we take a consequential gift . . . . it is to be a simple but thoughtful remembrance.

For this kind of present you may be interested in taking one or two lovely flowers, roses perhaps, and as a complement to it, and in the box with it, a simple and lovely vase. A clear glass vase most beautifully accompanies these flowers.

Or, if you know that the friend has a phonograph, you might like to take one or two records . . . perhaps of Christmas hymns. Or, for a shut-in the card indicating a subscription to a magazine. Or (carry it tenderly) a small glass aquarium of gold fish. Or a sea-garden, to delight many hours to come and of course . . . books!

Tomorrow—Answering Your Questions

"Combination" Cards

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am a widow with a grown son and my brother is a widower with a grown daughter. My son and I would both like to send Christmas cards together (that is, with our names on the same card), and my brother and his daughter would like to do the same. Would this be correct?

We are not sure whether we will send formal or informal cards. So, if you tell us that we may send these "combination" cards, will you please explain about the forms of the names to be used on the formal card and on the informal card?

H. O. R.

Yes, it is correct to send this form of card. If the cards are to be formal, the name of the parent is engraved on one line, and the name of the son or daughter on the line below.

The formal card would read like this:

Mrs. William Clinton Allen and
Mr. George Allen
send heartiest greetings for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year

If you decide to write the names names on the cards, the parent's name should be written first: Mary Allan and George Allen, or Geoffrey Wells and Dorothy Wells. Cards you send to nieces and nephews would be signed Aunt Mary and George. Cards sent to friends who call you by your first name would be signed Mary and George; cards sent by your brother to friends who call him by his first name would be signed Geoffrey and Dorothy.

Cards to People Who Never Return Favor

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

Is it proper to continue to send Christmas greetings to persons who never return the favor?

A.

Just as you wish about this . . . depending on your breadth of spirit. Friendships and acquaintances change and readjust themselves, and we do have to reconstruct our lists and Christmas-bows. But if you don't wish to make these readjustments, you needn't. And the friends to whom you send greetings will undoubtedly rejoice that you 'stand pat" on friendships.

Mrs. J. McCaffey Elected President Madoc W. M. S.

Madoc—The annual meeting of St. Peter's Presbyterian Church, Madoc W. M. S. was held at the home of Mrs. Walter Whytock on Thursday, Dec. 8th with the president in the chair. The devotional part stressed the Christmas message. Mrs. Ethel Reid read lesson from Matt. 2-1-15 and Mrs. Johnson read a message called "Peace on Earth" followed by prayer by Mrs. M. Allen. The year's business was taken up. Miss MacKintosh gave the report of the year's work and the treasurer reported he givings as well over allotment. Mrs. Allen gave the report of the Expense Fund. A provincial life membership was presented to Mrs. F. Curry as a memorial to her mother, Mrs. R. T. Gray, a charter member 52 years ago and whose subscription has been paid continuously ever since by her husband during his life time and then by the daughter. It was given as a token of appreciation of long service in missionary groups and service in office. The visiting secretary reported 188 visits made during the year, also 2 letters on revival. The Home Helpers Secretary, Miss Wright, reported on work done by her. The Glad Tidings Secretary reported 31 subscriptions. The secretary reported letters of condolence sent to all who had suffered loss of friends during the year. Mrs. Hunter then took the chair for the election of officers and led in prayer for guidance. All of the old officers were returned and are as follows:

President, Mrs. J. McCaffery; Vice Presidents, Mrs. W. Miller, Mrs. W. A. Hunter, Mrs. . Whytock, Mrs. J. Armstrong; Treasurer, Mrs. F. Curry, Secretary, Miss M. MacKintosh; Expense Fund Sec. Mrs. M. Allen; Glad Tidings Sec. Mrs. Johnson; Home Helpers, Miss J. Wright; Sick and Visiting, Mrs. W. Whytock; Mission Band President, Mrs. J. Hailstone; Vice President, Mrs. C. McCoy; Leader, Mrs. K. Nicol; Treasurer, Mrs. Curry.

The officers present agreed to carry on the work for another year. The meeting was closed by a hymn and prayer.

The hostess was assisted in serving by Mrs. E. Watson and Mrs. Jas. Whytock.

Mrs. Hoard of Stirling is spending a few days with Mrs. Mary Embury.

Mrs. William Roberts who has been in Kingston General Hospital for the past two weeks returned to her home on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert McGhee leave this week to spend the winter months with their daughter at her home, Woodland, California.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Irvin spent the week end with relatives at Bobcaygeon.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Salisbury and family of Belleville spent Sunday with Mr. Walter Salisbury.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bristol visited Mr. and Mrs. Claire at Belleville on Sunday.

KINGSTON ROAD W.A.

The December meeting of the W.A. of the Kingston Road United Church met at the home of the President Mrs. H. Walkom with a fair attendance.

The meeting was opened with the theme song "For the Beauty of Jesus".

Mrs. Farnsworth then gave the Devotional reading, it being the Christmas lesson. This was followed with a few words of prayer by Mrs. Farnsworth.

"Silent Night! Holy Night!" was then sung. Minutes of the last meeting were read followed by the roll call. This was followed by the singing of "Joy to the World".

The election of officers for the ensuing year then took place with Rev. Farnsworth in charge.

The officers elected were as follows:

President—Mrs. Cameron Macdonald.
Vice Presidents— 1st — Mrs. Farnsworth.
2nd—Mrs. Garbutt.
3rd—Mrs. Wilfred LaRue, Sr.
Secretary—Mrs. Gazely.
Treasurer—Miss Annie Logan.

During the past few months two aprons were busy travelling from one member to another. The members very generously contributed by placing a patch on the apron with a donation and a bit of verse. The aprons were brought in at this meeting and verses judged by Mrs. Parrot and the proceeds from the aprons amounted to $5.56. The prize for the best verse on the one apron to be awarded Mrs. J. Hilton and on the other the prize goes to Mrs. Gazely.

The program concluded with a very satisfactory report from the treasurer. The members of the W.A. are to be congratulated on completing such a successful year.

A very tasty lunch served by Mrs. Farnsworth, Mrs. Ridley, Mrs. Snider, and Mrs. Donaldson brought the afternoon's meeting to a close.

FADED WINTERS

We look forward hopefully to the day when we shall have an air-conditioned climate, set all the year round at a temperature of 67.5 degrees and, of course, at the proper humidity.

No winters are not what they used to be. We will not let them be. We are surprised and hurt when they try to be. Our ancestors strengthened their characters by getting up in the cold and shivering and freezing their ears and noses for at least four months of the year. We don't seem to care to have our characters strengthened that way.

If we want our characters strengthened we go to the movies and watch some one else jump two or three hundred feet on skis or shinny up the north col of Mount Everest.—N.Y. Times.

"Life Begins With Love"

A sparkling, good-natured little romantic comedy with enough sighs and chuckles to satisfy all lovers of good entertainment, and with even several large-sized laughs thrown in where they do the most good, opened cheerily at the McCarthy Theatre yesterday, "Life Begins With Love". Most of the responsibility for this "Seventh Heaven" comedy romance of 1938 hitting such a high in breeziness can rightly be laid at the door of Jean Parker, Douglass Montgomery and little Edith Fellows who can give a good account of herself in any mix-up All three stars cut up hijinks that keep the production continuously alive from beginning to end with comedy and romantic appeal so seldom woven together so interestingly on the screen—that you imagine that "Life Begins With Love" was made to order—for you. The short subject programme preceding this hit picture, at each performance, will also give you many minutes of happiness and the variety of same, really makes up grand entertainment.

"Rotary" Amateur Show

On the stage of the McCarthy Theatre the third Rotary Club "Amateur Show" presenting a very select group of Belleville and vicinity Amateurs in person, rendering musical, vocal tap dancing and novelty entertainment will be presented in addition to the entire screen programme. One ton of coal as a special door prize will be drawn for at the close of the stage show. Your patronage is gratefully appreciated by Belleville Rotarians. The McCarthy Theatre management and staff in giving their support are only trying to provide the best in entertainment, to please all.

AT THE BELLE

"SUEZ"

Out of choking sand; from the clutch of the raiding Bedouin; in the face of the black simoon's savage fury; with blood, tears and passion — was wrested the Suez Canal, jugular vein of the world.

Seldom do the dusty records of history offer such intense emotion, stirring romance and awesome spectacle as the great story of Ferdinand de Lesseps, driven by the love of two women to tear continents apart that ships might sail the desert in the short route to the East sought in vain by Columbus and Magellan.

Into this perfect-for-the-screen plot Darryl F. Zanuck poured all the production skill born of a long record of memorable achievements, to make one of the most spectacular pictures to bear the 20th Century-Fox label. "Suez", is now in its third record-breaking day at the Belle.

Tyrone Power interprets the heroic role of de Lesseps, with Loretto Young and Annabella as the two women whose love lashed him to splendid triumph over impossible obstacles.

Produced on the magnificent scale only the screen at its greatest can command, "Suez" was directed by Allan Dwan and is the latest in the Movie Quiz $250,000 contest. J. Edward Bromberg, Joseph Schildkraut, Henry Stephenson, Sidney Blackmer and a host of others are included in the stellar cast.

The Belle News of the Day with its up-to-the-minute World Events, and "Glass Slipper," a funny and original comicolor cartoon precede the feature.

Beauty Rule Is Pretty Teeth

DEANNA DURBIN

Her smiling lips reveal healthy, pearly teeth

By HELEN FOLLETT

THERE'S no sense struggling and striving to reach the beauty goal if smiling lips reveal teeth that are not in first class condition. Good teeth are of the utmost importance, not only to appearance but to health.

Proper food and mastication are necessary for the preservation of the mouth pearls. We all eat too much soft food. Order crusty bread for a change; eat raw carrots, turnips, celery and radishes. Chewing on hard substances has an invigorating effect upon the gums. Some grains and cereals in their natural state can be chewed to a creamy mass with benefit to pretty biters.

Dentists warn against the excessive intake of sweets, and suggest that after a candy debauche the teeth be brushed. We need sugar to create energy, but there should be a limit. Milk, which contains calcium, is recommended to those whose teeth are inclined to decay. Milk contains many food elements, and is as good for adults as it is for children.

Lipsticks of petunia shades are having a run. They are happy selections when the frock is a teal blue of the new rust tones or the warm greens that are popular this season.

Grape shades in lipsticks are new numbers. Wine shades also are trotting right along, being taken home by the girls who dash out on wild cosmetic sprees.

There's no reason why any woman should stick to the old time cherry and vermilion tints. Like brilliant reds for the finger nails, these colors are being retired in favor of tints that are more interesting.

When perspiration remedies first were compounded, they were strong products that sometimes caused the skin to be sensitive, sometimes had a destructive effect upon the fabric of the blouse. All that has gone by the board.

You can buy anti-perspirant creams that disappear almost immediately, that are so mild in their effects that they can be used on the palms of the hands and the soles of the feet.

No woman should be neglectful of this important detail of the toilet. That old BO ogre has been responsible for many a social and business failure.

The Stars Say—

For Wednesday December 14

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

ANOTHER day of excitement, commotion and disruption, although of not so happy a condition as dominated yesterday, is forecast for this day, judging by rather adverse lunar and mutual aspects. There is a prospect that radical change, travel and romance may give way to activities that are incident to a complete reorganization of the life and its plans. An element of hostility, vexation or real trial might arise from some young person, or an undercurrent of trickery or conspiracy may take the edge off of much delightful anticipation.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for many adverse situations arising from a reorganization of the business affairs and a reorientation of the life to new places, persons and interests. These may manifest largery through the enmity, hostility and aggravation of young people, or the subtle, deceitful or treacherous behavior of others who seem to be actuated by envy or jealousy.

A child born on this day, while energetic, versatile and enterprising, may be inclined to ways of craft and expediency rather than integrity and honest policies.

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage

She Wants the World to Know She's Engaged

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm very much in love with a young hospital interne. He's very brilliant, and has a promising career ahead of him. He has proposed to me and I've accepted, but my parents, who are very narrow-minded, have refused to announce the engagement because I'm only 17 years of age. We're quito anxious to announce our intentions to marry. Shall I obey my parents, or go ahead on my own? I'm not finished with my education yet.

Living in Hopes

At 17 it's rather hard to agree with parents in a decision such as this. But you realize you're still young and in school. They undoubtedly think it would be a good idea to wait till you graduate from school, and until the interne is better established in a professional career.

Try to be patient and you'll see things will work out just fine, and you can have your announcement party after graduation.

Another Girl Trying to Cut in

Dear Miss Fairfax

I'm 19 years old, and everyone tells me I'm good-looking and I have plenty of friends. Lately a new girl has come into the crowd. Acting as if she had lived here all her life, she has successfully won over the boy friends of nearly all the girls. But she's dissatisfied and when she gets tired of them she drops them for the next fellow.

My boy friend's turn has come: she has him completely in her power, and he does anything she asks. As a rule I'm not of a jealous disposition and know she's just trying to get my goat. What can I do to win my young man back without making an enemy of her?

All in a Whirl

You tell me she gets tired of the boys at the end of a certain time. Why not let her get tired of your boy friend and then she'll drop him as she has all the others? Be a good sport. Don't let her know that she's making you angry. Take it rather as a joke and help along the friendship.

A girl of this type doesn't usually last long in the crowd, and I think your boy friend will come to you of his own accord, especially if you don't mope around and look down-hearted. Have a good time with the rest of the bunch, and show him you don't care.

Wants Boy Friend All to Herself

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My mother and I have always been devoted pals, and many times people have mistaken us for sister and brother. She's young-looking and always full of fun. My father left us when I was a child. After that happened, my mother took a course of training for an office job, and she supported us both, even doing all the work around the house. She's always been the best sport imaginable, never down-hearted or sorry for herself.

Now there's a girl in the case. I'm in love and want to marry, but my girl just stalls around about it. She wants us to make a clean break, when we marry, and keep house for ourselves. To me, this seems like a dirty deal for mother. She hasn't been in good health lately, although she still has her office job, and I feel that it's my duty to begin to pay part of my debt back to her. I know it's just jealousy on the part of my girl, because my mother has gone even three-quarters of the way to be friendly with her. Do you think a jealous woman can get over it?

M.R.B.

This girl of yours seems to have been overcome by the green-eyed monster. It's a question to me whether a young woman of her type could make any man happy. If you had no family at all, she'd probably be jealous of your radio, your books or any other relatives you might have. Women like this want their lovers and husbands to proclaim everlasting love; yet nothing wears out more quickly than a love which must be constantly shouted from the housetops.

George's Wild Oats

By Allen Eppes

CHAPTER XXXIII

At sight of the gun, George gulped. "You don't need to get tough," he brazened, with a bravado he didn't feel. "Come on in if you like and look for your wife—but I assure you she isn't here!"

"We'll see about that!" Ted pushed past him. "I'll find her if I have to search the place from cellar to attic! And," he added, in a loud voice, evidently for Rita's benefit, "she needn't try to sneak out, because I've got a friend outside who'll see her!"

He began making a systematic search, first through the hall, then through the living room, and on through the other rooms on the lower floor—opening closets, peering under furniture, poking behind draperies.

George, following him, was in a state of panic. Not knowing just where Rita had gone, he expected her to be uncoverd at almost any moment. And then, what? Would Ted Lane carry out his threat — shoot him down in a fit of jealous rage? He looked mad enough to do it.

However, they reached the kitchen with Rita still undiscovered. There, they came upon Mrs. Simmons, engaged in peeling potatoes. The old lady's eyes fixed on Ted's gun and widened.

Ted stepped up to her. "Have you seen my wife?"

"K-knife? What kind of k-knife?" Mrs. Simmons stammered.

"She's hard of hearing," George explained.

"I said wife, not knife!" Ted shouted at her.

She smiled nervously, and shook her head.

"No, sir—I've not had the pleasure of meeting her."

Ted turned away in disgust, searched through all the possible hiding places in the kitchen, then motioned to George.

"Upstairs!" he ordered. "I'll find her! She can't get away—not with Mazie on the lookout outside!"

So, thought George, that snooper Mazie was in on this! He'd like to meet Mazie! He'd gladly wring her neck!

As he and Ted left the kitchen, Mrs. Simmons weakly collapsed into a chair. That dreadful woman she had admitted to the house a while ago! She must be the man's wife! And now, Mr. George was in a peck of trouble.

If only she hadn't let the woman in! But what could a person do with a woman like that? The hussy had fairly pushed her way in—had insisted on waiting for Mr. George. She had marched herself into the living room as though she owned the place.

"I didn't like her from the moment I saw her on the davenport that night," Mrs. Simmons moaned to herself. "Her and her twisted ankle! I knew she warn't no good!"

And now, the woman was hiding some place in the house—and Mr. George was in danger. If her madman of a husband, carrying that dreadful gun, should find her, he'd—he'd—

Mrs. Simmons wrung her hands. What should she do? What should she do?

Meanwhile, upstairs, Ted was ransacking the bedrooms, growing angrier and angrier as his search continued to prove futile.

George, with each passing moment, found his hopes mounting. Maybe Rita had escaped — had slipped outdoors and eluded Mazie's eagle eye....

Then, his hopes plummeted. A shrill feminine voice from downstairs pierced the air.

"Ted! Ted! I've found her!"

As Ted rushed to the top of the stairs, George followed — looked down to see an unpleasant-looking female gesturing excitedly. So that was Mazie.

"Come on! Hurry up!" she was shrieking. "I've got her locked in!"

Ted turned and sneered at George. "So she wasn't here, eh?" He flourished his gun. "Get on down the stairs! I'm not letting you out of my sight! You're going to get yours!"

George went down the stairs on leaden feet, with Ted jus tbehind him. In a sort of trance, he followed Mazie outdoors—heard her explaining to Ted.

"I saw her come sneaking out a side door! She ran across the yard, and into the garage—over there! She didn't see me, so I crept up and closed the door quick — and bolted it!"

As Ted, momentarily forgetting about George, pocketed his gun and rushed ahead to the garage. George was tempted to turn and flee, but he knew he couldn't desert Rita now—no matter how much he hated her. However, coming up behind Ted, who was struggling with the bolt on the garage door, he was tempted to pick up a large rock and bring it down on the man's head. He had almost succumbed to the temptation, when Ted got the bolt loose, flung the door open, and plunged into the garage.

George saw him stop short, and look around uncertainly. He himself stepped to the entrance and peered inside. So did Mazie.

Rita was not there.

Ted turned furiously on Mazie. "I thought you said she came in here!"

"She did, Ted! Honest she did!"

"Then, where is she? She couldn't get through that window—it's too small. And there's no other door....But wait!" Ted had paused, and was staring at a little door at the back of the garage. He whirled on George. "Where does that lead to?"

George, too, was staring at the little door. His eyes had fixed on it as soon as he knew Rita was gone—and he had hoped Ted wouldn't notice it.

The garage backed up against the inland end of the ledge from which he had shown Rita the view the other night—and the little door opened into the tunnel that led down to the beach. He had told Rita that the tunnel came out behind the garage, and now he was sure she had escaped into it.

But would she go on through it to the beach? It was pitch black in there. She might be too frightened....

"Where does that lead to?" he heard Ted ask again. "Never mind—I'll soon find out!"

Ted strode to the little door, and flung it open. He hesitated only a moment, then went groping into the dark passageway beyond, and disappeared.

A few minutes later, a muffled cry issued from the depths of the tunnel. George's heart sank.

Then, Ted reappeared, dragging Rita with him. His face was livid with rage. He hauled Rita out into the garage, reached for his gun, and aimed it at George.

"I'll kill you for this!"

Rita and Mazie screamed.

CHAPTER XXXIV

Ellen, soon after her encounter with George, had run into William Peters as she was coming out of a shop.

"Oh, hello," he greeted her. "What luck! I was just going to phone you to ask you to have tea with me. I'm leaving tonight, you know. How about having an early tea right now?"

"I'd love to," Ellen agreed. She looked at him anxiously. "How — how do you feel after last night?"

He rubbed his chin ruefully. "Oh, all right. But your friend Mr. Martin certainly packs a terrific wallop!"

"I—I just met him," said Ellen. "And—and he's terribly sorry about it—wanted to apologize to you. He—he wasn't himself last night."

"That was evident!" Peters said, with grim little laugh.

Ellen said no more for the moment. However, despite the fact that she had raked George over the coals, she was not as angry with him as she had led him to believe, and she did want to try to make William Peters understand all the circumstances that had led up to last night's unfortunate incident. As a matter of fact, she partly blamed herself, particularly after talking to George—even though she had told him his excuse was "childish."

Hence, a little later, as she and Peters faced each other across a tea table, she reverted to the subject of George.

"I do hope you aren't terribly angry at him."

Peters shrugged. "Forget it. I'm not one to hold a grudge."

"He's really awfully ashamed of himself," Ellen persisted. "You see, he was very much upset over something—something that I had done to him—and so—and so—"

"And so, he tried to forget by getting tight."

"Exactly!" Ellen eagerly explained in greater detail. "You do understand, don't you?" she finished.

"Oh, sure! After all, I've been on a binge or two myself—though I've never gone to the extent of socking any one."

"Then, you won't hold it against George?"

"Why should I? Besides, I'll probably never lay eyes on the man again."

"Oh!" said Ellen, a bit crestfallen.

She had hoped that her argument for George would persuade Peters not to abandon the idea of considering him for that business opportunity he had spoken of, but she supposed that was too much to expect. After all, you didn't give boosts to young men who knocked you down!

Her disappointment, however was so plainly written on her face that, presently, Peters reached across the table and took her hand.

"You plead his cause very earnestly." He smiled, and looked at her intently. "You are in love with him, aren't you—though you denied it last night?"

Ellen blushed like a schoolgirl, and lowered her eyes.

"Yes," she whispered. "I—I guess I'll have to admit it."

Peters sighed. "Well, George Martin is a mighty lucky man." He was silent a moment, then said softly, "Ellen....you may not believe it, but I meant what I said last night about....love at first sight. However, if another man's ahead of me, I guess there's no hope."

Ellen blushed still more. "I — I think you're a wonderful person and — and — what you've said makes me very happy but — but ...." Her voice trailed off. Then, she added, "And please don't misunderstand what I just said. You see....that's a secret.... that even George doesn't know. I didn't even admit it to myself until—until — well, until I saw signs that he might possibly feel the same way." Ellen gave a little laugh. "You may not like it but—but—I believe you have opened his eyes."

"I see. It took a rival, eh, to wake him up?" Peters sighed again. Then, his eyes twinkled. "Well, in that case, I suppose that sock I took last night was in a good cause!"

"You're sweet to take it that way." Ellen smiled.

"You're the one that's sweet," said Peters, squeezing her hand. "And because you're such a sweet person, I'm going to tell you a secret. I expect to be in Elkton again and, the next time I come, I may still have that business talk with George Martin—under more favorable circumstances."

"Oh!" cried Ellen, her eyes shining. "I think you're perfectly splendid!"

"Mind you — I don't promise," Peters warned. "I'll have to discuss the matter with other members of my firm, but Mr. Buxton has spoken very highly of Martin, and so—"

Ellen impulsively leaned across the little table, and gave him a quick kiss on the cheek.

"You're the most generous person I've ever known!"

"Well!" he said, with a happy grin, "I'd gladly forgive half a dozen socks for that!"

When they parted a little later, it was with the understanding that they would meet again.

Ellen, feeling very happy, set out for Lee's office, to see him about the business that she had postponed when she had found George and Rita in his office on her earlier visit.

"Lee!" she said, bursting in on him. "I've good news!"

She told him of her tea with William Peters and of its propitious outcome.

"So's he's willing to forgive and forget, eh? Fine!" said Lee. "But how come you're so radiant about it? I thought you were mad at George."

"Naturally, I had to tell him that!" Ellen laughed.

"Well, I'm afraid I have bad news for you," said Lee. "At least it's bad for George."

"What?" asked Ellen, immediately anxious.

Lee told her of the letter from Ted Lane, and of Ted's arrival in town on top of it.

"Oh, dear!" gasped Ellen. "Why that's dreadful! You say he actually threatented to shoot George?"

"Now, don't let it worry you too much," Lee soothed. "Undoubtedly, he was simply making a crazy threat that he had no intention of carrying out. Of course, he's apt to make things a bit unpleasant for George but—"

His words were cut off by the telephone. He answered it and, as he listened to the person at the other end of the wire, an expression of horrified incredulity swept over his face.

"My gosh!" he exclaimed, slamming the phone down and leaping up. "Come on, Ellen—we've got to get out to George's place quick! Ted Lane evidently did mean that threat!"

He seized Ellen by the wrist, and pulled her with him out of the office.

"CACTUS JACK"

Cactus Jack Garner, 70-year-old vice-president of the United States, still remains the most popular Democrat possibility for the presidency among Democrats, the latest Gallup poll has disclosed. Second in line is Secretary of State Cordell Hull, now in his late 60s, and third, believe it or not, is that sterling politician and author, Postmaster-General Jim Farley.

There is one quality all three of these men have in common and that quality is shared by the fourth man on the list, Clark of Missouri, they are all anti-New Dealers. As a matter of fact the New Dealers are down at the bottom of the list of the ten most popular possibilities. Barkley ranks seventh, Murphy, eighth, Hopkins, ninth and Joe Kennedy, tenth. One searches in vain for the name of that active candidate for the succession, Henry Wallace.—Watertown N.Y., Times.

Seventy-five persons miraculously escaped death and injuries when ten cars of the Baltimore and Ohio crack train, the Fort Pitt Limited, plunged from the rails east of Defiance, Ohio, throwing 75 sleeping passengers from their berths. Several of the coaches turned on their sides and east and west tracks were torn up for several hundred yards. The Limited, an all-pullman train, was powered by two locomotives. It was believed the tender of the second engine was derailed first and turned crosswise of the tracks, derailing ten cars. Three women passengers were treated for bruises and lacerations at the Defiance hospital.

New York Yanks Standing Pat As Annual Big League Parley Gets Underway in N. Y. City

Will Not Break Up Team for "the Good of the Game."

DEAL PENDING

Detroit Tigers Pay $50,000 for Sensational Young Hurler

(By Gayle Talbot, Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, Dec. 13 (AP)— One thing can be said for sure as the baseball men get down to business today in the annual big league convention—New York Yankees are not going to break up their three-time World Champions "for the good of the game."

Therefore, almost anything that happens in the way of player deals in either league is not going to be of paramount importance. The fact will remain that the Yankees overshadow the game, and are in position to watch with amusement the efforts of 15 other clubs to put together a winner.

Detroit Tigers took a lengthy leap in that direction yesterday when they bought Freddie Hutchinson, the year's likeliest minor league pitching prospect, from Seattle of the Pacific Coast League. The Tigers gave up a veteran outfielder, Joyner White, Tony Piet, an infielder who has played in each major league, two minor league prospects and an unannounced sum of cash.

Tigers and Indians in Deal

There seemed a good chance that before nightfall Cleveland Indians will have shipped pitcher Denny Galehouse and outfielder Earl Averill to Detroit in exchange for pitcher Elden Auker and outfielder Pete Fox, with Boston Red Sox possibly cutting themselves in on the deal.

The American League, holding its meeting separately from the National today, will in all probability adopt the so-called "dead" ball introduced by the rival circuit last season. Seven owners hope it will do something to curtail the Yankees' terrific power.

Joint Session Thursday

The two leagues get together in joint session on Thursday. The American Leaguers have before them the suggestion of owner Jacob Ruppert of the Yanks that salaries be paid from the opening of spring training, in order to discourage holdouts. This is due for defeat, as is also a proposal that the season be closed a fortnight earlier than at present in order to avoid the annual conflict with football.

Both circuits are expected to extend the present player limit of 23 to 25 men and big plans will be made for the celebration next season of baseball's 100th anniversary.

Hutchinson Pleased

Seattle, Dec. 13 (AP)—Nineteen-year-old Freddie Hutchinson, who stepped out of high school this year into professional baseball to become the Pacific Coast League's best pitcher, is going to get his first squint at major league baseball next season in a Detroit Tigers uniform.

When told last night of his sale to the American League club by Seattle for a reported price of $50,000 and four players, Freddie blinked his eyes rather unbelievingly and then with a big grin on his face said:

"Don't ask me whether it feels good to know you're going to the majors. It is a 15-year-old dream come true. That's where I've wanted to go since the first time I saw a baseball."

SPORTS BECOME MAJOR INDUSTRY

Sale of Athletic Goods 27.5 Percent Higher Than in 1935

Washington, Dec. 13 (AP)— The United States census bureau offered proof today of the rise of sports as a major industry.

Figures compiled from the recent biennial census of manufacturers show manufacturers of athletic goods in the United States turned out $44,460,526 worth of equipment in 1937—a gain of 27.5 per cent over $34,863,730 reported in 1935.

Wage earners in the industry increased from 9,565 to 11,393, and wages went up from $9,018,083 to $11,730,185.

Incidentally, these figures do not include clothing made specifically for athletic purposes, nor firearms and ammunition.

The most money is spent for golf. The value of its products was $13,760,337, an increase of more than $3,000,000 and the number of new golf balls turned loose in 1937, the census bureau says, was 20,672,184.

Next came fishing tackle, for which Americans spent $10,875,490 against $7,561,662 in 1935.

TRADE RUMOR SUBJECT

National league baseball clubs, especially Bill Terry's New York Giants are after the services of Henry (Zeke) Bonura, ABOVE, slugging first baseman with Washington Senators in the rival American league. The Giants, weak at first since Terry himself gave up playing, feel Zeke's big bat would solve their problem nicely, but the other American league clubs would have to waive on his services before the Giants would have a chance of securing him.

Quinte Skating Club to Hold Ice Carnival for Two Nights

Important Innovations Will be Introduced by Members

COMMITTEES FORMED

Anticipating increased interest in fancy and figure skating as a general recreation in Belleville and environs, the Quinte Skating Club held a general meeting at the Y.M.C.A. for the purpose of formulating plans for their forthcoming skating season and their third annual Ice Carnival and Pageant. With upwards of 50 members present President Ivan Scott outlined the season's program and several innovations, that will be introduced to stimulate interest in fancy and figure skating as well as the initial arrangements for the club Ice Carnival, to be held Feb. 2nd. and 3rd. next.

Miss Lillian Sprackett presented the annual financial statement, which proved favourable and showed the Quinte Skating Club had enjoyed a splendid year in 1938, during which several major debts were liquidated. Secretary Steve Licence also tendered his annual report. President Scott announced the annual election of officers would be held early in 1939.

Gordon Davies as Teacher

One of the initial points of business was the appointment of Mr. Gordon Davies, of this city as the club professional tutor, with no financial obligations attached the club as a whole, however. Mr. Davies has qualified himself for this important post by study and skating tuition under well known Toronto experts for the past few years and is recognized as a capable skating teacher in the art of figure and fancy skating.

With the announcement that the annual Quinte Skating Club annual Ice Carnival would be extended to a two night program with added attractions from recognized North American skating clubs and the presentation of a mammoth ice pageant, committees were organized to advance the carnival and prepare for its presentation in February.

The Skating committee of the club for 1939 will include Mr. A. Lloyd, chairman, Mrs. G. Smith, Douglas McBride, A. Leslie, Miss Muriel Wardner, Gordon Davies, the President, Secretary and members of the Board.

The Ladies' Advisory Board will consist of Mrs. I. Scott, Mrs. C. McBride, Mrs. Lancaster, Mrs. A. Leslie and Mrs. O. M. Davies. The general Carnival Committee will be composed of the two elected boards, whose numbers have power to add to those elected last night.

Biggest trade of the baseball off-season to be put through so far was engineered at the New Orleans meeting by New York Giants and Chicago Cubs of the National League. It was a straight swap, Bill Terry exchanging three of his players for a trio offered by Gabby Hartnet of the league champions. The six men involved are shown ABOVE, the three Giants who will be in Cub uniform next year along the TOP, and the Windy City threesome who will play at the Polo Grounds next year along the BOTTOM.

PATTY BERG NO. 1 WOMAN ATHLETE

Sensational Young Golfer Almost an Overwhelming Choice

New York, Dec. 13 (AP)—Freckle-faced Patty Berg is the overwhelming choice of United States sports experts as the No. 1 woman athlete of 1938.

Forty-five of 67 sports critics who participated in the eighth annual Associated Press poll selected Miss Berg as their first choice on the basis of a sensational golf campaign that led the young Minneapolis girl to the United States championship.

It wasn't a race at any stage. With the addition of second and third place ballots, Miss Berg rolled up 164 points to leave her closest competitors, Helen Wills Moody and Katherine Rawls Thompson, far behind.

Mrs. Moody, whose dramatic tennis comeback was climaxed by victory over Helen Jacobs in the all-England finals at Wimbledon, finished in a tie with Mrs. Thompson, unquestionably the country's greatest all-round swimmer.

Mrs. Moody gained a 10-4 margin over Mrs. Thompson in first places but the great swimmer, selected as the No. 1 woman athlete in the 1937 poll, was given wider support in seconds and thirds.

Alice Marble, who regained the women's United States single tennis championship, finished a strong fourth with 52 points.

When the district junior "C" group schedule in the O.H.A. is drafted later this week, it will be possible to have Belleville fans seeing a maximum of 19 O.H.A. games within a period of five weeks this season. As we pointed out yesterday there will be eight home games for the Flyers and Redmen combined. This group has a play-off that will give Belleville fans a minimum of three more games and possibly five, if Peterboro should finish out of the group playdowns. Now along comes the junior "C" loop with five teams, giving the fans four more home games. No doubt a play-off will be arranged here also, which could give the local ice at least two more games, providing, however, the Quintes finish in a play-off slot.

The minimum number of games to be played locally inside of four weeks will be 15, eleven senior "B" and four junior "C". No matter what happens in the senior group the Hume Arena is assured to be the home ice for at least eight group games and three play-off tilts, as both the Flyers and Redmen use the Hume arena ice as their home stamping ground. Fifteen O.H.A. hockey matches in less than five weeks is a pretty stiff dose of hockey for Belleville fans to tackle, but providing the clubs are evenly matched and a good brand of hockey is dished up to the paying public we see no reason why 1939 shouldn't be a banner year for all clubs in Belleville.

He can still be referred to as "the pop-off kid" because Dizzy Dean apparently is carrying the torch against the St. Louis Cardinals wherever he goes in his speaking and stage engagements. Talking at Sioux City, Ia., recently, the Chicago Cubs' hurler and former Redbird startled his audience with the statement: "If there is a father in this crowd who wants his boy to be a success in the major leagues don't let him sign with the Cardinals." He praised Carl Hubbell as the greatest pitcher of all time, excluding himself and Paul; declared his arm was feeling great, predicted he would stage a comeback next year and repeated the assertion that he would never pitch against his brother Paul, saying: "I'm good and Paul is good. One of us would get beat. So I'm not going to pitch against him."

Late last winter the Quinte Skating Club of this city presented a carnival and ice extravaganza, that would have done a much larger city proud. Not satisfied to sit back and enjoy their laurels, the heads of the local fancy and figure skating club are planning a still larger carnival of kaleidoscopic wonders. Enthused by their reception last year, the club intends to present a two-night carnival next February. To present a two-night ice carnival in Belleville is no small order, but the officers and members of the Quinte Skating Club are no shirkers. At least this was proven beyond any medium of doubt last year. They have the good wishes and blessings of many.

Allan Sothoron, who recently was deposed as manager of the Milwaukee Brewers in favor of Mickey Heath, but who retains some stock in the club, visited Milwaukee, November 28 for a conference with President Henry Bendinger regarding his holdings in the club and a contract which had two years to run as pilot. Sothoron was to have received $6,500 a year through 1939 and 1940, as well as five per cent of the net profits, under the terms of the contract. He said upon arrival, that he would set a price on his stock and ask for payment of salary under the managerial agreement. Sothoron added that he would remain out of the game, if necessary, to collect, but that if a settlement is reached, he might buy into an International League club.

When Farley Faulkner, who was hob-nobbing with the celebrities down in the celluloid village of Hollywood, where he is known as the "Canadian Jimmie Fiddler," returned home for the holiday season he was most surprised to learn intermediate basketball was being neglected in Belleville. "The boys have deserted the ship since you stalked about flipping baskets from centre Farley". Maybe Belleville's gift to the cinema realm can apply some of his well known persuasive ways upon such veterans as Art Cole, Owen Atkins, Al Wickerson and others to return to the cage wars, as reports emanating from the Campbell Street gym house would almost lead us to believe there are two or three hoopsters of the proven variety type at the R.C.A.F. The only thing noticeable regarding them, however, is their conspicuous absence. However Farley at one time headed the local basketball squad with more than the average amount of success, when the material was not of high calibre it is said to be today. "A fine Christmas present to the old home town would be to have Farley use his influence in reviving the cage game before he returns to sunny California."

Although sports history will be made when the University of Southern California hockey team skate out to beat Queen's University at Jock Harty Arena on Thursday night, it will not be the first time a U.S.C. athlete body has passed through Belleville. About four years ago Coach Dean Cromwell and the entire University of California track and field team stopped over in Bloomfield for a full week. The U.S.C. arrived via C.N.R. at Belleville and drove to Bloomfield in Duke Smith's bus, as we recall it. The U.S.C. track and field team was enroute from Boston to Chicago at the time, where they were to compete at the world's fair, then in progress. Coach Cromwell had an off week and as we recall it took his athletes to visit some relative of his residing at Bloomfield.

The fans do not want to walk off with the idea this touring Trojan puck squad from Southern Cal. is any push over. We have it right from Farley Faulkner, who is travelling in advance to the Trojans, that a goodly number of the Trojan's puck squad are former Western Canada hockey celebrities. There's Jerry Beranek, former Saskatoon Wesley junior in the nets, Bev North, Al Fitzgerald, "Stew" King, Dick Rougas, of Alberta as well as several Manitoba kids who are getting their book knowledge at the U.S.C. in return for hockey efforts. In all there are eleven Canadians gracing the Trojan's puck line-up, so Coach Flat Walsh and his cohorts want to watch their proverbial hockey step on Thursday night.

Queens took a mathematical lead in the Van Horne Memorial Cup series by coming from behind to tie Perth last night. Queens have won two, lost one and tied one and have one remaining game for a total of five points. The Belleville Redmen have only four points in the standing, but Eddie Thomas' charges have only played two games, winning over Garrison and Perth, two of the toughest squads in the loop. Tomorrow the locals meet Kingston City and all they need is this victory to cinch a play-off berth. "Get in there fellows"

HODGE PODGE—The Winnipeg Blue Bombers say condition beat them, forgetting Lew Hayman's bag of tricks especially those lateral passes, which left the Westerners beaten and bewildered.... Did you know Bronko Nagurski, current claimant to the world's heavyweight wrestling championship and former All-American football star, was born in Ontario, near Rainy River to be exact.....Keep your eye open for some important baseball trades this week....Kingston entered the O.H.A. wars to give the Limestone City a compact four teamed senior "B" group along with R.M.C., Queens and Garrison....Gananoque, however, was left out in the cold holding the well known bag with no group.

Queens in a Tie With Perth Score is 3 to 3

Kingston, Dec. 13—Queen's shared the points with Perth in a George Vanhorne memorial hockey game here last night when they played to a three-all overtime deadlock. The point for a tie gave the Collegians the lead, as previous to the game they were on even terms with Kingston Garrison and Belleville for the front spot.

Great goal guarding by Rutherford and poke-checking by Rusty White broke up most of the scoring efforts of the students. McWilliams and Fry played well for the tricolor.

Queen's: Goal, Tremblay; defense Truman and McGill; centre, McWilliams; wings, Dewar and McLean. Subs. Mables, Carter, Suckling, Fry, Hay.

PRESENTATION

Frankford, Dec. 13—A large number of friends and neighbours gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Hubble to honor their son, Elgin, and his bride (nee Verna Lummis) who were recently married and presented them with a 96 piece dinner set. The following address was read by Leonard Reid:

Dear Verna and Elgin:

It gives us great pleasure as your friends and neighbours to gather here in honor of your recent marriage, and to convey to you both, our best wishes for a long wedded life.

Verna, we welcome you to our community and hope you will join in our activities.

"To you how bright the future looms,
What prospects are in view,
And may they all be realized,
Is our best wish for you."

Elgin you have grown up here and made many friends. We are glad you are going to make your home in this community and it is our sincere wish that your newly-founded home will be a real home and one of the happiest.

"We may live without poetry, music and art
We may live without conscience and without heart
We may live without friends and without books
But civilized men cannot live without cooks."

To assure you of our good wishes we ask you to kindly accept this gift, knowing we all wish you health, wealth and prosperity throughout your lives.

Signed on behalf of your friends and neighbours, Leonard Reid, Harold Bryant, Gerald Kemp.

Retired Railroader Visits City After 35 Year Absence

"It seems good to walk up and down Front Street again. The place has changed considerably, but there still remain a lot of familiar spots and faces that remind me of the good old days." Hale and hearty, S. E. Keats, retired Canadian National Railway Sleeping-car conductor smiled appreciation of the old familiar sights that he viewed again today for the first time in thirty-five years.

The ex-railwayman smilingly refused to divulge his age. "I have been sixty-five years with the railway, and retired two years ago, and am now making my home in Trenton," he said.

For fifteen years Mr. Keats served the old Grand Trunk Railway in Belleville as a clerk in the baggage department. From there he was sent to Montreal, leaving that place on transfer to St. Paul, Minneapolis. From the American city he was again transferred to Winnipeg where he remained until the time of his retirement two years ago.

He read the first copy of a Belleville daily newspaper yesterday that he has seen in a number of years. "I read it through from the weather probabilities to the last word on the last page" he said "and it seemed good to again read the old familiar names of people and places that I have not heard about in years."

Mr. and Mrs. Keats are spending a few days in the city as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. G. S. Sharpe, Catherine Street.

TRENTON and DISTRICT

A third in the series of Sunday night R.C.A.F. band concerts was held in the Trent Theatre on Sunday with the house packed to overflowing; and many who have attended all three of the musical treats declare that the latest is the most excellent of the trio. Music lovers have been flocking to these events in increasing numbers, and long before the programme was scheduled to begin seats were at a premium. As before a widely varied programme was given, and the members of the silver band, led by Flight Sergeant T. Cooper, were given a real ovation as the curtain descended. Public demand has been so strong that it is quite likely another of the series may be given some time in the New Year.

Traffic was temporarily held up in the midst of the snow squalls on Monday afternoon when a large truck loaded with some complicated mechanical equipment found it could not pass under the bridge over the Trent and was detained for some minutes as workmen undertook to shift the load to reduce the height. On various occasions unwary drivers have found to their sorrow that the steel girders of the bridge are low, and Monday's tieup, fortunately, was for a few moments only.

Ladies' of King Street United Church held a pleasing and successful tea in the Sunday School rooms on Friday afternoon.

Christmas leaves for members of the R.C.A.F. will soon be here and many are planning trips to distant points for the festive season.

CENTRE, VICTORIA AND REDNERSVILLE W. M. S.

The December meeting of Centre, Victoria and Rednersville W. M. S. was held on Wednesday afternoon at Centre Church. The meeting was opened by the president, Mrs. H. Pulver taking charge of the worship service. Hymn 64 was sung and the scripture readings were read by Mrs. Pulver.

Rev. Mr. Boomhour took charge of the election of officers for the coming year.

Mrs. Pulver took charge of the rest of the meeting. A short time was spent in prayer with several members taking part.

Several members paid dues and the groups were re-arranged for the coming year.

The collection amounted to $8.50 and flower collection 30c.

The meeting was closed with the Mizpah Benediction.

Brands Toronto's Requests as 'Silly'

Toronto's request, made by Mayor Day, that the Provincial and Dominion Governments contribute two-thirds the cost of the construction of a modern sewage disposal plant, the creation of a new super highway through the city, and other work projects, was today branded by Mayor Jamieson Bone as "silly."

"Toronto, as usual, wants to get the lion's share. But if that city is favored by the governments to the extent of having two-thirds of the cost of the construction of these projects, then Belleville will have a better right to ask for the same thing. We have work here that is very much more needed than that city's new sewage system or road. We have the very big problem of flood control here, for example, And if Toronto is granted that much assistance, then I intend to have application made for the City of Belleville, too.

"The thing, however, is silly on the face of it. After all, the money needed will have to come out of the real estate owner, and he is already taxed to extinction. Perhaps Mayor Day can't see it that way, but that is the way it is. And most of the other municipalities won't stand for that."

Large Quantity Fish Spawn Under Culture At Local Hatchery

Culture tanks of the Dominion fish hatchery east of the city are holding an estimated 65,000,000 whitefish eggs at the present time as the season at the hatchery advances. A total of one and one half million trout are also under culture, it is reported by G. K. Manore in charge of the hatchery.

Whitefish when raised to sufficient size will be used for restocking purposes in the Bay of Quinte, while the trout will be liberated next spring in lakes through the northern sections of the province.

Necessary to Remove Store Window to Admit Refrigerator

That old proverb of "beware of Greeks bearing gifts," taken from the historical siege of Troy when the besieging Greek army finally gained admittance to the besieged city of Troy through the medium of a ruse in a large wooden horse, was in some measure brought before the eyes of local citizens on Bridge St. today when it was necessary to remove the entire front of a local business premise in order to admit a newly purchased store fixture.

Recently Miss Dorothy Quick, local florist, purchased a large, electric refrigeration plant in which to preserve flowers. When the large plant arrived today it was found to be much too large to be admitted through the doorway leading into Miss Quick's premises. Carpenters were called in for consultation with the result it was found necessary to remove the entire front of the store in order to permit the new plant to be taken inside for use.

Christmas Trees

AT S.S. CITADEL

With living models as statues, the annual Salvation Army Christmas entertainment was presented at the Army Citadel last evening featuring a "visit to the wax works", an outstanding presentation of entertaining interest. The Citadel was filled to overflowing for the annual Christmas Army entertainment and kiddies Christmas tree. Culminating a splendid variety program, consisting for the most part of Christmas entertainment, Santa Claus arrived to distribute the gifts to the younger members of the Salvation Army, amid tumultuous applause.

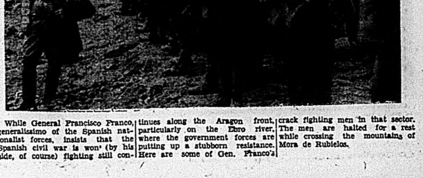
The Program

The outstanding items on the lengthy program were the one act play "The Crane's Christmas Dinner," a presentation which clearly showed the advantages of faith. Under the direction of Junior Sergt.-Major George Wardle, a skit entitled "A Visit to the Wax Works". was featured by living "statues". The statues shown were as follows—General Brock (Norman Muncaster); Napoleon Bonaparte (Wm. Taylor); Duke of Wellington (Harold Gerow); Laura Secord (Ruth Alderman); Queen Victoria (Glenys Green); John Bull (Victor Mason); Abraham Lincoln (Arthur Fudge); Grace Darling (Dorothy Stebbins); Florence Nightingale (Marjorie Alderman); Catherine Booth (Dorothea Alderman); General Wm. Booth (Austin Sagar); the visitors (Mrs. S. Lessels); Guide, (Mary Frost). For a full fifteen minute period the living statues stood motionless.

Besides the Young People's Band under the direction of Leader Jack Green, the Young People's choir, assisted in the program. Others included Joyce Parkhurst, recitation; Douglas Mason and George Ellarby, cornet duet; Margaret Stebbins, and Ruth Alderman, trombone duet; June Wardle, piano solo; George Ellarby, Christmas reading and Cyril Magor, recitation.

Major Alderman not only capably occupied the position of chairman, but led in prayer. The Station Street Branch of the Salvation Army will hold its annual Christmas entertainment in their Citadel on Wednesday night, Major Alderman announced before favours were given the children upon the arrival of Old St. Nicholas.

Mme Skobine, CENTRE, wife of General Nicholas Skobine, LEFT, ex-Russian army officer, and known on the concert stage as La Plevitsgaia, is being questioned by French police in the Quai D'Orsay investigation into the strange disappearance of two white Russian generals. She is now on trial accused of conspiring with her husband to kidnap General Eugene de Miller, RIGHT, head of the Union of White Russian Veterans in Paris. Both General de Miller and Skobine disappeared in September, 1937. No satisfactory explanation of the disappearance of the two generals has yet been found.



While General Francisco Franco, generalissimo of the Spanish nationalist forces, insists that the Spanish civil war is won (by his side, of course) fighting still continues along the Aragon front, particularly on the Ebro river, where the government forces are putting up a stubborn resistance. Here are some of Gen. Franco's crack fighting men in that sector. The men are halted for a rest while crossing the mountains of Mora de Rubielos.

What Henry Wanted

By CARLA F. ROSENTHAL

"Henry," said Mrs. Brooks, "you need a rest."

Henry looked up from his newspaper and nodded.

"You are sticking too close to the office," went on Mrs. Brooks. "An afternoon off in the balmy spring air—that is what you want, Henry."

"Al right," said Henry.

So that very afternoon he turned his law office over to the bobbed-haired stenographer and, coming home, informed Elizabeth that he was through for the day. After lunch she heard him rummaging in the attic.

"What are you doing, Henry?" she sang up.

"Getting ready to go fishing," he shouted. "Looking for my tackle."

"Fishing! You don't want to go fishing," she called back. "It's too cold! You want to go shopping with me."

"All right," said Henry.

An hour later Mr. and Mrs. Brooks strolled down street together. It was a beautiful day. Birds trilled in the treetops, automobiles merrily spattered mud about them, little boys rolled marbles for the unwary to trip over. But Henry and Elizabeth side-stepped it all and in due time arrived at a department store. Elizabeth, with the air of one treading on familiar ground led Henry to the coat department.

"We've come to see some coats," she announced, "and I have brought my husband along to help select. He has such excellent taste."

The saleslady looked admiringly at Henry and installed him in a chair. He sat there many minutes and acquired numerous bits of information. He learned that there was such colors as thistledown, mikado and bird's nest, that women were preparing for hot summer days by putting fur on their coats, and many other interesting things. Elizabeth tried on and tried on, and just as Henry was beginning to think that, like the babbling brook, she was going on forever, suddenly she stopped.

"Which one do you like best, Henry?" she asked.

"The blue," he said promptly. "The one you had on between the horseradish and the lettuce."

Elizabeth pouted. "Oh, no, Henry, you don't want that. It's too dull-looking. I'm sure you like the henna one much better, Henry."

"Al right," said Henry.

"And now," said Elizabeth, some half-hour later—the coats, of course, had all to be tried on again—"now the hat."

"Oh, yes, the hat", said Henry.

Again he waited. Hats passed in review before him—top-notch hats, poke hats, mushroom hats, hats that turned up and hats that turned down, hats of every conceivablet trimming and of every imaginable color—and finally Elizabeth spoke, "Which one, Henry?"

Henry was prepared. Elizabeth had picked a henna coat. She would want a henna hat to match.

"But you don't want them to match," laughed Elizabeth. "You want contrast, Henry. That pretty yellow is just the thing."

"All right," said Henry.

"You need a tie," said Elizabeth. "We'll get that next. I'll go with you, but you select what you want, Henry."

So they went to a clothing store and looked at ties. Henry gazed admiringly at a red one, but Elizabeth shook her head.

"You don't want that. It's too boisterious," she said. "That gray and blue one over there you'll like much better, Henry."

"All right," said Henry.

The afternoon had passed, and it was supper time. Instead of going home, they decided to go to a restaurant.

"And now," said Elizabeth, as they emerged from the restaurant, "we'll make a regular holiday of it. Let's go to a show. Where would you like to go, Henry?"

"There's a fine vaudeville bill at the Capitol," said Henry.

"But you don't want to go there," said Elizabeth. "You can see vaudeville any time. You want to go to something really worthwhile. There's a symphony concert at the Auditorium. I'm sure you'll enjoy that much more, Henry."

"All right," said Henry.

Henry slept rather fitfully that night. Perhaps it was because he had already slumbered at the concert, and was no longer very sleepy. And he dreamed. He dreamed he was very ill. His people were all gathered about him. Elizabeth sat at one side of the bed, the doctor at the other side. Elizabeth was crying. "Is there anything you want, Henry—anything at all" she sobbed.

And Henry could hear his own voice saying feebly, "I want to go to heaven."

"Oh, no," he heard Elizabeth's tearful voice, "you don't want to go there, Henry."

"All right," said Henry.

NEW YORK STOCKS

New York, Dec. 13.—(AP)—Stocks put on a rallying show in the forepart of today's market but ran out of buying power in the tail end of the session.

At the best gains ranged from fractions to two or more points, with a few issues at new peaks for the year. The list turned quiet after the morning's bulge and extreme advances were halved in many cases near the final hour. Transfers were about 1,000,000 shares.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 13 CP)—From a slow start the mining and western oil share market picked up smartly in the second hour on Toronto Exchange today and by noon all indices were showing gains. Western oils and some of the junior golds featured the trade.

Home Oil was off to 1.93 at the opening and buying rush around noon lifted the price to a new top for the current movement at 2.14. Siscoe, Madsen, Bobjo and Goldale changed hands in volume at stronger prices. Food, steel, paper and beverage stocks recorded moderate gains. Volume was better at about 750,000 shares.

The West Produces Fewer Turkeys

Toronto, Dec. 13—A steadier undertone was evident in eggs on the local produce market yesterday, while little change occurred in butter and cheese. Indications are for a turkey crop below normal in both Alberta and Saskatchewan, with the chicken crop in the West also under expectations, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture. Abnormally mild weather in the Eastern provinces has been inclined to slow buying of poultry for the holiday trade in retail channels. Exports of dressed poultry to Great Britain for the Christmas trade are now finished with shipments of chickens heavier than a year ago and turkey exports lighter. From Nov. 19 to Dec 3 this year, clearances amounted to 6,719 boxes of chickens and 1,567 boxes of turkeys, while for the like period of 1937, 4,437 boxes of chickens and 4,078 boxes of turkeys were shipped.

Lower prices have apparently stimulated trading slightly on the egg market as dealers reported better movement in current arrivals. Although prices were steadier, the graded division showed the only changes. Graded shipments were clearing at 31c to 32c for grade A-large, 26c to 27c for medium, 25c to 26c for pullets, 24c for B's and 22c for C grades.

Despite a reported surplus of about 15 million pounds heavier than last year, offerings were not pressing on the butter market, and prices maintained former levels. Trading, however, was spotty, with buying confined to small lots. Ontario creamery solids sold at 21 3-4c for No. 1 grades and 21c for 38 score. Prints continued to trade at the unchanged quotations of 23-1-2c to 24c for top grades and 22-3-4c to 23 1-4c for 38 score.

MONTREAL PRODUCE QUIET

Montreal, Dec. 12 (CP)—Trading was quiet and prices generally steady on Montreal open produce markets today, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported. Butter prices were slightly easier.

Creamery butter prints to retailers were 23c to 23 1-4c a pound and solids sold at 22 1-2c to 22 3-4.

Graded egg shipments in used free crates were offered at 33c a dozen for A-large, 27c for A-medium, 26c for A-pullets, 24c for B-large, 23c for B-medium and 21c for C. Receipts: 359 cases.

Livestock

Toronto, Dec. 13 (CP)—Cattle trade was slow on Toronto Livestock Market today with morning sales holding at steady prices. Calf prices were weak. Sheep and lambs were at former price levels. No hog price was set by early afternoon. Cattle holdover from Monday was 1,800 head.

Receipts reported by Dominion Livestock Branch were: Cattle 670; calves 340; hogs 1,380; sheep and lambs 820.

Common to medium weighty steers sold at $5 to $6.25 with a few good to choice quality at $6.50 to $7. Butcher cattle ranged from $4 to $5.90. Cows were weak at $2.75 to $3.75 for butchers and $2 to $2.50 for canners and cutters.

Choice veal calves were priced at $9.50 to $10 with common heavies as low as $5. Some grass calves moved at $4.50. Previous close on off-truck bacon hogs was $8.75. Good ewe and wether lambs by rail brought $9.50 with truck lambs at $6 to $9.25. Two carloads of Western lambs were unsold by early afternoon. Sheep ranged from $2 to $4.50 cwt.

Montreal, Dec. 13 (CP)—Receipts: Cattle 150; calves 140; hogs 830; sheep and lambs 60.

Cattle: Heifers ranged from $3-$5. Medium quality cows made $3.25-$3.50 and common butchers $2.75-$3. Canners and cutters were $2-$2.50 while common bulls brought $3-$3.50.

Calves: Good veals sold at $10 with tops up to $10.50.

Sheep and lambs: Good ewes and wethers were $9, heavies $8 and culls and bucks $7. Sheep brought $2.50-$4.

Hogs: Bacons, fed and watered, were $9.25 with truck hogs at $9.50. Selects drew $1 per hog premium with the usual cuts on off grades. Sows were $7-$7.75 while hogs on rail grade made $12.70 cold weight.

Roman Catholic Council Opens Toronto Session

Toronto, Dec. 13 (CP)—The first council of the Roman Catholic Province of Toronto in more than 50 years opened today in St. Michael's cathedral with the celebration of Pontifical High Mass.

Archbishop J. C. McGuigan, Bishop John T. Kidd of London and Bishop Joseph F. Ryan of Hamilton, and other dignitaries from the Ecclesiastical Province officiated at the Mass and the council meeting which followed. The body will also meet tomorrow and Thursday, with each session being opened with Pontifical High Mass.

The Council according to a parochial letter issued by Archbishop McGuigan, must be called every 20 years in compliance with changes in the Church's Canon Law. It was said by spokesmen to be one of the most important Ecclesiastical bodies in most important Ecclesiastical bodies in existence.

QUOTES HEPBURN

Mr. King's leadership."

The Premier said he told the Agricultural Minister he was prepared to support the nominee of the Liberal party "when he came before the people with a Progressive Party." The two men then parted. Mr. Hepburn said the next thing he heard was the Saturday Night attack upon him in Port Arthur by Transport Minister Howe and Trade Labor Minister Norman Rogers.

To Use Influence Against Howe

The Star then quoted the Premier:

"I had nothing to do with Mr. Howe's nomination meeting; I did not know it was being held. But since he has asked for it will see to it that all the influence I have will be directed against him—though I spoke at his nomination meeting in 1935.

"My last word to Mr. Gardiner for whom I have a great regard, was that I would quit rather than break up the Liberal party—because that is the obvious fate, after such an attack. King will lose for the Liberals, whether I am with him or against him, but in these circumstances his defeat will be the more complete.

Calls Statements 'Nonsense'

"What is all this nonsense issuing statements that members of Mr. King's Cabinet are supporting him? Isn't that to be expected? If a man announces he is against his leader he couples that with his resignation. I could say the same thing about my Cabinet Ministers. Hon. Harry Nixon (Provincial Secretary) just called me to tell me all the boys are with me and not to budge."

Hostility between the two Liberal leaders broke open last week-end when two Federal Cabinet Ministers charged at Port Arthur Mr. Hepburn, in an "unnatural political alliance", with Premier Duplessis of Quebec, sought to remove Mr. MacKenzie King. Mr. Hepburn declared he would fight the Prime Minister in the next election.

The Star quoted Premier Hepburn as adding in the interview: "Mr. Gardiner went back to Ottawa, saw Mr. King and returned to Toronto for a second conference. He said that the answer was that Mr. King had decided to lead the party in another general election."

Blames 'King Inaction'

"Rather than submit to another five years of such apathetic rule, and callous indifference to the needs of the people of Ontario, I would support another Party, but I would not lead a third Party. If Mr. King leads I will vote as an Independent and support some other with a policy to suit me. King inaction is too much for me. He is living in another generation."

Premier Hepburn said he believed a Federal general election will be held shortly after next summer's visit of the King and Queen to Canada so that "Mr. King can capitalize on the visit of Their Majesties."

Asked whether, as a voter, he had to choose between Mr. Mackenzie King and Dr. R. J. Manion, National Conservative Leader the Premier said he would "vote for Bob Manion—at least he's human."

ABERHART HINTS OF RETIREMENT

Finds Job as Premier Wearisome and Also "Thankless Work"

Calgary, Dec. 13, (CP)—Premier Aberhart hinted in an address here last night that he may retire after another year at the head of the Alberta government.

"I get weary sometimes and I think that I may work at full speed for another year and then ask the people to let me retire," he said.

In addressing a rally of the women's auxiliaries of the Social Credit League in the Calgary Provincial constituency, the premier said: "There may be younger men who could do the work better." He referred to his job as premier as being "thankless work".

Mr. Aberhart's Social Credit Government was elected in August, 1935.

STORES OPEN EVENINGS BEGINNING THURSDAY

Belleville Retail Merchants met Tuesday morning in the Y.M.C.A. parlors when a resolution was passed that the stores be opened for the Christmas season evenings beginning Thursday of this week. The matter of closing the stores Boxing Day, or Tuesday, December 27, as is being done in some places, was discussed and it was decided to take a referendum of the members before making a decision.

Bank of Commerce Has Extensive Small Loan Services

General Manager A. E. Arscott Reports 108,000 Personal Loans Totalling $15,000,000—Over 106,000 Other Small Loans Aggregating $16,000,000. President S. H. Logan Notes Remarkable Growth of Mining and Industry

Presenting a strong statement covering the Bank's operations, Mr. A. E. Arscott, General Manager of The Canadian Bank of Commerce, addressed the annual meeting of the Bank's shareholders in part as follows:

Before passing on to discuss general business conditions I should like to tell you of the operation of the Personal Loan Department which we inaugurated somewhat over two years ago. We started making this new type of loan in Toronto in June, 1936, and by the fall months of that year had its facilities available at all branches across Canada. In a little over two years we have made more than 108,000 individual loans aggregating in excess of $15,000,000. We are very gratified with the response to the efforts we have made to handle small personal loans. The record to date clearly indicates that we are providing a really valuable service for those who require credit on the Budget Saving Plan.

I should like to make it clear that our lending of small amounts is not confined to the Personal Loan Department which has been set up to deal with loans of a special character as a service supplementary to ordinary banking practice. Borrowers requiring small loans of the usual banking type obtain these as formerly direct from the branches. In the past eleven months, in addition to Personal Loans, there were more than 106,000 borrowers who obtained regular banking accommodation from the branches in amounts of less than $500, the aggregate sum so advanced being $16,168,000.

There have been many criticisms levelled at the banks in the past on the grounds that they deny accommodation to the small borrower in order to be able to make loans to large corporations, wealthy firms and individuals but I think the figures I have given you demonstrate that there is no truth in this charge. I can assure you that we have the same policy with regard to all borrowers, large and small. It is that if they are credit-worthy we welcome their business and I know that this is the case with all banks in Canada.

THE BANKING SYSTEM

There is nothing mysterious about banking. Our chief function is to accept the deposits of the public and to use these moneys by making loans to assist in the development of agriculture, commerce and industry. It has been claimed with great frequency that banks do not lend as freely as they should but obviously, if the banks were to loan the depositors' funds without consideration of the prospects of repayment by the borrower, the resulting losses would cause depositors to lose confidence in the banking system and they would be unwilling to place or keep their money in the banks. Banks are able to give valuable service not only to the depositors, but to the borrowers of this country as well, solely because they have demonstrated that they deserve public confidence.

There are critics who endeavour to convey the impression that the banks are immensely rich in their own right but this is not the case. The last Government Statement, which records the position of all the chartered banks as at the end of October, shows that their loans and holdings of securities amount to $2,663,000,000, while the total of their shareholders' investment was less than 11 per cent. of that figure. It is evident, therefore, that most of the money which banks lend is not their own but comes from the sums entrusted to them by the depositors.

With reference to the very large amounts paid by the banks each year in taxes, some governing authorities appear to assume that banks can stand unlimited taxation, but it should be manifest that the ability of the banks to pay taxes is strictly limited if they are to render adequate banking service throughout the Dominion. They are in no different position in this respect from other taxpayers. There is no magical fund on which the banks may draw to cover taxes or other operating expenses.

INDUSTRIAL ACTIVITY

We are able this year to present a better survey of industrial conditions than heretofore. With the co-operation of many industrialists from coast to coast, whose operations are of varied character and extent, we have prepared an industrial production index which will, we believe, portray factory and mill activity more readily and accurately than has any indicator available heretofore in Canada.

The index shows that industrial production activity in November was about 9 per cent. less than a year ago, and that industrial plants were as a whole operating at about 76 per cent. of capacity. This may rightly be considered as a satisfactory record in view of the difficulties encountered by industry the world over during the past year or more.

GENERAL BUSINESS

The year now drawing to a close has been a difficult one. At its commencement business was still suffering from the recession which began in the United States in the early months of 1937 as a result of too great and rapid an expansion in the latter part of 1936 and the first quarter of 1937. Gradual readjustment occurred until about mid-year when business activity showed signs of again advancing and the outlook was much improved. Following this encouraging turn we were, as you all know, plunged into a period of grave anxiety due to the international political situation which brought the major European countries to the brink of armed conflict. However, when the crisis passed the movement toward recovery was resumed.

THE YEAR AHEAD

We have an interesting year ahead of us. We are all looking forward to the visit of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth and we are highly gratified that they have arranged to make a tour across the Dominion. This will afford Their Majesties an opportunity to see the great development which has taken place and is continuing in this country.

We have also the new trade agreements which will become operative on 1st January and which will have a very important bearing on our economic situation. So far as I personally can judge and interpret the views of others, I have come to the conclusion that the agreements will do much to rehabilitate the agricultural industry in this country, which plays so vital a part in the structure of our economy.

I have no illusions as to the difficulties in the way of business which still have to be overcome but the revival in the United States appears to be making considerable headway. This has always had an important bearing on the trend of business in Canada and with the widening of trade channels I look for a substantial increase in our exports. Our prosperity is greatest when we enjoy extensive exchange of goods with other countries and provided the forward movement now in progress does not increase its momentum at too fast a pace or further international complications occur, I look to see a continued healthy advance.

PRESIDENT S. H. LOGAN'S ADDRESS

We experienced a comparatively moderate and short recession in general business activity during the past year, a decline of 15 per cent. extending only from November 1937 to the spring of 1938. A period of relative stability then ensued, followed by a slight recovery.

GREATER ECONOMIC STRENGTH

A remarkable transformation of Canadian economy has given this country greater strength than ever before to withstand depressing influences and has added materially to its recuperative powers.

WIDESPREAD BENEFITS OF MINING

Mining has led the way in the transformation of Canadian economy. In the last decade the production of our mines had an aggregate value of $2,900,000,000, an amount not far short of the present net direct debt of the Dominion Government.

Furthermore, mining has helped greatly to enlarge the field of industry, in which there are now about 25,000 individual plants. In 1928 non-ferrous metal smelting and refining, rated as to the value of production, was in tenth place among Canadian industries, but it is now well in the lead with a gross annual value of output exceeding $200,000,000.

There is also a fairly close relationship between mining and the chemical industry, for most chemicals are derived from minerals, and some of our major mining concerns have chemical by-product plants. It is, therefore, one of the most gratifying features of this mineral-industrial association that the manufacture of chemicals in Canada rose recently to an all-time peak, with a yearly value of over $100,000,000.

SUMMARY OF ECONOMIC TRANSFORMATION

I should like to summarize the results of this large-scale reorganization of Canadian economy. Mining accounts for about 12 per cent. of the net value of national production, as compared with about half this proportion in the pre-depression period. Manufacturing, including metallurgical operations, contributes over 40 per cent., in comparison with about one-third prior to 1929. The relative status of forestry has not changed markedly, a fact which in itself is cause for satisfaction, having regard to the serious difficulties encountered by this industry. Whereas agriculture ten years ago accounted on the average for over one-third of the net value of production, its proportion fell to about 20 per cent. in 1937. Even in a year of normal crop production and of fair prices probably not more than one-quarter can in future be expected from this source, for the expansion of non-agricultural industries is of a permanent character.

FOREIGN TRADE

Our exports (for the 12 months ending October) were again over the billion dollar mark. Including coined gold, total exports amounted to $1,020,000,000 as compared with $1,162,000,000 in 1937, a decline of 12 per cent. This is a very creditable record in view of the coincidence of a short supply of wheat in 1937 with depressed conditions in our main foreign market, the United States. Our export trade with other countries was well maintained. As the average price of exported commodities fell nearly 8 per cent., the volume of trade actually declined by less than 5 per cent.

ECONOMIC WEAKNESSES

I wish it were possible to say that reconstruction of the national economy had proceeded as far in other directions as it has in mining, manufacturing, forestry and export trade. But the problems surrounding the railways, the construction industry and public finance persist. These ills will not, I fear, receive remedial treatment until it is impossible any longer to gloss over the weakening effects they are having on every other form of activity, collective and individual. General recognition and public disapproval of the failure to cope with the fundamental difficulties in these departments of Canadian economy are necessary to hasten their solution.

Real estate owners are justly complaining of the excessive burden pressing upon them, for they have had to provide over one-third of all taxes collected in Canada, which aggregate more than $700,000,000 per annum. In some cases property owners have even been called on for as much as 90 per cent. of the municipal levies. Real estate, indeed, has had to bear increasing taxation for purposes which were never visualized when it was selected as a major source of revenue. Moreover, the base of this type of taxation has been prevented from expanding in any degree proportionate to the growing costs of official administration. For example, private building has been so subnormal in volume for years past that there is now an estimated deficiency of at least 200,000 dwelling units in the number required for good housing accommodation. It is clear, therefore, that unfair taxation in this form has depressed construction and employment in the building trades and that, until some measure of relief to the real estate taxpayer is devised, we cannot expect a major resumption of building.

Since no single government has been responsible for imposing all the inequitable and excessive taxes which are now drained from the public, no one legislative body can remove these handicaps to our progress.

MONETARY FALLACIES

I think that most people now recognize that easier money will not cure our existing problems. Action in other directions is obviously required and monetary experimentation directed to further cheapening the cost of short-term money holds, therefore, no hope of removing the remaining handicaps to complete recovery.

CONSTRUCTIVE ACTION

The commercial treaties recently arranged between the United States, Great Britain and Canada reflect a high concept of international duty in the minds of the various statesmen concerned. The combined foreign trade of these three nations amounts to about one-third of that of the whole world. Their representatives did not allow the difficulty of readjustments, always present in tariff revisions, to deter them. Instead, they wisely sought to afford their people better opportunities for economic advancement and to strengthen the bonds of democracy at one of the most critical stages of its history. Might we not with the same high motives and unity of purpose take our internal problems firmly in hand and so find ways of applying to our entire national economy the constructive forces which have been at work in mining, forestry, manufacturing and export trade?

PROMISING BUSINESS CONDITIONS

As regards the current business situation, the recent progress in manufacturing has cancelled about half of the recession in the latter part of 1937 and the early months of this year. The forest industries, however, may face difficult conditions during the winter, when the new wood cut will likely be the smallest in several years. There is now a healthier undertone in these industries. Mining activity is greater than ever before, more metal properties are in operation and more people are engaged in this industry than in the previous year.

The production value of the industry for the current year (about $450,000,000) may, because of lower base metal prices, be fractionally less than the record established in 1937 but that of gold, now at an annual rate of over $160,000,000, has reached a new peak.

Farm purchasing power, though no greater than a year ago mainly because of low prices for agricultural products and an unusually large proportion of unmerchantable grain, is now much better distributed as a result of the largest crop yields since 1932. The grain out-turn alone in the Prairie Provinces is 650,000,000 bushels as compared with 370,000,000 in 1937.

From this summary of current conditions it will be apparent that many of the essentials for further economic recovery are now present in Canada.

I am confident, therefore, that if peace between the major powers can be preserved and we can continue to expand our export business on reasonably satisfactory terms we shall experience substantially improved business conditions during the coming year.

at Port Arthur Saturday when they charged Mr. Hepburn, in an "unnatural political alliance" with Premier Duplessis of Quebec, sought to remove the prime minister and set up a federal government more to their liking.

Differences Acknowledged.

In a prepared statement Monday the prime minister, acknowledging publicly for the first time the serious differences between himself and his former colleague in the House of Commons, endorsed the charges made by his two ministers at Port Arthur. And he declared every member of his cabinet share the views of Mr. Howe and Mr. Rogers.

The prime minister said he would lay the matter before the Liberal members of the House of Commons and the Senate immediately after parliament meets Jan. 12. "This issue must be and will be squarely faced," the Prime Minister said. At the first government caucus the question would be discussed "in all its implications".

Back in Ottawa both Mr. Rogers and Mr. Howe refused to amplify the charges they made at Port Arthur. They indicated they would have nothing more to say at present, when asked for details of the alleged efforts of Mr. Hepburn and Mr. Duplessis to bring about retirement of the prime minister.

Beginning today cabinet council will sit four successive days and presumably the Hepburn situation will be discussed. The prime minister voiced confidence in his cabinet followers when he said the statements made at Port Arthur were "shared by every one of my colleagues in the federal government and by the vast majority of members of the Liberal party throughout the Dominion.

Should Be Proof, Says Bennett.

Winnipeg, Dec. 13 (CP)—"When the Minister of Labor makes a statement that a conspiracy exists, I expect him to produce the evidence of such a conspiracy at the earliest moment," Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett said here last night.

The former prime minister was commenting on charges Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario and Premier Maurice Duplessis of Quebec had conspired to force the retirement of Prime Minister Mackenzie King from the leadership of the Liberal party. The charges were made by Hon. Norman Rogers, Minister of Labor and Hon. C. D. Howe, Minister of Transport, at a Liberal party rally in Port Arthur, Saturday.

"I may have more to say about the matter," added Mr. Bennett.

The former Conservative leader passed through Winnipeg last night enroute from Calgary to spend Christmas in Sackville, N.B.

return to the level of the 1920's in the European or world import requirements for wheat.

The United States official opened the second day of the conference called to consider the grave lack of remunerative markets for farm products of Western Canada.

Position of Western Canada.

The conference yesterday heard H. L. Griffin, statistician of the United Grain Growers Limited, assert that Western Canada could not maintain its present population without continued production on the present scale and without exports to make that possible no other area in the world was so dependent on export trade in wheat, he said.

J. H. Wesson, president of the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool and president of the Canadian Chamber of Agriculture, urged the establishing of a world wheat price and national quotas as the only effective remedy for the wheat crisis.

Federal Government Blamed.

Sanford Evans, Winnipeg statistician, saw increased wheat production as the simple result of increased world population. Wheat consumption had never been so great. He blamed the Dominion government for announcing to its producers the first guaranteed price this year, simultaneous with announcement that it would sell competitively at all times on world markets. That had merely started a series of similar measures by numerous governments.

Picton Insurance Agent Injured When Car Upsets in Ditch

Pinned inside his car after it had skidded off the road and overturned in a deep ditch near Melville over the week end, Carman H. Burr, prominent Picton insurance agent, was taken to Prince Edward County Hospital where he is said to be suffering from several fractured ribs.

Burr's plight was noticed by passing motorists who saw the headlights of his car shining from the ditch. Dr. R. A. Sarles, Wellington physician rushed to his aid, and after examination ordered the injured man to hospital.

Burr, it is stated, failed to notice a sharp turn in the road, and applied his brakes, the car skidding off the slippery road and overturning as it came to a stop in the ditch. It was raining at the time.

Study of England's Social Services Urged by the Mayor

Sends Recommendation to Premier Hepburn Asking E. H. Horton Def. Min. of Welfare be Sent

HAS PUBLIC SUPPORT

First definite move toward the establishment of newer and more effective forms of social service in Ontario for the relief and welfare of citizens of the Province would come through the complete and full study of existing methods which have for long past been an essential part of government of Great Britain.

This will be recommended in a vigorous appeal or resolution which is being forwarded the Hon. Mitchell F. Hepburn, Premier of Ontario in a communication by Mayor Jamieson Bone today.

The letter being despatched the Ontario Premier would further recommend that Mr. E. A. Horton, Deputy Minister of Welfare of Ontario be assigned especially to visit the Old Country for the express study of existing legislation there aimed toward the improvement of conditions for the working class of citizens.

"While travelling to Toronto the other day by train I happened to meet your Mr. Horton. He struck me as a brilliant and able young man who would be fully capable of visiting England for the purpose of making a study of conditions of labor, training camps, slum clearance projects, housing schemes, their system of municipal taxation in the British Isles, and other important reforms, including secondary education," writes Mayor Bone in the letter to be despatched to Queen's Park today.

"And I further recommend, and have the full accord of citizens of Belleville in the matter, that Mr. Horton be given this assignment. I believe, by the adoption of existing systems that Ontario alone would save millions of dollars in funds now expended without material benefit.

Mr. Horton would in his report make it clear whether Ontario could adopt any scheme in effect in the British Isles which would tend to rehabilitate our people of Ontario."

SHANNONVILLE W.M.S.

The annual meeting of the W.M.S. of the United Church of Shannonville met at the home of Mrs. (Rev.) Craig on Thursday afternoon, December first, with Mrs. Frank Doxtater, Group Leader in charge. Mrs. Craig gave the Bible reading. Mrs. Jack Coukell and Mrs. Damon Hinchey read from the Scripture and Mrs. Doxtator led in prayer. A Christmas hymn was followed by responsive worship from the Missionary Monthly led by Mrs. Doxtater. Mrs. Lorne Lazier read the prayer for a more Christ-like spirit within the church. Roll was called by the secretary and brought forth a good response of Christmas verses, twenty-three members being present.

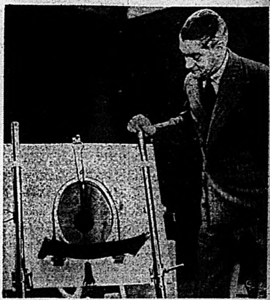
Mrs. Everett Stratton, president, read a letter of thanks from Mrs. Dies for expressions of sympathy to her at the time of her mother's death. Report from the recording secretary showed an increase in the attendance at the meetings. Mrs. Craig reported for the Mission Band showing good attendance at their meetings and $9.40 raised so far this year. Mrs. Lorne Lazier, superintendent of Baby Band reported forty cents raised there being only four babies in the congregation. Miss Ina Liddle reported over ten dollars on hand for the flower fund. The ten dollars was voted into the regular fund. Mrs. Stratton in the absence of the Supply Secretary reported a Layette sent away valued at ten dollars.

Rev. Craig took charge of the election of officers and expressed kind appreciation of the work accomplished by this branch of the church. Only two changes were made in the officers. Collection was taken amouning to $3.55 and for the flower fund $1.25. Mite boxes and holiday coin bags were received at this meeting bringing the funds above the amount raised last year. The worship service was continued the prayer read in unison. Mrs. Doxtator read a poem and after the closing hymn pronounced the benediction. A delicious lunch was served by the hostess and her assistants and a social time enjoyed by all present. Officers for 1939 as follows:—President, Mrs. Everett Stratton; 1st Vice President, Mrs. W. D. Craig; 2nd Vice President, Mrs. Sam Elliott; Recording Secretary and Press Reporter, Mrs. W. D. Robertson; Correspondening Secretary, Mrs. Stanley MacDonald; Treasurer, Mrs. Jack Coukell; Pianist, Mrs. Damon Hinchey; Assistant Mrs. H. Shetler; Mission Band Leader, Miss Jean Kent, Assistant, Mrs. Craig; Superintendent of Baby Band, Mrs. Lorne Lazier; Superintendent of Mite Boxes, Mrs. Ross Shetler; Peace and Supply Secretary, Mrs. Charlie Liddle; Temperance Secretary, Mrs. Harry Murphy; Secretary of Missionary Monthly, Mrs. F. MacFarlane; Study Book Secretary, Mrs. W. S. Dies; Flower and Sick Committee, Miss Ina Liddle, Mrs. K. R. Vivian; Group Leaders: Mrs. (Rev.) Craig; Mrs. Charlie Liddle; Mrs. Ferg McFarlane; Mrs. Frank Doxtator; Mrs. Claude Clarke; Mrs. K. R. Vivian.

Percy Oddie, Pres. Brae Cheese Factory

Campbellford, Dec 13—At the annual meeting of the Brae Cheese and Butter Company of Campbellford held yesterday, Percy Oddie of Campbellford was named president of the group for the coming year. Directors named are: R. C. Cleugh, Harry Bedford, Bogart Linn and Alfred Linn.

In the annual statement, it was revealed that during the past season cheesemaker, Samuel Hobbs managed to give the factory a high standing, ranking second for the district in the quality produced. Only two vats of cheese were lost during the season, and at the British Empire Cheese Exhibition in Belleville, this factory was awarded fourth place, and first in the district for September make. Patrons delivered a total of 942,077 pounds of milk during the season, and 84,506 pounds of cheese were made.



Lord Nuffield, wealthy British motor magnate and philanthropist, examines the first of the "iron lungs" to be turned out at his plant at Cowley, England. Lord Nuffield recently announced his decision to supply an "iron lung" to every hospital and health institution in the British Empire. It is expected he will supply approximately 5,000 of the machines at a cost to himself of $2,500,000.

NEWS ODDITIES AND BRIEFS

ACCIDENTS WILL HAPPEN

Lancaster, Pa., Dec. 14 (AP)—Nine-year-old Wayne Brill thought up a new game when he discovered air rifle pellets would bounce off his leather coat. He was the G-man with the bullet-proof vest and the boy with the air rifle was public enemy No. 1. It was fun until the companion's aim wavered and a pellet hit Wayne in the eye, seriously injuring him.

FATHER DIES WHILE ADDRESSING BIRTH CARDS

Detroit, Dec. 14 (AP)—Mrs. Marjorie Wyne, in a hospital with her first baby, asked visitors why her husband, Leo, 33, had failed to come to see her for two successive nights. Going to the Wyne home, the friends found doors locked. Police broke in and found Wyne dead, apparently of natural causes. At his desk were cards announcing the baby's birth which he presumably had been addressing when he died.

TAVERN KEEPER HELD UP AND THEN IS FINED

Chicago, Dec. 14 (AP)—Robert Gigcoio reported to the Shakespeare Avenue police today that two men held up his tavern at 4 a.m. and escaped with $200. A few hours later Giacolo was in court on a charge of operating a tavern after the 1 a.m. closing hour.

Bear and Lumberman Leave Scene Quietly

Uphill, Ont., Dec. 14 (CP)— It was a question of who was the more scared "when lumbermen Walter Grigg met a big, black bear on a patch while returning home from work in the woods.

Grigg threw his axe at the bear as the animal rose on his hind legs. The bear grunted and ran into the bush. Grigg promptly ran the other way.

"I'm scared, but that bear's stomach is sore, I'll bet," Grigg said as he told of the incident.

Uphill is 30 miles north-west of Lindsay.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Dec. 14 (CP)—A fairly deep disturbance, centred over Northern Quebec, has a trough of low extending southwestward across eastern and southern Ontario, while pressure is high over Manitoba and the Western States. Snowfalls or flurries have occurred in most districts of eastern Canada, and it has become much colder in Northern Ontario and Northwest Quebec. The weather has been for the most part fair over the Prairie Provinces, colder over Manitoba and the greater part of Saskatchewan but comparatively mild in Alberta.

Lake Superior—Decreasing northwest winds, mostly fair and quite cold; snowflurries near the Soo. Thursday, fresh winds, generally fair and cold.

Western Provinces—Partly cloudy tonight and Thursday with scattered snowflurries and becoming milder.

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

The education of a weatherman. This now requires for a beginning much more than an elementary knowledge of geography and physics. He who wishes to know what is already known should have a thorough grounding in mathematics and physics, including particularly thermodynamics and hydrodynamics. The study of climate will take him on extended excursions into the realms of geology and biology, and weather lore will lead him to studies in archaeology, ethnology and the magic rites of primitive peoples. To forecast the weather requires much of the above, and in addition the rather unique ability to apply meteorological knowledge to existing weather conditions to predict future weather for 24 or 48 hours.

FOUR NAZI DANES ARE QUESTIONED, THEN RELEASED

Police Suspicious Attempt Might be Made to Kidnap Premier

STAUNING NAZI FOE

Youths Admit They Are Nazis But Deny Criminal Intent

Copenhagen, Dec. 14 (AP)—Police arrested and quickly released four Danish Nazis today after an intense but fruitless investigation of a suspected plot to kidnap Premier T. H. Stauning.

The four men were arrested in a car filled with Nazi pamphlets outside the premier's suburban villa. Some hours later police freed them, asserting they were unable to prove the existence of a plot.

The four insisted they were driving past the villa "for curiosity". The authorities said, all were well known to police and one was released from prison yesterday after serving a term for a political offence.

Villa Protected.

Extra police were sent to the villa and to ministerial buildings when an unusual number of cars was noted on the roads about the former.

Police thought an attempt might be made to seize Stauning on his return to the house after a late night radio speech, made in town, to Greenland.

When the car containing four men passed the villa for the third time, a policeman jumped into the car with drawn pistol and ordered the driver to go to the police station.

There all four admitted they were Nazis but denied any criminal intent. Stauning was not molested.

A 65-year-old Socialist, the premier once was an errand boy and cigar factory employee. He has been a foe of the Nazis for many years.

3 MODERN 'BABES IN WOOD' RECOVER

Nova Scotia Children's Fortune Contrasted with 96 Year Old Tragedy

Halifax, Dec. 14 —(CP)— Three modern "Babes in the Woods" recovered in hospital here today from fifteen hours of exposure in Halifax County's wild bushland—far more fortunate than two small children whose disappearance 96 years ago formed the basis of one of Nova Scotia's most touching nursery stories.

While Doris and Clyde White and Billie Gilfoy snuggled in warm blankets in the hospital where they were brought this morning from the Lakeside district fifteen miles distant Halifax residents recalled the story of the disappearance of Margaret and Jane Elizabeth Meagher from their home near Dartmouth, across the harbor.

The Meagher girls, aged four and six years, skipped down the path from their home April 11, 1842, waved goodbye to their mother and disappeared into the woods looking for Spring flowers.

They were never seen alive again

The frantic mother sought neighbors' assistance in hunting them. Six days later searchers found the two dead, clasped in each others arms, beneath a tree and half covered with dead leaves.

Ever since then the belief in Nova Scotia has been that the old folk tale "Babes in the Woods" was based on the loss of the two children.

Fired First Shot in Riel Rebellion, Veteran Mountie Dies, Aged 85

Prince Albert, Sask., Dec. 14 (CP)—The man who fired the first shot of the Riel Rebellion of 1885, Joseph (Gentleman Joe) McKay, 83, veteran of the North West Mounted Police, died here Tuesday.

Fifty-three years ago, March 26, 1885, he was with a small detachment of police and volunteers who encountered an angry band of Metis near Duck Lake, 30 miles south of Prince Albert.

Less than an hour later, the police and volunteers had retired to avert a massacre. Nine volunteers and a policeman had been killed in action, two constables died later of wounds.

At Duck Lake, heart of the Metis country, the Riel Rebellion of '85 had flared into open revolt.

"When ordered to fire I whipped out my pistol, shooting a Indian who had been covering me and then another one, and the battle had started," recounted "Gentleman Joe" recently. "The shots I fired were the first in the rebellion.'

After the rebellion McKay remained in the police force. He was present at the last stand of Almighty Voice, renegade Indian, killed by police after a career of murder which terrorized the countryside.

GARDINER DENIES HIS VISITS WERE PEACE MISSION

Says He Was One of Mr. Hepburn's Choices as Federal Leader

GARDINER'S REPLY

Would Support as Long as King Desired to Head Party

Ottawa, Dec. 14—(CP)—The Federal Cabinet will meet again late today to make further preparations for the next session of Parliament and probably discuss latest developments in the dispute with Premier Hepburn of Ontario.

Agricultural Minister Gardiner entered the controversy yesterday when he replied to statements made in Toronto by Mr. Hepburn to the effect that the Federal Minister had gone to Toronto on a peace mission to offer the Ontario Liberal leader "certain concessions."

"Invited" by Hepburn

In his answer, Mr. Gardiner said he paid two visits to Mr. Hepburn during November and both were on Mr. Hepburn's invitation.

Mr. Gardiner also revealed that he was one of the Ontario Premier's choices as successor to Prime Minister Mackenzie King. The Dominion-Ontario feud erupted Saturday night on this issue when Labor Minister Rogers and Transport Minister Howe charged in Port Arthur speeches that Premier Hepburn had formed an "unnatural alliance" with Premier Duplessis of Quebec to depose Mr. Mackenzie King.

"Ready to Support" Gardiner

Mr. Hepburn told the Agriculture Minister at their first interview Nov. 17 that he would not support Mr. Mackenzie King but would support a satisfactory nominee to succeed the present Prime Minister, according to Mr. Gardiner.

Italy Sees Hope In Appeasement Policy of Britain

Rome, Dec. 14 (AP)—Prime Minister Chamberlain's assertion he will continue his policy of European appeasement was received in Rome today as an indication Italy will get something from the forthcoming conferences.

Mr. Chamberlain is to come here next month, and Il Popolo Di Roma said today that the British statesman's address in London last night "implicitly confirmed the necessity of reviewing and correcting all the injustices of Versailles."

Italy, with a friendship understanding with Great Britain already in effect, long has based her demands on a contention she was treated unjustly at the Versailles Peace Conference.

HEARS OF ACCIDENT THROUGH NEWSPAPER

Brantford, Ont. Dec. 14 (CP)—Police said today no charges would be laid against R. A. Tuck, who informed them yesterday he believed his automobile was the one which struck and injured seven-year-old Gerald Newsteau Saturday.

Mr. Tuck reported he did not know he had struck the child until he read of the accident in a newspaper. He then communicated with police. The boy was not seriously injured.

The accident occurred at Newstead and two other children were standing on a street corner. Tuck said the youngest one stepped out from the curb, and he swerved his automobile, striking a post in an effort to avoid him.

King George, 43, Today, Celebration is Quiet

London, Dec. 14 (AP)—The king observed his 43rd birthday today with a quiet family celebration.

Greetings from his family and from the heads of other nations poured in, but the empire will not hold its official birthday observance until next summer when the king and queen will be in Canada.

The official celebration, with a trooping of the colors and other ceremonies, is customarily held in June so that it will not be marred by inclement weather.

A private party at Buckingham Palace tonight will mark the occasion.

The king and queen were luncheon hosts to Queen Mary and the Princess Royal.

The adult members of the Royal Family, including the king and queen were then guests of Princesses Eliz- and girls.

An official announcement from Buckingham Palace yesterday said his Majesty is planning to broadcast a message to the Empire from Canada on Empire Day, 1939. The announcement said he will not broadcast on Christmas Day this year.

"His Majesty, as stated in his broadcast last year, does not propose to follow this practice on every Christmas Day in the future," the announcement said.

"The king hopes, however, to take the opportunity of his presence in Canada next summer to speak to the people of the Empire from that Dominion on Empire Day."

Empire Day, better known in Canada as Victoria Day, falls on May 24. abeth and Margaret at a Christmas party attended by about 100 boys

NUMBER OF MEN HELD IN ALLEGED PICTURE RACKET

Police Probe Deeper in Investigation of Cases

PROBE IS WIDE

Sudbury, Ont., Dec. 14 (CP)—Police probed deeper today into what they claimed was a big picture racket operating in Ontario and Quebec and involving possibly $20,000. About two dozen men already have been arrested in scattered centres in the two provinces and some are awaiting sentence.

Three men are in jail here on charges arising from the alleged swindle. Three others are awaiting

ANNEXATION OF MEMEL FORECAST

Berlin Diplomatic Circles Express Belief Event Not Far Off

By EDWIN SHANKE

Berlin, Dec. 14 (CP)—Berlin diplomatic quarters expressed the belief today that annexation of Memel territory by Chancellor Hitler's greater Germany is but a matter of weeks.

Events were believed moving at such a fast pace that Hitler might be able to call the Reichstag together Jan. 30—the sixth anniversary of his rise to power—to welcome 150,000 Memel Germans into the Fatherland.

Diplomatic quarters felt conditions had ripened within the 1,099 square miles of territory which Lithuania took from Germany after the Great War for a decisive step late in January when the newly chosen Memel diet (parliament) meets.

Issue May Be Precipitated.

It was believed the almost unanimous German diet—elected Sunday on the issue of the people's avowal to Germandom—would precipitate the issue by voting that Memel belongs to Germany.

In that fashion Hitler would be invited to step in, these quarters reasoned, on the basis that it was the will of the people of Memel.

The Fuehrer has troops handy in the strongly-manned garrisons of Titlist and Koenigberg, in adjoining East Prusaia, to take advantage of the invitation.

Such procedure, it was pointed out, would not be out of line with Hitler's declaration after the annexation of Sudetenland that the Nazis had no further territorial claims in Europe.

NEW YORK MAN IS ARRESTED FOR N.Y. POLICE

Toronto, Dec. 14 (AP)—George H. Clayton, 45, described as a New York broker, was arrested here today in connection with an alleged $700,000 bond theft in New York. Clayton waived extradition and said he was willing to stand trial in New York where five others are held for trial.

Toronto police said Clayton and the others are charged with substituting worthless bonds for genuine bonds in the Continental Securities Corporation.

Fish So Brainy They're Nervous

Weight Intelligence Machinery of Former Denizens of Nile Ranks Them High

New York, Dec. 14 (AP)—The New York Aquarium has three new fish—fish so brainy they are nervous from carrying their weighty intelligence machinery.

The trio—members of the species Normyrids—are believed the first of their kind ever brought to the United States. They were brought from the Nile. Scientists said their brains rank second in weight only to man and the anthropoid apes in proportion to their size.

Dr. Charles Breder, head of the aquarium, said the unusual brain capacity of the fish indicated they possibly had a higher intelligence quotient than any other kind of under-water life. They also seem to have better hearing.

He said their brains ranged from 1/52nd to 1/82nd of their total weight. Man's brain represents about 1/50th of his weight, a percentage margin to which science credits his supremacy.

The fish, dull silver-gray in color and only two to three inches long, have high foreheads. They move restlessly and spasmodically—like a man on the verge of a nervous breakdown.

JAPAN TO FOLLOW 'STRONG' POLICY

Finds It Impossible to Drive Wedge Between Britain and U. S.

Tokyo, Dec. 14 (CP)—Authoritative quarters said today that Japan, apparently convinced it is impossible to drive a wedge between the United States and Great Britain, has decided to follow a "strong" policy toward both.

The visit of Anthony Eden, former British Foreign Secretary to the United States and the summoning of United States Ambassador, Nelson Johnson, home from China were interpreted here as certain signs of open Anglo-American cooperation against Japan.

The government failed to give the "final word" on its new China policy last Sunday as scheduled. An Imperial Conference was said to have determined this policy two weeks ago and Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye had been scheduled to make it public in a boadcast from Osaka.

Broadcast Cancelled.

The broadcast was cancelled at the eleventh hour, however, the reason given being that the premier was ill with influenza.

Chinese Retake Village of Sitang

Shanghai, Dec. 14 (AP)—The Chinese reported today they had recaptured the village of Sitang, 20 miles southeast of Yochow, straightening their lines through the mountains from Tungting Lake to the southern tip of Hupeh Province, 100 miles southwest of Hankow.

The Chinese have reported steady progress on this central China front ever since they started their counteroffensive several weeks ago to drive the Japanese from Hunan Province.

FOREIGN PRESS FETE

Chamberlain Says British Rearmament Is Effective

By RADER WINGET

London, Dec. 14 (AP)—A Nazi rebuke to Prime Minister Chamberlain for criticism of the German press headed for House of Commons debate today, amid speculation whether a barrier was developing to full peace understanding between the two countries.

The Labor Party prepared to ask in the House for explanation today of the absence of the German Ambassador and Nazi press representatives from the Foreign Press Association dinner at which the Prime Minister spoke last night.

This was expected to be followed by a lengthy review of British-German relations during full dress foreign affairs debate on Monday, before the Christmas recess.

Political quarters saw in the absence of the Germans a sign of official Nazi displeasure with the Prime Minister, since they presumably acted on orders from Berlin.

Dondon, Dec. 14 (CP-Havas) — Prime Minister Chamberlain's assertion in his speech before the Foreign Press Association that British armaments are strong enough to defend the Empire's interests was hailed with gratification in this morning's newspapers.

"The greatest enemies to freedom are objective rather than subjective," the Daily Telegraph (Conservative) said, "and they are not to be converted by surrender.

DEBT REDUCTION POLICY ADVOCATED

Prof. Hope Sees in This Possible Solution of Western Problems

By CARL REINKE

Winnipeg, Dec. 14 (CP)—A "further drastic debt reduction policy" was suggested by Prof. E. C. Hope of the University of Saskatchewan as a partial solution of the farm problem of Western Canada.

To service the present accumulation of debts and maintain a reasonable standard of living on western farms, a farm price of 90 cents a bushel for average grade wheat would be necessary, Prof. Hope told the Prairie Markets Conference. (Average price at the farm now is less than 60 cents, Premier John Bracken said Monday.)

To restore the western farming community to the condition of 1931, which would include buildings, machinery, homes and personal effects, a price somewhat above the 90-cent level would be required, he said.

Partial Answer.

In the light of the world wheat situation, with the improbability of early improvement, a debt adjustment program provided a partial answer to the situation.

It was true, he said, that many

Canadian and English Prisoners In Spain Exchanged for Christmas

Hendaye, France, Dec. 14 (CP)—Reports reaching the border today said agents for the Spanish Government and the Insurgents are preparing for a mass exchange of prisoners during the Christmas season.

These reports gained ground when it was announced in Burgos yesterday that 33 Canadians and 77 Englishmen held prisoner in Insurgent Spain would be exchanger for the same number of Italians captured by the Government. Under the reported plan all foreign prisoners held by either side would be exchanged except those listed as special cases.

Among the Canadians believed involved are Leslie Wilson, Frank C. Wood and Peter Maskaluk, of Vancouver; Bowen Cromwell, Charles Scanlan, George Hill ,George Markowski, Michael Malicki, Steve Harriot and Paul Scott, of Toronto; John D. Jones, John Kambites and Gerri Delaney, of Montreal, Arthur Gray, Charles Mayadesi and Frank Papp, of Ontario; Jules Paivio of Port Arthur, Ont., Arthur Hoffheing of Cumberland, N.S.; Willis Nunnemaker of Kamloops, B.C.; Joseph Korinski, of Ottawa; Frank Blackman of Edmonton; Nicholis Llendink of Manitoba; Paul Dufour of Quebec; and Percy Hilton, Ernest Miller, Frank Wood, Nels Madsen and L. G. Martilla, addresses unknown.

Isaac Matson, one of the youngest of the Canadians captured by the Insurgents, is listed as "dead of cancer" as of Aug. 18, while Walter Sidney is reported to have "vanished" from the camp at San Pedro de Cardena, a suburb of Burgos. Home addresses of Matson and Sidney are not available here.

'Aggression Would be Cause of Grave Concern' Prime Minister Says

'We Cannot Contemplate Possibility of Such an Attack'

MEDITERRANEAN PACT

British Premier Refuses to Answer Question of 'Joint Defence'

London, Dec. 14 (AP) — Prime Minister Chamberlain declared in the House of Commons today that any Italian aggression toward French Tunisia would be a "matter of grave concern" to the British government.

He made the statement in reply to a question whether "undertakings in respect of the status quo in the Mediterranean as embodied in the British-Italian agreement applied to Tunis."

Mr. Chamberlain declared that "certainly" the status quo agreement applied to Tunisia.

'Cannot Contemplate Possibility'.

"We cannot, however." Mr. Chamberlain added, "contemplate the possibility of such an attack as suggested in the question," put by Arthur Henderson, Labor.

Mr. Henderson had asked whether, "in view of the fact that his Majesty's government was a signatory of the 1923 convention affecting British citizens in Tunis, and provisions of the Anglo-Italian agreement (put into force Nov. 16) safeguarding the status quo in the Mediterranean, his Majesty's government will represent to the Italian government that aggression against Tunis will not find this country disinterested."

Refuses To Answer.

Mr. Chamberlain refused to answer a question by Geoffrey Mander, Liberal, as to whether Great Britain and France, during recent general staff conversations, had made "necessary arrangements for joint defence."

He also declined to reply to Mr. Mander's question. "Is it not important that France should know whether this country is willing to stand by her?"

(On Monday Mr. Chamberlain told the House no specific pact obligated Great Britain to aid France if Italy attacked her. Last night, however, he said: "Our relations with France are so close as to go far beyond mere legal obligations since they are founded on an identity of interest.")

The Labor party decided to bring a motion of censure during a Foreign Affairs debate next Monday. It will move "that this house has no confidence in the foreign policy of his Majesty's government.

Hamilton Burglar Enjoys Good Food

Hamilton, Ont., Dec. 14—(CP)—Hamilton Police were looking today for a well-fed burglar whose epicurean tastes led him to break into the kitchens of two houses last night. In the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Campbell he entered with a key and ate some pie, cheese and pork and pickles and drank a bottle of milk.

In another home he ate a tin of canned oranges before a barking dog aroused Mrs. R. M. Charlton, an occupant of the house. The man was gone when members of the family got downstairs.

Last week a thief broke into a home of a newly wedded couple and stole a bottle of champagne, a wedding gift.

FRANCE PLEASED WITH ADDRESS

Daladier's Hand Strengthened Against Italy is Opinion

Paris, Dec. 14 (AP) — French sources said today that Prime Minister Chamberlain's speech before foreign correspondents in London had greatly strengthened Premier Daladier's hand against Italy.

The prime minister's speech showed, these sources declared, that despite the lack of legal obligations Great Britain would back France to the limit if the latter were attacked by Italy in the Mediterranean.

(Mr. Chamberlain told the correspondents Great Britain's "relations with France are so close as that they go far beyond mere legal obligations since they are founded on an identity of interest.")

Like the Italians, who have never communicated their demands for Tunisia in official form, the French continued to rely mainly on speeches and demonstrations to show how they felt about Italian agitation for French African territories.

The French press greeted with satisfaction Prime Minister Chamberlain's reference to France.

Refugee Problem To Be Discussed By Financiers

London, Dec. 14—(CP-Havas)—Hjalmar Schacht, president of the Reichsbank, and G. W. Beyen, president of the bank of International Settlements, arrived today to confer with British Financial authorities.

During his stay in London, Dr. Schacht is expected to discuss financial questions pending between Great Britain and the Reich with Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, and questions relating to German refugees with representatives of the Inter-Governmental Refugee Committee.

Sources close to the International Committee said the Reich prefers to discuss the Jewish Refugee problem directly with individual foreign government rather than with any collective International organization.

HUSBAND DIES 2 DAYS AFTER WIFE

Grandview, Man., Dec. 14—(CP)—Mrs. J. H. C. Todd, 61, former president of the Rebekah Grand Lodge of Manitoba and prominent in hospital work, died here Sunday, and her husband, Dr. J. H. C. Todd, 63, died in Brandon hospital yesterday. Mrs. Todd was a native of Brockville, Ont.

PUBLIC WARNED OF FIRE HAZARDS BY FIRE CHIEF LYNCH

Close on the heels of the warning issued by Ontario Fire Marshal W. J. Scott against the use of lighted candles on Christmas trees comes another by Fire - Chief William Lynch.

Fire Chief Lynch will make his annual inspection of decorations in stores within the next few days, and merchants and business men are warned to look over electrical devices used in their Yuletide store decorations.

Electric lights that are not approved should not be used while proximity of paper and other inflammable material to electric wires and lights should be avoided.

Records show that this season of the year produces more than the usual number of fires and merchants should be even more careful when their stores are crowded with people.

LAKE FISHERMEN GET FAIR HAULS WHITEFISH

The unseasonable mild weather is at least favorable to one industry, for a few of the more daring fishermen that ply their nets off the southern shores of Prince Edward County, in Lake Ontario at this time of the year are being rewarded with fair catches of whitefish.

Lifts of from one to two hundred pounds, an unusual amount for this time of the year are being made, by the hardy fishermen, who dare fogs and sudden squalls to reap their harvest.

The first heavy frosts however, will put a stop to the late-season activities, but in the meantime, every advantage is being taken of the mildness of the weather.

ORDERS FOR POULTRY SHOW LITTLE CHANGE FROM A YEAR AGO

His Majesty, the Gobbler, will grace as many tables in this city and district as last year, a survey of leading city butcher shops revealed today. Orders are coming in with approximately the same volume as a year ago, one prominent meat-shop proprietor stated, although the mildness of the weather is having a slightly deterrent effect in some cases. Geese will be popular this year, while the usual volume of duck and chicken sales is expected to maintain former levels.

Christmas quotations have not been stabilized as yet, it was reported, although the prices that will be quoted at the Napanee Market today, where the annual turkey sale is being held will have an important bearing on Belleville and district quotations.

PUBLIC RESPONSE FOUND GRATIFYING SAYS PRES. OF CLUB

Appreciation of the generous response to the Turkey Bingos held in the city during the past few days was made today by President Cleo Colling of the Belleville Kinsmen Club. "The returns have been very gratifying" he said, "and the proceeds will go to the fund providing eye treatment and glasses for underprivileged children of the city."

MEMBERS OF BOARD OF EDUCATION TO BE GUESTS OF CHAIRMAN

Members of the Board of Education following their final meeting of the year on Friday evening will be guests of chairman Chas. L Hyde at an informal little supper gathering in a downtown cafe, Little business is in prospect for the members at the concluding session, and a recapitulation of the year's work will be undertaken previous to adjournment until the January meeting and the ensuing election of officers, which will be made considerably easier next year owing to the reduction in numbers of the Board.

DESTRUCTION OF TREES ANNOYS NORTHERN REEVE OF COUNTY

Wilful destruction of spruce, balsam and other perennials in the crown lands of the northern parts of the county by men who cater to the Christmas tree trade in other parts of the county, is just as voluminous as other years, an indignant northern municipality reeve, in the city today stated.

Cutting of the young trees is bad enough, he said, but the greater damage is done by the cutting of larger trees some of which measure a foot in trunk diameter, of which young shoots are taken and the rest left to rot.

Vendors of Christmas trees canvassed the city last night, offering them at prices ranging from twenty five cents to seventy-five cents.

Police Chase Ends In Arrest of Pair

Cobourg, Ont., Dec. 14 (CP)—Walter McAnerin of Cobourg and William Skinner of Port Hope were arrested here last night after police chased them at an 80-mile-an hour clip along the highway between Port Hope and Cobourg. The car, owned by Jack Hayden of Cobourg, had been stolen at 9:30.

When police learned two men stopped in the car at a service station near Morrish, west of Port Hope for gas and had driven off without paying, night Constable Gavin Reid, Provincial Constable A. L. Mennie and Constable A. Minaker started a search.

They saw the car at Port Hope, heading east and chased it at high speed along the highway. Travelling at an 80-mile-an-hour clip behind the car, police finally caught up with it after both cars had taken the dirt road near the House of Refuge bend. Police forced the stolen car to the edge of the road where it stopped and then arrested McAnerin and Skinner. The two were taken to Cobourg and charged with car theft.

Ramona Linderman Wins First Prize at Rotary Amateur Night

F. H. Chesher Winner of Ton of Coal Given as Door Prize

"Lady Luck" plays some queer pranks and when the Chief Engineer at the Ontario School for the Deaf, F. H. Chester, won a ton of coal, door prize at Rotary Night at McCarthy Theatre, it was the last thing he could have expected. However, a ton of coal is a ton of coal and this time of the year is legal tender anywhere. Mayor Bone drew the lucky ticket.

Rotary Night, third version, presented another program in which talented amateur entertainers of Belleville and district furnished the program. As usual the attendance was large to greet the third and last of a series of three Rotary Nights which have given many people real pleasure, besides serving to assist amateur entertainers to find their feet—but above all providing funds for the care and cure of crippled children, a very worthy cause.

Prize winners in the amateur contest were:

1—Ramona Linderman.
2—Bobby Young.
3—Joyce Woodhouse.

A very capable master of ceremonies in the person of Jos. Shortt added pleasure to the program and kept it going merrily along with pep and good humour.

The contestants were as follows:

Motley Bros.—Accordion, mouthorgan and Bones and guitar.
Marian Lorimer—Tap dancing.
Bobby Young—Saxaphone solo.
Beverley Asselstine —Song and Tap Dance.
Joyce Fraser—Piano solo.
Bernice Cooke —Song and Tap Dance.
Mr. and Mrs. Ted Watts—Piano Duet.
Eilleen Robinson—Popular Song.
Walter Taylor—Musical number.
Joyce Woodhouse—Song and Tap Dance.
Ramona Linderman—Song.
Geo. Gulliver and Cecil Rogers—Accordion and Guitar Duet.

Police Blotter

District and local police were asked to assist in the possible recovery of a 15-year-old boy, who escaped from the Bowmanville Boys' Training School yesterday. The lad's name was given as John Ward, committed from Stratford. When he ran away from the institution he was wearing khaki breeches and shirt.

A girl's model bicycle, found abandoned at the upper end of Front St., today was turned over to police and is awaiting its owner at the police station.

Local police are continuing their enforcement of the city's one hour parking bylaw during the Christmas shopping rush, it was noted today. Several local motorists, who are alleged to have violated the parking bylaw in the downtown area yesterday found police stickers affixed their vehicles with instructions to report to police headquarters.

Today's early-morning fall of snow made motorized travel rather hazardous along the city's paved streets, several cars being seen in difficulty, although no injuries had been reported at the noon hour.

Blast Victims May Retain Vision To Some Degree

Hope was held out this morning by physicians in attendance on Richard and Percy Fleming, West Huntingdon farmers injured in a recent dynamite explosion, that a small amount of vision would be retained in one eye of each of the injured men.

"It is just a hope however," it was stated," and months will likely ensue before any definite conclusions are arrived at."

Sufficient vision might be retained, it was added, to enable the men to get around without assistance.

GANANOQUE GIRL AMATEUR WINNER

Six-Year-Old Barbara Neal Gets Large Vote; Auditions to be Heard

Winsome six-year-old Barbara Neal, with her pleasing personality and song and dance act, was the unanimous choice of the theatre-going audience of Belleville as the winner of last Friday night's "Tour for Talent" amateur program, under the direction of Ken Soble's well-known Canadian radio unit, at the Capitol Theatre.

So popular was the petite six-year-old Gananoque girl, that she received more votes than all of the other contestants when she was given a total of over 560 votes. Second in the voting was her older sister, Miss Hazel Neal, who also sang and danced. Mr. Tyre, the newly appointed manager of the Capitol Theatre is endeavouring to have last week's winner, petite Barbara Neal, appear in conjunction with the third in the series of Ken Soble's "Tour for Talent" programs at the Capitol Theatre on Friday night.

So popular are these amateur programs, weekly at the Capitol Theatre, that weekly auditions are necessary each Friday afternoon commencing at 4.30 p.m. Amateur entertainers from within the district are invited to attend these weekly auditions at which time expert advice is also given these anxious aspiring amateurs. Contesting amateurs should either contact the manager of the theatre before Friday or appear in person at the weekly audition. The winner of the "Tour for Talent" series from Belleville will compete on a subsequent Ken Soble, All-Canadian radio broadcast.

Family Grateful For Prize Award At Amateur Night

In the soft glow of a spotlight on the stage of the McCarthy theatre last evening 10-year-old Ramona Linderman of the city, one of a number of contestants at the regular Rotary Amateur night, sang simply those songs she had practiced so long and so well. Her clear childish contralto earned the long applause of the crowded theatre. Later little Miss Linderman was selected as first winner of the evening, and presented by the Club with ten dollars in cash.

It will be a happier Christmas for the little singer than at first thought, stated grateful parents today to the Ontario Intelligencer. Workless for the past many months, Mr. Linderman has been unable to supply those needed gifts for the season which is fast approaching. There are so many things needed, and so much can be done with the money thus gained as first prize. "We are deeply grateful to members of the Belleville Rotary Club and the McCarthy theatre for the chance that has thus been given," acknowledged Mrs. Linderman today.

Large Scale Drive By Japanese Is Anticipated

Hong Kong, Dec. 14 (AP)—Belief the Japanese are preparing a large-scale military campaign to the west and north of Canton was strengthened today by reports of troop and supply concentrations in the South China metropolis.

How many troops were in Canton was not known.

Dispatches from Chungking, provisional capital of China, quoted General Chiang Kai-shek as stating China is more confident of ultimate victory now than at any time since the war started.

$154.50

It's the housewife who actually has to live with the radio. That's why she should see them all before buying. And seeing — and checking — them all, she will inevitably say, "I like Marconi".

For Marconi has everything that makes for day-in and day-out radio enjoyment — Automatic Tuning, Band Spreading, Superb Cabinet Beauty, World-wide Range, Glorious Tone. Like all prudent housewives, check them all before you buy — you'll be sure to buy Marconi.

BAND SPREADING It is actually easier to tune in short wave on the new Marconi band spread dial than to tune in your local station on standard broadcast. Here's the reason: by opening out the bands, there is now several times more tuning area than on the old hard-to-read dial. Hair-line tuning has been eliminated, making the dials easier to read and the stations easier to locate than ever before.

AUTOMATIC TUNING
"Electro-Tune" is a Marconi development of automatic tuning that is instantaneous and simple in operation, and of high efficiency. The "Electro-Tune" unit consists essentially of a multiple push-button switch and a series of high-quality circuits which may be pre-tuned and, by means of the push-buttons, switching into circuit in place of the manually-operated tuning condenser. Any station can be tuned in automatically by pushing the proper button. The Marconi "Electro-Tune" automatic system has the following advantages . . . Instantaneous in operation — Simplicity of setting — No tools required — Highly efficient — Rapid tuning — Individual tuning of all automatic circuits — Ease of operation.

Mr. Howard Mastin, Toronto, spent the week-end with his mother, Mrs. Mary Mastin.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Ward and Edith and Mrs. A. Reddick spent the tea hour on Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. H. Alyea.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Ward and Mr. and Mrs. Eldon Walt and Howard spent Sunday with Mrs. H. W. Weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Ken Alyea spent the tea hour on Saturday with Mr. and Mrs. Ray Jackson.

Mrs. L. Irvin spent the week-end with Mrs. D. Alexander, Trenton.

Mrs. Mary Mastin spent last week in Belleville with Mr. and Mrs. Fred Cook.

Mrs. Lorne Alyea and Mrs. Ken Alyea spent Wednesday in Hillier with Mr. T. H. Burr's.

The Home and School Club met at the school on Tuesday night with the president, Mrs. M. D. Arthur, in charge. Very interesting talks were given by Mrs. Arthur and Rev. Sanders.

Friends of Mr. Geo. Barr are glad to hear he is gaining nicely after his operation in Kingston Hospital.

The regular meeting of the Consecon Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs. A. Rattray on Friday night with fifty members and visitors present. After the business part the ticket for the quilt was drawn and won by Mrs. Violet Little, Trenton. The Institute presented Mrs. Allan Alyea (nee Marion Adams) with a lovely silk bed-spread. Mrs. H. W. Weeks made the presentation.

Mrs. H. W. Weeks was presented with a lovely bridge lamp, being the oldest member in the Institute. The presentation was made by Mrs John Vandervoort and the following address was read by Mrs. Ross Bush:

The wave is breaking on the shore,
The echo fading from the chime,
Again the shadow moveth o'er
The dial-plate of time.

This is the poet's very beautiful way of saying that another year has almost slipped away and we remember that this is December.

At this season of the year our thoughts just naturally turn to ways of remembering and honoring those whom we regard with affection and respect. It is, however, not alone because this is the season of gift-making that our actions are prompted to take the course shown tonight. All down through the years that are piled on the sea coast of history, people have been eager to show their appreciation of dependable, outstanding qualities of human nature. We all see this shown by decoration for bravery on the field of battle, by knighthood for scientists and by gifts of divers natures, befitting the subject and occasion. So tonight, we, as an organization, take this opportunity and this means of showing our appreciation of you, Mrs. Weeks, as a member of Consecon Women's Institute. May we say that your example is an inspiration to each member at the present time and must have been such to your co-workers through the many years since this branch was formed. Your faithful attendance, your willingness to help in the activities of the Society, your zeal and enthusiasm for Institute work have impressed us very deeply and we ask you to accept this remembrance as tangible proof of it.

With it goes the hope and prayer of your friends of this Institute that you may have calm seas and good sailing during the rest of your voyage through life and may you long be spared to keep before us the spirit of youth that can turn back the hands of Time.

Signed on behalf of the Institute,
Mrs. Clifford Smith, Pres.

Although Mrs. Weeks was taken by surprise, she thanked the Institute in a few well-chosen words.

Gore

(Rednersville)

Gore.—Everyone is busy preparing for Christmas.

The re-organization of Centre, Victoria and Rednersville W.M.S. was held at Centre Church on Wednesday afternoon of last week with quite a number present and mostly all the old officers were elected once more.

Mr. and Mrs. Delbert McCurdy of West Huntingdon spent Saturday night and Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Earl Fox and Leo.

V.A.C. was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Will Hubbs on Wednesday night of last week, with quite a number attending. Euchre was enjoyed during the first part of the evening with the club re-organizing. Mr. Roy Brickman was elected as the new president, Mrs. Gordon Waterhouse as vice-president and Miss Kathleen Montgomery as secretary-treasurer.

Miss Helen Hubbs had her tonsils removed by Dr. Forrester at his office, Friday morning, and is improving nicely.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Spencer and Mr. and Mrs. Earl Fox attended the shower on Friday evening for Mr. and Mrs. Delbert McCurdy (nee Marhta Gerow) at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Gerow, of Carmel.

Mrs. Kenneth Green, Mrs. Roy Brickman and Mrs. Earl Fox attended the Institute meeting held at Mrs. Earl Sills' home on Thursday afternoon of last week.

Master Carl Brickman spent Thursday night with Leo Fox.

A number on this road are busy practising for the Christmas entertainment to be held in the near future.

Albury

The Albury Ladies' Aid held their regular meeting at the home of Mrs. Will Allison on Tuesday afternoon. The members finished quilting a quilt. Mrs. Harry Dempsey won the Christmas gift.

A miscellaneous shower was held for Velma Cook Wallbridge at the home of Isobel and Dorothy Peck on Wednesday afternoon. The afternoon was spent in progressive euchre with Mrs. Earl Onderdonk and Mrs. Allan Weese being tied Many useful and lovely gifts were given the bride. Velma very pleasingly thanked her friends for the gifts. A dainty lunch was served.

Rednersville

Rednersville—Mr. Ray Dulmage, Toronto, is visiting his father, Mr. A. Dulmage and Mrs. Ralph Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Weese have returned home after visiting their daughter, Mrs. Tom Leslie, London.

Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Earl Sills on Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Wilder, Plainfield, were Sunday visitors of Mr. and Mrs. T. Wilder.

DEMOCRACY A SUCCESS

Democracy has a record of achievement which has nothing to be ashamed of, declares the Montreal Daily Herald, examining the view of totalitarians that democracy is all right in theory but inefficient in practical politics and that it is dictatorships which get things done.

Under the heading "Democracy a Failure? The Record Shames The Thought", the Herald answers the contention so often heard that the war to make the world safe for democracy produced the dictatorships that are today putting democracy on trial for its life. The editor asks: "Would it not be more correct to say that in the war democracy saved the world from being engulfed in barbarism twenty years ago?" and cites the statement of a German to Germans: "You are about to meet a crafty, well-armed, cruel foe; meet him and beat him! Take no quarter! Take no prisoners! Kill him when he falls into your hands! Even as a thousand years ago the Huns under their King Attila made such a name for themselves as still resounds in terror in legend and fable, so make the name of German resound........a thousand years from now."

"Those words were not spoken last week by a dictator produced by the war," says the Herald. "They were spoken 38 years ago at the time of the Boxer Rebellion."

The Herald goes on: "Then came the great war, and can anyone imagine the kind of civilization we would now be living under if that war had not been won by democracy?"

"Since that time, what! Democracy has worked for peace; dictators have worked for war. Democracy has worked for limitation of armaments, Britain largely stripping herself of weapons of war. Dictatorships meanwhile secretly armed.

"Democracy set itself to repair the ravages of war, to raise the standards of living, to make life better and safer for the common man.

"Dictatorship set out to make the individual the slave of the state to deny the individual physical and even mental and spiritual freedom,

"Democracy has always preached the sanctity of human life. Dictatorship denies the right to life of any who disagree with it and even of any who happen to be born of parents of whom it does not approve."

The Herald shows that democracy produced the airplane and pioneered with it great new pathways across the oceans and continents, while dictatorships have seized on the new evangel of brotherhood and developed it into the most horrible instrument of cruelty and torture the world has ever known. Likewise as democracies have produced highways of neighborliness between themselves and neighbors, as in North America, the dictators have copied the idea to build new highways to catapult marauding armies into their neighbors' lands. Democracy has given the masses the motorcar for use and pleasure, but dictators keep it for the use of the few rich and give it only to the masses of soldiers as a deadly weapon to use against their neighbors. Democracy has put radios in homes of the people, totalitarian states use radio sets to poison the minds of the people and stir strife and bloodshed. Where democracy has given entertainment and promoted understanding dictatorship has made it a crime to listen to any broadcast but what emanates from its own Ministry of Propaganda.

"Democracy ever striving towards the highest use of these gifts, dictatorship ever directing them to the basest ends." That is the finding of the Herald and with it every one who knows democracy will agree.

When one reads this long list of achievements of democracy one knows that the totalitarians have never had anything to fear. There was no threat from the democracies.

The achievements of the democracies as pointed out in the Herald are proof enough of the superiority of the democratic principle. They indicate the difference in direction which the mind of the people of liberty-loving states takes as contrasted with the use of agencies for domination by mere strength and out of the lust of power, which dictatorship values chiefly.

The article in the Montreal Daily Herald serves to lead people into study of the precious heritage they possess under democracy, shows them the inspiration which guides the democracies. The people must realize more clearly the truth about democracy as contrasted with totalitarianism and should be inspired everywhere to recognize democracy as the supreme development of political history.

SIDELIGHTS

THE HOME FORUM

Discussing the Events of the Day: Home Gossip and General News Topics as revealed by the Home Newspaper—under the evening lamp—and comments Grave and Gay.

Supervised by The Lamplighter.

A SIDELIGHT FAN LIVING IN THE COUNTRY favors this column with a few observations mainly about the great Empire Cheese Exposition recently held in Belleville. Here 'tiz: "Well the Cheese Week has come and gone and it was a great success. The market did look pretty inside and still does—and what a comfort to go inside and sit down in comfort to try and sell the produce from our farms, the last being the most difficult, especially the poultry. Why don't the Belleville people eat other kinds of meat through the week, and then on Saturday be hungry for chicken?—buy it up so as to help the wives of the farmer who work so hard to prepare what they live on. What would any city do without farmers and their wives? They could not exist without them, and Belleville market has a widespread reputation of being the best in Ontario, and outclassing anything in United States. Tourists have often mentioned this fact as they walk around and view the market. However, the subject I started out to speak on wsa that if Cheese Week is here in Belleville next fall I don't believe there will be one woman or man willing to go to the Arena even for a day. It was so cold and dismal that it was disgusting that any man would think a woman could sit there and freeze, for that is nearly what happened. I don't believe any man would turn his stock in such a cold place, not even a bunch of pigs for his stock must be comfortable. No, they think more of them than that. Well, then, do not ask women to go there again..... If they have to put up tables in the City Hall, above the market, for the banquet, we could use those same tables to put our produce on and be comfortable. It shouldn't be any inconvenience to do this—SO THINK ON THESE THINGS."

So, the voice of the women who visit Belleville market is heard. You just can't push the women around and get away with it, and the idea of parking them in a skating rink in December. Don't do it again, that's all.

So, the Voice of the Women directs attention to the excellence of Belleville market, which is admired far and near as the model for best markets everywhere—and the best feature of the Belleville market centres in the ladies from the farm who sell such excellent chickens, splendid butter, eggs and other produce—good salesladies all, and neat and bright, giving the impression that their homes are as bright and neat and clean as they are, and anything they wish to sell can be purchased in the perfect confidence of cleanliness and sanitation.

"What would any city do without farmers and their wives?" asks the Voice of the Farm Women? We pause and listen to the voice of William Jennings Bryan, the Great Commoner, "The great cities rest upon our broad and fertile prairies. Burn down your cities and leave our farms, and your cities will spring up again as if by magic; but destroy our farms and the grass will grow in every city in the country."

"Why don't the Belleville people eat other kinds of meat during the week end then on Saturday be hungry for chicken?" Why not, we want the farm women to come to the market and bring their chickens with them, and make good sales so that they can spend the money in our stores. Money is but the medium of exchange, we cannot eat it or wear it. We want the chickens, the chicken seller wants things from the stores—all in favor of Chicken Sunday every Sunday say aye—the ayes have it. President Hoover once promised two chickens in every pot. They made him president and when he finished they didn't even have the pot.

Incidentally while on the subject it might be interesting to quote William Jennings Bryan on the subject of the Gold Standard: "You shall not press down upon the brow of labor this crown of thorns, you shall not crucify mankind upon a cross of Gold." Thus Bryan closed his great "Cross of Gold speech which won him the Democratic nomination for President of the United States, but failed to put him in the Seat of the Mighty—Wall Street attended to that little detail.

Returning to the subject of market accommodation something should be done to better conditions, which the temporary removal of the "Butter Market" to the Arena emphasized. You wouldn't know the old place after the cheese men finished decorating it. The umbrella idea for shelter in the outdoor market also revives and who will say that our neighbors from the country who bring in their butter and eggs and chickens for our tables are not entitled to every comfort that can be given them. Then again, why not a rest room, cosy and comfortable, a service which the hotels give gratis, now, and have for a long time. Belleville market is a local institution, something to be proud of, and the market brings much business to Belleville—let's do something about it.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

Dec. 14, 1918.

Nine boys, who pleaded guilty to coasting on North Front Street and West Bridge Street hills, were given a solemn warning by the police magistrate this morning.

Messrs. Arthur and Clarence Vermilyea have returned from the Winter Fair at Guelph where they succeeded in winning several prizes with their Percheron horses. Mr. C. Vermilyea also won first and second prizes with his registered hackey mare, Brookfield Nellie.

At the regular meeting of Benjamin Loyal Orange Lodge No. 274 the following officers were elected: Louis Soales, I.P.M.; Simon. Kerr, W.M.; William McIntosh, D.M.; Rev. A. L. Geen, Chaplain; C. A. Ruttan, Fin. and Rec. Secretary; A. B. Walker, Treasurer; Eric Wrightmyer, Lecturer; Claude Bonisteel, D. of C.; Committeemen, James Hinds, Everett Bell, Everett Prindle; William Kennedy and Robert Adams; Auditors, D. M. Farrell and Everett Prindle.

30 YEARS AGO

Dec. 14, 1908.

The shop windows are very attractive with displays of Christmas goods.

Yesterday afternoon to decide a wager, Mr. Thomas Gay and Mr. T. Jordan shot at 25 clay pigeons sprung from a trap. The former was the victor; he broke 20 and Mr. Jordan broke 16.

Mr. W. B. Murdock who has been the guest of Ald. A. Vermilyea, has left for his home at Amherst, N.S.

At a meeting of Lydford Lodge Sons of England, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Past President, R. H. Ketcheson; President, A. H. Fuller; Vice-President, W. Ralls; Secretary, P. C. Nash; Treasurer, John Newton; Chaplain, C. Spicer; Management Committee, H. O. Richardson, D. Sinfield and D. Batchelor; Inside Guard, S. Sinfield; Outside Guard, T. Soles; Trustees, S. J. Wedden and W. Rodbourne; Auditors, J. B. Harker, W. Rodbourne and R. H. Ketcheson.

40 YEARS AGO

Dec. 14, 1898.

Mr. John Miller shipped a large quantity of dressed fowl to Montreal today.

Messrs. Frank Broderick & Co., who have been running a high class tailoring establishment here for the past year, have sold their lease, stock and fixtures to Mr. J. H. Mills, cutter with Messrs. Geo. Ritchie & Co. Mr. Mills will take charge of the business on January 1st.

Mr. W. J. Pattison Way, who has been soloist in Christ Church Choir for some time, has been appointed choirmaster of St. Paul's Anglican Church in Kingston. He is an excellent musician and should be very successful in his new position.

Lieut. W. S. Conger of the 15th Battalion secured high standing in the recent examinations for Maxim Gun practice.

Ald. George Denmark has announced himself as a candidate for the office of Mayor at the coming elections.

A handsome new sign has been suspended in front of The Intelligencer building. The painting of the sign is the work of Mr. R. Blaind.

50 YEARS AGO

Dec. 14, 1888.

The ferry steamer after considerable difficulty succeeded in making a passage across the bay through the ice today.

A man, engaged by the corporation, was busy this morning driving down the protruding nails in the sidewalks on Front Street.

About ten o'clock last evening the workshop of G. S. Tickell & Sons, situated in the rear of their furniture store on Front Street, was discovered to be on fire. The alarm was given immediately, but the firemen could do nothing to save the building, owing to the inflammable material in the building. The night was exceedingly cold, but the firemen worked heroically. The main store escaped damage, but goods on the second floor were damaged by smoke. The loss is about $6,000.00; on stock, $4,000.00; on the building, $2,000.00, partially covered with insurance.

The Firehorse Passes

Modern motorized fire apparatus looks efficient, and is efficient, but it can never build up the romance which small boys attached to the hand-drawn "fire engine," the "hook and ladder" and the hose cart of a few years back.

The engine house drew small boys like a magnet. Through the wide doors on a summer day one could glimpse the bright metal work, the harness suspended in front of the bright red apparatus. Generally the firemen sat in tilted back chairs in front of the station, at ease in their blue shirts and taking delight in plaguing boys and particularly small girls in pigtails who would like to be regarded as grown up.

Their joking had to be borne. Theirs was the power to allow a small visitor to pat the horses looking over stall doors—or, greatest favor to permit a breathless slide down the brass pole from the dormitory on the second floor.

No circus parade or pomp of military display can equal the thrill of happening to be on hand when an alarm rang in. With the clang of the gong, stall doors flew open, the horses thundered across to their places and stamped furiously while the harness was dropped over their backs and buckled on.

Clang! clang! clang! and the "fire engine," the steamer (motor driven pumper, today) rumbled out the door, followed by the pounding hooves of the horses on the long "hook and ladder." This piece of apparatus has evolved into the 85-foot aerial ladder truck of today.

Around the corner swung the fire engine, taking the turn on two wheels. Fiery embers scattered from below and black smoke billowed from the stack. There was division in the small boy's mind as to just who was the greater hero—the driver of the fire engine, a Roman charioteer if there ever was one; or the man who tugged at the wheel on the end of the hook and ladder to steer the long truck on a wide arc in making corner turns.

Romance of that particular phase has passed with modern progress, and conversation centering around capacity and horse power now marks the houses where the old fire horses were known by name to every boy and girl for blocks around. Youth today must find its romance in the heroism of the men who fight the fires. Happily they let machines bear the burden that once fell on sensitive horses, which were as much in love with their calling as their masters themselves.

SEA-GOING BRICKS

The brick industry in Latvia is a sea-going business.

With production more than ample for the home market Latvian bricks lately have begun to look for markets abroad.

Chief obstacle has been the problem of transport which was rather expensive. Now, by deepening the river Lielupe as far as Jelgava, sea-going vessels have been enabled to enter this port and to load cargo direct from there. Jelgava is the centre of the most important brick manufacturing district in Latvia. Several shipments of bricks have already been made to Sweden.

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton M.D.

Exercise in Heart Disease

One of the points that was taught us as medical students was the use of exercise in weak or failing hearts. Today the first thought in treating an acute heart ailment—angina, coronary thrombosis, high blood pressure—is absolute rest in order to give the heart a chance to regain some of its strength or 'reserve'. And because rest is the proper treatment at this time, patients and sometimes physicians, are apt to indulge in or prescribe rest when what the heart really needs to gain new strength is exercise.

A popular treatment in former years was what was known as the Nauheim baths and the Schott method of 'resistive' exercise in which the patient exercises his muscles against the resistance of the physician's or attendant's hands.

In speaking of exercise in the treatment of chronic (not recent) heart and bloodvessel disease, Dr. Louis Faugeres Bishop, Jr., New York, in Archives of Physical Therapy, Xray, Radium, states that with bed patients, massage breathing exercises, and 'resistive' exercises are beneficial in that they help to force the used blood in the veins back to the heart.

What is known as the Oertel method of exercise consists of graded walks carried out until the patient begins to feel the effects of the exercise by very rapid breathing. Beginning on the level, the walks are increased gradually with regard to distance and incline or steepness. The fact that this exercising gets the patient outdoors helps the mental as well as the physical condition.

For less severe cases, where the patient is up and about most of the time, Dr. Bishop suggests that as it is difficult to know exactly how much exercise the patient can take safely, he should be allowed to tell how his everyday manner of life affects him. By learning how much walking or working and how much resting affects the patient the physician can get a fair idea of the strength of the heart and how much work he can do safely.

The stair test or exercise has been much used. Some heart patients live entirely on the ground floor but Dr. Bishop points out that if they climbed the stairs one step at a time, it might become a heart strengthening and safe exercise.

The thought then is that after the heart has been rested in bed and by sitting around for some time, some form of exercise, as directed by the physician, strengthens the heart muscle and prevents patient from becoming an invalid.

GOLDEN PIANO

When the famous gold piano is carted from the East Room of the White House to the final silence of the National Museum, many melodious memories will go with it. It was installed during the Administration of Theodore Roosevelt and has contributed more than a generation of gayety and music to cheer the Executive Mansion. Now it has been replaced by another instrument which, from description, sounds equally gorgeous if not quite so gaudy.

President Roosevelt hopes the new piano will be used by future Executives for the advancement of music and, in this cause, it could certainly have had no more reassuring sponsorship than that of Josef Hofmann, whose delicate fingers woke it into harmony. The decorations on its case depict some of our older festival dances, an Indian ceremonial dance, a New England barn dance, a Negro cake walk and the Virginia reel. Mr. Roosevelt says the Virginia reel is the favorite of himself and Mrs. Roosevelt, which should be one point of agreement with Carter Glass.

There really never was a gold standard for pianos at the White House. It just happened that way. When President Adams first moved in he may have brought along something resembling a harpsichord. There doesn't seem to be a history of pianos in the White House, but the gold piano had a long day of glory. It may have been banged pretty fiercely at times during the Administration of the earlier Roosevelt, and doubtless it responded to the strains of "Tipperary" and "Over There" in Woodrow Wilson's day. If faint echoes of this music of other days float through the halls of the National Museum at night they will say the gold piano is dreaming again.—New York Times.

A Fortune in Trees

Sir William Mulock, former Chief Justice of Ontario, is a lover of trees. His devotion to them has made him a millionaire, quite apart from his other investments. Nor did he create this fortune by slashing down forests, denuding land of its wealth in timber. He made it by the reverse process, by the planting of trees.

At his summer home, 30 miles north of Toronto, Sir William has a black walnut grove which is valued at $1,000,000. Three decades ago the trees were but saplings. Now they are quite good sized, and bound to become even more valuable with the passage of the years.

Trees are a hobby with Sir William, and he has made of it a profitable one. He has planted on his summer estate several types, all of which will develop into wood which is much in demand. The available world supply of black walnut, oak, etc., is constantly diminishing, thus adding to the value of the remaining trees of those varieties.

Sir William has made this fortune in a simple manner, so simple that it is a wonder more people have not thought of it. Almost every farmer has some land which could be devoted to trees. After they are planted and get a start, they are not much trouble. All one has to do is to watch them grow and develop into something worth money. After a few years, a grove of black walnut, even if only a small one, would be worth more than all the remainder of a farm.

It is not too late for farmers, and others owning land, to follow Sir William's example. What a fine thing it would be for each farmer to plant some trees of a valuable kind for his son! It would give a growing lad some real interest in life; in many cases might induce boys who would otherwise leave the farm to stay on it, and in the course of years they could become well-to-do or rich, depending on the size of the grove.

There is a value of trees quite other than the monetary one. Sir William states: "As I grow older, I find many of my old friends have departed. But my trees only grow more beautiful and stately. It is not possible to have any difference of opinion with them."

One can love trees just as much as flowers. And they are not something which is transitory. They will live down through generations, a source of pride and value to the owners. Sir William has been blessed with an unusually long life with his grove, has been able to see them grow towards maturity. Surely his hobby has been a pleasant, as well as a profitable one!—Windsor Star.

Canada Needs Her Genius

Sir Frederick Banting, the co-discoverer of insulin and Chairman of the National Research Council of Canada, in his tour through Western Canada has issued a warning against the "export of brains" from the Dominion to the great detriment of this country. "We have as much brain power as any country in proportion, trained to good citizenship, towards the welfare of our fellow men," he declared, "but we do not do enough to keep these trained young people in our midst. In Saskatchewan and Alberta on this tour I have been delighted to see that these trained minds have been re-absorbed, but I cannot say the same thing for other provinces. The Maritime Provinces have suffered the most."

It is a pity that a comment like that has to be made in Canada, but it is lamentably true, for thousands of young men in Canada have been going to the United States for more than half a century, and among these were numbered some of the best trained minds in the Dominion and the finest products of our Canadian institutions of learning. Speaking of the huge tongue of fire in Turner Valley he exclaimed: "Is there not some one in Canada with enough imagination to use these wasted calories of heat in making glassware?" It does seem appalling that this waste has been going on for years, although it must be said that the Alberta Government has recently inaugurated measures of conservation. Sir Frederick also mentioned the development of the mountains of tar sands and salt beds north of Edmonton: "We have been exploring wheat timber, fish and brains," he exclaimed. "The more we export the more depleted we are. There is an anomaly some place. Why do railways cost us $1,000,000 a week and not one cent for medical research?

Sir Frederick thought that if proper measures were undertaken for the developments of our resources it would provide employment for young men who cannot find work. There is much to be said in support of what he has pointed out. It does seem a terrible anomaly that in this young Dominion, with only 11,000,000 of a population, with its almost illimitable natural resources, there should be such a large number of unemployed with a consequent outlay of millions of dollars. Surely it would be better to spend money in productive efforts that would provide employment. — Brantford Expositor.

I'll Take You With Me

By Farley Faulkner

Winnipeg's red-thatched Lambert Rogers, not content with a better-than-average screen career will blossom out next spring as a contender for midget racing honors at the Gilmore Stadium this column was reliably informed today.

In making the jump from actor to racing driver Rogers will be backed by an executive at one of the major studios here who has seen the Canadian boy drive and has "every faith in him."

Reached by 'phone the executive who does not wish his name or the name of his studio divulged at this time declared: "I intend to spend several thousand dollars if necessary to see that Rogers will have one of the best cars at the stadium. Of course he will race under our colors, but hold this for a while until we get further along with our plans."

We cannot hold news regarding a Canadian actor who is definitely going to enter the West Coast midget auto races this coming year, but we will respect the request of our original source by not disclosing the name of the executive or the studio until they wish the release of same.

Rogers, who lives in Hollywood with his mother, is a close friend of Fred Friday, West Coast champion midget racer who recently narrowly escaped death when his car burst into flames during a race at the stadium.

With adhesive still strapped around his burned hands Friday told us today that "Rogers has the makings of a real driver. He has plenty of confidence and courage. It wouldn't surprise me in the least to see him up there in the money after he gets a little necessary experience."

Friday admitted that Rogers has already beaten him once in a trial spin. "He has what it takes if he gets the right machine. And from what I hear he will have the best," declared Friday.

Contrary to recent press releases from two Los Angeles newspapers and a leading Hollywood columnist, Mary Ellen Huggins, stand-in for Anne Shirley has not been tested for a role in Warner Bros.' "Always Leave Them Laughing," nor is she likely to be placed under contract with that studio.

Reached by this column today, Miss Huggins explained: "I haven't even been tested. For three days now the papers have proclaimed 'my lucky break', friends have called to congratulate me, and I haven't been contacted by the studio."

Real film fans may recall just two years ago when A. P. stories and film mags told the world of Mary Ellen Huggins, the Cinderella Girl who stepped from the obscurity of an orphan's home right into the highly publicized glamour of the picture industry.

The boys whose business it is to sell the flicker epics thought that the orphan girl with the shapely legs who sincerely wanted to be a dramatic actress was an exploitation possibility that just couldn't be passed up. So Mary Ellen found herself somewhere in the shadows of "The Great Ziegfeld"

It isn't our intention to go into a sob story at this point. But we are firmly convinced from our observations here that any girl with screen aspirations who has definite dramatic potentialities should get as much experience in this field outside the film capital as she can before attempting to face the hurdles that confront every young actress who would achieve screen stardom.

Our hope is that Mary Ellen Huggins will one day be a great dramatic actress—but the true story of this stand-in who has not been employed for the past five weeks is this: she has lost eight pounds postponing meals. And she will probably eat her Christmas dinner in her room—if she eats a Christmas dinner. Meanwhile Mary Ellen says: "If I weren't so determined about becoming an acress I'd never stay in this town. Glamour on an empty stomach is a headache to me."

Hollywood wiseacres who have already been predicting "that Martha Raye and Dave Rose aren't so happy about the whole thing" would be well advised not to place too much importance on Martha's recent pilgrimage to all the top night spots.

It is true that the songstress has been leading her husband a merry chase, and that Dave isn't much of a jitterbug. But when Martha swirls off with another partner our guess is he will only be a dancing partner.

We say this because at the Club Seventeen, the Paradise, the Palomar and the "Troc" where we have seen them in the past week Martha has always danced with different partners while Dave relaxes at their table. And because it is quite probable that Martha may be making a farewell round of the gay spots that have so much appeal to her.

Last night when we were asked to join Martha and Dave at the Club Seventeen, Martha hinted: "I may be shopping for some tiny things soon."

This in our opinion tells the whole story. And it is our sincere hope that Hollywood and its rumour writers will not succeed in breaking up this happy couple.

Director William Keighley suffered a hard fall, bruised elbow and knee joints and a sprained wrist as punishment for violating one of his own principles.

He has always maintained that a motion picture director should sit quietly behind the cameras and critically study a scene in the making.

Directing a scene in "Yes, My Darling Daughter", however, Keighley became so interested in the action that he violated his rule and started moving along with the camera-mimicking the actions of Ian Hunter, who was trailing Priscilla Lane for the sequence.

When the time came for Hunter to trip on a root and fall into a bed of leaves, Keighley did the same thing. Except that he fell on stones instea dof nice, soft leaves.

For the past few days, Keighley stones instead of nice, soft leaves.

Maxie Rosenbloom, the slap-happy chap who gets so many laughs from picture patrons isn't the least bit slap-happy off screen.

Besides netting himself a three figure weekly salary from Warners, Rosenbloom owns one of the top money-making night spots in Hollywood, "Slapsie Maxie's", and manages to continue his winning ways in the ring as well.

When we interviewed the pride of Ma Rosenbloom in the "Always Leave them Laughing" set he grinned: "Want some dumb cracks from me, I suppose?"

"No, we don't think you're so dumb," we replied. "Just tell us how you do it."

"Well, I own a night club, but I neither smoke nor drink. I fight, but I never get mad. I just slap the boys around and let them get mad. In pictures like this one they want me to be a big overgrown lug who isn't too smart—and it's a cinch! I just relax and write Ma that the old bank account is still growing. Ma writes me back that she doesn't think her boy is dumb—so that's all right with me."

Huntingdon Farmer Traps Large Wolf

Claimed to be from one of the pack of wolves that have been harassing and killing sheep in Huntingdon Township, a pelt light brown in color, flecked with grey, was brought to the office of the County Treasurer today by Samuel Palmateer, farmer residing in that municipality.

Enraged at the depredations of the pack, that has been responsible for the loss of twenty-six of his sheep. Palmateer set traps for the marauders one night, and was rewarded with his catch. The pelt was over five feet in length and had a furry grayish brush.

The wolves apparently were not suffering greatly from hunger, Palmateer told a curious group of onlookers who gathered around the pelt, for after killing the sheep and gorging themselves, they never returned for a second meal. The wolf caught in the trap was howling like a dog, and growled fiercely as he approached to kill it.

Books Theme Of Y. P. Program

Hazzard's—Miss Marion Mutton was a weekend guest of Miss Alma Keene.

Mrs. E. Manchester spent Friday with Mrs. R. N. Broad.

The play "Girl in the Fur Coat" sponsored by the Sunday School was well presented by members of Ivanhoe Young People's Union in the hall on Friday night.

Each character was admirably fitted for their role. Special mention might be made of "Pete" played by George Wood who captivated the audience with his wit and humour and the vaudeville queen played by Mrs. Frank Palmer proved to have a heart of gold. Rev. Delve introduced the players and piano selections were given by Miss Hilda Kilpatrick and Mr. Will Glover. At the conclusion lunch was served to members of the cast.

Books are keys to wisdom's treasure
Books are gates to lands of pleasure
Books are paths that upward lead
Books are friends come, let us read.

The annual "Book Night" program in the Young People's Union was received with enthusiastic interest. The program was introduced by the Christian Culture convener, Miss Alma Moorcroft. In her remarks she told of the great wealth of literary treasures we have, making special mention of the book of books, the Bible. She told of the three kinds of readers: the simple reader who reads merely for pleasure and position; the intelligent read who reads for information and remembers; the gentle reader who reads to broaden his intellectual and spiritual life. Some books are merely to be tasted, some swallowed and some few digested. There are so many good books we are urged only to read the best. One should always be working his way through a good book. Mrs. Delbert Keene gave a short synopsis of Madame Curie. Mrs. M. Howard led a discussion on Ralph Connor's life and book "Postscript to Adventure." Westminster Watchtower by Beverley Baxter was introduced by Mrs. Samson and Rev. E. Snelgrove gave a concise and thoughtful review of "Toward World Friendship" by Professor Latourette. The great novel of the day "Rebecca" by Daphne du Maurier was briefly spoken of by the convener.

Several books were on display showing the variety of reading we have at our command only for the opening of book covers. The president, Frances Harris, presided over the worship service, assisted by Bob Head and Roy Moorcroft.

The time is getting shorter
For the coming Christmas Day
And stocks are getting lower
As gifts to give away.

We still have lovely things
On our counters and our shelves
Lines that all are famous
That speak each for themselves.

For the man there is the razor
That stands in a class alone
The famous one called Rolls
Complete with strop and hone.

Electric razors too are here
Brushes and soaps as well
And the Yardley toilet waters too
Are here for us to sell.

There's all the things for Milady
To use both night and day

AIKEN'S W. A.

The Women's Association of Aiken's United Church held their December meeting on Thursday at the home of Mrs. Thos. Irwin with almost a full attendance of members. The winning side in the attendance contest that had been carried on during the year with Mrs. Fred Westover as leader, were treated royally to a sumptuous dinner prepared by members of the losing side, with Mrs. Earl Bush as their leader.

Mrs. Fred Moon, the president, opened the afternoon meeting with the theme "Song", followed by the Lord's Prayer. Mrs. C. Hall read the Scripture lesson, and Mrs. C. McMullen the devotional reading on the Scripture. A Christmas hymn was sung and Mrs. Irwin led in prayer. A reading, "Neighbors", was given by Mrs. E. Hubble. Twenty-four members answered to the roll call. The birthday boxes that had been used by the members during the year were opened. Plans were made for the Congregational meeting that is to be held at the church Thursday evening, December 29th Readings were given by Mrs. S. Westover, "A Christmas Rose"; Mrs. Lee Grills, "God's Pay", and "The Beautiful Gift" by Mrs. Irwin. Words of appreciation were extended to Mrs. Fred Moon and the other retiring officers who had served the Society during the year. Mrs. Moon expressed thanks to the members who had so willingly assisted in every way.

After the hymn, "Hark, the Herald Angels Sing," the meeting was closed with the Mizpah Benediction. The offering was $4.05.

Give Heed to Brows and Lashes! They Beautify Skin. Enhance Eyes

JOYCE M ATHEWS
Enhances her eyes by beautifying her brows.

By HELEN FOLLETT

THE DARKER the eyebrows and lashes, the more luminous the eyes. Those raven scimitars and pretty fringes give emphasis to the soul lanterns They make the skin appear soft and creamy.

As a rule, the brunette has no need to seek artificial coloring. But the redhead and the blonde are ever tempted to dally with crayon and mascara. Well why not, if they make their applications cleverly? The big mistake is in using black. It's too great a contrast to lighting colored eyes and skin of transparent delicacy.

The deepest shade of brown is flattering. The crayon should not sweep beyond the line of the eyebrows; it will reveal itself and the light-headed sisters look brittle when make-up is too apparent. Black mascara can be used on the lashes in a pinch. Rest the little winkers on the finger, pass the moistened brush over them and brush briskly after the application is made.

Beaded eyelashes are only for the stage and screen. Demountable eye lashes can be worn, but you have to be pretty slick to put them on right. To be successful they should be adjusted by a skilled beauty operator.

If you have a way of wearing down your heels at the sides, you can know that your shoes should be the kind that give firm support to the foot. Don't skip about the house in slippers or shoes that have lost their shape. You will be doing yourself an injustice; you'll be suffering from foot ills of your own making.

The housewife, who is said to travel at least seven miles each day in going through her domestic duties, is in need of comfortable casings for her little dogs. For her the oxford is the perfect selection. To clump around all day on high heels is to court bad posture, an unbalanced figure and a protruding tumtum. Terrible!

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

WHAT OF VITAMINS?
More About Vitamin C

There are still a few observations I would like to make on Vitamin C. As I have told you, it is found in fresh fruits and vegetables — oranges, lemons, limes, grapefruit and pineapple all have it in substantial quantities, so have cabbages, tomatoes and potatoes, eaten with their skins on.

This vitamin is easily driven off by heat, and so home-canned fruits and vegetables usually contain very little of it. In fact, commercially canned fruits, fruit juices and vegetables are nearly always far richer in Vitamin C than the home-canned product.

If you are depending on your orange juice or your grapefruit juice to supply this vitamin, squeeze the fruit in the morning just before you sit down to breakfast I know many people, especially in cities, for whom the morning is a bit of a rush to squeeze the fruit in the evening and let the juice stand all night. This is a mistake, for in the interval some of the vitamin is lost.

While still on the subject of vitamins, I think this is the proper place for me to recommend pineapples, grapefruits and other fruits and fruit juices in their relation to balanced diet and ability to forestall the nutritional disease of rickets I have already told of the value of tomato and orange juice in this respect.

Let me say here and now that all fruit juices contain valuable vitamins if they are canned by a reputable firm that has seen to it that all these vitamins were retained in the processing of the juice.

Modern canning technique and advanced transportation facilities have made the fruits of the warmer climates available throughout the world, to be used to excellent advantage by families everywhere.

Just one last word about Vitamin C; I know there are those who claim that it is of great value in stopping the decay of teeth. Although proof of this is not as conclusive as it might be, I thoroughly agree that it is a necessary part of a complete diet. As such it plays its part in keeping teeth sound and healthy.

Perhaps I should warn mothers, too, that milk, while a great food, doesn't contain as much Vitamin C as it should. It needs to be supplemented to some extent by the other articles of food I have told you about in the past week.

GERMAN JEW REFUGEES REACHING SHANGHAI

Shanghai, Dec. 14 (AP) — More than 500 Jewish refugees are expected to arrive here Monday from Germany, increasing to 1,000 the number who have sought new homes in Shanghai in recent months.

BOOK FAIR FINANCES MOST ENCOURAGING

Committees Report at Home and School Club Meeting

The December meeting of Queen Alexandra Home and School Club was held Tuesday evening at the School. Mr. Bankier led in carol singing after which the minutes were read by the Secretary, Mrs. S. J. Hibbard. Mr. Bankier favored with a beautiful solo "Jerusalem".

The treasurer, Mrs. Beavis gave her report and the Book Fair was a splendid success, financially. Mrs. W. H. Finkle, president, called upon the conveners of the Book Fair Committees who gave reports and an interesting discussion followed.

Miss Young's class won the attendance prize. After the singing of "God Save the King" cakes and coffee were served.

The Stars Say

For Thursday, December 15

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

THE PLANETARY rulership on this day is doubtful and perplexing, with many problems and readjustments needed to promote well-being, prosperity and happy relations, particularly with elders and superiors or old established institutions. This situation calls for some compromises, as many dangers lurk in open opposition and through subtle and probably sinister undercurrents.

Finances are in jeopardy, so shun ways of trickery and deceit, especially in investments and other important ventures that affect both the private and business lives.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of perplexity, limitation and setback, with a tendency to gloom and depression caused by frustration. There are signs of opposition from elders or superiors, and also of treacheries and sinister schemes from large organizations. All affect finances, investments and property, and may have gloomy reactions on the personal life. Be alert to fraudulent propositions or manipulations.

A child born on this day may have a difficult character to analyze or understand, as it may be rigid, hide-bound and tenacious, with tendencies to manage affairs by stratagem or peculiar tactics. Its intentions may not be sinister, although they may be misjudged and excite bitter opposition.

HUMOROUS ADDRESS PLEASES KIWANIANS

Barry Stafford, Kingston, Master of Story Telling and Mimicry

An ambassador of mirth, a raconteur par excellence with a gift of mimicry seldom seen off the professional stage, a keen sense of humor and an engaging personality in the person of Barry Stafford, director of the Kingston Kiwanis Club, kept the minds of the local Kiwanis Club off the pressing problems of business and Christmas at their weekly luncheon Tuesday and turned that usually dignified body into a gathering of laughter-shaken members.

The youthful guest speaker, displayed an unusual talent for impersonation, with his French, English, Scottish French and Australian characterizations in anecdotes and story keeping his audience in a continuous state of merriment.

A clever gift of story-telling enhanced by the several mannerisms of the characters he impersonated, furnished an added humor that was greatly appreciated by those present.

Mr. Stafford's impersonation of the French-Canadian farmer approached by party officials prior to a recent provincial election, and the humorous explanation offered by the simple, but not so foolish habitant as to why he intended to change his politics provided a side-splitting climax to an entertainment that was enjoyed to the limit.

Kiwanian Ross Stiver was the "booster" for the meeting, and gave an interesting address on the origin and present day make-up of the ordinary electric-light bulb. Booster prizes were won by Kiwanians J. O. Herity and James Barclay.

The meeting and luncheon attracted almost one hundred per cent attendance to the popular service club, while the usual Kiwanis camaraderies and fellowship was noticeable throughout. Kiwanians Joe White and Jack McVeigh acted as Sergt.-at-arms and song-leader.

The guest speaker was introduced by Kiwinian Ivan Scott, with the Club's appreciation being voiced by Kiwanian E. Finkle.

FIRST IN ALBERTA TO RECEIVE TERM FOR NON-PAYMENT ALIMONY

Calgary, Dec. 14.—(CP)— Herbert Hallman of Brooks, Alta., was committed to jail yesterday for 40 days on a warrant issued by Mr. Justice W. R. Howson of the trial division of the Alberta Supreme Court for non-payment of alimony to his divorced wife.

The commitment was believed the first in the history of Alberta for non-payment of alimony.

The warrant issued by Mr. Justice Howson declared Hallman was $1,440 in arrears pursuant to an alimony order made by Chief Justice W. C. Simmons in December, 1934.

Your Christmas and You

Some Christmas Questions Answered

Some questions of etiquette concerning the sending of Christmas gifts are perennials. For instance:

Should I give my employer a Christmas gift? The answer is, that under the usual circumstances, it is better taste not to do this. As a matter of fact, it isn't sensible, since it is apt to cause embarrassment to the employer. If you know your employer's wife, you may correctly send a well-chosen Christmas card addressed to the employer and his wife, at this home. This is enough of a seasonal bow, and indicates your goodwill and graciousness.

Is it correct to enclose a visiting-card, instead of a Christmas-card with some one's presents? Yes, if you wish to, although it is more customary to enclose a simple card that festively suggests the season. Very often, however, especially with flowers, we enclose a visiting-card.

This, though, is important to remember: If, with a Christmas present, you enclose your visiting-card, you will, of course, wish to write a message on your card. When you do write a message on your card, you must then cross off the title before your name . . . .Mr. Mrs. or Miss. If the friend to whom you are sending the gift is a close friend, you usually cross off the last name.

The point of this is that when you write something on your visiting-card, the card becomes a kind of note—signed with an informal signature. In other words, you change the formality of the card to the informality of a note. So, Miss Alice Baldwin, becomes for the signature, Alice Baldwin, or, to her close friends, Alice, with both the title and the last name crossed off.

A married woman has more of a problem with this detail. She usually crosses off her entire name ...just a line through it . . . and writes her informal name below. Or crosses off all but the last name and writes her first name above. If a Mr. and Mrs. card is enclosed with the gift, the last name may be left, and the first names written above the Mr. and Mrs. and . . . . .

What do you think about the propriety of sending Christmas telegrams? I think it's a fine idea, thoughtful and thoroughly proper. It's inevitably a thrill to receive these friendly messages on Christmas Day.

Is it correct to address the envelope of a Christmas card to be sent to a family "Mr. and Mrs. John Brown and family?" No. It is best, if possible, to address one card to Mr. and Mrs. John Brown, and separate cards to the individual members of the family. It is correct to write the names of the various members of the family under the line Mr. and Mrs. Like this:

Mr. and Mrs. John Brown
Miss Mary Brown
Mr. John Brown, junior or
Mr. and Mrs. John Brown
The Misses Mary and Grace Brown

The use of "and family" does not do enough honor, pay enough compliment, to the individual members of the family.

Cards to Casual Acquaintances

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

Is it proper for a girl to send Christmas cards to young men she met during her summer vacation, but whom she hasn't seen since? I met quite a few very nice young men while vacationing this summer, and I am rather in doubt as to whether or not to send Christmas cards.

B.

Yes, this is a pleasant thing to do, and thoroughly correct.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Her Family Objects

Dear Miss Fairfax:

For the past two years I've been going "steady" with a young man. My family aren't very wild about him and are always telling me he'll never make a success of anything, because he's so terribly jealous all the time. Do you think when a man is jealous of a girl it is because he does not trust her? He says he will never give me up, and keeps on coming back, no matter how mean I treat him.

He is in the United States service, has high ideals and when he comes to call—dressed well, never in uniform—he says he respects me too much to wear his uniform when calling. I think the main reason my family doesn't care for him is that he cannot spend much money on me. But what could you expect on the small salary these boys get? I'm 19 years old; he's a little older.

Sally

To my mind, jealousy is a pretty bad possession with which to start married life, my dear. It's more apt to wax than to wane. And he strikes me as a pretty poor type of soldier, not to be proud of his uniform. If he feels that way, why did he enlist at all?

He Hesitates to Propose

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 35 years old and have finally fallen in love with a girl of 25. But I hesitate proposing because I have a terrible habit of drinking at times and have never been able to cure myself. I acquired my liking for drink when I was in college. When in that condition, I'm down in the lowest depths. I'm not responsible for what I do.

My fiancee comes from a fine family, and never touches the stuff and in fact, they don't believe in it at all. The first time she saw me under the influence of liquor, she broke down—thought I was ill and was so sympathetic. She isn't aware that I have this weakness. When I fall I usually leave town and drink until I can't hold any more.

It seems unfair to marry this girl, and yet she says she loves me very much. I am so unhappy because I dread telling her.

Y.

Have you ever tried a cure? Very often they are satisfactory, and a remedy is effected. But cure or no cure, please don't think of marrying any girl unless you tell her about this habit. Even then, I shouldn't think you'd take advantage of her love and marry her, even if she is willing.

She Asked For Her Photograph

Dear Miss Fairfax

For a long time I went with a young man. One day he informed me he was going to get married and I would never see him again. After I got over the surprise of hearing this, I wrote him a letter, requesting the return of my photograph, and that he burn up all my letters. I even sent him a stamped addressed envelope.

Now that he is married to this other girl, he tells me he isn't happy, and won't be happy with anyone but me. He wants to come and return my photograph to me personally, but I've been advised not to allow him to come. I still love him and want to see him.

He says if he did come over it would probably make trouble with his wife and me, and I don't want to be the cause of any trouble between a husband and wife. I like to see everybody happy. I think he still loves me, but I can't understand why he took this step. Would you advise me to see him?

Brokenhearted

That was very good advice the friend gave you—not to see this fickle and changeable young man. If you did see him, it would only cause a scene which might create endless trouble. Write him a short note and tell him you're not interested in renewing the acquaintance and please to return your photograph.

Don't waste your valuable time mooning over a human weathervane. He isn't worth it.

GARDINER DENIES

"He was prepared to support the nominee of the Liberal Party when he came before the people with a progressive policy and intimated he would be prepared to support me under those circumstances," Mr. Gardiner continued.

"I immediately stated that while I appreciated the compliment, I had always been a strong supporter of Mr. King and would continue to support him 100 per cent so long as he desired to remain leader of the Liberal Party. Mr. Hepburn withdrew the suggestion and stated he would expect me to take that position."

The second interview took place Nov. 25. Mr. Gardiner said "Mr. Hepburn told me that his reason for calling me back was that he was already convinced Mr. King was going to stay, that if he remained he would oppose Mr. King and that rather than break up the Liberal Party as suggested previously he was considering quitting."

Duplessis Silent

While Mr. Duplessis was implicated in the Port Arthur speeches, Mr. Gardiner said he had no discussion with Mr. Hepburn with regard to the Quebec Premier.

In Quebec, Mr. Duplessis told newspapermen he had no statement to make on political affairs.

Mr. Gardiner's statement was the only official comment made following yesterday's cabinet session, the first of four scheduled for this week as the government makes strenuous effort to have the legislative program prepared by Jan. 12 when Parliament will open.

The offer of the Ontario Premier to support Mr. Gardiner, a former Premier of Saskatchewan and able debater in the Commons, as Federal Liberal Leader did not occasion much surprise here. It has been rumored for some time that the Agriculture Minister might become the leader if Mr. Mackenzie King retired.

Howe Makes Statement.

Ottawa, Dec. 14 (CP)—Transport Minister Howe said today Mayor Charles W. Cox of Port Arthur had not been invited to introduce Labor Minister Rogers at the political meeting in the lakehead city last Saturday night.

Mr. Howe was commenting on a newspaper report from Port Arthur yesterday quoting Mayor Cox as saying he had refused to introduce Mr. Rogers when he learned an attack was to be made upon Premier Hepburn of Ontario. Mr. Cox is a Liberal member of the provincial legislature.

The transport minister gave out the following statement:

"My attention has been called to despatch from Port Arthur in which Mayor Charles W. Cox said he had refused to introduce Hon. Norman Rogers and had refused to attend the Saturday evening meeting. The facts are that I. L. Matthews was asked to introduce Mr. Rogers but at the last moment was unable to do so for reasons having to do with his health.

Mayor Cox was not invited to introduce Mr. Rogers or any other speaker. In fairness to Mayor Cox I told him prior to the meeting that remarks might be made that would be embarrassing to him as provincial member and offered my advice that he stay away from the meeting.

JAPAN TO FOLLOW

It was believed Japan was watching Anglo-American developments.

The newspaper Nichi Nichi said:

"The United States would like to exert some influence on Japan, but is loath to relinquish the traditional role of isolation. However, it is quite likely American and British expressions of views on Japan's China policy will be made in close cooperation.

"Thus the link between the United States and Great Britain has grown so formidable that Japan no longer can hope to cut it by diplomatic means. Japan no longer will take a strong attitude toward Great Britain and a conciliatory one toward America."

National Bond Issues.

Meanwhile, Finance Minister Seihin Ikeda told special committees of the House of Representatives that national bond issues during the current fiscal year would total 5,628,000,000 yen (about $1,600,000,000) as a result of the war in China.

Explaining the 1939 budget, he painted a bright picture of Japan's present financial condition declaring that government bonds were digesting satisfactorily, gold production was increasing and December was showing a favorable trade balance.

DEBT REDUCTION

concessions had been made by creditors but in Saskatchewan, at least, continuation of unfavorable climatic conditions for the past two years and low prices this year had brought the debt almost back to the level prior to the 1936 debt adjustment scheme.

"It has been suggested that farmers should learn how to live on a lower standard in order to meet the present debt situation," Prof. Hope said. "But any policy that compels such a solution does not solve the problem if we hope to maintain our present social system."

Use and Conserve Soil.

Philosophy of agriculture must be built around the fundamental need of using the soil while conserving it, said Prof. J. Mitchell of the University of Saskatchewan. "Only in this way can nations and all mankind continue to exist," he said.

No soil has "inexhaustible fertility". If that were true farmers would not be needed; only mechanics and miners in producing the products of the field.

"We are still striving to sell our lands' fertility at fire sale prices," said Prof. Mitchell. "When the inevitable time arrives when fertility must be restored we can rest assured that no bargain rates will prevail for the elements we require."

A most serious problem was soil drifting—destruction of the soil to a point where it is almost worthless. Control will be a long fight. Much good work, he said, has been done towards control but finally complete control must be obtained.

There are four main soil zones in Saskatchewan. They are known as brown, dark brown, black and grey.

STRAGGLERS HEAD FOR PORT TO TIE-UP

Toronto, Dec. 14.—(CP)— Last stragglers of the 600-strong fleet of Great Lakes vessels are headed today for the last tie-up of 1938, closing out a season of brisk business and extraordinary good weather that held until the end.

In another day or two scarcely a vessel will be operating, even on short-runs. Summer insurance rates ended December 1 and four days ago the last vessel leaving port were insured.

Old Virginia Fine Cut is here, bringing new convenience, new satisfaction, new enjoyment to "roll-your-owners." It's an extra fine cut tobacco with long, silky threads of mild Virginia leaf that lie snug and tidy in the paper (most smokers prefer Vogue or Chantecler papers) that roll quickly and easily into evenly-filled cigarettes.

This new cigarette tobacco is different and it comes in a different package—a pocket-fitting, seal-tight pouch that keeps the tobacco fresh and in top condition to the very last shred.

The handy pouch of Old Virginia Fine Cut carries the signature "D. Ritchie & Co.", the hall-mark of genuine Old Virginia.

'Y' CAGERS WIN OVER ALBERT

City Sextette Defeat Collegians by 39 to 23 Score

In the opening exhibition basketball game of the season, played at the Albert College gymnasium, the Belleville "Y" juniors trounced the Albert College senior C.O.S.S.A. interscholastic team of hoopsters by the score of 39 to 23. Coach Pete Beach, of Albert College, arranged the game with Coach Jack Dickens, of the Y.M.C.A. kids' squad, as part of the Alberts' winter training campaign prior to the opening of the district basketball leagues.

Paced by Gordie Edwards the scoring forward ace, the "Y" kids moved into an early game-lead, Edwards getting five baskets for ten points. Ross Clare, Pigden, Thorne and Griffin were the remaining "Y" marksmen. Stewart was the big threat for Albert, with Beatty, Powell and Moulden scoring four points each. The game was clean and fast for an exhibition affray. The Alberts meet Picton C.I. tonight.

The box score:

Canadians Featured In Sports Display

London, Dec. 14 (CP)—In this damp Metropolis where a snowstorm comes once in a blue moon and is about as substantial as Dandruff on a blue suit, a Canadian is being hailed the creator of winter.

He is sauve Armand Vincent of Montreal, whose $150,000 winter cavalcade at Earl's Court is the biggest sport promotional venture ever staged under one roof in Britain.

It is a large scale international indoor winter sports display with trimmings. The program includes a snowstorm, ski-ing, ski jumping and showshoeing competitions, and a French revue of 100 chorus girls.

Twelve thousand spectators including members of the Royal family are expected nightly to watch the big show, staged on a full sized snow-covered ski run with a realistic scenic mountain in the background.

Bert Paaske, floor manager, Norman Gagne, ski jumper, and Chief Poking Fire, Louis Thorval, Peter Vavuzpi and Dan Cunningham, snowshoers, all from Quebec, are other Canadians taking part.

Sports Roundup

(By Sid Feder, Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, Dec. 14 (AP)—The Pirates are trying to land one of the Bees' catchers....Turned down flat on a deal for Al Lopez, they're after Ray Mueller now....Incidentally, Pittsburgh offered Seattle 35 grand in cash and five players—including Johnny Dickshot and Woody Jensen—for Freddy Hutchinson....So you can just picture what the Tigers paid for the kid....Doc Prothro is around the baseball meeting telling the boys there's hardly a pitcher can match the speed of his new Phillies' flinger, Jennings Pointexte, late of the Red Sox.

Only manager not on hand is Ray Blades, the Cardinals' new pilot....And everybody's wondering why....Don Budge will work out with Sidney Wood, the ex-Davis cupper, to get ready for his pro ramblings with Elly Vines.... Tommy Farr is peeved no end since Ray Carlen, Lou Nova's manager, classed him as a third-rater So he's shouting that he'll be after Lou's hide in their fight Friday night.

Billy Terry and Pie Traynor had their heads together for a long time after the baseball writer's luncheon....A swap, boys?...Story around the baseball meetings tells about Hollis Thurston the old pitcher opening a beer place on the coast, called "first base," and wiring all his old pals to stop at "First Base" any time....Al Lopez got one of the invites, and wired right back: "Hope all your pals stop at First Base, Toots....None of the hitters you pitched against ever did."

Keep your eyes on Nibble Hanover and Peter Astra, which brought $2,000 and $3,250 at the Old Glory sales, in next year's Hambletonian trotting classic.

R. M. C. — West Point Hockey Game To be Featured in Movie Story

New York, Dec. 14 (CP)— The annual hockey game between Royal Military College of Canada and the United States Military Academy, "sportinginest" spectacle on the sports calendar, has been woven into an instructive bit of motion picture entertainment called "The Duke of West Point."

The unique and historic ice warfare between the military service schools of the "good neighbor" countries—unique in the fact the challenge trophy goes to the losing team rather than the winner, and because no penalty ever has been called in the 15 games played to date—furnishes the climax of the film.

Before receiving its New York premiere tomorrow, the latest Hollywood venture into the realm of athletics and military academy tradition was previewed by an imposing array of Canada's hockey ambassadors—Lester Patrick, all the members of his New York Rangers team and Frank Boucher, erstwhile Ottawa oracle of the ice who now manages New York Rovers.

Lester gave "The Duke of West Point," a United States Artists production, a 10-goal rating.

The hockey sequences are closer to the real thing than any previous Hollywood attempt to transfer the thrills and spills of Canada's winter pastime to the screen.

For the sake of the script and a love interest wisely played down, the hero of the piece, acted by Louis Hayward, scores the goal that gives West Point its first hockey triumph over Canada's gentlemen cadets. For the sake of the record, a tie game is the closest the West Pointers actually have come to beating R.M.C. since the series was inaugurated.

Tommy Farr on Boxing's Spot as He Meets L. Nova

Welsh Coal Miner Has Lost Last Two Starts and Must Win Next

MEET FRIDAY

(By Alan Randal, Canadian Press Staff Writer).

New York, Dec. 14 (CP)—For the second time since Tommy Farr came to these shores about 18 months ago, those who claim some ability as boxing seers have placed the Welsh coal miner, now preparing for a 15-round session with Lou Nova, at the crossroads of his fight career.

The claim is Farr must win to remain a fighter in these parts. That, it might be remembered, is what they said last March when Tommy met Maxie Baer.

As it happened Tommy lost to the Baer, a close one true enough, but nevertheless his third straight defeat, and proved the exception to the rule. He is still rated as quite a scrapper.

For Friday's bout with the California clouter in Madison Square Garden, the Broadway boys have installed Thomas George Paul the 5 to 6 favorite, mainly because the prescribed 15-round route is old stuff to the Tonypandy thumper. Nova in his 25 pro fights has never gone more than 10 rounds. Farr has fought 22 15-rounders, not to mention a good sprinkling of the 10 and 12-round variety.

Nova, as is customary before any kind of fight, has quietly expressed belief the bout won't go 15 rounds; that he will end it earlier. This in spite of the fact Farr kept step with champion Joe Louis for 15 rounds and absorbed some pretty heavy going over in bouts with Baer and former champion Jimmy Braddock.

Tommy, at the same time, is inclined to agree with Nova, but only as to the length of the bout. Farr and his handlers have gone on record during training at Pompton Lakes, N.J., as saying Nova will be in no shape to answer the bell in one or other of the late rounds and possibly in an early round if all goes well.

MAJOR LEAGUE TEAMS TALKING MANY TRADES

Big Leagues Differ on Adoption of Uniform Ball

New York, Dec. 14 (AP)—A uniform baseball for both major leagues or something close to it appeared in the cards for the 1939 season last night after the National and American loops wound up the opening sessions of their three-day annual meetings.

The two loops met separately in a pair of six-hour talk-fests devoted to discussion of everything from increasing the player limit, to changing the method of paying the hired hands. The joint steering committee got together afterward to try to iron out the rough spots, particularly that involving the ball.

Trade talk continued to run all over the place, but only one actual swap was made. First-sacker Buddy Hassett of Brooklyn, along with Jim Outlaw, an outfielder with Syracuse last year, went to Boston Bees in exchange for Gene Moore, outfielder, and pitcher ra Hutchinson.

The Dodgers obtained Outlaw for the transaction, from St. Louis Cardinals, by sending a bundle of cash and pitcher Lew Krausse, up from Elmira to the Gas-House Gang.

Otherwise, managers sat around talking over possible player trades. Cleveland Indians and Detroit Tigers still had a deal on the fire involving third-sacker Odell Hale of the Tribe and outfielder Pete Fox of Detroit. It was reported Cleveland's Earl Averill had dropped out of the trade talk.

Chicago White Sox and Boston Red Sox, reports said, were hooked up in a deal which might see Eric McNair and Boze Berger, utility infielder, changing suits.

The lowly Philadelphia Phillies were willing to do some ivory swapping, provided they got good playing material in return. They received several offers for the strong young pitcher, Hugh Mulcahy.

The National League at its meeting, voted retention of its so-called "deadball." The American League, willing to compromise on the matter, didn't arrive at a vote, but its discussion seemed to favor adoption of a uniform ball.

Give up Fretting If You Wish to Live to Old Age

Canadians would "fall down" less frequently in the plain business of living if they would slow down on the way, it is pointed out by the Department of Pensions and National Health at Ottawa.

Worry and anxiety are admittedly important contributory causes of ill-health, the Department states. They shorten life, and make for much unhappiness in the average man's existence.

National Health officers point out that "fretting" is a disease in itself. The antidote is peace of mind and contentment. Calmness and courage in facing life's problems are two of the chief ingredients of happiness.

CANADIAN HEAVY WINS

Edmonton, Dec. 14 (CP)— Eddie Wenstob of Edmonton, Western Canada heavyweight and light-heavyweight champion, today holds an important victory over Emilio Martinez, Denver, who stands fourth in the challenge ratings of the National Boxing Association.

Wenstob won the unanimous decision of two judges and referee Jerry Delane in his 10-round bout with the Mexican here last night. Wenstob weighed 175 1-2 and Martinez 179 1-2.

FIVE CLUBS IN RURAL PUCK LOOP

Lynn Fair Re-Elected President of New Hockey Group

MEET STIRLING

Stirling, Dec. 14 (Special)—At a general meeting of rural hockey players, fans and team managers held at Stirling on Saturday night, Mr. Lynn Fair was again elected to lead the executive as a new league was formed, Art Duncan was duly elected Secretary-Treasurer and definite rules were set down to bar any but rural players. Officers in addition to those already mentioned will include Jack Armstrong, Glen Ross; H. Thompson, West Huntingdon; Ray Dickey, Zion; J. Stewart, Foxboro; Jack Williams, Cannifton. During the business part of the meeting Jack Armstrong was appointed to represent the league in conference with Frankford rink officials regarding possibilities of playing in the Frankford arena securing rates, etc., etc., to be reported at next meeting. Mr. R. W. Meiklejohn, manager of the Stirling arena was present and offered the same co-operation as in previous years.

New Regulations

A new set of rules with teeth in them was drafted to stem the tide of importation which in the minds of many robbed the league of financial security during the last two seasons because local fans were more interested in local players. Rules include the following:

1—Playing rules—Rules governing play as set forth by the Ontario Hockey Association adopted.

2—No player residing in a city, town or incorporated village shall be eligible to play for any team in the league.

3—No O.H.A. players shall be admitted nor any player having played three or more games in any other league except High School league.

4—Each team shall pay an entry fee of $3.00 (Three Dollars) to be used as an emergency fund and to be returned to the teams previous to the play-offs.

5—Lists bearing names of prospective players, address and occupation are to be presented to executive on or before Dec. 17th after which date no additional names may be added.

6—The matter of referee will be left in the hands of the executive committee.

Thus the foundation of the Central Hastings Rural hockey league was set up with representation present from West Huntingdon, Foxboro, Glen Ross, Zion and Cannifton voicing their approval of the plan.

Another meeting was called for Saturday night Dec. 17th when lists of players shal be dealt with and a schedule formed. Enthusiasm is at a higher pitch than it has been for several years and with the adoption of the new rules a successful season is looked for by all interested in Rural hockey.

Billy Direct, Greyhound Lead Way As Harness Sport Has Best Year

Former Breaks Mark Set by Dan Patch 33 Years Ago

(By Central Press Canadian)

Goshen, N.Y., Dec. 14. — Fifteen thousand harness horses were trained during 1938 for the races in which six thousand actually participated for a total of more than $3,000,000 in purses, according to the annual report on the American trotting turf. In addition, the sport hung up eight new world records; drew more fans and laid definite plans to merge all semi-governing bodies into one unit to consolidate gains for succeeding years.

When Billy Direct, at Lexington, Ky., this fall, paced a mile in 1.55 he smashed the 33-year-old reign of Dan Patch, acknowledged champ of champs since 1905. Greyhound, not to be outdone, roared through to a new world mark of 1.55¼ for trotters. Six other harness horses broke all existing marks for their age and gait, putting 1938 'way ahead of its rivals for speed.

Central Control Coming.

The merger by Jan. 1 of five parent organizations now dividing the administration of the harness turf is expected to simplify the problems of starting, eligibility certificates, handicapping and classification of horses which have plagued the sport for many years. Under one central head, experiments are to be conducted this winter on handicapping trotters by weight in saddles on their backs, thus providing stiffer competition for such stars as Billy Direct and Greyhound.

Yearling sales at all prominent standardbred nurseries gained this fall even though several of them were held in the face of war scares and falling markets. Walnut Hall Farm, Donerail, Ky., Hanover Shoe Farms, Hanover, Pa., and the Village Farm, Langhorne, Pa., led in high prices for their blue-blooded youngsters, indicating that there is no shortage of money or confidence in the harness sport.

BILLY DIRECT, greatest of pacers, in full stride

Run On Eleven Tracks.

Eleven tracks comprised the Grand Circuit of 1938, i.e., Toledo, Cleveland, Goshen, N.Y. (historic track); Old Orchard Beach Me.; Agawam Park, Mass.; Goshen, N.Y. (Good Time Park); Springfield, Ill.; Syracuse, N.Y.; Indianapolis, Ind.; Reading, Pa., and Lexington, Ky.

McLin Hanover won the Hambletonian Stake, August 10 at Goshen and was recently shipped abroad to Italy. He is expected to be one of the last fast American trotters to be sold to Europe, however, with the new handicapping by weight providing more competition for such stars here.

Sensing the probability of having to include an outside team within their senior "B" fold, the Kingston hockey moguls got their heads together this week and prevailed upon some innocent victim to sponsor a fourth team in the city, Queens, R.M.C. and the Garrison having previously composed the group. The sudden decision of interesting a Kingston City team was not made, however, until the Limestone puck moguls heard rumours to the effect that Gananoque had proposed amalgamating with Brockville and placing a team in the group, at that time composed only of three Kingston clubs. The admission of a fourth Kingston team practically eliminated Gananoque's chances of procuring an O.H.A. grouping, so if the 'Gan' moguls wish to play hockey in the O.H.A. this season, they'll have to accept a by. The set-up has all the markings of "a fix."

CLIPPINGS—We hear Mel Little, former Belleville keystone sacker, is back in the city and may remain here. Mel would be a welcomed addition to Belleville baseball in 1939, if there is any Belleville baseball in 1939....We received a call from "Peg" Hurst, fiery goalie of the old Whitby Red Wings and star outfielder of the Oshawa G.M-men, informing us he has retired from the active service of a hockey player. "Peg." is branching out into the hockey refereeing world and is seeking games down in this section of the province....A few certain facts we can recommend insofar as Hurst is concerned—he knows the rules and has the courage of his convictions and little less is needed, except perhaps a portion of good common sense, which materially assists any sports arbiter ....The veteran Lornie Rose, of Peterboro, is seeking reinstatement as an amateur and hopes to become the playing coach of the Petes this winter Lornie is well over the 40 mark, if our calculations of time are correct.

Johnny Schulte, Yankee coach, had oodles of fun with his 1938 World's Series check before he banked it. Visited around in his native St. Louis with various innkeepers he knew and asked if he could get a check cashed. "You certainly can," would be the reply. Then Johnny would present the slip of paper calling for $5,815.28—and the inn-keeper would ask for the smelling salts.

A win for Eddie Thomas' Redmen at Kingston tonight over the Kingston City sextette will not only give the scarlet-clad Belleville pucksters the leadership of the Van Horne series, but cinch a pay-off spot for the locals. The Redmen have not lost a game in the Kingston preseason loop and providing they continue to display the same calibre of hockey as played against Perth and the Garrison, Thomas' charges should win tonight's tussle, but they can't afford to take the Limestone pucksters too lightly, as any Kingston hockey team is always a tough nut for Belleville to crack.

The standing of the Van Horne series today is:

	W	L	T	P
Queens	2	1	1	5
Belleville	2	0	0	4
Garrison	2	1	0	4
Perth	0	1	2	2
Kingston	0	1	1	1
R.C.A.F.	0	2	0	0

Tonight: Belleville vs. Kingston.
Friday: Garrison vs. Perth.

Frankie Brimsek, sensational rookie goalie with the Boston Bruins, rung up his fourth consecutive N.H.L. victory last night, although he failed to register a fourth shutout. The longest consecutive run of shutouts was registered by Connell, while with the old Ottawa Senators in the 1928-29 N.H.L. season. Connell blanked his opponents six consecutive times in January of 1929. When the Boston Bruins won 3 to 2 over the Canadiens last night, the Bruins extended their leadership in the N.H.L. considerably and now have 19 points. The Amazing Amerks rammed home five goals to beat the Detroit Red Wings 5 to 1 in the only other N.H.L. fixture.

A new five-teamed puck loop came into being at Stirling last night, no doubt the remnants of the old Central loop. Glen Ross, West Huntingdon and Zion of the old crowd were back augmented by an entry from Foxboro and Cannifton respentively. Lynn Fair, hard working president of the old league was chosen to head the new organization, as was Art Duncan as secretary treasurer. The matter of a playing site was the greatest problem confronting the new organization, there being rumours to the effect the locale of the loop may switch to the Frankford rink, after years of service in Stirling. From this corner it would seem Stirling is more central, however.

HODGE PODGE —Former Monte Stratton, who lost a limb as the result of a gunshot wound during a hunting expedition was given a lifetime secretarial job with his former team the Chicago White Sox....Who says there isn't sentiment in sports? The veteran Dave Trottier has been signed by the slipping Detroit Red Wings in an effort to bolster the squad.... The St. Kitts "Chiefs" are really hitting the ball these days in the senior O.H.A. circles.... "Pick" Hines, former coach of the Peterboro seniors, is being given much credit for his work as head of the Baltimore Orioles in the Eastern League where he took Bill Calladine and the fiery Ned Vizarelli when he migrated south....Zeke Bonura's new Giant contract calls for $15,000.00 per annum and came without quibbling or squabbling....Kingston will play doubleheaders in their O.H.A. campaign this winter, a junior and senior game being slated for each schedule playing night.

FRANCE PONDERS OLD ARGUMENTS ON SHAKESPEARE

Question of Great Poet's Identity Revives Interest in Biographies at Paris

By GLADYS M. ARNOLD
Canadian Press Correspondent

Paris, Dec. 14 (CP)—French interest has revived in the Shakespeare-Bacon controversy that has stirred English literary circles and dug up the floor of Westminster Abbey.

Was Shakespeare in reality Francis Bacon whose origin is cloaked in a certain amount of mystery? Was Queen Elizabeth, who reigned in England from 1558 to 1603, secretly married to the tall and handsome Robert Dudley, Earl of Leicester, with whom gossip of that day and since linked her name?

The French author whose psychological play "Elizabeth—the Woman Without Men," running for two triumphal years in Paris, will be discomfited if the Society of Friends of Bacon prove the conviction dear to their hearts, that Shakespeare was after all the son of a Queen, travelled, cultured and a gentleman.

In France the reopening of the Shakespeare-Bacon controversy has caused so much comment that biographies of his life and editions of his plays are to be found among the best sellers in the bookstore windows. Will Shakespeare disputed front-page interest with Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain three times in 10 days—pretty good for a poet dead for more than 300 years.

Thirty years ago the American Shakespearean scholar, Dr. Owen, came over to England to find evidence of his suspicion that Shakespeare was a human mask behind whom a more interesting personality was hidden. At Chepstow Castle he unearthed 66 cases of books and papers, carefully put away by Bacon. Among these he found what he declared to be documents and manuscripts supporting his theory. Bacon, he said, hid this material because he judged it might compromise his secret and his career as an anonymous playwright.

Reason For Secrecy

If Bacon was Shakespeare why should he hide his identity? Says the Society of Friends of Bacon—because he was the son of Elizabeth and she hated poets and dramatists, whom she considered akin to madmen and the profession beneath a gentleman. Bacon dared not arouse the Queen's anger.

The evidence against Shakespeare is well known—his poor education, lack of knowledge of the classics, never having travelled how could he reproduce so faithfully the atmosphere of Italy? Finally there remains not one line of original manuscript. His name in early printed editions is found to be spelled in six different ways and of the five original existing signatures, no two are in the same handwriting.

On the other hand Bacon was a classics scholar, widely travelled, a philosopher, diplomat and intimately acquainted with the culture of his time. Having met Shakespeare, who could serve better than a stage-struck lad to hide the name of Bacon, especially if all he had to do was pose as the famous playwright and reap wealth and glory in return for his silence.

Parisian Shakespeareans however scoff at this theory. Said one: "There is no doubt that Bacon evolutionized philosophy with his invention of the experimental method—but his style is cold, unimaginative, heavy and completely boring. Nowhere does it reveal a trace at that colossal spark of Shakespeare, the rich poetic spirit, his fantasy and delightful communion with nature; his intimate exuberant knowledge of human psychology."

Instead they advance another claimant with the full support of Abel Lefranc, professor at the College of France, who is convinced that Shakespeare was indeed a mask—but for William Stanley, sixth Count of Derby. His theory is based upon the fact that the Derbys had been patrons of Shakespeare's theatre and that on the programs Shakespeare's name often appeared twice but written differently—one the actor—the other the dramatist.

Suggest Others

Others claim Roger Manners, Count of Rutland. Sir Walter Raleigh had his fans, and indeed, to satisfy all fanatics, the producer of the world's finest literature must have been at one and the same time a soldier, sailor, Protestant, Roman Catholic, Puritan, fisherman, botanist, diplomat, actor—or a woman.

Why not a woman, the question is asked. Why not Queen Elizabeth herself using Bacon as a medium to find a man such as Shakespeare willing to keep the Queen's secret and thus allowing her to give free reign to her imagination?

The Friends of Bacon, however, have an edge on the rest. It was a victory when they won consent of the Dean of Westminster Abbey to open the tomb of Edmund Spenser (author of "The Faery Queene") where they believed clinching proof lay. Into the tomb, according to authors of the times, not only Shakespeare, but Fletcher, Beaumont, Ben Jonson and other writers threw specially-written elegies and the pens with which they were written. Should the elegy supposedly written by Shakespeare be in the handwriting of Bacon—the proof would be conclusive.

Now a second mystery has developed. What has become of the tomb of Edmund Spenser placed (so it was believed) in the Abbey in 1599? After three weeks' digging and searching nothing has been found and the Dean testily refuses to have any more excavating done.

Say the French facetiously, "Perhaps Spenser was the Faery Queene?"

As for the identity of Shakespeare....?

SANDWICH PILES HELP DIPLOMACY

Punch and Watercress Big Features of Washington Receptions

Washington, Dec. 14 (CP)—It takes 40 gallons of punch to run off the usual Washington reception.

Food? Well, when the Cuban minister entertained for jovial Cuban Army Chief Batista, the guests consumed 50 gallons of ice cream to say nothing of 5,000 sandwiches, 3,000 small cakes, 30 gallons of coffee and who-knows-how-many cases of champagne.

New Dealers usually content themselves with some one-dish pot-luck-steaming shrimp creole on steaming clam chowder. It's cheaper and, anyway New Dealers would rather talk than eat.

Watercress-and-cucumber sandwiches are nudging out cheese and meat combinations. The richer sandwiches take the edge off appetites. Party-goers were turning down dinner at eight and then they turned up hungry around 10—when the maid had gone home.

One caterer has figured you only need two sandwiches to a guest. Some eat more, but some only drink. This caterer says it's a dull Sunday when he doesn't special-messenger 8,000 to 10,000 sandwiches to teas about town. His product is a refined version of the back-home sandwich: It's cut down almost to the vanishing point—just about the size of a clip of matches.

But those sandwiches are works of art. Imagine a piece of toast one-inch-by-two, heaped with caviar, sprinkled with grated hard-boiled egg and just a touch of onion juice! Or try to build a tidbit of cream cheese topped with a curled anchovy and finished off with one tiny caper right in the centre of the anchovy curl.

Coffee and tea aren't forgotten. There is always a coffee urn at the table opposite the tea urn. Cabinet wives are the urn operators at most of the gold-coast parties. The successful hostess wheedles four of them over for a tea to work in 15-minute shifts.

Cadi Dismisses Fish Theft Charge

Napanee, Dec. 14—Magistrate E. J. Butler of Belleville on Saturday dismissed charges of the theft of whitefish from the Government nets at Hay Bay, the property of the Crown which were preferred against Harry Pollard and Clifford Rombough, former employees of the Game and Fisheries Dept. The charges were laid by Inspector Herbert McCabe of Belleville. The magistrate took the view that the case was very complicated and there was also some suspicion. The two men had their hearing several days ago and their counsel was Wilfred Lane of Picton, while the case for the Crown was conducted by K. S. Ham.

Before giving his decision, the case was briefly reviewed by both counsel. Mr. Ham stated that the evidence against Pollard was not as strong as against Rombough. Mr. Ham referred to more than 1000 pounds of whitefish having been sold in Bath and said that the chain of circumstances pointed to the two men taking the fish.

Mr. Lane argued the Crown must have an absolute case and not one of suspicion. To prove the Crown's contentions there must be at least three proofs, by seeing the men taking the fish, by taking finger prints on the scoop nets and by admission. These are the only things which could put the accused men on their defence. Mr. Lane said that no evidence was offered to verify the above. The magistrate was very brief in his summary.

YANKEES NAMED TOP TEAM 1938

McCarthy's "Bombers" Created New Record in World Series

New York, Dec. 14 AP)—By a margin as decisive as their American League and World Series triumphs, New York Yankees were named today as the outsaanding sports team for 1938.

Joe McCarthy's bombers who created a new all-time record by whipping Chicago Cubs, four games to none, for their third successive world baseball championship, were named at the top of the heap by 61 of 67 sports editors participating in the eighth annual Associated Press poll.

Three other sports editors picked the Yankees for the No. 2 spot and three for No. 3, thus giving the baseball title-holders a total of 192 points out of a possible 201. Points were awarded on the basis of three for No. 1 ranking, two for No. 2 and one for No. 3.

Pete Lepine's Eagles Begin to Win

Syracuse, Dec. 14 (CP)—The road doesn't look so rough now to Pete Lepine, who found the way pretty bumpy at first in his debut as laying-coach of New Haven's International-American hockey league Eagles. The former National League star is finding plenty to enthuse about in the recent showings of his charges.

Eagles, though still only in a tie for the last place in the Eastern Division, won 2-1 last night over Syracuse Stars in the only scheduled Intam contest. The victory gave them a record of four wins, a draw and a loss in their last six games.

Louis Trudel and Glenn Brydson scored for Eagles. The Syracuse goal came in the last minute to play with Eddie Convey beating goalie Bill Beveridge.

A FEW WILD DUCKS STILL LINGER HERE

Winter has just about arrived in the district but wild ducks are still winging their way to and fro across the bay in small flocks, it is reported by H. Keller waterfront observer who has counted at least fifty of the birds on a single day. The ducks which have displayed no inclination to trek to the south, have been picking their living in the yet unfrozen coves along the north shore.

NO RUSH AS YET

No unusual rush in Christmas mailing from across the border and overseas has yet been experienced by the local office of customs, it was reported this morning. Present mailing volume is believed at present slightly ahead for the same period last year, with strong indications of a decided increase within the next week or so, it was stated.

SWIRL OF SNOW FORCES MOTORIST TO CALL OFF TRIP

City and district residents received their first visible impression of winter this morning. From low clouds which overhung the section, giving the city an early morning appearance of dusk, flying snowflakes were carried before strong gales which blew through the section throughout the night. With the falling snow came a drop in temperature which coated walks and roads with an icy deposit as snow fell.

Highway traffic earlier today was carried on with difficulty through the whirling snow which reduced visibility to but a few feet ahead. Some extent of the storm in the northern section of the county was revealed by J. L. Irwin, local Dominion dairy grader, who early today set out for Lindsay on his regular grading trip. At Springbrook he was forced to turn around and return to Belleville until better conditions were reported. "You couldn't see a foot ahead of you in some parts," he stated.

THREATENED HEIRESS

Agents of the U.S. Federal Bureau of Investigation, are acting as chaperons to pretty Eileen Balfe, subdebutante daughter of wealthy Thos. W. Balfe, of New York, vice-president and general sales manager of the National Distillers. Uncle Sam's sleuths are on the job as the result of extortion threats received by Miss Balfe's parents, hinting at injury to the girl failing payment of $3,000. Above is a recent photo of Miss Balfe.

Farley Faulkner Gives His Impressions of Hollywood

PRAISES TECHNICIANS

A dozen newspapers in Los Angeles and Southern California had two dozen anxious reporters on the hunt chasing cold trails which left no clues 'Where had Gable gone?' became the most wanted story.

It was a hunch, admitted Farley Faulkner, Hollywood correspondent for the Ontario Intelligencer, and other Canadian newspapers, which prompted him into the right channel to get the information which scooped veteran 'legmen' and city editors of the west coast's metropolitan dailies. A hunch born from the experience gained covering the beat for a small city daily, the Ontario Intelligencer, but a short time before.

"Gable's in Winnipeg— duck shooting", a surprised Winnipeg Journal was told by wire. "Or at least he will be shortly after you get this telegram", the paper was told by Mr. Faulkner, also representing this daily for Hollywood news.

Thus was the arrival of Gable with gun and hunting clothes in a Western Canadian city duly covered by cameramen and reporters who "broke" the story for the press associations. Their correspondent got a cash bonus for that.

"I want to see that chap that enterprising fellow who found out where I was, and how I was going," later stated Clarke Gable, idol of millions when he returned to Hollywood after a successful duck hunting expedition in Western Canada. "I want to give him a wild duck or two."

Sun-tanned and fit after his eleven months in the South, Farley Faulkner, who during that short space of time has made a place for himself as writer and columnist amid the glamour and challenge of swiftly moving action of Hollywood and California, arrived back in Belleville this week. Professedly "glad to be back" for a rest, he will return to Los Angeles within a few weeks to enter again the profession he has chosen and in which he has made good, the journalistic field.

"Though", he stated, "I do not intend to make journalism my life's work. I have ambitions which I hope will be realized, that of becoming a movie director. Journalism, columning, is just one of the steps. The best directors look upon newspaper experience as a means to an end."

Newspaper Experience Helps

The story of Gable and the ducks has been retold by fellow members of the writing trade. It is a story which aptly illustrates the value of small city newspaper training. Steady plodding, elimination of theories which tunnelled under the brilliance of the veteran newsmen of the metropolis casting about in wide and aimless circles, leaving them shorn of clue or fact.

"Gable left California, and the newspapers wanted to know why and where. It just isn't done like that, a star as big as he is, slipping off without a single clue.

"The studios, the directors, his friends were all mum. They didn't even know themselves. Any reporter who could have broken that story for his paper was 'in'," declared this paper's representative on a brief visit to the editorial rooms yesterday.

"Now, Gable's no phoney. He's a real chap. When he takes a vacation, he likes to get away from it all. Whether the rest did or not, I figured he must have gone hunting,' continued Mr. Faulkner.

"So the first step would be to a gunsmith's. Any chap who takes as much pride in his equipment as he does, would have a thorough overhaul of his pet guns made first. I got on the phone and went down the list of gunsmiths. If Gable had been at one of the shops, he just possibly might have talked about where he was going—"

It was on the fifth or sixth attempt that correspondent Farley Faulkner 'contacted'. How the story from there ran to its natural conclusion is one of the unrevealed episodes in an aggressive journalistic career that as at last become recognized in movie and newspaper circles of the Sunny State.

"Suffice it to say that I violated no confidences, broke no promises, and managed to get and print the story without anyone getting angry about it", he states.

"It was a thrill, getting ducks and compliments from one of the world's biggest motion picture stars, but it wasn't half the thrill I got when I arrived home and saw Joan, six and Bertie, four, my little girl and boy, who have been faithful correspondents, in childish hand since I went away, Joan's going to be a writer when she grows up; Bert has his mind already made up that he's going to be an actor, and his ability at histrionics even now convinces me that he's right."

Glamour Overstressed

Nearly a year in Los Angeles and the tree-grown hills of Hollywood has convinced Farley Faulkner that much of the glamour of movie folk and movie colonies has been overwritten. The days of high life and free spending in the world's motion picture centre have gone, apparently never to return.

"They're home folks down there, just as they are in Belleville. If you want excitement and life, then you can go out and find it, just as you can find it around any big city. But writers have to have something to write about, the majority of them, and Hollywood offers lots of variety."

Friend of many well-known celebrities of the silver screen, the local man who has gained admission to the intimate circles of the colony and the lots and sets of the larger motion picture companies, debunked many theories held by romanticists of other sections of the country.

"Movie folk," he reiterated, "are just like any other folk, and many of them are even easier to get along with.

"The actor with the swelled head in Hollywood just won't get along.

"The majority of child stars are precocious little individuals totally unlike they appear on the screen. They're old beyond their years, and professional scene stealers when other actor folk appear with them. Veteran troupers heave sighs of commiseration when they see them over their miscast, unnatural life.

"Living expenses are much the same in Los Angeles as in Belleville.

"The new profession in California is that of publicity agent, and any chap who has ambition at all can always get along there...... even if he has to go hungry at times to do it...."

To Canadian-born Ned Sparks, veteran trouper and favorite among movie folk, Farley Faulkner owes a debt of gratitude. Ned it was who took the fledgling newspaperman under his temporary wing and showed him a few of the many ropes necessary to know to get along.

"Ned is one of the best liked down there. Like Gable and some of the rest of them I could name, he is completely natural all the time. The idea that actors have to put on airs to get along just doesn't work out any more.

What's ahead for California and the movie industry?

"A new field of photography which will entirely supplant existing methods of taking pictures with sound. It may not come for a few years yet, but engineers in the largest laboratories in the world have been making steady progress in the science of photography in third dimension and necessary sound improvements. That's the field for the aspiring young man to enter.

"Television? They're not worried down there about it. Because the same millions which control photography and motion picture making will probably control television when it comes out, which may perhaps not be advanced for ordinary commercial application for some years yet" replies Mr. Faulkner.

The greatest director in the business?

Capra Best Director

"It's my own personal opinion that Capra is. The rest of the directors bow to him. And many of the stars fight to have him for their picture. He has made some notable successes in the past, and bids fair to repeat."

Behind the scenes in Hollywood a world of talent labors day by day to produce those tuneful, scintillating musicals and dramas, which entertain the world. They are the unsung heroes, content to toil in shielded anonimity while the rest of the trade takes the bows. Script writers and the quickest wits in Tin Pan Alley, authors and jokesmiths whose names are never heard, labor diligently, side by side with budding young directors, who some day may surprise the world, to produce the newest creations in films. "You never hear of them", states Mr. Faulkner, "but they would just as soon have it that way."

"They are more necessary than the extra girls who are the most beautiful girls in Hollywood, not excepting the stars."

Fired with the burning zeal to become a director, Farley Faulkner upon his return to the film capital, will pursue his courses and study in drama and arts with the Little Theatre workers. Here is received the groundwork for any future course directors will inevitably follow. In it is experienced the education in stage work which is so vitally a part of the life of the successful director.

"Maybe this ambition is just a dream of mine, a faraway one" he stated, glancing out of the editorial office windows past which swirling snow-flakes lazily descended on Tuesday afternoon. The distance between Belleville and Hollywood, many hundreds of miles and four days and five nights by bus was mentally covered. "But this whole past eleven months was a dream, a sort of, nice dream in which you know that the first part of what you set out to do has become actual, and done well. The rest lies just ahead", added the Ontario Intelligencer's special Hollywood correspondent, who will return to California soon to give readers of this paper, further enlightening first-hand news of movie folks and colony doings.

DECLARES "EMERGENCY"

One of the immediate results of the Nazi victory in the Memel elections (a victory of that territory to Germany), President Antanas Smetona, above, of Lithuania, issued a special decree "for protection of the state" at Kaunas. The government, it is believed, fears that Lithuanian territorial integrity is threatened by the activities of the extreme Rightists' opposition which might be used on behalf of a foreign power.

DR. M. G. DALES RECEIVES O. H. S. RIBBON AWARD

Tweed Horticultural Society Member Is Honored

Tweed—The Evening Auxiliary of Tweed United Church held a Carol Tea at the home of Miss Marian Newton on Friday evening. The rooms where the tables were set were attractively decorated as were the tables themselves, with Christmas decorations. During the tea, carols were sung by a group of carol-singers composed of Mrs. M. G. Dales, Mrs. H. A. Grier, Misses Ruth Foster, Marion and Marjorie Tummon.

An unsuccessful attempt to break into Massey Harris Implement Shop next to A. C. Blakely's Furniture Store was made late on Sunday evening. Miss Hazel Blakely on retiring heard the sound of breaking glass and observed a skulking figure in the rear of the building removing a sash from the window frame. She advised her father, Mr. A. C. Blakely who immediately got in touch with Chief Constable J. C. Hayes.

Chief Hayes arrived on the scene in a few moments, but the culprit evidently became alarmed and made his get away through a small opening in the fence at the rear of the premises.

Later on the same night Paul Rashotte's office was entered. This is the fourth break-in locally in the past week.

Bogus quarters have made their appearance locally and purchasers are advised to be on the lookout. One merchant reported three such coins passed over his counter in one day. The coins are expertly made and it is difficult to detect them.

The final meeting of the year of Tweed Horticultural Society was held at the Council Chambers on Monday afternoon with the President, Mrs. W. A. Beatty in the chair. Outstanding business of the year was concluded in preparation for the annual meeting to be held in January.

A special ribbon donated by the Ontario Horticultural Societies was presented to Dr. M. G. Dales. For several years past such a ribbon has been presented to a citizen of the town, whether a member of the Society, or not, who makes an outstanding contribution towards enhancing the general appearance of the village through beautifying by the planting of shrubs, or flowers in some unattractive spot. During the year Dr. Dales leased from the C.N.R. a small section of land south of his residence, a section that had been a weed-bed and an eyesore for years and by the planting of flowers etc., had transformed it into a beauty spot. The local Society deemed this to be an outstanding achievement and felt that due recognition should be made by awarding the O.H.S. Ribbon of Merit.

Former winners of the ribbon have been Mr. J. G. Frost and Rev. R. R. Nicholson.

The Community Club Dinner held at The Huycke House under the new management of Thos. E. Potts, on Monday evening drew an attendance which taxed the accommodations to the limit. A fine turkey dinner was enjoyed by the gathering who warmly praised the proprietor and his staff. During the dinner Community singing under the direction of S. H. Connor with Art Leman at the piano enlivened the proceedings.

Following the 'Toast to the King' and the National Anthem, President I. D. Corcoran welcomed two local men recently added to the business fraternity in the persons of Messrs Stan Tufts and Ernest Cronkwright. Three other newcomers, Rev. H. L. Morrison, B.A., pastor of Tweed United Church Mr. Kenneth E. Balch, druggist and Mr. Edwin Foster, milk distributor, were also introduced and welcomed.

President Corcoran explained that the primary purpose of the meeting was to formulate plans for the annual Christmas entertainment for the children of Tweed and the surrounding district. In former years he said the event had taken the form of a Santa Claus parade from the local C.P.R. depot to Kerr's corner where candy was distributed to the children. He called for discussion of the form this year's affair should assume.

Several merchants including Messrs. P. B. Foster, Ed. Rath, E. W. Jones and H. C. Myles, expressed the opinion that for thi year a change should be made an the children instead of the usua bag of candy might be treated to free show at Victoria Theatre. Mr. C. H. Kerr, reeve-elect of Tweed, expressed himself as strongly in favour of continuing [illegible] the practice of former years. "N[illegible]ture show", he pointed out, "could replace the sight of Santa Claus with the accompanying parade and bag of candy, especially for the smaller children for whose benefit the parade was primarily arranged."

W. H. Crosbie speaking in the same vein, observed that it is important to keep alive in the minds and hearts of the smaller children the myth of Jolly Santa Claus. This can best be done by continuing the practice of former years.

Finally, after further discussion, a motion was made by W. E. Spackman and seconded by C. H. Kerr that both a Santa Claus parade with candy and free show be given to the children of Tweed and any children of the district surrounding Tweed who present themselves This met with the unanimous approval of the gathering.

A list was passed and $45 was subscribed in a few minutes. The balance of the estimated outlay of $75 will be raised by soliciting subscriptions from other interested citizens.

The following committee were named:

Parade—T. E. Moffat, S. H. Connor, D. H. Morrison.

Finance and Picture — W. LeSage, W. H. Crosbie, Dr. W. A Paul, H. B. Austin, (Treasurer).

The chairman announced that at the January meeting a special speaker will be secured and the election of officers will be held.

The Boy Scouts and Wolf Cubs enjoyed weiners and rolls at their meetings on Monday evening.

HOLD FARMHAND ON THEFT CHARGE

Bloodstains Found in Garage Are Investigated by Police

Finding blood stains at the scene of a break-in in Irwin's garage at Deseronto yesterday ultimately resulted in the arrest of Henry Bauner, farmhand, on a charge of theft later in the day.

Although young Bauner denied knowledge of the robbery, he was placed in the Napanee jail on a charge of robbery, after police had found a quantity of cigarettes and tobaccos cached beneath a haystack on the farm of his employer.

Early yesterday Chief Em[illegible] Beatty, of Deseronto, was informe Irwin's garage of that village had been entered and approximately $5.00 worth of cigarettes and tobaccos stolen. Accompanied by Provincial Constable W. E. Smith of Belleville, the officers arrived to find entrance had been gained by means of removing a rear screen and reaching through a broken window to unlatch the window and enter. Blood was found on the window sill and in the office of the garage, where the empty cash box had also been opened. Constable Smith was of the opinion the intruder had cut his hand on the broken window glass. Further investigations resulted in the arrest of Henry Bauner, farmhand residing one mile west of Deseronto.

Bauner's index finger on his right hand was cut and a blood-soaked handkerchief was found on his person, police said, who added that he said he cut his finger while splitting wood and denied knowledge of the robbery. Later a quantity of tobacco was found cached beneath a nearby haystack, police stated. Bauner was immediately placed under arrest on a charge of theft. He continued to reiterate his innocence, police st[illegible]ed after careful investigations.

COLLISION DAMAGES SHANNONVILLE CAR

Motor Car Sandwiched Between Lumber Truck and Another Auto

Damage to the estimated amount of $200.00 resulted to a motor car driven by J. W. Stewart, Shannonville, when the vehicle became sandwiched between a large truck and another motor car at the intersection of Dufferin Avenue and East Dundas Street early today.

Kenneth Martin, driver for Houston Lumber Company, was proceeding easterly in a large truck owned by his employers, with Stewart following behind. Approaching the Dufferin Avenue intersection, Martin slowed down to negotiate the lefthand turn. Stewart, apparently failing to observe a west bound car, driven by James E. Browning, Belleville, approaching, from the east. Police investigations resulted in showing Stewart's car, in attempting to pass the truck, came into collision with both vehicles when it was sandwiched between them.

Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Ervine investigated and reported damages to the amount of $200.00 resulted to Mr. Stewart's car and to the amount of $50.00 to Mr. Brow[illegible]ing's vehicle. No person was injured during the crash, however. No charges were deemed necessary.

Today's early morning snow resulted in several motor vehicles skidding into the ditches on adjacent highways, police reported. Near Foxboro at noon a large truck skidded into the ditch, but no person sustained injuries. The vehicle was later released by a tow truck and proceeded on its journey.

NEW YORK STOCKS

New York, Dec. 14—(AP)—By a series of mild spurts, the stock market moved ahead today as transactions nearly doubled.

Aircraft, Steel and other shares situated to profit by increased United States spending for shipments led the procession but the gains, running to more than two points, were well distributed around the final hour. Several Aircraft shares went to new peaks.

Transactions were about 2,000,000 shares.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 14 (CP)—Interest moved over to base metals today on the Toronto market and the leaders, especially Noranda and International Nickel changed hands in quantity at substantial price gains. The cheaper issues followed along. Action continued robust in the western oils, especially Home and Davies and these issues traded about 65,000 shares each and healthy gains. All indices were up except the gold indicator and volume over the board expanded to about 750,000 shares.

Home Oil featured the list, trading in volume on a rise of 2.36 up 33 cents from the last close. Okalta, Davies, Calmont and some of the cheaper issues trailed along at a slower pace.

International Nickel firmed to the 55 mark and higher prices were posted for Noranda, Sherritt, Smelters, Waite-Amulet and others. Penny issues held the spotlight in the gold group but Bralorne was a strong issue among the higher-price issues, firming to a new high at 10 3-4.

Food, Senior Oil, Steel and Liquor stocks displayed strength.

NATIONAL REVENUE

Ottawa, Dec. 14.—(CP) — The department of National Revenue announced today customs and excise revenue for the first eight months of the present fiscal year totalled $200,310, 324 compared with $223,440,476 in the corresponding period the previous fiscal year.

Eggs Slightly Firmer at Toronto

Toronto, Dec. 14—Graded eggs showed further slight improvement on the local produce market yesterday as butter prices eased a shade.

Lighter receipts and better demand combined to edge prices higher in the graded division of the egg market. Other sections remained unchanged. Graded shipments cleared readily at 32c for grade A-large, 27c for medium, 26c for pullets, 25c for B's and 22c for C grades.

The butter market eased off under continued quiet trading. Offerings were not heavy however, and sales were not being forced. Most points reported prices unchanged, but business passed at 1-4c below previous prices in the Ontario product. Ontario creamery solids slipped to the range of 21 1-2c to 3-4c for No. 1 grades.

Montreal, Dec. 14 (CP)—Butter prices dipped slightly in dull trading or open produce markets at Montreal Tuesday, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported. Cheese firmed slightly, while eggs remained unchanged.

Creamery butter to retailers were 22 3-4c to 23c a pound and solids sold for 22 1-4c to 22 1-2c.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases were offered at 33c a dozen for A-large, 2[illegible] for A-medium, 26c for A-pullets, 24c for B-large, 23c for B-medium and 21c for C. Receipts: 1,326 cases.

Board Room Gossip

Siscoe

With shares of Siscoe Gold Mines Limited selling at the very low price chalked up on the board these days, it might be well if shareholders took a pencil and delved into the actual picture minewise, states The Quebec Miner. In the upper levels of the Siscoe workings, there is sufficient ore available to keep the mine in profitable operation for at least two or three years and the new deeper levels have responded in an encouraging manner.

The company has a million dollars with which to carry on. The mining plant alone is worth in the vicinity of a million dollars and giving consideration to the lower grade now being milled, the heavy charges for shaft sinking and development which has been charged to operating costs in the broad development programme being carried out on the lower horizons, the net earnings of 17.1 cents per share in the first nine months, covers the regular dividend requirements by a fair margin. With the reasonable results being secured on the new levels, the management expects that earnings could readily be restored to compare favourably with the results of previous years.

The Quebec Miner believes that Siscoe is entering the period where important news will be made for the shareholders.

EVERY WAGE EARNER SHOULD BE TAXED STATES DEPUTY REEVE

Hamilton, Dec. 14.—(CP)—Scheme to relieve real estate of the burden of "social' costs was suggested to Wentworth County Council today by B. E. Corman, deputy reeve of Saltfleet, who believes that every wage earner in the Dominion should be taxed proportionately for social service.

He advocated that a percentage of all salaries earned in the Dominion be built into one fund for social expenses.

"The burden belongs to the general public—not to real estate", Mr. Corman said. "We must have a new means of collecting revenue which we can substitute for the old one".

TORONTO LEADS INCOME RETURNS FOR ALL CITIES

43 Millions Collected in First Eight Months of Fiscal Year

LARGE INCREASE

Ottawa, Dec. 14—(CP) —Toronto, with $43,621,112 led all districts in income tax collections during the first eight months of the present fiscal year, according to figures released today by the Department of Nationale Revenue. Montreal was second with $32,310,130 and London third at $10,648,149. Total collections for the first eight months were $124,878,589 compared with $102,437,106 in the corresponding period the previous fiscal year.

Collections by districts with figures for the same period of the 1937-38 fiscal year in brackets included: Ottawa, 7,388,666 ($6,711,015); Kingston $266,203 ($241,560); Belleville $565,685 ($563,722); Toronto $43,621,112 ($34,963,897); Hamilton $8,137,886 ($6,339,556); London $10,648,149 ($9,208,967) and Fort William $469,201 ($324,706).

25,000 GERMAN MAIDS ORDERED HOME FROM HOLLAND

Amsterdam, Dec. 14 (AP)—Netherlands housewives faced an intensified servant problem today as approximately 25,000 German maids were ordered by a German decree to return to Germany as soon as possible.

The decree was issued because of a labor shortage in Germany. Many of the servants have lived and worked in the Netherlands 10 years or more. Some do not want to return to the Reich. The final date for their return was not announced.

Livestock

Toronto, Dec. 14—(CP)— Cattle sales on Toronto Livestock Market today were too few to establish definite quotations. Calf prices moved 50 cents lower. Sheep and lambs were steady. No hog price was established by mid-season. Cattle holdover from Tuesday was 800 head.

Receipts reported by Dominion Livestock branch were: cattle 200; calves 150; hogs 860; sheep and lambs 230.

Only 200 head of cattle were sold by early afternoon. A few small lots of butcher cattle traded at $4 to $5.36. Butcher cows brought $2.75 to $3.85. Medium to good fed calves ranged from $6 to $8.

Choice veal calves made a general top on $9 with common downward to $5.

Previous close on off-truck bacon hogs was $8.75 to $8.85. Good ewe and wether lambs were priced at $9 to $9.50 with bulk of sales between $9.25 and $9.35. Other grades moved at $7 to $8.50. A few light sheep made $2 to 4 cwt.

* * *

Montreal, Dec. 14—(CP)—Prices generally held steady in light trading on Montreal Livestock markets today, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported.

Receipts: Cattle 63; calves 66; hogs 330.

Cattle: good cows made 4-$4.25 with medium kinds at $3.25-$3.50 and common butchers $2.75-$3. Canners and cutters brought $2-$2.50 while common bulls made $3-$3.50.

Calves: veals ranged from $8-$9.50 and grassers from $3.50-$4.

Hogs: bacons, fed and watered, were $9.25 and off trucks $9.50. Selects drew $1 per hog premium with the usual cuts on off grades. Sows sold at $7-$7.75.

War Pensions Cost Canada $40,500,058

Ottawa, Dec. 4 (CP)—At the end of November 98,123 Canadian war pensioners were drawing monthly compensation, involving a disbursement of $40,501,053 per annum, according to a statement issued by Pensions Minister Power today. This represented a decrease in the financial commitment from $40,568,180 for the same month last year, but an increase of 144 in pensions awarded.

Disability pensioners numbered 80,136 compared with 79,866 a year ago. Dependents were 17,987, as against 18,113 for November 1937.

PRIME MINISTER

prised today but confident it would not upset his appeasement policy.

One of the "ups and downs in politics" and not endangering German-British friendship was the first, if incomplete, reaction among German officialdom. Heads of foreign office departments met to make a further analysis.

Attitude of Newspapers.

The few morning papers to comment were more critical but did not mention that the German ambassador and German press representatives did not attend the London Foreign Press Association dinner at which Mr. Chamberlain spoke. (They did not attend because of criticism of the German press.)

A foreign office spokesman said: "We are frankly astonished. We have always regarded Chamberlain as a man of practical politics who has been working for rapprochement and appeasement. It isn't quite clear what led him suddenly to go into the realm of philosophy and start an argument.

"It is true there have been some unfriendly words about Baldwin and others here, but we don't pick quarrels—we merely hit back if we are struck at."

Chamberlain Rebukes Nazi Press.

London, Dec. 14 (CP) — Prime Minister Chamberlain last night rededicated his Government to an attempt to bring peace to Europe in a speech at a dinner the German Ambassador did not attend because the Prime Minister criticized the Nazi press.

The Ambassador and all other German representatives sent their "regrets" just before the Foreign Press Association dinner got under way. They had read advance copies of the Prime Minister's speech, in which he took the German press to task for recent remarks about Earl Baldwin.

Looking down on the dozen empty chairs and untouched plates, the Prime Minister made only slight departures from his prepared text, twice changing the emphasis of his remarks.

"I must deplore the recent attitude of the German press, which in one case has not scrupled to pour out its vituperation against our most respected statesman—himself only recently Prime Minister of this country—and in a few cases has shown much desire to understand our point of view," he said.

The statement was greeted with prolonged applause. The only change in the statement in regard to the press was that he used "recent attitude" instead of "present tone" as given out in the advance copies.

Baldwin Nazi Target.

Thus the Prime Minister referred to the Nazi press attack on his predecessor, following a refugee fund appeal last Thursday when Lord Baldwin spoke of "an explosion of man's inhumanity to man."

Lord Baldwin spoke as "an ordinary Englishman shocked and distressed" at the plight of victims. One German newspaper later called the former Prime Minister a "gutterasnipe".

Nearly 500 other guests attended the dinner, including the Italian Ambassador, Count Dino Grandi, the Ambassadors of France, Belgium, Brazil, Poland and the Soviet Union.

Not Wavering From Goal.

Mr. Chamberlain, speaking on the air, told a world-wide audience he would "never leave off trying" to reach a goal toward which "my aim has never wavered". That goal was "a prolonged and determined effort to eradicate possible causes of war and to try out methods of personal discussion, while at the same time proceeding steadily with such armament as was necessary to secure the power of defence which we had voluntarily abandoned for a period of many years."

He recounted successes of the past year—the agreement with Eire, the agreement with Italy, the Munich agreement, the no-war declaration signed with Chancellor Hitler with its complementary French-German declaration and the Anglo-American trade agreement. He continued:

"Here, then, in something less than a 12-month, are five major international agreements, three of which were concluded between democratic and authoritarian states. Surely that is an achievement which calls of satisfaction rather than pessimism, and one which should encourage us to persist in the policy which has given such remarkable results."

His policy of working in harmony with Germany and Italy did not mean he favored Nazism or Fascism for Great Britain, he said.

Announcing Britain's rearmament policy had progressed to a state where the country could fulfil its obligations to the people at home and in the Empire, and to countries to which it was bound by treaties, he paid tribute to France.

"In my lifetime we were within an ace of war with France," he said. "Today such a catastrophe seems as remote as a war with America. In fact, our relations with France are so close that they go far beyond mere legal obligations, since they are founded on identity of interest.

In this quotation Mr. Chamberlain made another minor change in emphasis from his prepared text which had stated: "Our relations with France are so close as to pass beyond mere legal obligations."

French observers quickly pointed to the strong terms as an answer by the Prime Minister to Italian assertions that his statement in the House of Commons on Monday that Britain had no formal obligations to aid France in case of aggression by Italy was a warning to France.

The Prime Minister emphasized that history taught two lessons—that "attempts at domination are never long successful and have never added to the happiness of the nations which have attempted it," and that forms of Government are ephemeral and changeable.

Chose Path of Peace

He had faced two alternatives when relations of Great Britain with Germany and Italy were deteriorating rapidly. One was to make up his mind that war was inevitable and throw the whole energies of the nation into preparation for it.

The other was the one that he said he had constantly pursued. He had never expected to reach his goal in a twinkling of an eye or without checks and disappointments. There had been reverses but "I am neither disheartened nor deterred by these passing phases."

The Prime Minister said he was convinced that despite the Nazi press attitude, the German people agreed with the British people that they never again should go to war with one another, but that differences should be settled by consultation.

With reference to the other end of the Rome-Berlin axis, Mr. Chamberlain said he and Lord Halifax would discuss with Premier Mussolini and members of his Government next month "all matters of common interest and concern."

"It may be that some will once again be speculating upon who is the winner and who is the loser in these talks," he said. "That is not the spirit in which we propose to undertake the journey. Rather has it been our hope that we might find an atmosphere in which it would be possible, by a personal interchange, better to understand each other's viewpoint, and by establishing greater confidence, to co-operate one way or another in further steps towards a general sense of stability and security."

Mr. Chamberlain said the absence of peace of mind today weighed upon the world and "in its turn, by destroying confidence, prevents us from reaping the material advantages to which human progress, mastering the forces of nature, should entitle us."

"I would conclude," he said, "by appealing through you to all the nations you represent to realize that our aim should be the happiness of all our people and that that happiness can only be attained if we are willing to lay aside suspicion and prejudice, ceasing to look for points of differences and to search instead for points of agreement."

Much Colder Weather With Snow-Forecast

Stiff, northwesterly winds blew snow over much of Ontario today and though temperatures remained comparatively mild — generally a degree or two above freezing—the meteorological bureau forecast 'much colder' weather and more snow for tomorrow.

Heaviest snowfalls were reported from Eastern Ontario where high winds, accompanied by rain that turned to snow early today, were experienced' Snow fell for more than an hour upon Toronto, melting as it struck the pavements, and light falls were reported in Northern Ontario. Only scattered flurries occurred in Western sections of the province.

SKELETON BELIEVED TO BE THAT OF INDIAN BURIED 100 YEARS AGO

Examination of the skeleton recently exposed by ploughmen on a farm in Cherry Valley, Prince Edward County, reveals the fact that it is that of an Indian, buried nearly one hundred years ago.

The fact that only eight inches of earth covered the crumbling bones, and the near-disintegration that occurred when they were being pieced together give rise to the belief that they have been buried for the biggest part of a century.

Anatomical aspects of the bones, experts said, substantiate their theory that the skeleton is that of a member of one of the Indian tribes that lived in that part of the district nearly a century ago.

HIGHWAY REPORT

Up until today there was no snow on any of the roads or highways in the southern part of the Province, and as far north as North Bay, also between North Bay and Sault Ste. Marie there is no snow, according to the report of the Ontario Highways Department.

"Between North Bay and Swastika there is a light covering of snow on all highways, but not enough to hamper traffic the report adds. "Recent snow falls in the northwestern section of the Province have resulted in snow plows being needed to clear the roads."

COLD WEATHER ENDS FALL WORK ON LAND

This week's cold weather will probably end the latest season for outside work ever experienced by farmers of the district, it was stated at local agricultural offices this morning. Up until this week many farmers have been engaged in fall plowing, later by weeks than for years past, it was further reported. If snow comes the land is well prepared to receive it, and conditions appear excellent for land owners. All that is needed to ensure good crops next spring is a heavy fall of snow just at this time.

EARLIER LUNCHEON HOUR FOR DIRECTORS

To conform with busier shopping hours in local stores for some of the proprietor-members, the local Chamber of Commerce will during the holiday season, beginning tomorrow noon, hold regular luncheons on Thursday at 12:00 o'clock instead of 12:30 as formerly.

Labor Council Asks Resignation Of Harry Scott

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 14 (CP) — Harry Scott, President of the Sandwich, Windsor and Amherstburg Railway, has been asked in a resolution passed by the Essex County Trades and Labor Council to resign from the Council for his actions in opposing David A. Croll in the recent Windsor mayoralty election.

The Trades and Labor Council passed a resolution last night asking Scott's resignation and forwarded it to the Street Railwaymen's Union.

Scott, during the campaign, said Croll's campaign for a five-cent street car and bus fare in Windsor would result in lowered wages for the street railway employees. Croll was a labor-endorsed candidate, and he won, defeating Mayor E. S. Wigle and Roy C. Haight.

Delegates charged Scott attempted to split labor ranks by his actions.

FIVE SLASHINGS CALLED 'FAKES'

Two Girls Bound Over on Charge of Mischief by Slashing Selves

Halifax, England, Dec. 14 (AP)—This Yorkshire mill town today suffered a sheepish reaction to its "slasher" scare of last month when the Crown Prosecutor declared in court at least five of the thirteen reported slashings were fakes.

Two girls were bound over for trial on charges of causing malicious mischief by slashing themselves. One said she did it with a penny razor because she was angry at her boy friend. The other admitted she had used a comb to inflict a cut because she was "excited" by reports of the "phantom slasher".

Declaring that "now we know that at least five of the thirteen attacks never happened at all," Prosecutor W. N. Curtis spoke bitingly of "persons with silly notions".

He recalled the state of alarm that gripped the town through the last week in November, when thousands of persons were afraid to go outdoors after dark, hundreds of men banded themselves together armed with clubs, and mill girls marched to work under escort in fear of the "slasher".

The attacks in Halifax ended after Scotland Yard agents arrived Nov. 30 and began work on the theory that the "slasher" actually was largely the product of imagination.

Ruth Etting Weds

Las Vegas, Nev., Dec. 14—(CP)—In a swift-moving accompaniment to the trial in Los Angeles of her former husband, Martin Synder, for attempted murder, Miss Ruth Etting was married here today to Myrl Alderman, the former pianist whom Snyder is accused of shooting.

The ceremony took place in the chambers of Judge William Orr, immediately after the ceremony the party left for the airport to return to Los Angeles in their chartered plane.

The couple flew here in a chartered plane from Los Angeles. County Clerk Lloyd S. Payne issued the licence.

Ruth Etting recorded a divorce granted in Chicago Nov. 30, 1937. Alderman gave his age as 30 and said he was divorced in Los Angeles a year ago.

Curtail Income German Jew War Veterans

Berlin, Dec. 14 (AP)—Drastic curtailments in the income of the large group of German Jewish Great War veterans were ordered today, effective Jan. 1.

Interior Minister Wilhelm Frick and Rudolf Hess, Chancellor Hitler's Deputy in Nazi Party affairs, decreed that Jewish former government employees, who hitherto have been kept on the full payroll even after they were removed from office, should receive only the pensions to which they are entitled under the general German pension law.

When the Nazis came to power Jan. 30, 1933, they ejected Jews from public office. Men who had served in the trenches during the war, however, were held to be entitled to full pay because of their war service and because they lost their jobs on racial, not personal, grounds.

That policy now has been changed and the veterans placed on the level of all other Jews After Jan. 1 they will receive only the ordinary pension based on the number of years they worked for the government.

MATRON WORE TOQUE OF "TEN OTHER USHERS"

Typographical errors born of haste in make-up of newspapers occur in the greatest of prints as glaringly as in the small city journals. One quoted from the New York Times, long considered one of the world's greatest dailies reports a wedding in Boston of Miss Sally Poor Clark sister-in-law of John Aspinwall Roosevelt, to George Xavier McLanahan:

"Then came the matron of honor Mrs. John Roosevelt, in a velvet frock of bright blue, and a toque of ten other ushers".

ITALIAN TROOPS LANDED IN SPAIN

Under - Secretary Butler Admits Italy Sent Help Recently

By J. F. SANDERSON

London, Dec. 14 (CP-Cable) — Richard Butler, Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, admitted in the House of Commons today that Italy had landed troops and war materials in Spain in recent weeks to assist General Franco's insurrection.

The admission raised a storm of protest from Labor members, who told Prime Minister Chamberlain he had misled the House on Premier Mussolini's pledges which prefaced the document bringing the Anglo-Italy treaty into effect. They served notice they would raise the whole question at an early opportunity.

Mr. Butler made it plain that Italian assistance to General Franco amounted only to replacements and that there had been no increase in personnel.

Earlier, during the question hour, the prime minister had declined to give an assurance he would consult the House before offering belligerent rights to General Franco.

GIRLS BEAT OFF ATTACK OF THUG

Assaults Made in Lonely Area in York Township Last Night

Toronto, Dec. 14 (CP)—Biting and kicking, two York Township girls beat off an attack made on them by a heavily-set, tall man in North Silverthorn last night.

The attacks were made in different spots in the uninhabited district within fifteen minutes of each other. Township police believe the same man was responsible.

Police surrounded the area but a thorough search of ravines and fields failed to uncover traces of the attacker.

Both girls were scratched about the eyes and forehead and suffered from shock. They were taken to their homes by police.

The first attack was made on the younger girl, aged 15, as she walked south on Cameron avenue. She was passing a dark vacant field when the six-foot man stepped out from behind a clump of bushes and grabbed her. He put one hand across her mouth and the other around her arms and threw her to the ground.

Biting and kicking, the girl managed to free her mouth and start screaming. The thug dug his fingernails into her face, but she kept on fighting and screaming. She managed to get free and the assailant fled into the nearby thicket.

Fifteen minutes later a 20-year-old girl was grabbed about the throat and mouth as she walked along Hallbrook Road. She started screaming and kicking as her attacker tried to throw her to the ground. He ripped her face with finger nails and hurled her to the pavement before escaping.

Found Guilty Of Photographing Canal Zone

Cristobal, C. Z., Dec. 14 (AP) — Hans Heinrich Schachow, 26-year-old German Steamship Company employee, was found guilty today of photographing Canal Zone fortifications. It was the Canal Zone's first espionage case.

A federal court jury deliberated about two hours before reaching the verdict of guilty.

Schachow is one of four young Germans accused. The others, Ingeborg Gutman, 19-year-old girl secretary; Gisbert Gross, 26, and Ernst Kuhrig, 29, are to be tried later. All were arrested Oct. 16 at Fort Randolph, which defends the Atlantic entrance to the Panama Canal.

During Schachow's trial military officials testified he took several pictures that would be useful to foreign governments.

George's Wild Oats

By

Allen Eppes

CHAPTER XXXV

"What is it?" gasped Ellen, as she and Lee went down the stairs to the street. "Oh, Lee, tell me quick! Who was that on the phone, and what did they say? What's happened to George?' '

"Let's hope nothing has happened to him yet! But that was Mrs. Simmons on the wire, and she said a wild man with a gun had forced his way into the house! It's obviously Ted Lane!"

"What else did she say?" Ellen pleaded. "Is—is George there?"

"Yes, he's there! I, like a fool, sent him home! Mrs. Simmons wasn't very coherent, but I gathered that Rita was also there, hiding some place, and that her husband was searching for her—waving his gun at George in the meantime!"

"Oh, dear! Oh, dear!" wailed Ellen. Then, as an afterthought, "But what is Rita doing there!"

"I don't know! She probably forced her way in, too—George went home to get away from her. But the main thing now, is to get there before the shootoing starts!"

During this panic-stricken conversation, Lee had helped Ellen into his car, had leaped in after her, and had sent the yellow roadster roaring away down the street.

They covered the distance to George's home in nothing flat, holding their breath all the way.

As they whirled up the driveway, they saw Mrs. Simmons on the front porch, gesturing frantically

"The garage! The garage!" she shrieked. "They're in the garage!"

Lee swerved the car around the house. As he did so, hair-raising screams came from the direction of the garage.

Ellen was out of the car before it stopped, dashing toward the little building. Through the doorway, a terrifying tableau met her eye—a man pointing a gun at George, while Rita and another woman cowered at one side, screaming at the top of their lungs.

Ellen didn't stop to think — didn't consider her own safety. She rushed at the man with the gun, whose back was toward her, and with a quick movement, knocked his arm upward.

The gun fell from his hand, and clattered to the garage floor. Instantly, George leaped forward, grabbed it, and raised it to cover Ted Lane.

At that, Rita's screams increased. She flung herself in front of Ted, throwing her arms about him.

"Don't you dare shoot at him, George Martin!" she shrilled.

"I don't want to shoot him," George growled. "But I'm certainly not going to let him have his gun back to shoot me!"

Ellen, sobbing with relief, stepped to George's side, laid her hand on his arm.

"Oh, G-George! Thank heaven Lee and I were in time!"

George took out his handkerchief and mopped his brow. He grinned weakly.

"Thank heaven, too! And say, Ellen, th-thanks for what you did I—I guess you saved my life!"

"Oh, I wouldn't have shot at you!" snapped Ted. "Even though you may deserve it! I just lost my head for a minute."

Lee, standing in the doorway, laughed harshly.

"Lost your head! I'll say you did! Next time, don't lose it when you've got a gun in your hand!"

Ted, however, ignored him. He was glaring down at Rita, who was still clinging tightly to him as though his life depended upon it.

"What's the big idea?" he asked bitterly. "Pulling a shield stunt! What do you care what happens to me?"

Rita started whimpering. "Teddy ....how can you talk to me like that? Of course I care!"

"Then, why the heck are you trying to get a divorce?"

"Oh, you don't understand!" she wailed. "It—it's all a mistake!"

"There's no mistake about my finding you hiding on this fellow's place!" Ted said grimly. "Explain that if you can!"

Rita jerked away from him, and flared up.

"You wouldn't listen if I did explain! I was here for a perfectly innocent reason. But would you believe it? No! You come rushing after me with a gun! Naturally, I hid!"

"Well, what do you expect me to believe," Ted countered, "when I hear that you and this George Martin—"

"When you hear!" Rita cut in. "Must you believe everything you hear?" She turned furiously toward Mazie, who was still cowering in a corner. "You're the one to blame! I know it! You wrote him lies—poisoned him against me! And why? Because you want him yourself, you little cat, you!"

Mazie bristled. "I only wrote him the truth!" she snapped back, "If you value him so much, why don't you keep him, instead of — instead of—"

"Instead of hiring a divorce lawyer!" Ted cut in. "You can't deny that, Rita!"

Rita became plaintive again. "Oh, Teddy....I don't want the old divorce...." She suddenly put her arms around his neck, and buried her face against his shoulder. "The only reason I ever started it, honey, was because I was mad at you and—and—I got madder when you sent me that mean, nasty wire! But I don't want the divorce now, sweetie, honest I don't...."

Ted found it hard to resist these endearments. His arms went around her for a moment — but then, he suddenly thrust her away.

"Oh, heck!" he growled, "You've used these tricks on me before! The only reason you're crawling back to me is because you think Mazie is after me! Dog in the manger stuff! You don't want me yourself, but you don't want any one else to make eyes at me!"

"Teddy!" Rita's tone was deeply injured.

"Well, things look mighty queer!" Ted argued stubbornly. "There must be some basis for what Mazie wrote me, and now, I myself come here and find you in George Martin's home!"

"But I told you I could explain, Teddy...."

"Sure you can explain! You can always explain! You're good at it!"

Then, Ellen suddenly spoke up. "Mr. Lane—maybe you'll believe me! You're crazy if you think Miss Roselle and Mr. Martin are anything but business friends. It's absurd!"

Ted whirled on her. "What do you know about it?"

"I know all about it!" Ellen gave George a quick glance, then slipped her hand through his arm. "You see, Mr. Martin happens to be my fiance!"

George turned and stared at her, his jaw dropping.

CHAPTER XXXVI

George, taking aback by Ellen's statement that he was engaged to her, continued to stare at her — but he said nothing.

As for Ted, he was plainly impressed by this new angle to the situation. He turned and looked at Mazie suspiciously.

"Why didn't you tell me that?" he demanded.

"I didn't know it—and I don't believe it!" Mazie said defensively. She eyed Ellen. "She's just making it up to smooth things over!"

"Nonsense!" said Ellen, "I was with Mr. Martin when he called on Miss Roselle at the theatre last Saturday night, wasn't I? Do you suppose he would have taken me along if he had any romantic interest in her?"

Rita was unprepared for this aid from Ellen, but she made the most of it.

"Well...." said Ted, wavering. "That does make things different —and maybe I was too quick to—to believe a lot of gossip." He gave Mazie a dirty look. "But— but honey, do—do you mean what you say about not wanting a divorce?"

Rita snuggled close to him. "Of course, darling! It was silly of me!" Then, suddenly, she remembered something and stepped back. "But say — wait a minute! How about that dame in New York you've been stepp'ng out with?"

Ted flushed. "Who's been writing you tales?"

"Nellie," Rita told him. "Well, what have you to say for yourself?"

Ted laughed, and put his arm around her. "Look, honey.... let's call it square. Mazie's been gossiping to me, and Nellie's been gossip'ng to you. Let's just ignore both of them. How about it?" He hesitated. "I did take that girl out a couple of times. You see, she's a dancer—a darn good one—and I thought—"

"You mean you're going to ask her to be your partner!"

"Well, I'd thought of it. I've got to have a partner, don't I?"

"Do you?" Rita was thoughtful a minute, twisting her finger in his lapel. "I suppose you do. But Teddy...." She looked up at him sheepishly. "I'm not just sure yet that I'm going to like this acting business, I've been sort of missing the music and the old routine and —and—' '

"Rita! You mean you want to come back?"

"Well....I might...."

"Swell!" Ted caught her in his arms and hugged her so tight, she gasped for breath.

Half an hour later, with Rita and Ted and Mazie gone, comparative calm had settled down on the old Martin homestead. In the living room, where George and Ellen and Lee were now gatherd, Mrs. Simmons hovered over George like an anxious hen.

"You're sure you're all right, Mr. George? she asked for the third time, looking at him as though she still couldn't believe he wasn't riddled with bullets.

"Absolutely, Mrs. Simmons! You stop fussing. If you want to do something for me, how about making us a pot of coffee and bringing us some of that good cake you baked the other day?"

Mrs. Simmons, beaming, bustled out.

There was an awkward silence. Lee looked from George to Ellen.

"Well....guess I'd better be getting back to town."

"Stick around and have some coffee and cake," George urged, but not very convincingly.

"No, thanks—not hungry." Lee moved to the door. There, he paused, smiling, and winked at Ellen. "Good luck—and all that sort of thing. So long!"

With a cheery wave, he was gone.

Another awkward silence. George looked at Ellen, started to speak, then hesitated. Ellen knew perfectly well what he was going to ask her. She waited, her eyes lowered.

Finally, he got it out. "Ellen... did.... did you mean what you told Ted Lane....out there in the garage?"

Ellen blushed. "Well....of course it wasn't true....and I said it only to save the situation." She paused, and gave George a sidelong glance. "But maybe, too.... I've learned a trick or two from Rita!"

George moved closer to her. "You mean," he asked eagerly, "that you might be willing to make it true?"

"Maybe...."

"Oh, Ellen! That—that's wonderful!"

"But of course," she pointed out, teasingly, "it depends on how you feel about it. You remember you told me once that you'd never met a girl you could love—that you were waiting to look up some day and suddenly see her standing before you."

"But I have, Ellen — I have!" George said, earnestly. "Do you know when it happened? Sunday —at Mrs. Buxton's tea party!"

"What!" exclaimed Ellen, in mock dismay. "The day I caught you kissing Rita? You don't mean to say she's the girl you looked up and saw?"

"No! No! You, Ellen — you! I really saw you that day for the first time. Ellen—you—you were beautiful!"

Ellen smiled to herself, thinking how she had wanted just this to happen, and that her efforts to beautify herself had not been in vain, after all.

George sighed. "The only thing I regret is that you didn't accept me the first day I proposed. Do you remember? How much simpler it would have been to have got rid of the match-making mothers by becoming engaged to you in the first place, instead of going wild and losing every one's esteem! I don't suppose I'll ever get back in their good graces."

"What do you care about the old mothers?" Ellen soothed. "Besides, I've a hunch they're secretly thrilled over the sensation you've given this sleepy old town."

" You think so?"

"I do." Ellen laughed. "And my, how jealous they're going to be when they learn I'm the girl who has finally nabbed you! They view me, you know, as the town's old maid."

"They, they're crazy! There's not a girl in town who ever could hold a candle to you!"

George was gazing at her with a lovesick light in his eyes.

Ellen smiled. "Well, George ... aren't you going to make our engagement official?...."

"What? Oh.... oh, yes...."

First awkwardly, then with the skill of an old master, George took her in his arms and kissed her.

Mrs. Simmons, coming in with the coffee and cake, turned with a smile and tiptoed out.

At The Theatres

AT THE BELLE

"Thanks For the Memory"

Bob Hope, the star whose wit crackles like an exposed high-tension wire, will stir things up again at the Belle Theatre, where Paramount's new romantic comedy, "Thanks For the Memory" featuring Bob along with Charles Butterworth and Otto Kruger will be presented.

This comedy with romance . . . plenty of romance . . . casts Bob in the role of a young husband who is struggling against several problems. He has a job which doesn't pay too well as an electric appliance salesman. In his spare time he is trying to write that Great American Novel which he feels he has in his system, even though friends think it is their prerogative to clutter up his home at all hours. Then his wife, played by lovely Shirley RossJdecides that Bob should give up his job and let by lovely Shirley Ross, decides that purpose being more time for Bob to write.

Bob and Shirley make the most of these humorous and romantic developments, laughing and wisecracking their way through situations loaded with spontaneous wit. Both of them prove that the notices which they have received in the past were more than warranted. And Butterworth, Hedda Hopper, Otto Kruger and Roscoe Karns round out a cast which is beautifully tailored to the picture.

Although "Thanks For the Memory" is fundamentally a comedy, romantic complications ensue. Before Bob and Shirley do it the way they a quadrangle develops in which Bob thinks Shirley is going out with Otto Kruger and she thinks he is interested in a girl down the hall, one Patricia "Honey Chile" Wilder, a gay Dixie belle.

Adding just that touch which the picture needed, Bob Hope and Shirley Ross sing a new number by Hoagy Carmichael and Frank Loesser entitled, "Two Sleepy People". Bob nd Shirley do it the way they did the number "Thanks For the Memory" in "The Big Broadcast of 1938" a season ago.

'Illegal Traffic' Thrilling.

Gangland's most powerful and daring figures are outsmarted by a clever young G-Man in "Illegal Traffic", Paramount's sensational expose of the "getaway" racket, which is the added feature attraction. The fast-moving plot concerns the new racket by which gangsters help the criminals escape from the law at $30,000 a ride" and the government's campaign to clean it up by using gangdom's own technique. J. Carrol Naish, Larry Crabbe and Pierre Watkin play the chief gangster while Robert Preston and Mary Carlisle share the romantic interest. The picture was directed by Louis King, who filmed several "Bulldog Drummond" stories and the recent "Prison Farm".

Fourth Day For "Suez".

"Suez", 20th Century-Fox's spectacular story of Ferdinand de Lesseps and the building of the great canal, which has enjoyed large patronage is now in its fourth and final day at the Belle Theatre. Tyrone Power, Loretta Young and Annabella share starring honors in the film into which Darryl F. Zanuck has poured all his production skill. Allan Dwan directed. The story concerns Ferdinand de Lesseps, the builder of the great canal that today is the jugular vein of the world, and the two loves that drove him to the realization of his dream.

"Suez" is one of the Movie Quiz $250,000 contest pictures.

A very interesting news of the day and an original and funny comicolor cartoon "Glass Slipper" precede the feature attraction.

"Suez" altogether is the last word in screen entertainment, a picture that no one should miss.

AT THE McCARTHY

"The Gladiator"

Joe E. Brown in "The Gladiator" with June Travis, Robert Kent and Man Mountain Dean, the bearded behemoth of ring fame, will be the new feature attraction at the McCarthy Theatre.

Departing from his customary characterizations, the cavern-mouthed comedian, in his newest offering, portrays the role of a scientifically - created superman. Those who read Philip Wylie's novel of the same title will remember the humorous circumstances under which "The Gladiator" was launched on his college misadventures.

Brown, returning to Webster College as a sophomore, is beaten and bludgeoned on the football field in the spirit of good clean fun when he attempts to impress Miss Travis, the belle of the campus. That night the Professor who owns the boarding house where Brown resides selects Brown as the unwitting subject of an experiment to increase the human normal strength manyfold. The experiment works.

From that point on the story of "The Gladiator" is as amazing as it is amusing, picturing Brown as a virtual one-man Olympic team and a co-ed favorite from coast to coast.

In the secondary male lead is Robert Kent, able young actor who is the rival of Brown for June Travis' affections. In a prominent juvenile role is 12-year old Dickie Moore, in a poignant portrayal of a runaway orphan befriended by Brown. In the role of the eccentric professor, who evolves the secret of the superman, is Lucien Littlefield. And portraying his fuss-budget nagging wife, is Ethel Wales.

Man Mountain Dean, the ponderous comic mainstay of the American wrestling ring, and Brown come to grips in the climactic wrestling match, said to be one of the most spectacular and hilarious sequences ever captured by movie cameras.

The Three Stooges in their latest comedy "Three Missing Links," the latest Floyd Gibbon's (your true adventure reporter) release "The Night Intruder," and an exceptional clever musical cartoon entitled "Snow Foolin'," precede the above feature presentation "The Gladiator" at each performance.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c

Frankford

Frankford— Rose Lowery United Church Hall was the scene of a gala event on Friday evening when the girls of the Sunday School were guests of the boys at a sumptuous banquet and a rollicking entertainment afterwards.

This was the penalty the boys paid for being the losers in the copper collecting contest, a novel way of raising money for the missions. Much credit is due to Mrs. George Montgomery for arranging the contest, as well as the night's entertainment.

On entering the Hall everyone received a slip of paper bearing a name and then had to find a partner with the same name. Many were the surprises thereof! Three tables were arranged representing England, Canada and United States. Mr. Walter Morrow, superintendent of the Sunday School acted as toast master and chairman. Short addresses were given by Rev. J. F. Lane, Mrs. Arthur Ford, who has attended the school for over forty years and Mr. Morrow The members of each table were called on to sing a chorus representing the particular country. The music was a little off key. The program included—Piano selection by Jean Morrow; Chorus by Max Dafoe, Kenneth Lane, Wayne Wyatt, Bobby Carlisle and Douglas Mikle; Vocal solo by Douglas Montgomery; Guitar selections by Don Tripp; Recitation by Bobby Patrick. The address of welcome was given by Wayne Wyatt on behalf of the boys, while Mrs. J. M. Dafoe responded on behalf of the girls, thanking the boys for the pleasant evening.

On Tuesday afternoon the ladies' of the W. A. met in Rose Lowery Hall for the purpose of packing a bale of clothing for the west.

A large amount of money was raised by the Trinity Church Men's Club at a shooting match for turkeys, geese, ducks and chickens as prizes hel din the Frankford Arena last Saturday afternoon and evening.

Reeve George N. Spencer attended County Council meetings in Belleville, and also spent a couple of days in Toronto last week.

Mrs. Blake Tripp is recovering nicely from her recent illness.

On Monday evening at the Young People's Union meeting held in Rose Lowery Hall the election of officers was held with the following result:

Hon. President—Rev. J. F. Lane.
President—Charles Andreson.
Vice-President—Ray Mikle.
Secretary—Hubert Foster.
Treasurer—Kenneth Lawrence.
Pianist—Hazel Mikel.
Conveners— Roy Lockwood. L. Mitchell, Preston Chase and Doris Embury.
Representative to Quarterly Board—Damon Conley.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop and ma went to a movie last nite called The Clouds of War, and this morning at breakfist ma said to pop, I hope that's the last picture of that kind you ever insist on seeing. Willyum, I could hardly close my eyes last nite, and when at last I finely succeeded in getting to sleep I would of given a fortune to be awake, because I had the most gassly nitemares. Really Willyum, I mean really, it's mad enough to be obliged to read about all the horrers and violence in the world without having them reproduced before your very eyes in the form of so called entertayment that you're expected to pay admittance to see to all insult to misery, dont you think so, Willyum? she said.

I do indeed, and I had nitemares of my own, pop said. First I dreamed I was on a muddy field caught in the mist of a mass of clawing, kicking, biting men, half in blue uniforms and half in red, fighting a bluddy hand to hand battle and asking no mercy and expecting none, and there was I, an innocent bystander with nothing to gain or lose, bearing the brunt of the unsuppressed fury of both sides, how's that for a nitemare? he said, and ma said, I dont care to hear about it please.

It was awful, pop said. Their eyes blazed like wild beasts and they bit each others ears and gouged each others eyes and shed their thin veneer of civilization like so much cellophane, he said, and ma said, New Willyum, will you stop, I wont listen to another word about war, even out of somebody's dream.

Who's talking about war? pop said. I had a nitemare about a football game. Those confounded football games that they keep flashing on the newsreels are giving me the jitters, he said. By gollies I need an exter cup of strong coffee, he said.

And he quick took it, ma saying it was just an excuse.

HOUDE AGAIN ELECTED AS MONTREAL'S MAYOR

In one of Montreal's most turbulent and bitter elections, which saw 105 persons arrested at the polls, Camillien Houde, veteran politician and bitter foe of Premier Duplessis, was elected Mayor of Montreal with a majority of 20,612 votes over his nearest opponent, Charles A. Gascon. Mayor Houde is pictured here on the steps of Montreal's city hall shortly after the election results were announced. Mrs. Houde can be seen (left), and one of the mayor's three daughters, Madeleine, is shown (right).

The Boomerang Cure

By MARIE SAMPSON

Nero was a lamb in the pasture compared to George. Nero only tortured the body. George tried 'Phelia's soul. Oh, but he was a mean, despicable, "low down," tyrannous, kitchen bully.

Kitchen bully? Exactly.

Imagine a man who, once a week, regularly, showed his wife how to cook coffee—who scanned the household hints as avidly as woman running a boarding house, who officiated at the preparation of the Sunday dinner, and who did all this with the bland assurance that he was assisting his hard working partner.

The whole difficulty in effecting a cure was that he was so pleasant about it, and actually thought that 'Phelia was benefiting immeasurably by his aid.

Things couldn't go on like this forever, so 'Phelia did what a million of her predecessors have done in trouble, and what the tearful young wives of the generations to come will do—she wrote to her mother and explained everything. That was a week ago.

'Phelia poured George his steaming cup of morning coffee. George pulled his eyes away from the knockdown in the fifth round long enough to doctor it with cream and sugar to suit his very particular taste. He brought it slowly and carefully to his lips, tasted it critically, looked out of the window, set the cup down and delivered the verdict

"Coffee isn't quite up to scratch this morning, dear. I'll bet you forgot the egg again, didn't you?"

'Phelia turned away half smiling. There was a sudden movement in the kitchen, and George turned around to see 'Phelia's mother standing in the doorway.

"Why, good morning," he finally said, "I didn't think you'd be up and around this early." His mother-in-law frowned, and pointed at the coffee.

"George, what's the matter with the coffee? I've been making coffee for 40 years, for my father, my grandfather, my husband and my sons, and this is the first time that my coffee has ever been criticised."

She went over and carefully sipped the coffee.

"I can't understand it. It's just as good as it always is. Is your coffee all right, 'Phelia?"

'Phelia nodded. "Fine, Mother." George just then discovered that the Battling Barbarian had regained his feet and had rushed his opponent to the hopes.

George was rather mild and meek at the supper table, under the watchful eyes of his mother-in-law.

On Saturday he invaded the kitchen again. 'Phelia's mother looked coldly up from a lump of pie dough she was kneading. 'Phelia was engrossed with a pile of apples. 'Phelia's mother was painfully blunt.

"Sorry, George, we're terribly busy, and can't be bothered with a man poking around where he shouldn't be. The magazine has just come. Why don't you read that until we get lunch?"

Sunday breakfast ran off as smoothly as a soft wind on a June day. Biscuits were a golden brown. The coffee was a heavenly brew. The griddle cakes would have tempted Diana from the chase. And so George said.

'Phelia went out with her mother at 10. Her mother delivered the farewell address.

"'Phelia's been telling me how you delight to mess around the kitchen getting Sunday dinner. 'Phelia's promised to show me the new park, so go to it. We'll be back in plenty of time for the feast."

George, having no other course, manfully went to it.

'Phelia and her mother were evidently hungry after the walk, so with very little talk they sat down to the feast that George had labored hours to prepare.

"George," 'Phelia's mother fixed George with an accusing look after she had tasted the roast—"what on earth have you done with this roast? It's got no more taste than a pillow slip. And the potatoes—I thought 'Phelia said you were a cook.

"It's lucky that these cranberries are red or I'd think they were apricots that you had tried to broil." She tasted lightly of the rest of George's handiwork then got up.

"As a cook, George, you're a fine mortar mixer," she said scathingly.

'Phelia pushed away her mother. "Mother, what do you say if we go out to eat? I'm hungry."

George was obdurate, and so they left him cheerfully. He walked through into the dining room. No one there. But at the front door someone was just going out. He heard Ophelia's mother talking.

"Well, 'Phelia, he's been treated pretty badly, but I think you'll find that he's just about through with poking in the kitchen, and he'll appreciate what's cooked for him. That should have been his own mother's job—but—no matter, if he needs another dose of his own medicine just call on me. Good-by, dear, don't forget to come home over the holiday."

Reasons of France's Failure to Go To Aid of Czechoslovakia Revealed

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

Associated Press Foreign Affairs Writer

Paris, Dec. 14—(AP)—This is the French side of the story of the hotly debated French position in the events which had their denouement in the four power conference of Munich.

It gives a new complexion to France's failure to go to the aid of Czecho-slovakia in the face of Nazi threat to resort to force.

Many people have given thanks to France and Great Britain crediting these powerful democracies with having prevented another European war. At the same time, however, there have been widespread expressions of disapproval, it being charged the Anglo-French allies have preserved peace at the cost of tossing Czecho-slovakia to the wolves, and even at that gaining only a temporary respite from a showdown with the totalitarian powers.

I was present at the Munich conference, and those of Berchtesgaden and Godesberg as well. The explanation of the democracies—that they were impelled to maintain peace —lacked something which observers couldn't quite put their fingers on. It was unsatisfactory in that it didn't seem the whole truth.

Later I toured eastern Europe and the Balkans and was startled at the heat of the criticism—of France, and to a lesser degree of Great Britain. France was charged with having in effect broken her bond to protect Czecho-slovakia. Some asserted France was afraid of Germany.

Decidedly that didn't sound like France to me. Something was missing to make the picture complete.

So since my arrival in Paris I have persistently pursued that phantom clue until I had a very definite impression of the French viewpoint. This is not official, but my sources are in a position to know whereof they speak. Here is the explanation as the Frenchman looks at it:

French Were Prepared to Fight

The French at the outset were prepared to fight over the Czecho-slovak issue, not only because the two countries were allies, but because Paris felt it was time the democracies made a stand. That is, France was ready to fight if she got the support of her friends. So she started inquiries, with this result:

The only military assistance Great Britain would be able to give for a long time, according to my sources, would be about two divisions of troops—say 30,000 men—and maybe 250 fighting airplanes. This was apart from naval aid, of course.

That meant France would have to smash the powerful defences of the German western front with her own two fists.

Russia Was Impotent

Russia couldn't do more than send warplanes to Czecho-slovakia, because the Soviet Union is separated from Czecho-slovakia by Polish and Rumanian territory.

Rumania could offer no military aid. In other words, the little entente—Czecho-slovakia, Rumania and Yugoslavia—which France has fostered as a bulwark against possible German aggression, blew up in her hands.

But there still was Poland, with one of Europe's crack armies. However, Poland not only declined to oppose Germany, but the French got the distinct impression that their former close friend might even give support to the Reich in the event of hostilities. That was a shock.

The United States is said to have been sounded out. I understand the answer was that the United States would be unable to furnish any military assistance and couldn't even promise to provide supplies.

Thus all in all France felt itself in the position of making the gallant gesture of going largely alone —at least at the outset—to wage battle in defence, not of French territory, but of foreign soil. Paris declined to go that far. And that is the French version of l'affaire de Munich.

MUST PONDER ON DEMOCRACY

Principal Wallace Says People Must Know Facts

Montreal, Dec. 14 (CP)—If people in Democratic countries wish to save themselves they must learn the facts about themselves and their governments, form sound judgments on the facts and have the courage to express them, Dr. R. C. Wallace, principal and vice-chancellor of Queen's University, Kingston, Ont., said yesterday in an address before a service club.

"We are under fire in the democratic countries," he said. "We know we are not particularly safe and we know we must do something to secure and maintain our position for the future.

"We must give time to thinking about the situation, and realize something of the attitude of people different from ourselves, their aspirations, their desires and national hopes which sometimes are not ours. But we must try to know and understand them.

Must Know Opposing View.

"It is necessary to know the point of view of people who are diametrically opposed to us, and that is one of the most difficult things in democracy—to allow to others the right to hold and express opinions with which we disagree."

Dr. Wallace said he always had a "sneaking admiration" for anyone who arose to express his own views in the midst of great masses of people who thought differently.

"Before we can judge sanely we must have sympathy to listen to the other man without becoming angry with him because of particular points of view," he said. "We must learn to separate a man's point of view from himself, and some of us never learn this. We must learn to separate emotional feelings from deliberation of the problems under consideration—we must try and keep our reason from being driven by our emotions.

Question of Judgment.

"The most difficult thing in education is to train young men and young women to have judgment—it is much easier to give them knowledge."

Big advantage of other types of government than the democratic, Dr. Wallace felt, was their ability to move speedily when quick decisions were required.

Residents in the democracies often gave too little thought to the safeguards needed for good government, confining their attention to the way other people were not governing soundly according to Democratic ideals.

Unity In Essentials.

"We must generally in the democratic system believe in the great dictum that while in the non-essentials there may be diversity, in the essentials there must be unity and in all things there must be charity," he said.

"Our power in the international world can only come in the sense that we, as a nation, speak as a disciplined unit in those deeper, greater things about which there must be essential unity."

sentence for fraud charges, linked by police to the racket, at St. Joseph de Beauce in Quebec. During the past two months seven other men have been arrested at Montreal, two others at St. Jerome, north of Montreal, and another four at New Liskeard, Ont., and Haileybury, Ont.

Montrealers Held.

George Gagnon, W. Arsenault and F. Stapel of Montreal were remanded until Dec. 20 on fraud and theft charges when they appeared in court here yesterday. Three other Montrealers, Paul Bourdon, Alfred Lariviere and Joseph Coutu, are awaiting sentence at St. Joseph de Beauce on a charge of fraud arising from operation of a picture racket in that rural French-Canadian area.

The trio held at St. Joseph de Beauce was arrested by Quebec Provincial Police investigating operations of a group of ten alleged to have sold picture frames under false pretences. Police said the group had told buyers pictures they framed were to be entered in contests by companies the group claimed to represent.

Police Statement.

Police here said the men they had arrested posed as agents for an art contest sponsored by a Montreal organization and collected fraudulently amounts of $5 to $3,300.

Acording to complaints the men collected pictures, charging a small entry fee and telling contributors they were eligible for a $500 prize. On return visits, the complainants said, they were told their pictures had a good chance of winning the contest if they had suitable frames. The subscribers then bought frames and in some cases more visits were made by the accused who allegedly collected further assessments for retouching.

SPARE PARTS FOUND FOR HUMAN BREAKS

Medical Science Continues Headway in Replacing Injured Areas

Rabbit Cornea Used

Transference to Man's Eye is Hailed by Writer as Daring Experiment

New York, Dec. 14.—The business of supplying spart parts to human beings began to pick up when a Hagerstown, Md., surgeon, transferred a rabbit's cornea to the eye of a man. This experiment was a daring try—with all the odds against it. But it could not harm the man, and if successful it would be a true miracle, which science might learn to duplicate, according to Howard W. Blakeslee, Associated Press science editor.

In numerous ways medical science is edging in on the barrier that so far has made spare parts only a dim hope. That boundary is the individuality of a human being. He is always just enough different from even his brother so that his tissues won't accept a new part.

There is one great exception, blood transfusion. Strictly speaking, this is spare parts—millions of red corpuscles, white ones and other tiny cells are used as spares.

When the parts get small enough they apparently are better able to survive transplantation. Even with blood, the individual "specificity" is important—the right blood type must be used.

Small Parts Graft Best

The blinded eye furnishes another example of possible success in spare parts, if small enough. Transplanting of corneas (the clear covering over the pupil) from one human to another has been going on for half a century.

Medical records say the operations have restored sight only temporarily. The spare cornea always died and became opaque.

But something smaller—just a little bit of a human cornea, set as a "window" in a blinded eye—works better. This eye operation is so new its lasting results are not yet established. But its hopes for success are built on the probability that the foreign part, being small, will be incorporated.

Plastic surgery, which borrows skin from one person to cover another's hurt, is another exception to the rule; but at present that is limited to skin-deep effects.

Borrowed Glands Grow

A reason for the innate aversion of the body to a new part appears in man's biological evolution, in which every cell of his body has had to fight off all kinds of foreign substances for protection against disease.

Men and women can have borrowed glands with some success. This seems limited to the ductless glands which discharge their secretions directly into the blood. Such new parts may live any place. A thyroid, for example, may flourish in a hip for a fairly good length of time.

Even in these cases the body attempts to absorb and so rid itself of the new part.

The Mayo Clinic takes slices of a man's shinbone and transplants them to a weakened backbone. These new parts are laid alongside the vertebrae like bridge timbers. They grow and merge with the vertebrae to form a complete repair job. But there new bones are limited at present to very special kinds of backbone weakness.

In one realm, embryology, science has made brilliant advances with new parts. A leg, eye, arm, tail, skin and other organs can be borrowed from another embryo of the same species and grafted most anywhere with probabilities of permanence.

But this is useless for man, except as a proving ground for new facts, whose possible uses are utterly unknown.

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Science Service Meteorologist

Snow cover! If one bivouacs of a night and some snow falls, one would be warmer rather than colder. The snow would act as an additional blanket. That is why a snow cover is beneficial to fall-sown grain. If the surface temperature of snow were five degrees, then eight inches below it would be about 17 degrees, and 20 inches below the surface, the temperature would be 29 degrees. At many places where snowfall is abundant, say three feet or more on the level, the ground may remain unfrozen all winter long. Many species of plants continue to grow under the snow and some actually bloom.

Ottawa, Dec., 15—(CP)—Opposition to unification of Canada's railway systems was repeated to the Dominion Government by spokesmen for the Railway Transportation Brotherhoods here today. A deputation met Prime Minister Mackenzie King and the Cabinet and presented a brief outlining the position of the railway workers.

The memorandum covered a variety of questions involving railway Labor. The stand taken by the railwaymen before the Senate Committee last parliamentary session was re-affirmed. It was disclosed that next month the workers representatives will confer with the managements of the railways "to give consideration to the so-called Railway problem." Recommendations arising out of this meeting will be placed before the Government.

SOVIET RUSSIA INCREASES NAVY

Country Attempting to Become Dominating Naval Power in Baltic

Berlin, Dec. 15—(AP)— Weyer's naval handbook for 1939 stated today Russia is making an earnest attempt to become the dominating naval power in the Baltic.

The handbook, for many years a standard German publication, credits the Soviet Union with building three battleships of 35,000 to 40,000 tons armed with 16-inch guns. There would equal or surpass in size any battleship now in service in the world.

The Soviet naval building program, it was stated, further includes three airplane carriers, six heavy cruisers and numerous destroyers and submarines.

(Russia has carefully guarded information as to her naval, military and air strength, but Naval Commissioner Peter Smirnoff said last February that Russia would build not only the best but the biggest navy in the world. Reports at that time mentioned the possibility of 35,000-ton craft).

Commenting on general naval armament, the handbook said the 30 biggest battleships now under construction throughout the world were as follows: Great Britain, seven; the United States, probably four; Italy, four; France, four; Germany, three; and Russia, three. It said large-scale building of airplane carriers also was underway, with 15 under construction.

MEMEL, TROUBLE SPOT ON BALTIC, AGAIN IN NEWS

View of Memel and its location

Memel, object of German ambitions to expand along the Baltic, once again takes the news spotlight following the smashing pro-Nazi victory in the Diet election in Memel territory. Kaunas, capital of Lithuania, and Kaunas province were put under a state of emergency. What lies in store for Memel territory, taken from Germany after the world war and handed to Lithuania, is uncertain.

MANION AGAINST IMMIGRATION AT PRESENT TIME

Should Not be Allowed as Long as Unemployment Continues Claimed

TALKS ON TREATY

By FRANK FLAHERTY

Quebec, Dec. 15 (CP)—While unemployment continues Canada should admit no immigrants from Europe in the opinion of Conservative leader R. J. Manion who is on his way to Toronto today after delivering two speeches here.

They constituted his first public appearance in the Province of Quebec since his election as leader of his party and his first appearance anywhere since his election to the House of Commons as member for London.

In 1934 as head of the Canadian delegation to the League of Nations Assembly, Dr. Manion said, he had opposed the admission to Canada of refugees from Germany and he took the same stand now. So long as hundreds of thousands of Canadians were unable to obtain work and were forced to accept relief, people from other countries should not be ad-

A recent speaking pose of Dr. Ernst Neumann, who is styled as the "fuehrer" of the Memel Nazis. Dr. Neumann and his legions scored an overwhelming victory at the polls during the recent Memel elections to the Diet. As a result Neumann issued a statement demanding complete autonomy for the tiny territory which was given to Lithunania in 1924. It is now believed likely that Germany will demand cession of Memel to itself.

ARMS BUDGET FOR FRANCE GREATEST SINCE THE WAR

Daladier Says Country Ready to Fight for Her Empire

65 P. C. OF INCOME

By Charles Foltz

Associated Press Foreign Staff

Paris, Dec. 15.— (AP)— Premier Edouard Daladier's National Defence Cabinet, warning Italy and Germany that France would fight to protect her empire, presented to parliament today the greatest arms budget since the Great War.

Debate on the budget was expected to provide Daladier's opposition with a new opportunity to attack his policies and to open the way for a new test of his strength in parliament.

A total of nearly 40,000,000,000 francs (about $20,000,000) for the country's armed forces was distributed in various parts of the ordinary and extraordinary budgets.

Finance Minister Paul Reynaud said this sum represented 65 per cent of the estimated income for

Inquest Inquiring Into Woman's Death Further Postponed

SOME EVIDENCE TAKEN

Inability of John F. MacDonald, Toronto, injured in an automobile accident four miles west of Belleville on Dec. 9th in which his wife Mrs. Mary MacDonald received fatal injuries, to appear, forced a further postponement until Dec. 19th of the probe of a coroner's jury inquiring into the circumstances surrounding the accident.

The adjourned inquest held last night under Chief Coroner Dr. J. J. Robertson, with Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan conducting, arose from the accident in which a car said to have been driven by MacDonald, crashed into a truck owned by N. Haggerty of Wooler, parked near the William May Service Station, four miles west of the city on the Trenton-Belleville highway. Mrs. MacDonald, fatally injured in the accident, died in Belleville General Hospital a few minutes after admission.

CHAMBERLAIN HAS FAITH IN EMPIRE

It Will Cling Together Despite Crisis and Adversity

By J. F. Sanderson

London, Dec. 15.—(CP Cable)—The British Government has complete faith in the ability of the Empire to cling together despite crisis and adversity, Prime Minister Chamberlain told the House of Commons today.

The Prime Minister was questioned by Arthur Henderson, Labor, about Dominions' Secretary Malcom MacDonald's speech to the Constitutional Club Tuesday on the future of the Empire.

Mr. Chamberlain said the speech reflected the Dominions' Secretary's faith in the survival of the Empire and "His Majesty's Government certainly fully share that faith."

MacDonald's Speech

Mr. Henderson suggested the duties of the Dominions' Secretary should be confined to practical administrative problems and should not include discussion of highly hypothetical questions. The Prime Minister replied Mr. MacDonald's was a "very brilliant, statesman-like speech". His statement was greeted by applause from the Conservative benches.

The incident closed in a burst of Opposition laughter when Geoffrey Mander, Liberal, said many people were convinced the empire could not possibly survive the present government.

Mr. MacDonald, in the course of his speech at the Constitutional Club, said that "even in our life-time" the empire "might crumble

FINANCIAL POWER OF GREAT BRITAIN IS CURB ON WAR

Chamberlain Makes Outstanding Reference to German Statesmen

DECIDING FACTOR

Observers Quick to Notice Differentiation Made by Premier

London, Dec. 15.—(AP) — Prime Minister Chamberlain, in an outspoken reference to Germany, told a luncheon audience today that Great Britain's financial power was a curb on German statesmen when they thought of war.

The Prime Minister said:

"We may take it that when German statesmen—I will not say the German people—reflect on the possible consequences of a conflict, if ever a conflict should arise between our two countries, they think not only of our armaments but of our great financial resources, which in a war of long duration might well prove to be a deciding factor."

JEWS PAY FIRST FINE INSTALMENT

Affair Entirely Lacking in Drama and Quickly Done

Berlin, Dec. 15—(AP)—The first of four instalment days on which German Jews must pay $400,000,000 tribute for the slaying of Enrst von Rath, Paris Embassy Secretary, was a drab, matter-of-fact affair entirely lacking in drama.

Berlin banks had comparatively little to do with today's $100,000,000 as the Jews had taken pains to arrange all details so the payments would strike no snags. There were no special guards at any of the Finance Ministry's offices where the fines were payable, nor were there any signs of disturbance.

Jews and Gentiles paying fines, taxes or other bills approached tellers' windows with no attempts being made by officials to separate the Jews from the Gentiles. Any casual visitor would not have known this was a special tribute day for the Jews. Among the taxpayers were no more Jews than on an ordinary day.

The reason for this was said to be that each Jew had received a written order indicating what his share of the Von Rath fine was, and, as soon as he had raised the necessary cash, had sent his money to the Finance Ministry without waiting for the last day.

Three Men, Two Women Jump to Ground Unhurt As Double House Burns

Mrs. G. Bredin Believed Returning for Valuables is Victim

FLAMES SPREAD FAST

Woman Not Missed in Smoke, Confusion and Roar of Blaze

Tottenham, Ont., Dec. 15.—CP)—Trapped in a quick-spreading, two-house blaze at Tottenham, one woman was burned to death today. Tottenham is 35 miles northwest of Toronto.

Three men and two women jumped to safety from second storey windows. They landed on frozen ground, barely covered by a light scattering of snow, but were not injured. The cause of the fire was unknown.

Mrs. Garnett Bredin, about forty, was on her way to safety when, it is believed, she returned to her room to save some valuables. In the smoke and confusion and the roar of the fast-mounting flames her absence was not noticed. Her charred body was recovered later.

Other Occupants Escape

Her husband escaped. So did W. Fry, principal of the Tottenham public school and a boarder at the Bredin home.

In the adjoining section of the double house, occupied by the Hammond family, W. Hammond was already at work when the fire broke out. His wife and daughter Evelyn, 22, however, jumped from a window along with a cousin, Gilbert.

The Tottenham fire brigade saw there was no hope of saving the building and concentrated on keeping the flames from spreading.

No Conspiracy Between Himself and Hepburn Statement Given

INCIDENT CLOSED

Quebec, Dec. 15 (CP)—Premier Maurice Duplessis of Quebec said last night it is "untrue' and "ridiculous" that he and Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario are conspiring to have Prime Minister Mackenzie King ousted as leader of the Liberal Party.

The Union Nationale Premier, in an interview, said:

"It is untrue that there is a conspiracy between Hon. Mitchell Hepburn, Premier of Ontario, and myself in connection with the leadership or replacement of Prime Minister Mackenzie King as Federal Liberal leader, and this talk is ridiculous on its very face."

Charge Made Saturday.

(Labor Minister Rogers and Transport Minister Howe charged Saturday night at Port Arthur, Ont., that in recent weeks the two premiers had conspired in an attempt to force Mr. King's resignation. Ad-

ONTARIO HYDRO SEEN AS PIONEER

Leland Olds Lauds Yard-Stick Power Rates of T. V. A.

Washington, Dec. 15—(AP)— A United States Public power official told the Tennessee Valley authority investigating committee today that the Ontario Hydro-Electric system had pioneered the field of "yardstick" power rates since 1913.

Leland Olds, Executive Secretary of the New York State Power Authority lauded the yardstick rates adopted by the power projects in the huge Tennessee Valley undertaking. He said such rates showed the "economic soundness of much lower retail rates than those which prevailed under regulated private monopoly and the effectiveness of such rates bringing about a vast increase in the residential use of electricity."

Olds appeared as an expert witness for the T.V.A., a vast government-sponsored power and flood control project. He was one of several authorities who surveyed the agency's rates when they first were announced as a power yardstick.

He said that governments have a definite obligation to provide the public with low-cost electricity and used this argument as a basis for lauding T.V.A.'s "yardstick" and criticizing what he termed a $2,700,000,000 "inflation" in capital of 22 of the country's largest utility companies.

JUDGE DISMISSES APPEAL AGAINST COURT DECISION

John Vance, Bancroft, Found Not Guilty of Reckless Driving

ONE CHARGE DROPPED

An appeal against a sentence handed down in the magistrate's court was today dismissed in County Court, held in Belleville before His Honor Judge Madden. The appeal was made by the Crown against a conviction and fine against John Vance, Bancroft, who was convicted and fined $10.00 and costs in the county police court on a charge of reckless driving, arising out of an accident north of Madoc on Oct. 25th last in which Carman Vandervoort sustained fatal injuries.

Through County Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K. C., the appeal against the fine was registered. Vance pleaded guilty to a charge of reckless driving and was fined $10.00 and costs by Magistrate J. L. Lloyd at Madoc, a charge of criminal negligence having also been preferred, but not proceeded with at that time.

Today several witnesses were heard before His Honor Judge Madden before the court dismissed the appeal and found the accused not guilty of reckless driving. "I feel the accused did everything humanly possible under the circumstances. There was a sharp curve in the road and this was not clearly marked by highway signs, which is substantiated by the fact two highway signs have been erected at the point where

Martin Snyder to Tell His Version Of Shooting Torch Singer's Friend

Los Angeles, Dec. 15.—(AP)—Martin Snyder, gambling his freedom against prison terms which may total 115 years, gets a chance today to tell his version of the shooting of Myrl Alderman, husky young pianist who replaced him as the husband of Torch Singer Ruth Etting.

Snyder, a dapper and familiar figure along Broadway, sat solemnly in court while the sob songstress, object of his "deathless love" but now the bride of the man he is charged with trying to murder, accused him of wounding Alderman as the musician sat on a piano bench in his Hollywood Hills home last October 15.

His mood deepened and he turned his head as his own daughter, Edith Snyder, 21, pictured him as a cursing intruder who threatened to kill not only Alderman, but Miss Etting and herself.

Today, the prosecution's case was complete, topped off by the air elopement to Las Vegas, Nev., yesterday of Alderman, 30, and Miss Etting, seven years his senior.

May Be Self-Defense

Cross-examination of prosecution witnesses pointed toward a plea of self-defense for Snyder by his attorney Jerry Giesler. But Miss Etting, Miss Snyder and Alderman himself have denied the musician was armed, although the Blues Singer admitted she kept a revolver in the bedroom of Alderman's home because of threats which Snyder telephoned to her from New York.

Minor witnesses closed the State's attempt to convict Snyder of kidnapping, attempted murder and possessing a gun with the numbers filed off.

Alderman and his bride of a few hours sat apart in the last row of the spectators' section during the afternoon session and heard Mrs. Fred Clampett, wife of an automobile dealer, testify that Snyder once told her—

"Well, Ruth is married all right. If it's that piano player, I'm going to put a bullet through his head."

Young Pretender to Russian Throne May Visit Chancellor Adolf Hitler

London, Dec. 15 (AP)— Grand Duke Vladimir, 21-year-old pretender to the Russian Throne, today left for Paris on his way to Berlin where he plans to spend Christmas with his sister, Grand Duchess Kira, and possibly see Chancellor Hitler.

The Grand Duke's London friends declined to take seriously published reports he might have a place in Hitler's Ukrainian ambitions. A spokesman for him said he "might or might not make a courtesy call on Hitler during the four days he expects to stay in the home of Prince Louis Ferdinand, husband of the Grand Duchess.

He stressed, however, the visit had no political flavor. He said: "This young man does not know anything about political intrigue."

Commenting on the Ukrainian reports, one of the Grand Duke's friends said: "That is all very well but what would Mr. Stalin say? I can tell you that Ukraine is not going to be as easy as Austria or Czecho-Slovakia."

These friends said Grand Duke Vladimir expects to return to London to live and resume his studies. Plans are under consideration for him to enter Oxford or Cambridge.

Prague, Dec. 15 (CP-Havas) — Russia has warned Czecho-Slovakia to refrain from supporting German-sponsored plans for a "greater Ukraine," it was learned today.

During two meetings with Foreign Minister Frantisek Chvalkovsky, Soviet Minister Serge Alexandrovsky said recent support of the German plan by Czecho-Slovak newspapers might endanger the friendly ties existing between Moscow and Prague.

Poland and Russia long have accused Germany of sponsoring the "greater Ukraine" movement as a step in the "drang nach osten" (drive to the east). Germany is said to covet the rich grain fields of the Ukraine, divided among the Soviet Union, Rumania, Poland and Czecho-Slovakia.

POETRY CONTEST CLOSING DATE EXTENDED TO DEC. 31

The closing date for the poetry competition sponsored by the Assiniboine Entertainment Chapter, I.O.D.E., Winnipeg has been extended to December 31st, 1938. This is being done to give those who have delayed in sending in their entries an opportunity to do so. Any information regarding rules etc., may be had from the Educational Secretary, 515 Greenwood Place.

ROAD CONDITIONS ARE FAIRLY GOOD

Roads are fairly good through the Province in spite of yesterday's snowfall in some sections, and all main highways are reported clear by the Ontario Motor League in its daily letter to the local office. Snowfall reported at present: Parry Sound—one inch; Cornwall—one inch, roads good; Bracebridge—three inches, roads good; Listowel—two inches, drifted; Barrie—one inch.

MEN GIVEN WORK

Forty men taken from relief rolls of the city, and about six paid employees are being given work this week by the city department of public works, preparing residential streets for winter, and on the civic beach. No particular work program has been planned for the city's unemployed this winter, though hope is strong that some start may be made on the Moira River Flood Control project this coming season if sufficient aid is given the city by the Dominion and Provincial Governments on the matter.

CHEESE FACTORY SOLD

According to an item in the Brockville Recorder-Times, Geo. Martin of Hallville, Brockville district, has disposed of his cheese factory to Allan Vosbourg of Northumberland County. The Hallville factory is known as one of the best equipped in the Brockville section. Mr. Vosbourg will take possession on Monday of next week.

NEW SIXTEEN-CAR FERRY ORDERED FOR GLENORA CROSSING

A new steel-hulled sixteen-car capacity ferry boat will operate next year across that part of the Bay of Quinte between Glenora and Adolphustown, according to announcement made yesterday.

The new ferry will be powered by a Diesel engine costing $8,100. located in the centre of the steel hull below decks.

Being built in Collingwood, the boat will be double-ended permitting loading and unloading at both ends of the vessel. New docks will be constructed at both the Glenora and Adolphustown shores of the bay to accomodate the ferry.

The present ferry-boat is still in operation due to the mildness of the weather, and is handling approximately one hundred cars daily.

MEMBERS' PARTY HELD AT "Y"

Members of senior, intermediate and business girls' Department of the Y.M.C.A. gathered for a social evening on the "Gym" floor and in the auditorium last evening.

During the evening of music, games, etc., two little pupils of Mary Forster presented interesting solo numbers, Madeline Walden in an acrobatic number "Jack in the Box" and also in song and tap dance, Mary Lou Pigden in a toe tap dance.

Miss Grace Leeman and orchestra assisted in the entertainment. Refreshments were served in the large auditorium followed by community singing. During the Christmas holiday season a party will be held for the younger groups and also a new members reception party.

Nail in Boy's Lung Defies Removal

An inch-long shingle nail, resting in the lung of thirteen-year-old Gerald Hunt, Bloomfield has so far defied three efforts of surgeons to remove it, in Kingston General Hospital. Young Hunt was playing with a pea-shooter, and inhaled too deeply after placing the toy to his mouth, with the result that he drew the nail into his lung.

Brought to the hospital on Nov. 13 a few hours after the accident the youth is being kept in semi-isolation with the hope the nail will be removed almost any day. It is stated the child must be kept quiet if the nail is to be removed from its present position in the lung.

It is understood the nail is just out of reach of the bronchoscope, an instrument used for the removal of metallic objects from the lungs. A similar case was treated in Philadelphia some time ago. The patient was brought, in this case, from Australia.

X-Ray is being used to watch the progress of the nail, which so far has not reached a point where it can be reached, although as before stated, three attempts have been made.

Pioneer Days Recalled

The death of Mr. G. A. Welbourn of Peterborough, on Sunday last, brings memories flooding back to the minds of several citizens of Sidney Township, one of them W. H. Merrill who lived on the Fifth Concession of Sidney not two miles from the farm of Mr. Welbourn's father. Mr. Merrill recalls that G. A. Welbourn's father came to Canada from Scotland seventy-five years ago and that he brought with him a great, high plough that was unusual in this part of the country. A great ploughman, he took a keen interest in teaching the youngsters of his section of Sidney Township how to plow properly, and the district later turned out some extremely proficient men. It was through that interest that Mr. Welbourn was later instrumental to a large extent in having ploughing matches started all over the Province, Mr. Merrill said.

Collegiate News

Miss Merry gave a delightful party in the Green Room on Friday afternoon, in honour of Loretta Stark who is leaving for Owen Sound. Games were played, and a delicious lunch was served. At the close, Mr. Jury, on behalf of her friends, presented Loretta with a small gift, wishing her a happy and successful future. Loretta in her usual "life of the party" manner gave a very fitting reply.

The report on attendance for November was as follows: X E was highest with 99.72 per cent; X A followed with 99.5 per cent. In third place was IX C with 99.5 per cent. Sixteen classes dropped in their average attendance, and twelve classes raised their percentage.

This afternoon the school held a Christmas tea dance. The teachers attended as well as the pupils, and on this gala occasion teachers forgot their dignity, (?) and pupils their labours; and one and all had a good time.

Everyone was given a present which he had to wear out before going home.

The motto of the dance was "Cut Loose" and "Whoop it up". All in all, it was the jolliest party that the school had ever indulged in for some time.

SALVATION ARMY

SANTA CLAUS gladdened the hearts of many at the annual Station Street Salvation Army Christmas entertainment last evening when the jovial old St. Nick arrived in a most unique manner. During the distribution of favours a barrel of apples was opened on the stage, from which Santa arose to cause no end of hilarious enjoyment by the children.

Prior to the presentation of prizes and distribution of candy and apples a splendid program was presented to a capacity-filled hall, all items being of the Christmas nature. Dialogues, readings, carols and a short Christmas skit were included on the night's entertainment. Major Alderman capably filled the office of chairman and conducted the prayers of the evening.

Annually the Salvation Army Station Street post citadel Christmas entertainment is gaining in favour, until last evening saw the largest crowd in the history of the hall. The program included carols by the junior scholars, the Army Songsters and exercises by the primary class. Other items included — recitation Joan Rion; duet, Doreen and Beatrice Wright; Reading — Beatrice Wright; recitation, Adeline Wright, tableau—seven senior girls as well as club swinging by the junior members. Major Alderman personally congratulated the Station Street branch of the Salvation Army upon their splendid performance and high type of entertainment. Then Santa Claus arrived and joy reigned supreme in the hearts of the little ones.

Palestinian Policy Discussed by Speaker

"The Jewish People are ill-advised in making demands on Great Britain for entrance to Palestine." Such was the statement made at the "Y" by Lloyd Van Gorder of Toronto, last evening. The Jewish people ought to investigate more closely the claims made by certain Jewish Extremist bodies to that land.

No Anti-Semitism

That statement was not the least bit anti-Semitic, it was an appeal for study in order to settle the Jewish Question in the only possible manner. The speaker called on Jewry to recognize in the Celto-Saxon Peoples the true lineal descendants of the so-called 'Lost' Ten Tribes of Israel. The problem of Palestine could not be settled until that fact was recognized by all who sought to deal with this question. The racial affinity between the true Judah element in Jewry and Celto-Saxondom is the foremost reason for the pro-Jewish attitude of the English-speaking world. Palestine has yet evil days ahead and in their own interest—aside from all other considerations—the Jews, ought to settle in other parts of Celto-Saxon Territory. God intends Israel (Celto-Saxondom) and Judah to occupy representatively, in the future, the land of Palestine but that time is not yet. The Divine plan cannot be harmonized with the aims and objects of extreme Zionism.

Mr. Van Gorder will address another meeting in the Y.M.C.A. this evening on the subject of "Whither Germany."

Envisaged Shorter Collegiate-Course

Back in the year 1931, present Mayor Jamieson Bone, then director of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce led members of that organization in a fight to have the Ontario Department of Education adopt a shorter curriculum for school children of the Province.

"We've got to do something to reduce the cost of education for the property owner taxpayers of Ontario," he urged repeatedly. The present Mayor foresaw a general high school course from which pupils could be graduated without the necessity of spending further years in classes at the taxpayers' expense.

This week during an address to members of the service club at Elmira, Ont., Dr. L. J. Simpson, Ontario Minister of Education declared that a two-year general high school course for pupils not going on to university or college is planned by the department. A graduation certificate will be issued these pupils, it was further stated by the Minister of Education.

Mayor Bone at once wrote, complimenting Dr. Simpson and his department for the inauguration of this new shorter course. "That is what we have been fighting for for years," stated Mayor Bone.

A reply was received from Dr. Simpson today.

"I sincerely hope that our efforts to improve the opportunities for all students to obtain a profitable and enjoyable occupation will receive the assistance and encouragement of employers of the Province," Dr. Simpson wrote.

Too Little Beef On Too Many Legs Biggest Problem

By CARL REINKE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Winnipeg, Dec. 15—(CP)— Too little beef on too many legs has been one big trouble with the Canadian cattle industry, in the judgment of A. M. Shaw, Ottawa, Director of Markets for the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

There has been insufficient grain fed to Canadian cattle to provide "a reasonable level of beef quality of a sufficient regular supply of grain-finished cattle to meet the best demands of the domestic and export trade," Mr. Shaw said in a paper prepared for delivery today before the prairie markets conference.

He informed the conference, studying the lack of markets for western farm produce, that a great deal more grain could be consumed by fewer cattle to the advantage of the industry. An increase in cattle numbers was not altogether desirable and certainly not necessary to a substantial increase in grain consumption, he said.

The conference advanced through three heavy, well-attended sessions yesterday, developing a unanimity which caused L. W. Brockington of Winnipeg to remark: "For the first time the vision of Western Canada is clear and united.".

Commutation of Sentence Asked By Barrister

Brockville, Ont., Dec. 15—(CP)— H. J. F. Stewart, local barrister who defended William Gunning, Kitley Township farmhand sentenced to hang on Jan. 18 for the murder of Miss Irene Mott waited upon Department of Justice officials in Ottawa yesterday seeking commutation of the sentence. Stewart was accompanied by Rev. J. Grant Sparling of St. Peter's Anglican Church. They were assured their application would receive consideration.

Gunning fatally injured Miss Mott, daughter of his employer, and also attacked her invalid mother with a hammer.

Welding-Shop Tank Used for Pneumonia

Newboro, Ont., Dec. 15—(CP)— Oxygen administered directly into the mouth from a welding-shop tank kept the spark of life alive today in 22-year-old Harold Landon, critically ill in hospital here of pneumonia.

Three nurses have remained on duty since Sunday night when oxygen, brought from Don Carmichael's welding shop in Gananoque, 25 miles south of Newboro, first was given. The hospital reported today Landon was "holding his own."

Hope for the young man's recovery had been abandoned when attending doctors sent out a call for oxygen. Landon's condition since has improved but hospital authorities said he still remained in critical condition The nurses, Miss A. B. Landon, Grace Landon and Mrs. Gordon Hamilton, take turns in holding the life-giving tube to the patient's mouth.

BAND TO GIVE CONCERT SUNDAY FOR TOY FUND

Members of the Belleville Municipal Band under the leadership of Lieut. Fred Jobson, will again display that generous spirit towards commendable causes, that has characterized them since the band's inception, on Sunday night, when they will give a special band concert in the City Hall auditorium in aid of the Belleville Fire Department's Toy and Christmas Fund.

So great has been the call for Christmas baskets, and toys for needy children of the city that the funds of the Fire Department are nearly depleted. In an effort to raise sufficient money to take care of present needs, members of the band will co-operate with the Fire Department in aid of the cause.

A splendid program has been arranged by Lieut. Jobson, which will be augmented by outstanding local talent. City officials will be present, and the general public is asked to patronize the concert in order that needy families and children will partake of Christmas cheer that otherwise would be denied them.

Near-Zero Weather Descends on District

With the mercury hovering about the five-above zero mark early this morning, residents of the city awakened to frost-covered windows, fur coats, heavy underwear, and smoking furnaces. In the rural districts, farmers greeted the cold snap with more or less appreciation. Creeks and ponds were ice-covered while north of the city the Moira River basked under a brilliant December sun that threw back white reflections from its ice-covered bosom.

In the downtown sections, exuberant youth with visions of outdoor skating, clothing merchants who busily removed stocks of underwear and heavy overcoats to places of vantage, and coal and wood merchants who grabbed order books from the rear of office drawers wore smiles of appreciation.

A brisk wind that brought with it, promise of further cold weather swept along business thoroughfares, early today as fur-coated secretaries, and other office workers, shop and factory employees huddled deep into heavy clothing as they made their way to work.

The more or less sudden advent of the cold snap was appreciated by the greater majority of Front Street pedestrians, queried on the subject this morning. Consensus of opinion was that it would help fight if not eliminate the epidemic of colds and slight attacks of "flu" that have been prevalent for the past two or three weeks." This mild muggy weather breeds colds and sickness" one wheezing walker stated, while another exhaling clouds of frosty breath, murmured that "this was the life."

Santa Clause Briefs

Easton, Pa., Dec. 15—(AP)—Two women who donned red suits and white whiskers to pinch hit for Santa Clauses at Christmas kettles on downtown streets are putting parents on the spot. A satisfactory explanation isn't always at hand when inquisitive youngsters want to know why Santa's voice sounds so much like Mother's.

New York, Dec. 15—(AP)—Santa Claus has been exiled by Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine. He said charges would be preferred against any policeman who accepted gifts—"even a cigar"— from the public. "Policemen are paid enough so they do not need presents," Valentine added.

Newark, N. J., Dec. 15—(AP)— Newark's street corner Santa Clauses were de-microbized today. The Health Department sent out inspectors to see whether they had complied with orders to sterilize their detachable beards, stop kissing children and wear frequently-washed white gloves while shaking hands with them. Health Officer Charles Craster said he believed the edict would reduce transmission of colds, grippe and other maladies.

Crescent Rebekah Lodge Marks 25th Birthday, at Thomasburg

Thomasburg.—On Monday evening, December 12th, Crescent Rebekah Lodge No. 139 of Thomasburg entertained members from Tweed and Belleville Lodges at their regular meeting and celebrated their twenty-fifth anniversary, having as their honored guests thirteen veteran members who are still active in the lodge.

An address was read by the secretary of the lodge, while Sisters Dudgeon and Porter presented the twenty-five year members with a gift of silver suitably engraved.

Sister Beatrice Morton gave a short address and on behalf of the 25-year members, thanked the lodge in a few well-chosen words for the gifts and the words of appreciation.

The District Deputy President, Sister Chesher of Quintena Lodge, Belleville, was also presented with a gift of silver by the officers and members of the lodge after which she gave a short address, thanking the lodge and giving some profitable advice on lodge work.

After the lodge business which was efficiently carried out under the capable leadership of Noble Grand Sister Alberta Dyer, the guests went to the lower hall where they were seated at twelve tables decorated to represent the twelve months of the year and listened to a delightful program given by the Austin Orchestra, of Wooler.

The Sisters of Crescent Lodge then served a delicious lunch to the guests and after singing the National Anthem departed for their homes feeling that it had been an evening well spent.

The names of the 25-year members were: Sister Phoebe Brown, Sister Jennie Mouck, Sister Maude Coulter, Sister Mary Way, Sister Beatrice Morton, Sister Ella Way, Sister Emma Kennedy, Sister Margaret Geen, Sister Stella Orr, Sister Irene Coulter ,Bro. Fred Coulter, Bro. Will Morton and Bro. Albert Porter. The address was as follows:

To Our Twenty-Five Year Members:

Tonight we have a very pleasant duty to perform, that of doing honor to a number of twenty-five year veterans. After twenty-five years of service to our lodge, it is justly fitting and proper that we should in some measure indicate our appreciation for those years of service.

While some seem fitted for office and capable, serving well wherever placed, others are not for such duties, but excel in their ministrations of mercy and love, knowing how to speak the loving words needed to help comfort the broken-hearted, knowing also when silence is golden and that the sympathetic pressure of the hand and look of love convey the language of the Ideal Rebekahs, and we beleive heart better than spoken words. that you are all of this type, are always improving every opportunity to lighten the burdens of others, remembering all the good possible should be done now for we pass this way but once. The uplifting tendency of such an organization whose members are of the ideal type is of great benefit to every community and the influences that reach out from such lodge rooms are an inspiration to higher and holier living.

Outside the lodgerooms are many people who frequently say we do not do our duty even to one another in hours of affliction. The lesson of letting not the left-hand know what the right-hand doeth is early impressed upon our minds, and we boast not of our good works but quietly strive to do our duty and like Rebekah of old, when we see the need of our ministrations of mercy, hasten to relieve, remembering that,

Who doeth good by loving deed or word,
Who lifteth up the fallen one or dries a tear,
Who helps another bear his heavy cross
Or on the parched and fevered lip doth pour
A blessed draught of water, sweet and cool,
Becomes co-worker with the Lord of all.

We Believe that the Rebekah degree is as much a degree of Oddfellowship as any degree in the subordinate lodge, and to you, Bro. Oddfellows, we say that we are pleased to work side by side with you for the uplifting of humanity, for charity and good works are the corner-stones of both lodges.

Our promise should be sacred and our fidelity unbroken, then will those who are inclined to underestimate our order, realize that it means something to be a member of this great fraternity.

And now we ask our veterans to accept these tokens as a slight appreciation for the services you have rendered to our lodge and to the Order. We trust that they may act as a stimulus to your zeal in the work of the promotion of Friendship, Love and Truth and may you long be spared to meet with us and give us guidance in our works of love and charity.

NEW TECHNIQUE AS A FEELER.

A new technique is making itself prominent. There is the instance at Rome recently where out of a clear sky as far as the public was concerned came the cry for "Tunisia" when Count Ciano was speaking of Italian unsatisfied colonial aspirations. That shout whether it was from individuals or a small group or was inspired could not pass by unnoticed by the world which knew it at once by the modern agencies of communication. The way for "talk" on the issue of Italian and French Mediterranean possessions was paved. This goes to great lengths, it is mentioned even in the British Commons and French Chamber, there are disturbances all through the colonial possessions of France which had been mentioned. Italian newspapers and individuals carry on agitation for the French terminus of the railway into Ethiopia. The world is astir but Italy officially has not moved.

With the world so linked together as today questions are discussed even before they are officially recognized as international issues.

This is a very effective way of bringing subjects into the open. They may be discussed with the peculiar technique and the use of "feelers" as nations watch the reactions even before the question have officially been recognized. The agitation by Italians for instance was carried to great length with predictions of movements of troops. By it matters may be tried in the open court of the world and then dropped or be taken up.

The old diplomacy was a clever business of wit against wit, and the burden of it was borne by trained individuals. The new technique can take in also the immediate reaction of vast numbers of the people, crisis may result, and a snap decision be sought upon that. The field of diplomacy has been widened by the extension to include the psychological effect upon thousands and millions of minds, which may help to bring a question to crisis.

Yet the old diplomacy, however much it concealed from the public, was a matter of finer technique, it required finesse and thoroughness. The new way is a more blantant way and has its dangers too. It is a clever way of feeling the pulse, but it can also be seen as a means of misleading the public or unsettling opinion. Fortunately in the final analysis stand the statesmen who weigh situations. They may observe the new technique, but they examine and put to the acid test whatever of internationnal interest comes to the front. The new technique can overdoo itself. It is a fact that a statesman can see the purpose behind agitations carried on in this way and see that what appears a real threat may be a mere effort to "draw a herring over the trail" or to seize a snap judgment through fear. There is no doubt diplomacy will still play its great part.

REVIVAL OF RULES URGED

A certain revival of rules is necessary to save modern religion from vagueness and weakness, the Rev. Dr. Ralph W. Sockman of New York who is well known to radio audiences, believes. Recently he spoke of Sunday observance.

Referring to the opening of the World's Fair in 1939, Dr. Sockman expressed concern that it might be the signal for the city "keeping carnival on the Lord's Day" and the lessening the dignity and sanctity of the Sabbath Day.

"We of the liberal church have reacted from the rigid regulations of our forefathers," he said. "We have seen that vital religious living is a matter of spirit rather than rule. Nevertheless, our spirits must be steadied and regulated by some set rules. Religion like democracy becomes spineless when it loses its strict disciples.

"We leave our spiritual devotions to the control of our feelings. We pray when we feel like it. We go to church when we feel like it. The result of all this is that we come to feel less and less like doing our spiritual exercises. Unless we hold ourselves up toward God by the force of our own wills, we soon get out of touch with God's will.

"The Dutch have a saying that Sunday is 'God's Dyke'. It holds back the engulfing sea of secularism. We need to erect personal habits as walls to preserve our inner sanctities from the subtle invasions of pagan living. We need also public laws to restrain the encroachments of commercialism.

"The best protection of the Sabbath, however, is a positive use of it rather than prohibitions against its misuse. What we do on Sunday is more important than what we do not do. A creative use of the Lord's Day sets the pattern and tone for the week. It should be used to restore the spiritual force so sadly depleted by living in our troubled times."

"If we work upon marble, it will perish; if on brass, time will efface it; if we rear temples, they will crumble into dust; but if we work upon immortal minds, and imbue them with principles, with the just fear of God and love of our fellow-men, we engrave on these tablets something that will brighten to all eternity."—Daniel Webster.

"Schoolhouses are the republican line of fortifications."—Horace Mann.

"Public instruction should be the first object of government."—Napoleon.

"All who have meditated on the art of governing mankind have been convinced that the fate of empire depends on the education of youth."—Aristotle.

"It is by education I learn to do by choice, what other men do by the constraint of fear."—Aristotle.

ALL CHILDREN SCUFF THE LEAVES

Autumn there never was that did not know
The narrow legs of children—quick or slow—
Scuffing through gutterways the fallen leaves.
The untaught heart receives
This gaudy, simple legend of the year,
For children have no fear
Of what goes down to death
In one fine flame of breath.
Warmed by this red, this gold,
They are not pinched by rumor of the cold;
With such bright ruin billowed at their knees
They do not look at trees
Naked against the sharpened tongues of air,
And even if they looked they would not care.
Yet, with a need they do not understand,
Once in a while they take each other's hand.

HOME OWNERS ADD TO THE PERMANENCE AND PROSPERITY OF A COMMODITY. The more citizens who own their own homes and have a permanent stake in the community the more prosperous is that community likely to be, through the co-operation and loyalty of the home owners. A drive has started in Canada to start a home building movement which is capable of giving much employment to a class interested in the building trades which composes the large majority of out-of-works today. The movement if it attains any considerable stature will mean a valuable contribution to the prosperity of Canada and start the wheels revolving in many industries as well as furnishing winter work in the bush and spring and summer work in the lumber mills upon which so many depend. The National Housing Act of 1938 through which loans of eighty per cent and more can be secured on property for building homes should receive widespread attention from renters. Monthly payments can be spread over twenty years, and the National Housing Act of 1938 looks like a real contribution to the task of solving the unemployment problem.

CANADA'S BUILDING INDUSTRY normally amounts to approximately ($100,000,000,) one hundred million dollars annually. In recent years this has been cut to ($50,000,000) fifty million dollars, and a few years much less. Recent years have seen a return of industrial building and public building construction to actually above the normal figure. Domestic buildng construction has not responded in like manner. House shortage in Canada it is estimated has reached 55,000 homes. The problem of providing work for 50,000 employable men in the building industry could be solved in the building of 50,000 homes needed. Observers say that housing conditions in Canada are deplorable. Let's start from there and go places.

THE WAGES OF SIN are generally a period of confinement, long or short, as befits the immediate crime.A confessed murderer in New York City was recently sentenced to 147 years imprisonment for his crimes, slaughter of three persons. That he was mentally deficient was self-evident, but he was bright enough to constitute a menace to society of serious nature. Now Gaston B. Means, detective, adventurer, swindler, and under suspicion of murder, aged 58, is dead, died in prison—one of the most colorful persons to occupy the human stage for a long time. A clever man with opportunities to go straight and achieve success he rose to be crooked and plotted and pulled off big deals from which he profitted personally little. Gaston B. Means, ghost-authored a book called "The Strange Death of President Harding", purporting to portray incidents and accidents behind the scenes of the Harding administration at Washington, as well as fantastic accusations of a successful plot against the life of President Harding. Gaston B. Means' last big deal was the filching of $104,000 from Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean, Washington society matron, and owner of a Washington Daily newspaper, inherited from her husband. Means persuaded Mrs. McLean that he could recover the kidnapped Lindbergh infant, and she furnished him with the money to ransom the child from the underworld. Means put on an elaborate show, introduced Mrs. McLean to numerous shifty characters supposed to be in the know, providing sinister and thrilling backgrounds for his various acts which succeeded in convincing her and releasing the $104,000 which Means pocketed, and all she received was the satisfaction of jailing Means and a whole lot of undesirable publicity and ridicule. Means died in the federal penitentiary at Springfield, Missouri, from cancer. What he did with the money fleeced from Mrs. McLean has not been ascertained as yet.

The young doctor sat down wearily in his easy chair and turned to his wife affectionately.

"Has my darling been lonely without me?" he asked.

"Oh, no," she sid, "at lease, not very lonely. I've found something to do with my time."

"Oh," he said, "what's that?"

"I'm organizing a class. A lot of women in the village have joined, and we're teaching one another to cook."

"What do you do with the things you cook?" asked the young doctor.

"I give them to the neighbors," she replied.

"Dear little woman," said the doctor, kissing her fondly. "Always thinking of my practice!"

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

Dec. 15, 1918.

At Queen Victoria School on the afternoon of the 18th inst., a bronze medal donated by the Canadian Humane Society, will be presented to Master John Crozier, son of Mr. Thomas Crozier, Alexander Street, Belleville. This past summer while at Chemong Lake, near Peterboro, at the risk of his own life. John Crozier saved a man from drowning. The brave act on the part of the lad is now to be fittingly recognized.

Dr. Proctor of Kitchener Military Hospital, formerly of Belleville, is spending a short time in the city.

Mr. W. B. Northrup, Clerk of the House of Commons, is in the city. He intends to spend Christmas in New York City.

30 YEARS AGO

Dec. 15, 1908.

Mr. Kenneth Hume Denike, son of Mr. W. F. Denike, of this city, has been appointed a member of the staff of the Belleville Branch of the United Empire Bank of Canada.

The Rev. J. C. Dixon of Roslin was a visitor in the city today.

A communication has been received from the Department of Public Works, Ottawa, which acknowledges the justice of the city's claim with regard to the old officers' quarters on Church Street. The department makes an offer which practically means that the sum of $1600.00 is offered for the building and the lot upon which it stands. The matter will come before the city council at its next meeting. Some of the City Fathers think that the offer is too low, and that at least $2,000.00 should be paid for the property. Other members of the council think that the offer should be accepted, providing the Government agrees to turn over the Officers' Quarters to the 49th Battalion to be used as an armory for No. 1 Company. It is quite evident, however, that the matter will be amicable arranged between the Government and the city. The latter will be quite a few dollars better off owing to the wide-awakeness of City Solicitor Mikel, who discovered the claim the city had to the property

40 YEARS AGO

Dec. 15, 1898.

There are 174 pupils enrolled at the High School and the daily average attendance is 136.

An interesting game of basketball was played at the drill hall last evening between teams representing the Juniors of the 15th Battalion and the Y.M.C.A. Juniors. In the match a week ago the latter team was victorious but last evening the soldier boys proved to be victors, the score being 12 to 10. The following composed the teams: 15th Juniors —J. Holland, Capt.; R. Diamond, G. Phillips, W. White and W. Newton. Y.M.C.A. Juniors—W. Walker, Capt.; Geo. Adams, F. Harden, B. Kerr and A. Lewis.

Mr. Frank Weeks has gone to Kingston where he has secured a position in the Locomotive Works.

Mr. M. Quinlan is in OOttawa on business.

Mr. W. P. McMahon, barrister, was in Madoc yesterday on legal business.

50 YEARS AGO

Dec. 15, 1888.

Mr. J. W. Jamieson left today to take a position in the office of the General Manager of the West Shore and Tunnel Lines in Chicago, Ill.

Mr. R. M. Roy of the G.T.R., Peterboro, was in town today and was greeted by many old friends.

Mr. Charles A. Lingham has returned to the city after successfully passing the examinations at the Model School at Madoc.

The ferry steamer was unable to make her usual trips today owing to the ice on the bay. She left her dock on the other side and breaking the ice succeeded in getting near to this side, but at this point the ice was too solid and she returned to the Prince Edward shore. The lack of a bridge was much felt this morning.

A meeting of the Women's Christian Temperance Union was held yesterday and it was decided to take no part in the coming municipal elections.

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton M.D.

Faith in Family Physician Brings Best Results

The recent death of Prof. Pavlov, Russia, brings to the minds of physicians his famous experiments with dogs. It is known that the pancreas,—all begin to flow at the sight of food in man, dogs, or other animals. At the very moment that the food was shown to the dogs a bell was rung so that the dogs learned that at the sound of the bell the food would be there for them to eat.

It was found that the sound of the bell so acted on the mind or brain of the dogs that their digestive juices began to flow without any food being in sight. The same thing happens to all of us we think of some food we greatly like. This is known as brain appetite and in man lasts for forty-five minutes after the sight, smell or even thought of food we like. This 'extra' amount of digestive juices naturally aids digestion.

Similarly there are foods we do not like and the digestive juices are slow in appearing and may, in some cases, be less in amount than is needed to handle or digest the food properly. Foods we do not like but which should be eaten usually get digested but the process may take hours longer than it would if we liked them.

There are other reactions in our minds at the sight or memory of people, places, or circumstances, and so we may be pleased, comforted, afraid, anxious, or worried, hot or cold according to how these people, places, or circumstances have affected us in the past. It is the knowledge of what your family physician has done for you or yours in the past that gives what might be called a 'faith' reaction when he comes to the bedside of the sick one. He removes the fear from your mind.

In Annals of Physical Therapy (treatment), Drs. Dall and Moor state:

"The physician who is able to banish fear and the fear of pain by a calm, assured, personality and by means of fear-dispelling explanations using simple languge, is, other things being equal, the best physician. The patient wants to be reassured as to his health, both present and future."

This faith in one's family physician, aided by his simple explanation of the condition present brings about the necessary cooperation on the part of the patient.

PEACEFUL RESERVES

Mr. Hitler's newspaper thinks that Canada "hates" him basely. And that for "real atrocities" Canadians have only to look over their own Indian reservations. If it is atrocious to have places where there are no taxes to pay, where people are allowed to do as they please, where there is a government distribution of money every year then our reserves are awful places.—Sault Daily Star.

LIMBS IN LIMBO

Once upon a time, not long since, it was regarded as almost indecent in polite society to mention women's legs. If there was any verbal admission that girls possessed such useful and intriguing attributes, one had to refer to them as limbs, and even that was considered a trifle daring.

In these latter years women's legs have come out into the open, speaking both literally and figuratively. When fashions changed so that limbs were no longer hidden by voluminous clothing it became quite apparent to all that women actually possessed such appendages, and that besides being useful as a method of motion they were, generally speaking, pleasing to the eye—especially to the eyes of men.

With the passage of long skirts also passed some of the false modesty about legs. People began to talk about them. Men could openly admire them without being forced to surreptitious peeping. What is more, they soon found that women were pleased by such admiration, at first blushingly so, and later quite candidly acknowledging the fact. Brief and revealing bathing suits followed this mutual satisfaction. Shapely legs are taken now as a matter of course.

But the cause of this harangue on a pleasant topic is that Masseur Lewis Hippe (the surname does seem to have some connection with nether limbs), of Hollywood,, declares that blondes have the best looking legs. We do not intend to let him draw us into any argument on the subject. It is loaded with feminine dynamite. But it does give us an idea. Next summer when we visit a beach we will see for ourselves. It will give us an excuse for doing something we are in the habit of doing anyway. And if anyone thinks we are overly bold, why we shall merely say we are engaged in research to see whether Mr. Hippe is right.—Windsor Star.

IN THE BOOK

Seasoned librarians have ceased to be capable of surprise at the strange book marks left in returned volumes. Women run to hairpins and handkerchiefs as markers. Both sexes tend to letters, not excepting love letters, whose tender contents are thus disclosed to eyes for which they were not intended; but these are simple and obvious objects compared to some of those used.

They include, according to Chalmers Hadley, librarian of the Cincinnati Public Library, portraits valentines, pressed flowers, gloves, pencils, compacts, address books, note books, and—leading up to a climax—dollar bills and false teeth. Mr. Hadley once received an urgent midnight call from a feminine patron advising him that she had left a valuable bond in a returned book. The bond was duly recovered and returned to its anxious owner.

From England comes evidence which shows that British readers are as eccentric as Americans in marking the place. Manchester librarians report that bulges in books returned by borrowers have disclosed the presence of safety-pins, curtain rings, cork table mats and pieces of toffee. One British borrower hung up a new high; he, or she, had tucked a thin rasher of bacon between the pages of a book. —Montreal Gazette.

OPINION DIFFERS

In Maine, New Hampshire, Connecticut, Rhode Island and Pennsylvania pineapple juice and tomato juice are beverages.

In Massachuttes, Delaware, North Carolina, Louisiana, Wisconsin and Oregon the two juices on the other hand are not beverages.

In Michigan pineapple juice is a beverage, but tomato juice is not. In Maryland grape juice, pineapple juice and orange juice are beverages if they are found in glass containers, but not if they are found in tin cans; in the same State tomato juice and prune juice are never beverages.

In Nebraska a pure juice is never a beverage, but if sugar or water or anything else is added it becomes a beverage.

These "oddities and perplexities," discovered by Food Industries when it sought to digest and tabulate State regulations pertaining to foods, are not, as the publication points out, to be found in the laws or even in the regulations. Sometimes they are discovered only "after consulting the enforcing officers."—New York Sun.

LADY "BOBBIES"

Women police have proved themselves so successful in London that Scotland Yard is increasing their total by 50 per cent.

There are at present just 100 "Lady Bobbies" on the force. The number is to be brought up to 150 as soon as possible.

Most of Scotland Yard's women police look after neglected children, watch over girls who have thrown over parental control and may be getting into bad company, and such work. But it is possible for women to go a long way up the Yard's ladder of success. Three of the present women police are fully-trained detectives.

Although every woman policeman must pound her beat for two years, the Lady Bobby can eventually become an Inspector .

WOOL LOSES OUT

Often we have suggested that nothing happens anywhere in the world without having its repercussions elsewhere. Thus it is interesting to note the plaint of the Australian wool grower that the extension and perfection of central heating in Great Britain and the United States is reducing the demand for woollen clothing. Nowadays, people are using central heating instead of Australian wool to keep themselves warm and Australians find it more difficult to sell their wool.—Niagara Falls Review.

ROAD TO MANDALAY

Made famous by Rudyard Kipling's poem, the road to Mandalay may become the entrance to China of war materials needed to carry on the struggles with Japan. As the Japanese now control China's seaports, it is vital that some other means of access for munitions be found.

Chinese authorities are ready to assume the gigantic task of building a 400-mile all-weather highway from Yunnanfu, in the Chinese south-western province of Yunnan, to Lashio in Burma. They are also prepared to provide a 300-mile railway link to connect with the Burmese railroad. Should these projects be completed, the famous road from Rangoon to Mandalay would be the highway for the supplies up from the coast.

In Kipling's poem, the road to Mandalay was a romantic route with Burmese belles to make it more pleasant for the British Tommy Atkins. Some of those who have travelled it, however, are inclined to debunk this picture, though not denying the attractiveness of the Burmese girls. Actually it is said to be a hot and dusty trail.

The peaceful Burmese, though they would welcome the business such a highway and railway as proposed would give, are a bit leery of the plan. They don't want to become involved in any war, and are timid lest the Japs should resent the Chinese getting material through Burma. They don't want the Rangoon River to become one of blood, nor do they want their road to Mandalay disfigured.—Windsor Star.

SCIENCE LOOKS AHEAD

Charles F. Kettering, to whose scientific researches American industry owes an incalculable debt, made a talk the other day that struck us as one of the most truly optimistic utterances in a long time.

His theme was that all the advances of scientists and industrialists to date, great as they have been, are barely a step toward what can be accomplished. He was answering — though he didn't say so — the people who moan that everything has been invented, that our natural resources are running out and that we face a future of drab stagnation without fine new opportunities or even work enough to keep everybody busy. He told of a conversation with engineering friends who wondered what could be done when the sources of gasoline are exhausted.

"What is gasoline?" Mr. Kettering asked them. The reply was "Petroleum."

"Well, what is petroleum?" "The product of decaying vegetable matter."

"How was the vegetable matter produced?" By the growth of plants."

"What made the plants grow?" "The rays of the sun."

"And there," said the scientist, you have it. We run our automobiles now by the stored-up radiant heat of the sun. All we need is to take out a few steps here and there to run them by ray-transmitted power direct. I haven't the slightest idea what we are going to do when the supply of oil runs out, but we are going to do something long before it runs out.

"If we scientists and industrialists could get out of our minds the idea that we know very much about anything, and realize that the whole thing is ahead of us, then, I think, we would have a shortage of labor in a brief time." —New York World-Telegram.

JOB GRAFT

An up-island mill superintendent was fined $20 the other day by Chief Justice Morrison for taking money from workers who had to pay in order to hold their jobs. Hon. George S. Pearson as Minister of Labor, has done well in following this up with the inauguration of a drive against job buying. It is a mean form of grafting on men anxious to work and has become too prevalent in these days of job scarcity.—Victoria Times.

LOUDER CONGRESS

Weak-voiced House members will be able to make themselves heard in the next session, but elevator operators and other capital employes will have to wait longer for uniforms.

Official said Dec. 8 that Speaker William B. Bankhead (D) of Alabama had authorized installation of a new loudspeaker system in the House Chamber.

The money must come temporarily from funds intended for regular running expenses of the capital, including the uniforms.

The Horseshoe Champions Argue

Among the competitive events at the Royal Winter Fair in Toronto is a horseshoe pitching tournament. Probably no particular attention would have been paid to it, but for an acrimonious flare-up between Regina and Saskatoon. Saskatoon sent as an entry a certain Mr. A. E. Adams, which is all right, and asserted that he is "singles champion" horseshoe pitcher in Saskatoon, to which none but a rival Saskatoonian can object, but unfortunately did not stop at that. Saskatoon went on to claim for Mr. Adams the all-Saskatchewan championship and this is where Regina, through the voice of The Leader-Post of that city, picked Saskatoon up pretty sharply.

Apparently this all-Saskatchewan championship is something that has never been put up to trial, public or private. Indeed one is led to believe that it is something Saskatoon has just invented and bestowed on its own chosen representative, hoping to get away with the glory. If so, it reckoned without the civic pride and devotion to horseshoe pitching that animates Regina. Regina would have the world know that incomparable horseshoe pitching may be witnessed "not far from the Union Station, along South Railway Street to the west," which sounds as though the sport flourishes close to the throbbing heart of Regina. Moreover Regina demands that one of its citizens "and a good bunch of horseshoes," be sent to Toronto to put Saskatoon and, if possible, all Canada, but certainly the all-Saskatchewan championship where Regina thinks they belong.

A Vancouver newspaper asks: "Does Vancouver care?" This might infer that Vancouver either does care greatly or does not care a hoot; but since the question has been raised, New Brunswick should care. These birds of the prairies and out on the Pacific should come east to where the restless Fundy tides make rivers flow backwards and here learn how horseshoes should be pitched. Not in a single spot in this province but in many do the men of Loyalist breed pitch horseshoes well and truly. We have many teams which could easily take the Dominion championships for singles and doubles, men and ladies, and the mixed doubles for good weight. This is the sort of horseshoe pitchers we are down here. We could scoop the tournament were we so minded and let Saskatoon, Regina, and Vancouver—if interested—take note of that—but we probably shall not bother with it because our positions as premier horseshoe pitching area in Canada, the Empire, and the world is secure. Therefore why should we trouble to go to Toronto to prove it? — St. John Telegraph-Journal.

RICH IN GEMS

Before me lies a topaz the size of an egg. It was picked up by a miner in one of the Queensland rivers and given to me for a present. I have picked up others—not quite, so large—myself. Garnets, rubies, beryl, agate and malachite are all there to reward the amateur.

There is a copper field near Cloncurry where malachite can be had for the asking. Malachite has ranked in history with agate, crystal and lapislazuli. Churches have been inlaid with it. Today London shops offer scraps of it on boxes or in the form of ash-trays, at prices quite beyond the ordinary purse—yet in Queensland they just give it to you!

Since the beginning of history agate has been prized as a semi-precious stone. It has been used for inlay, for jewelry, for priceless Oriental mosaics. Because agate cannot be imitated, objects made from it or inlaid with it fetch luxury prices even today. Yet in the rivers of the Etheridge goldfield, in Queensland, you can pick up a handful of agate in 10 minutes or half an hour.

Garnets and rubies are found in the tin-bearing country nearer the coast. There is a place called Almaden—maybe because it is as hot and rich as the famous mines in Spain—and there any old miner will sit down on the steps of the saloon and, once his confidence has been won by the purchase of a couple of beers, he will begin to unroll a series of little calico bags tied up with earth-stained tape. They contain his trophies.

Yellow topaz, white topaz, purple garnets, green beryl, blue sapphires, even red rubies will come tumbling into his palm. All uncut, of course, but if you hold them up to the light with his tweezers you will be able to see what the jeweler could make of them. If you admire any special piece, most likely the old man will give it to you, for except for a few rare varieties which command a price even today, he knows that even the finest will not tempt the pessimistic dealers.

And why should he hang on to them? He can get plenty more. Yet, cut and set, these stones would be fit for the most fastidious. Apart from the depth and durability, how wonderful to have a whole necklace of garnets, or perhaps a ruby ring, that you have mined yourself?—Australian Press Bureau.

SURPRISE MOVE SAYS MRS. GABLE

Dissolution of Marriage Suit to be Heard on December 21

Hollywood, Dec. 15. — (AP) — Clarke Gable and his middle-aged wife have been separated three years, but she is surprised, she says that he is thinking of asking her for a divorce.

After the film star had indicated in a public statement that just about everything was arranged for the legal dissolution of his marriage, Mrs. Maria Gable went to see her attorney and announced:

"It came to me as a complete surprise. I knew nothing about it until I read it in the papers. I have not talked to Mr. Gable and know nothing about his intentions."

Gable, known to be romantically inclined toward blonde Carole Lombard, has asked a Los Angeles court to declare valid the property pact by which he paid his wife $286,000 since their parting in 1935.

The case is set for trial December 21, with a ruling unlikely before Jan. 1, after which a divorce suit could be filed.

Since California law provides a year's wait between the interlocutory and final divorce decree Gable and Miss Lombard would be unable to fulfill before 1940 their friends' prediction of marriage.

The 48-year-old Mrs. Gable recently said in a magazine article that she would give her husband his freedom 'any time he wanted it'.

FIRE DESCRIBED AS 'SUSPICIOUS'

Three-Storey Plant of Armour Packing Company Burns

New York, Dec. 15 (AP)—Fire described by firemen as "suspicious" in origin destroyed a three-storey brick plant of the strike-harassed Armour Packing Company in Brooklyn today.

The plant was one of sixty packing concerns picketed since the United States Meat Workers, a (Congress of Industrial Organizations) Union, called out 1,000 meat packers Monday in a city-wide strike.

Refusing to estimate the loss, Deputy Fire Chief George McAleer reported the fire to police as "suspicious" after a patrolman told him, he said, that the flames were preceded by an explosion.

Union leaders said more than 1,000 C.I.O. workers were idle at the "Big Four" companies—Wilson, Armour, Swift and Cudahy—and many smaller plants. Packing house officials said, however, that deliveries were normal.

The strikars are seeking a $4 to $5 a week pay rise, union recognition, a 40-hour week and other concessions.

7-YEAR-OLD DIES FROM EXPOSURE

Found Early Today but Was Unconscious and Soon Succumbed

St. Catharines, Ont., Dec. 15 (CP)—Found by a search party nine hours after he disappeared from his home Lorne Servos, seven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Servos, Niagara Gardens, died from exposure early today.

The boy, in poor health, left his home late yesterday afternoon. When he failed to return his parents notified friends and police and a search party was organized.

The Servos home is just outside the city and is in an area where there are several ravines and thick brush. At one o'clock this morning two of the searchers, Darcy Smith and Dan Weir, found the boy at the bottom of one of the ravines. He was unconscious and was soaking wet from his waist down. Efforts to revive him in hospital were unsuccessful.

Largest Single Shipment Of Radium is Received

Washington, Dec. 15.—(AP) — The new National Cancer Institute will receive in a few days what officials describe as the world's largest single shipment of radium.

Approximately $200,000 worth of the precious substance, weighing only a fifth of an ounce, will arrive from New York in lead containers weighing several tons.

The radium will be enclosed in 1,245 hollow needles and officials here will measure the content of each needle. The measuring is expected to require at least six months.

Countries which do not raise enough fats and oils for domestic uses are resorting to whaling and fishing to overcome this shortage.

HISTORIC SILVER SOLD

London, Dec. 15—(AP)—Historic silver from William Randolph Hearst's St. Donat's castle in Wales brought £41,832 ($195,170) yesterday under the hammer at Christie's auction rooms.

The "Puwsey Horn" which King Canute was said to have given to Wyllyam Puwsey for saving him from a Saxon ambush was bought for presentation to the Victoria and Albert museum. The price was £1,900 which was £50 less than the American publisher paid for it.

A wedding of interest took place in Trinity United Church, Toronto on Saturday, December 3rd., when Helen Margaret (Peggy) Hill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Hill of Trenton, became the bride of Mr. Earl Henry Gray, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Gray, Trenton.

The condition of James S. Cook, a patient in the Belleville General Hospital for some days past is reported considerably improved. He is expected return to his home this week.

The December meeting of Albert College Guild was held at the Manor House yesterday. After the discussion of business for which the President, Mrs. E. N. Baker was in the chair, Miss May contributed a delightful solo. Mrs. G. E. Deroche gave an interesting talk on "Evangeline". A social half hour followed the program.

Mrs. T. J. Hobson entertained at a delightfully arranged trousseau tea held at her home yesterday in honor of her daughter, Miss Violet Hobson, bride-to-be. The rooms were prettily decorated with colorful blossoms and the tea table was arranged with bronze 'mums and matching tapers. Miss Violet Hobson received with her mother and the guests were invited to tea by Miss May Hobson. Mrs. E. Hogle poured tea and Miss Edna Jobson assisted in serving. The trousseau was shown by Miss Ruth Hobson.

GILROY—LATCHFORD

Christ Church, Belleville, was the scene of a pretty wedding on Friday, December 9, at one o'clock, when Verna Isabell Latchford, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Latchford, Shannonville, became the bride of Arthur Irvine Gilroy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Gilroy, also of Shannonville. The Rev. G. G. Wright officiated.

The bride looked very pretty in a gown of Glory Blue crepe velva, matching hat and accessories. She was attended by Miss Anneitta Goodfellow, who wore rose figured crepe with black accessories. The groom was attended by Mr. William Latchford, brother of the bride.

After a shower of confetti and good wishes the happy couple left on a western trip to Port Hope, Peterboro, and Coe Hill on their return on Sunday evening a wedding supper was served at the home of the bride's mother to the near relatives of the bride and groom.

Mr. and Mrs. Gilroy will reside in Belleville.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

More on Vitamins—D

The Quintuplets were born at least two months prematurely and so, with them, as with all premature children, we had the problem of rickets to face.

Almost from the time they were born, these children showed evidence of this condition. We wanted to cure them as quickly as we could because we wanted strong, healthy bodies. So we started out systematically to see that all five of them were fed products which contained plenty of Vitamin D. For this is the vitamin that cures and prevents rickets.

Of course with the Quints we were somewhat handicapped. A few days after birth they weighed only nine and three-quarter pounds, together, and poor little Marie tipped the scale at one and one-half pounds. Our difficulty was in seeing that they got enough food; they were so small and weak they didn't seem able to take much nourishment at a time.

Finally it came to the point where we had to force-feed them with Breck feeders. This has a nipple on the end of a glass barrel, with a bulb at the other end. We gave them feedings every two hours and by doing this we made them grow. From the third day of birth they got breast milk, pasturized.

But there wasn't enough Vitamin D in this food, for they really needed an overdose. Accordingly, a few weeks later we began giving them fruit juice and tomato juice. This didn't contain enough of the amount of the vitamin we wanted them to have, so shortly afterward we give them the vitamin concentrated in the form of viosterol.

This has to be given in small doses, because it is so concentrated. In fact, no parent should give it to a young child except under the instructions of a physician.

Viosterol can be given in milk without affecting its tastes. Even if, given in larger doses we found that it didn't do any harm to the Quintuplets. In fact, when they were a couple of years old, we had some Xray pictures taken of them. On the ends of the long bones at their wrists, we saw the extra calcium which indicated where that extra Vitamin D we had given them had gone. This did the children no harm, and certainly we were glad to see that they had outgrown any evidences that they had been the victims of rickets.

When they were a few months old we changed from viosterol to our old friend, cod-liver oil. They have had it practically every day since. The result is that we have no "Square heads" amongst them; neither have we any bowed legs or "rickety rosary" along the edges of the ribs—these are little bumps on something like beads on a rosary; each rib, one under the other, neither do we have swellings at ankles and wrists.

What we have is five well-formed healthy children. One of the reasons for this is we have seen that they get their Vitamin D in their cod-liver oil every day.

Mothers, prospective and nursing, should see to it that they have plenty of this sunshine vitamin.

Practically the only common food which supplies Vitamin D is milk—fresh, condensed, canned or powdered. Sufficient of the vitamin can be added through irradiation.

GOOD MANNERS

Your Christmas and You

Her Gift to Him—His Gift to Her

Of all the doubts and wonderings that beset Christmas lists, the question of what gifts are appropriate for young people to give to each other is perhaps the most troublesome, to be correct. For these gifts must concern themselves with good taste and good form, and not with an over-generous budget or with an uncontrolled enthusiasm.

If a man and girl are engaged, the question of appropriate presents is, of course, comparatively easy, for good taste then allows a wide choice. But where there is a friendship that seems to indicate a little more remembering than a card, letter or a telegram would accomplish, it is not easy to choose a gift that will seem adequate and at the same time in good taste.

Too often, a girl or a man, in the exuberant enthusiasm of a friendship, will impulsively send a gift which she or he will later regret. That ill-advised or extravagant present may sometime cause a deal of embarrassmen and may need a deal of explaining!

A wise girl and a wise young man will make a special effort to send a discriminating gift at Christmastime, one that will show breeding and sound social judgment.

In the first place, as in most other social details, the girl should let the man take the initiative in an interchange of gifts. If he has sent her gifts, if he has been generous in his invitations to take her out, or if she believes that he plans to send her a Christmas gift, naturally she wishes to remember him with a gift. The gift should be on the impersonal side, but not, of course, impersonal in thoughtfulness or imagination.

No matter how many times it has been said, books are a perfect gift for young people. Here is the magic carpet of gifts, for our taste can take us where it will, guided by the tastes and interests of the person to whom the book or books are to go.

Gifts in this general group, interesting and appropriate, are subscriptions to magazines or subscriptions to book clubs; an address book stamped with the name or initials: a portfolio; a leather book bag or book cover; and for, the music-lover, an album of records or even one or two records of good music. You might give a set of book ends, perhaps one of the new heavy glass or crystal ones.

For the desk, too, there are handsome and appropriate gifts: leather portfolios; engagement pads or books; framed calendars; letter-openers; ink-wells; fountain pens and pencils, stamped with the facsimile of the signature of the receiver; boxes of carefully-chosen letter-paper or note-paper; interesting paper weights; memorandum books.

There are decorative articles that can show great taste in the giver: a piece of crystal or pottery or bronze; a photograph frame; novelty boxes; interesting pictures.

Also a girl may give a man smoking accessories: cigarette case or lighter; a pipe; a box of his favorite cigars or several cartons of his favorite cigarettes; humidor; tobacco pouch; cigarette box and ash-trays.

Other appropriate gifts are: wallets; handkerchiefs (sheer for evening wear, heavier for day, and initialed, if possible); mufflers; neckties (well-chosen!); a knife for a watch chain; key-ring or chain; handkerchief or necktie case; some accessory for his favorite sport; a color bag or other accessory for his traveling bag; a traveling clock for his dresser or desk or travelling bag..

For the beau to send to the belle, there is always the delightful gift of flowers, sent in such artistic and handsome ways that they perfectly express the taste of the sender: a box of flowers: a lovely corsage; perhaps an old-fashioned colonial bouquet, made of different kinds of tiny flowers massed in tight rows. Books, of course; letter-paper; candy; handkerchiefs, for day or evening monogrammed; a vanity-case, powder box, compact; purse; pen and pencil set; a sport accessory. And one of the most popular of gifts —a bottle of her favorite perfume.

These ares only suggestions, of course, and the choice of the really appropriate gift depends first of all on how well you know the friend and on the taste and interests of the person to whom the gift is to be sent.

What should a girl and a young man not give each other? On the tabu list are intimate articles of wearing apparel and jewelry. There as a very sharp and definite line between these personal gifts and the gifts which your taste should tell you are appropriate.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

"Loveless Childhood" Blamed for Some Crimes

If you are given to pluming yourself because you've brought up a family, and they've kept out of trouble, are self-supporting and generally regarded as decent citizens, please don't imagine you've done your entire duty as a parent.

Dr. C. H. Gundry, in the Canadian Medical Association Journal, has gone on record as saying that the liars, swindlers, malingerers and people who are just about two laps ahead of the law are that way because they had a "loveless childhood."

Criminal tendencies develop as the result of emotional deprivation in the young. A child who longs for a caress, and approving pat on the back, or word of encouragement and is turned aside with a curt word by a parent, suffers more than the parent realizes. The hurt is ingrowing, the child broods upon it. This brooding accounts for the fact that so many children imagine they have been adopted and are not the genuine offspring of their parents.

Continuing, Dr. Gundry, says, "If parents are too poorly developed to expend love, if they really do not want their children, or if their children are brought up without parents or satisfactory substitutes, it's as if the children were deprived of a sort of emotional vitamin.

"They are apt to remain immature, to fail to develop stable, robust characters. Never being identified with a family group, it's hard for them to fit into a large social group. Being cheated out of love, they may try to gain attention in unwholesome ways."

The children of divorced parents stand out as temperamental solitaires, or they go to the other extreme and try to fill the void of loneliness and maladjustment by doing conspicuous things. They hide the hurt inflicted on them in childhood, though they may be unconscious of the cause of their eccentricity. They enjoy shocking society, doing things that bring them into the spotlight.

Children are queer little people; they have the same craving to love and be loved that is an essential of normal adult life. Not always do they know how to get it. They hang round waiting for a word of approval or a caress, and when it's not forthcoming, suffer and make the best of it in their own way. But it leaves scars.

The writer once reported a trial, a dreadful trial, where the plaintiff and defendant were mother and daughter. The daughter, who had tried to put her mother out of the way and who was no longer really sane, was moved to confide in me:

"When I was a little girl, I thought my mother the most beautiful creature who ever lived. I used to watch her get dressed to go out of evenings, and she was so lovely in her party dresses. I'd crawl up and ask her to kiss me, but she always rebuffed me with something like: 'Your face isn't clean, or your hands are cold. Do go away and leave me in peace'. Slowly my affection for her began to change——and here I am."

The world is full of unsympathetic parents. And the pity of it is that these parents, who are too busy to stop and win the confidence of their children, have no idea of what they're building up.

Would Charles Dickens, the great novelist, ever have written his books if a kindly, sympathetic mother had not acted as his secretary, and put down the thoughts that swarmed through the youngster's head when he was too little to know how to write?

Carlisle's mother could neither read nor write, but she always had time to listen sympathetically to the dreams and plans of her gifted son. Are you sympathetic with your children, or do you brush them aside?

Relaxation is a Great Pickup Measure

DOROTHY DEARING
Relaxation is part of her daily schedule

By HELEN FOLLETT

INTERESTING work is no hardship and activity is the law of life, but the woman who keeps on the gallop, can't go limp and do a flop, lives under a strain that will show up on her countenance. There's nothing like a frenzied nervous system to make tense facial muscles which in course of time bring facial gullies.

Relaxation is the great pickup measure. When the housewife gets jittery, she should stop her chores find a quiet spot and lie down and close her eyes. She should also close her mind to the fact that the grocery bill is bigger than usual, that the school reports aren't good or that the husband is grouchy. She's the head of the domestic works, and can't carry on capably unless she is physically and mentally fit.

Business girls should give themselves extra hours of sleep on Sunday morning, not spend the day doing odd jobs. They need outdoor life recreation and change. They can't carry the hod up and down the ladder seven days a week and still look young and vibrant.

A 15-minute nap or rest immediately after luncheon would turn many a cloudy-faced woman into a little sunbeam. Fatigue fills the body with poisonous chemicals, slows up circulation and makes the skin pale.

Think it over, you women who drive yourselves as you would never drive anyone else. Show yourself a little mercy.

An authority on hair styling says that it is not smart to brush the hair to the top of the head, arrange it in rolls and let it go at that. He says the uppity coiffure should not have harsh lines, or bounce that it must conform to the outline of the head. If it doesn't it lacks chic and manner.

If the nape line is not attractive, the hair can be cut short, arranged in upturned curls or laid in flat, sculptured ringlets. The high effect is achieved with fairly long hair at front and sides. It is finger waved in a single line, or maybe two, and swept toward the crown. This same authority says that an uplift of the tresses is an uplift of the spirits. Maybe so. Some women have wrestled with the new style, almost going into a state of collapse. The old mop won't stay put. Training it the way it should go takes time and patience.

Fashion Flashes

By Alice Alden

Standing out in the welter of color is a tiny toque of white pasted plummage, the feathers held by filmy, almost invisible white tulle.

A gay whirl calls for a gay dance frock. Youthful and lovely is a full-skirted model of white taffeta with tiny rhinestones sprinkled here and there on the skirt. Narrow belt and narrow shoulder straps are of rhinestone bands.

Easy to find is the interesting cloth coat cleverly furred. A novel model is on casual swagger lines, of black woollen with narrow collar and full length tuxedo revers of rolled bands of mink. Worn with a black felt hat with mink again in rolled bands.

Just the thing or the woman of full figure is a daytime dress of black silk crepe with plain sleeves and skirt. All the interest is in the bodice, with its high neckline and diagonal shirring that allows for a little plain fabric at one shoulder where there are two very decorative jewelled clips.

Piquant yet practical is a bloused bolero of ermine with an enchanting pixie hood of the same fur to softly frame the face, keep out the cold and prevent the wind from spoiling the smartly groomed head. With it is worn a huge soft muff of the same snowy fur.

When the lights go on in the afternoon they shine on women wearing smart frocks. Suitable for cocktails, dinner and movie is a dress of black velvet, with deep square decolletage in front and puffed leg of mutton sleeves. A belt of sequins or a broad belt of gold kidskin or oneof suede with rhinestone eyelets will lend fresh interest to a splendid basic frock. A collar of white starched point de Venise lace is another beautifier.

The British territorial army will make its anti-aircraft units 90,000 strong within a year.

Don't Let Constipation Drag On!

Do you often havedays when you wake up tired—when you feel dull, sunk, "all bogged down"? It's time you did something about it. And something more than just taking a physic! You should get at the cause of the trouble!

If you eat what most people do—just bread, meat, potatoes—chances are that just this fact is responsible: you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It means a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines that helps a bowel movement.

If this is your trouble, what you need is crisp crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast. It contains "bulk" plus Nature's intestinal tonic, vitamin B₁.

Eat it every day, drink plenty of water, and see if your old sparkle doesn't come back! Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

NEW DIRECTOR IS APPOINTED

Miss Mary A. Clark to Head Women's Institute Branch.

Woodstock, Ont., Dec. 15 (CP)—Hon. P. M. Dewan, Ontario Minister of Agriculture, announced during an address before the annual warden's banquet here last night the appointment of a new director for the Women's Institute Branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

The appointee is Mary A. Clark, now of the staff of MacDonald Institute, Guelph. Miss Clark, who succeeds Miss B. McDermand, who is resigning, is a graduate of Toronto Normal School, honor graduate in arts and home economics at University of Toronto, and was post graduate from Teachers College of Columbia University. She will assume her duties at the beginning of next year.

Mr. Dewan predicted rearrangement of the staff of the Dairying Branch of the Department and said it would be done with a view to improving the quality of the cheese being produced in Ontario.

"We are going to get better results from the cheese instructors or some of them in a very few months are not going to be on the job," he said.

The banquet was tendered more than 20 guests by Charles Milton, Blenheim Township, retiring Warden of Oxford County.

MANY .... (proivns-.p.. ......

Many Canadian cities are preparing for a long Christmas holiday—from Saturday night, Dec. 24, to Wednesday morning, Dec. 28.

With Christmas falling on Sunday and Monday declared a public holiday, celebration of Boxing Day will be deferred until Tuesday here and in England where the practice originated of making the day after Christmas a holiday.

Among cities that will celebrate Boxing Day on Tuesday are Moose Jaw and Regina in Saskatchewan and London and North Bay in Ontario. Public holidays have been declared in these places by civic proclamation or by-laws.

An order-in-council passed by the British Columbia government at request of the Retailers Association provides for observance of Tuesday as Boxing Day. All stores in British Columbia will be closed, but factories will operate.

Only in Alberta, Quebec and the Maritimes will there be no celebration of the day as a holiday. In many cities in Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Ontario retail business will be suspended though not by compulsion.

Ansons Farmers' Club Entertains At Social Evening

Rawdon—The members of Anson Farmers' Club entertained their wives and families to a delightful social evening at Mount Pleasant hall with over fifty in attendance.

The meeting was opened by the president, Mr. Ross Hoard. Several rounds of community singing was led by Mr. John Coggins with Mrs. Merle Spencer as piano accompanist. Mr. Allan Reid read the minutes of the previous meeting and a male quartette composed of Messrs John Coggins, Herb Higgs, Irvin Reid and Don Campbell sang "Old Folks at Home."

The President welcomed the guests and in a short address explained why the club was re-organized after a lapse of eleven years. He gave a resume of all the meetings held to date with their various speakers and gave a general idea of what the club purposes to do during the coming year. His address was most interesting and enlightening on the subject of club work.

Master Don Spencer sang a solo with guitar accompaniment.

Mrs. Percy MacMullen contributed "The Liars Contest." Mr. and Mrs. Herb Higgs and Mr. Burton Calvert gave two musical numbers, harmonica, guitar and violin. Mr. Herb David gave an illuminating address on "Profits". Mrs. Arthur Phillips rendered "The farmer's wife". Mrs. Ross Hoard contributed a piano solo. Mrs. Higgs and Mr. Calvert gave a musical duet and at the close some discussion took place re a box social.

After the National Anthem the Club members served an appetizing lunch of sandwiches, cake, pickles, tarts and coffee.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Cooney were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Doig, Smithfield.

Mr. Carl Sine had the misfortune to get hit on the head with a stick of timber on Friday afternoon. He was helping Mr. John McMullen and a number of other men tear down an old barn when the accident occurred. Three stitches were necessary to close the wound.

Mr. John Eastwood attended a party in honour of the 85th birthday of his sister Mrs. Sarah McKeown, last Tuesday.

Young People's Union

Mount Pleasant Young People's Union opened Friday evening with a song service in charge of the President, Mrs. Cyrus Summers and Mrs. Merle Spencer played the piano accompaniment. All joined in Havergals vesper prayer. In the business period, plans were made to have Buelah Young People stage their play "The Girl in the Fur Coat" in January. Letters from the Presbytery executive re the winter school and the skating party in January were read. The missionary convener Miss Eileen MacMullen opened her program with "The whole world was lost."

Miss Gladys Summers read a selection. Mr. Willie Jeffs read the Bible lesson and Master Ralph Jeffs contributed a piano solo. Mrs. Percy MacMullen outlined a chapter entitled "Weaving a new web" from the study book, "The World in Canada" written by Rev J. I. MacKay. Miss Lois McAdam sang a solo with Mrs. Percy Hubble as accompanist.

Rev. J. E. Beckel outlined another chapter of "Life's Problems" dealing with the subject "Bluffing and knocking."

Master Eric Summers gathered the offering for missions. The chart for roll call showed twenty seven in attendance. The service closed with a hymn and Miss Muriel Sine staged a "can" contest.

Mr. Will Johnson received word of the death of his brother, Mr. Mat Johnson of Tweed on Thursday, Dec. 8th. Deceased was 38 years of age and had been ill in Belleville Hospital for a couple of weeks.

Mrs. J. E. Beckel is ill with an attack of lagrippe.

Relatives and friends were sorry to hear of the illness of Mrs. Mary Brown of Carmel.

Mr. and Mrs. Murney Richardson, Shirley and Agnes and Mrs. J. Richardson of River Valley were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Cooney.

Mr. John Johnson celebrated his seventy-ninth birthday on Sunday. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Weaver, Belleville, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Johnson and family of Trenton. Rawdon friends wish for Mr. Johnson many more happy birthdays.

Mr. and Mrs. John Morrison entertained Bethel Ladies Aid at their home with a good attendance.

The president, Mrs. Harold Elliott opened with the theme song and Mrs. Roy Welbourne read the minutes. It was decided to donate twenty-five dollars to the Missionary and Maintenance fund of the church.

Rev. J. E. Beckel presided over the program which had been prepared by Misses Alice Lake and Doris Farrell.

Miss Irene Tucker led the community singing with piano accompaniment.

Mrs. Harry Preston gave an appropriate reading. Mrs. William Heath contributed a piano solo. Mr. Wesley Farrell sang a solo with hawaiian guitar accompaniment.

Brief addresses were given by Messrs. B. C. Tucker, J. Scott and John Morrison. A contest which Miss Phyllis Beckel prepared was then staged. Miss Nellie Morrison conducted a series of games and all took part in several rounds of community singing.

The fancy laundry bag donated by Mrs. Fred Martin which has been travelling around the community was on display and each patch was taken off and the money and donor tabulated. The bag was later given to Mrs. Sam Gummer who had $1.05 under the patch, the largest donation.

A dainty lunch was served by the ladies and three dollars realized.

All enjoyed the social half hour and at the close the host and hostess were tendered a vote of thanks for hospitality.

The Aid has had a very successful year with a neat bank account to their credit.

The salesman who bragged he could sell ice to the Eskimos would be out of luck these days, for the natives are making their own refrigerators.

Harry Sperling, forest reserve official, says that near Noatak and Kotzebue natives in the CCC program are digging tunnels and chambers in hillsides where the Arctic frost is always within a few inches of the surface. There they keep reindeer meat and other perishables.

Other Eskimo CCC projects include building airplane landing fields, reindeer corrals and shelter cabins, and controlling predatory animals.

CHAPTER I

With every slap of her powder puff resentment grew in the amber-eyed girl leaning close to the mirror. It was the color of her hair—such a dark red! Did any hair have to be so dark that it could never, even on top of a Fifth Avenue bus on a sunny day, be described as red-gold? It was the right of every redhead to have her locks referred to, on occasion, as red-gold. And if her hair had to be the darkest red in the world, did her eyes at the same time have to be the very palest brown? Yellow, she'd call them, the girl decided groomily. Too big for her face too, as her face was now, so thing that it was positively peaked. Maybe if she did her hair a different way—but she had no time for experiment. She was late now. And Paul Harris would be quick to tell her, not for the first time, that if she didn't care enough about her job as magazine counter girl at the Devon Arms Hotel to get there on time, he, as manager, would be forced, regretfully, to accept her resignation.

But indignation at her looks and against having to hurry off to work—on Thanksgiving Day, too! were only items in a long list of resentments that Jan Payson had accumulated. There was the matter of the Thanksgiving dinner she and Dora had just finished to the last scrap. She rad set her heart on having a broiler for Dora's Thanksgiving, and to that end had smiled her prettiest every day for a week at the customers who stopped at her stall for reading matter or cigarettes. A smile she had found, was sometimes good for a tip, but not this week—oh, no, she needed the money too badly this week to have even an extra nickel thrown her way.

"Hurt? I'm ruined!" she cried.

Speaking of nickels — she was rummaging in her shabby handbag now—she was sure she had left one for car fare when she bought the two pork chops that had taken the place of the missing broiler. She didn't mind walking back after work—she often did that—but as she always stayed with frail, patient Dora till the last possible minute before leaving for her three to eleven shift, she usually rode down to the hotel on the subway. Of course she shouldn't have bought two chops; she could have managed perfectly well with a cheese sandwich, and they had cheese in the house. But Dora would have insisted on dividing her chop with her sister, and Dora needed all the nourishing food she could get. Jan intended, if the Thanksgiving spirit failed to move any of the customers to give her a tip today, to ask Paul Harris for an advance of a dollar on her salary. She could just imagine Paul's face as she made her request—his expression would be mixed, as if at the very moment of getting bad news he had caught a whiff of something which stirred up his easily roused disdain, like cheap perfume on the girls he employed.

A thump on the door made her jump, so that her elbow knocked against a slender vase standing on the dresser and sent it crashing against the marble. The wilted red rosebud, which Jan had filched for Dora from the hotel dining room, and which they had tried, with indifferent success, to revive with aspirin in the water, flew headlong into the still open powder box.

"Who's there?" called Jan, knowing that peremptory thump very well, but pausing to retrieve the rosebud, nevertheless. It put off the actual moment of facing Mrs. Mallord by at least a split second.

"Who are you expecting?" came the sarcastic rejoiner from without, and Jan, with a sigh, opened the door gingerly. Mrs. Mallord pushed it wide the minute the knob was turned, and took a step into the room. "Well?" she said.

"Well what?" said Jan, bravely.

"Well what?" Mrs. Mallord mimicked her roomer. Then, with a brusque change of tone: "It's the rent I'm after. Give."

She held out a large, rather grimy hand at the end of a stout arm. In spite of herself, Jan's voice shook a little as she explained that, since it was Thanksgiving, she hadn't expected Mrs. Mallord to ask for the rent until—

"Until Doomsday, I suppose!" broke in the irate landlady. "Do you know how many weeks you're behind now? Three weeks today and the third week is up, Thanksgivin' or no Thanksgiving."

"But, Mrs. Mallord, I've had to pay for a tonic for Dora, and fresh eggs and milk—"

"Yez can have till Saturday," said Mrs. Mallord, "to pay or get out, and I'm breakin' a lifelong rule of my house to let you stay a day over three weeks—Jackie! Stop your noise!" she interrupted herself to bellow into the stair well beyond the door.

"Aw, Mom! All the kids are goin'. Kin I go? Kin I? Kin I?"

Twelve-year-old Jack Mallord, three flights below at the foot of the stairs, having captured his mother's attention by a series of ear-splitting catcalls, pressed his advantage quickly, resuming what was plainly an argument of long standing.

"I'll skin ya alive!" roared his mother. She turned back to Jan.

"It's your notice," she announced formally, and lumbered heavily toward the stairs, and the sounds with which Jackie was making the atmosphere hideous.

"Good-by, darling." Jan stopped to kiss Dora's white cheek. "Here's your glass of water and the spoon for your tonic. You will take it, won't you, honey? I hope you like the new book I brought from the library, but don't read so long that you strain your eyes."

She smiled gayly from the threshold, then closed the door softly and ran down the stairs. It was drizzling, a fact which she had no opportunity of noting in their flat, for their two windows looked out on the brick wall of the house next door, hardly three feet away. That nickel she thought she had, proved to be nonexistent. Twenty blocks—a generous mile—lay between her and the Devon Arms. Not much of a walk, but quite a run, especially in the rain. And as far as she could figure it out, she would have to move at what was practically a run to reach the hotel anywhere near on time.

Keeping as close to the buildings as she could, the worn heels of her shoes slipping on the glassy-smooth iron of store trap doors, she sped away, zigzagging in the middle of the street on the narrow side blocks to catch the lights, cutting the corners as best she could. She was panting, but dared not pause to catch her breath.

There was the Devon Arms, at last, across the street. Jan headed for the employees entrance darting in front of a car parked at the curb. So quickly had she bounded across the glistening black road that the man behind the wheel, with his foot on the starter, had no warning of her catapulting approach. At the instant she flew into his line of vision he pressed down, and the long car shot forward.

The edge of the front fender bumped Jan smartly as she clipped past. It was not a hard blow, but it threw her off balance and she sprawled on the wet sidewalk. The man, with an exclamation of alarm leaped to the ground and lifted her to her feet. "You are hurt!"

Jan turned wrathful eyes on him. "Hurt? I'm ruined!" she cried. She dabbed feebly with her handkerchief at the mud that streaked down the front of her suit.

"All right, all right," said Jan impatiently, after a minute. "That will do. I'm so late now that it's better to come in a little travel-stained; it'll make my story sound better." Her eye fell on the chauffeur's cap lying on the front seat of the car, and traveled back to the hatless young man and his desperately apologetic air.

"I don't know how you keep your job, if you can't drive any better than that," Jan said severely. "As a matter of fact, I've a good mind to complain to your employer. Maybe," she added darkly, "I ought to sue him."

"Let me——" said the chauffeur.

"Oh, skip it! I was only trying to scare you. I won't make trouble. I know how tough it is to get a job these days. And I am late and have to rush."

"But——" began the young man.

Jan, who had the door open by this time, waved a friendly hand, grinned a friendly grin and disappeared. The young man stood for a moment, staring at the slowly closing door. Then on an impulse he bounded across the sidewalk and gently pushed it open. Jan was just entering another door at the end of a long corridor. He heard a shrill greeting from within.

"Jan!" a girl was shrieking. "Ger Jan, you're late! Paul has beer having kittens all over the place!

The young man withdrew h! head and walked thoughtfully bac to his car. Jan! What a name fo a girl. And what a girl!

CHAPTER II

Molly, the telephone operator was in full possession of the fact and she lost no time in relayin them to Jan. There was what Pau had said when, watch in hand, he had observed that Jan was ten minutes late. There were the increasingly fluent comments he had made as the minutes ticked on, as the quarter past the hour arrived and Jan didn't; there was, at twenty minutes past, his final explosion and the subsequent transactions over the telephone — of which Molly was also cognizant—which resulted in the hiring of a new magazine counter girl.

"You wouldn't have thought he could get one right in the middle of Thanksgiving afternoon, would you?" finished Molly sympathetically.

"Is she here yet?" was all Jan could think of by way of reply.

"No," said Molly, "but he's paying Elsa, that pretty waitress, to take care of the counter till the new girl comes. She'll be here in half an hour. A tough kid, if you ask me. I took a dislike to her voice the minute I heard it on the phone."

"Well," Jan rose from the single chair the locker room afforded. "I suppose I'll have to go and take my medicine."

She walked slowly toward the manager's office and down the two little steps that led to the door in a remote corner of the main lobby. Her fingers had just touched the knob when the door opened suddenly from the other side. For the second time within the hour she was thrown off balance, but this time she did not actually fall. She simply careened against Paul Harris, who had just wrenched the door open—all his movements were as brisk as machine gun fire—and knocked the carnation from his buttonhole.

"Oh!" said Jan, "excuse me." She stooped to pick up the flower just as Paul made the same gesture. Their heads clicked. "Oh!" said Jan again.

Paul straightened, stepped grandly aside and waved his hand for Jan to enter. She edged past him cautiously, and went to stand beside his desk while he retrieved his carnation, blew upon it to revive its freshness, and restored it to his lapel. Then he turned to Jan, pleasure in the task before him shining in his pale eyes.

"Well, well," he began with what he intended for a smile, "so we're here at last, are we? Such a bother, isn't it, to come down to work every day. And quite impossible to get here on time. Yes, yes, yes," as Jan attempted to speak, "I know just how it is. First one thing and then another, and before you know it, you're just a teeny bit late."

Paul watched his progress to the switchboard and the lengthy conversation that followed.

"Understand, Miss Payson, I don't mind, personally. But I'm here to see that the rules of the house are obeyed. And if I can't get one person to obey them, there's always someone else who will."

"You're firing me, aren't you?" Jan interrupted, her bitterly tried temper slipping its leash. "Then why don't you say so?" Her voice broke and she stopped suddenly, tears smarting against her eyelids. Why did she always have to cry when she was angry?

"Very well, then, her it is in two words: you're fired," said Paul, obviously enjoying her misery. "Stop at the cashier's window for your money."

He turned toward his desk and Jan, white now and trembling, stood a moment, wondering if there wasn't some appeal she could make, some explanation that would cause him to give her another chance.

"Mr. Harris," she began.

He picked up the telephone, asked for a number, glanced over the mouthpiece as he waited. "That will be all, Miss Payson," he said, "good afternoon."

Jan went out mechanically, stopped at the cashier's cage and with shaking fingers signed the slip which released the hotel from further obligation as to wages, carefully put the meager amount of cash in the zippered inside section of her hand bag. Jobless again! And she had looked so long before she'd found this job! But then Dora hadn't needed so many things and they had had enough for rent. Now the few dollars in her pocketbook could scarcely placate their landlady even for a day. Well, somehow she must try to keep the news from Dora for a little while—perhaps something would turn up.

Paul Harris absently tapped a pencil on his glass-topped desk and gazed out at the rain that was now coming down in torrents. Holidays were always a dreary business, even at the Devon Arms. Employes disliked coming to work and they showed it — were even sometimes downright impudent, like that girl he had just fired. Pretty little thing she was. But Paul had learned long ago that there was no place for sentiment in his business.

He still remembered his first job. What a greenhorn he had been! Working till all hours. Then that last night when Helen was in the hospital and he had wanted to be with her—that night the owner had insisted that he stay on. He had stayed, too, but he had never seen Helen alive again.

If only he had had the training then that he had now, and the salary—what he could have done for Helen! But how useless it was to worry over the past! The point was that now he knew how to be more insulting than the customers on occasion, to harass and intimidate those under him, until any hotel owner counted himself lucky to have "Paul Harris—Manager" on his stationery.

Paul threw the pencil down and, rising, pulled his morning coat into its usual meticulous, creaseless fit. It was generally profitable to walk around the hotel at odd hours. Kept the help on their toes.

As he walked down the corridor the magazine stand was directly at the end of the vista. His step quickened as he caught sight of the blond Elsa talking to a dark-haired girl who was looking over the stock. He advanced swiftly and Elsa turned red as she glanced up and saw him standing before the booth.

"I was just explaining to — to Miss—"

"Fay Elkins," the girl supplied crisply.

Paul looked her over in stony silence and she returned his stare with bold black eyes. She was not the type, he decided instantly, for the Devon Arms. Needed plenty of toning down. Bad voice, for one thing, and too much lipstick on an over-wide mouth. The patrons of an exclusive hotel like this were apt to be finicky about those who served them—they liked unobtrusive types. And this was not the time to risk offending the clientele. In fact, Paul had been trying to think of some way to attract more customers to the place. Now he merely nodded toward Elsa and she slipped thankfully back toward the kitchen.

"You've done this work before, Miss Elkins?" he demanded.

"Oh, yes." The girl, with an ingratiating smile, leaned comfortably over the counter and prepared to make a conquest. "I've been in some of the best hotels in America, I guess. Of course the last job I had wasn't so good—"

"I see." Paul's curt tone cut across the girl's words and brought her to an upright position. "Well, you understand that this is a very good position and we expect our employees to observe certain standards of dress and behavior. See me in the morning at eight o'clock."

He had the satisfaction of seeing her affected manner disappear before the stinging rebuke in his voice and knew that for a moment the girl was on the verge of walking out on him. But the next minute her glance dropped and she said sulkily, "Okay, I get it."

Paul turned, satisfied with himself, just in time to see a tall lanky figure advance on Molly, the telephone operator. In his hand he carried a chauffeur's cap and Paul, without seeming to, watched his progress to the switchboard and the lengthy conversation that followed. After a few minutes, however, when the man remained, Paul moved toward the raised platform where the switchboard was placed. Any chauffeur ought to get his instructions more quickly than that.

He was almost upon him before a certain familiarity in the arrogant tilt of the long narrow head made him walk more slowly. He changed his direction slightly, so that as he approached he could see the strongly etched profile of the man who was hanging on Molly's every word.

Mother Goose Still Favorite

Interesting is the statement made by Dr. A. S. W. Rosenbach, that the greatest literature ever written for children is the collection of Mother Goose rhymes. Dr. Rosenbach is a world authority on rare books.

Books for children come and go, but Mother Goose has been a constant favorite for nearly 250 years. The collection of rhymes and jingles known to us has accumulated through a quarter of a millenium.

What is believed to be the original book of Mother Goose was written by a Frenchman, Charles Perrault, in 1697, and published in the name of his son, Perrault d'Amanacourn, under the title "Contes de ma Mere l'Oye." Of the ten tales in the Perrault volume, seven were attributed to the Pentameron, an Italian collection of stories dating farther back than 1697. In 1760 John Newbery of London, used some old Mother Goose rhymes and added new ones in a book he published.

One may speculate as to why these simple old jingles remain so popular. Yet in so doing one will progress little in child study or psychology. The fact that some Mother Goose characters are used in modern Santa Claus street parades testifies to their agelessness and universality. Mother Goose characters, from Old King Cole and Simple Simon to Jack Be Nimble and Jack Sprat have furnished material for endless comment and comparison. The simple appeal of Mother Goose will doubtless keep the book alive forever. — Sarnia Observer.

Finnish Baths in Haliburton

The Post's Haliburton village correspondent sent in a yarn yesterday with regard to Finnish Baths being popular in the Ingoldsby settlement. The correspondent, after stating that the fad, if it can be called by that title, was started by the 10 families of Finlanders who have settled in this community, described in more or less details the program followed by persons "enjoying" one of these treatments. The knowledge displayed in the article almost leads one to believe that the writer, perhaps, had some practical experience.

Steam, used in a Finnish bath is created by the throwing of water on heated stones. The steam fills the room in which the people are seated and poison is said to be sweated out of the body by the resulting heat. After the steam is continually created until the human endurance point has been reached and then, the correspondent says, the bathers retire to the lake where they receive a sudden and complete cooling off.

Another Alternative is, apparently to have someone douse your warm body with a pail of cold water. Either operation, even commenting on it from safe distance, leave the editor with a shivery feeling in his spine.

Finnish baths are said to be good for a person. Persons in Haliburton, who have gone through the ordeal, state they felt very refreshed after the bath and intend taking them regularly. The editor will gladly take the first part of the operation but draws the line at the idea of jumping into the lake. It would be even worse than a cold shower on a January morning.—Lindsay Post.

URGE AMENDMENT

urged amendments to the British North America Act, requesting particularly" an early change that will restrict the powers of the Senate to veto not more than twice any Bill passed by the House of Commons". This was in harmony with the practice of the British parliament.

The Railwaymen's spokesmen emphasized the difficulties confronting the transportation industry. Constitutional limitations "remain a glaring obstacle to the enactment of legislation so necessary to ensure equitable regulation and effective control of the various forms of transportation," the brief said.

"This obstacle in addition to other contributing factors, together with the deplorable lack of co-operation from provincial authorities looking to Federal regulation, combine to perpetuate a chaotic condition in the transportation field unequalled in any country in the world."

Railway Labor had given careful consideration to various suggestions aimed at ameliorating this condition, including that of unification. Recommendatons made to the special committee of the Senate inquiring last session into railway matters were repeated.

Dominion Should Control

These urged control by the Dominion over all forms of transportation of passengers and freight for hire. Authority should be obtained by amending the B.N.A. Act. Further the Dominion Parliament should be empowered to enact social and industrial legislation.

The identity of the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railways should be maintained, and the proposal for unified management should be discarded "as contrary to human and nationad welfare", the Railwaymen said. They approved the policy which gave the Board of Transport Commissioners authority to determine what rail as a public necessity and convenience.

"But no such powers should be given any government authority which could arbitrarily force upon one railway a co-operative or unification measure or line abandonment proposed by another railway," the brief said.

Urges Compensation

Appointment was urged of a committee to continue study of the whole transportation problem "until a practical and humane solution is reached." It was asked that provision be made for a representative of railway labor on the committee.

The brief urged compensation for railway employees who lost their jobs as a result of co-operative measures or "any form of unification." Sixty days notice should be given such employeees, coupled with an opportunity for the Railwaymen's representatives to meet in joint conference with the railways considering those measures.

The delegation canvassed part of the Senate Committee's proceedings, recalling the arguments for and against both co-operative measures and unified management.

"These proposals coupled with the continual propaganda stressing the necessity for unifying the management of the two railways have created a considerable feeling of unrest and insecurity among railway employees," the brief said. "Consequently a conference has been arranged, to be held in Ottawa Jan. 9, 1939, of all the Canadian representatives of the Standard Railway Labor organizations holding agreements with the two railways and representing approximately 86,000 employees directly affected.

To Consider Whole Problem

"The purpose of this conference is to give consideration to the so-called railway problem, the proposals made by way of solution thereof, and other factors relating thereto, after which a further submission will be prepared and presented to the government as early as possible, fully outlining [illegible] views of railway labor and containing a request for such legislative action as may be deemed advisable in the circumstances."

Amendments to the Railway Act were urged. These dealt with compensation for property loss suffered by employees through partial closing or abandonment of stations or lines. Other changes of a technical character were recommended and it was urged that the railway grade crossing fund be enlarged from an annual $200,000 grant, to $500,000.

Oppose Waterway

Opposition to the St. Lawrence Waterway was expressed on the ground that further public expenditures to subsidize additional transport agencies which would compete with the railways would serve only to accentuate the present railway problem.

The delegation asked that retirement pensions be exempted from income tax and that the Old Age pension be made available at the age of 65, with the the Dominion paying 90 per cent.

Representation of railway labor was sought on public boards and commissions and the railwaymen's spokesmen asked that two technical advisers be appointed annually with the Labor delegate to the International Labor Conference at Geneva.

Disappointment was voiced that a Dominion system of contributory unemployment insurance had not been instituted, while the delegation solicited establishment of State Health Insurance.

Lily Pons Pays Debt Owed to Metropolitan Tenor

New York, Dec. 15—(AP)— Lily Pons paid a debt last night in her season's debut performance of "Lucia di Lammermoor." It was owed Galliano Masini, tenor new to the Metropolitan Opera, since June 12, 1931.

That was the day that Pons, five months after her first appearance at the Metropolitan, made her South American debut at the Colon in Buenos Aires.

Pons had been only a few months in the big time and was excusably nervous. She was singing the title role in "Lucia," and the tenor opposite her was one Galliano Masini. Masini was established with the Buenos Aires public; he took the new soprano in hand and helped.

So last summer when final decisions on this season were being made by General Manager Edward Johnson of the Met, Miss Pons suggested she would be glad to return a couple of weeks early, in order to sing opposite Masini when he made his first appearance.

The little Coloratura is pretty hard to efface in a performance of "Lucia," and however much she turned things Masini's way, she still was the star. But she, in her turn, did all she could.

MOUNTED POLICE GUARD ECUADOR

President Dissolves the Assembly and Orders New Elections

Quito, Ecuador, Dec. 15—(AP)— Mounted Police patrolled Quito today as a tense political situation developed after a gun battle last night between police and leftist opponents of President Aurelio Mosquera Narvaez.

The President ordered the arrest of a number of leftist legislators, dissolved the Parliamentary Assembly and called new elections. He promised a manifesto would be issued shortly explaining his actions to the people.

The dispute revolved about the Assembly's promotion of Col. Larrea Alba who assumed the Presidency briefly in 1931 in an army revolt, to the rank of General. President Mosquera Narvaez declared the appointment unconstitutional and the Assembly repected his message 31 to 17.

The President ordered the arrest of the Assembly President Francisco Arizaga Luque and of Larrea Alba. Secret police pursued them to a refuge with a cavalry regiment, the Yaguachi, and a gun battle followed. (An official announcement said the two were captured but this was disputed in other quarters.)

Among the deputies arrested was the Chamber Vice-President, Antonio Jose Borja.

While calm prevailed elsewhere in the nation, Quito store keepers closed their shops and citizens kept in seclusion during the fighting.

Church and School Choirs Join in Carol Service

Members of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church and many other music lovers in Belleville learn with interest of a program of Christmas carols which will be presented on Wednesday, December 21st., in Grace United Church, Toronto, where Mr. John M. Hodgins, who was organist and choirmaster at St. Andrew's until last summer, is in charge of the musical services. This carol service which will be given in Grace United will take the form of a candle light service led by the choirs of Howard Public School, of which Mr. L. D. Post is leader, of Parkdale Collegiate Institute, directed by Mr. Leslie Bell and of Grace United Church, directed by Mr. Hodgins. The organist of the evening will be Mr. Ausman Miller, L.R.S.M. The program will be composed of carols in the singing of which the congregation will join and of carols and other Christmas music, sung by the choirs.

The Debutante Steps Out

Within recent years a new big business has sprung up in the upper levels of American society. It is the modern "coming-out party" industry. The old-fashioned debut, which laid an egg during the deepest gloom of depression years, has hatched out a youngster of rather colossal proportions. It is estimated that the current season's debs in sixteen of the largest cities in the United States will spend $3,000,000 in the process of shedding the chrysalis of childhood to become social butterflies.

Couturiers, caterers and columnists as a result are enjoying a mild sort of boom for, from a dignified and grim social event of former days, the debut has developed into an acknowledged contest for publicity. In New York, where 400 sweet young things are making their bows this season, the debs have stimulated the competition by mass clerking in an exclusive department store, by fashion shows, by a public-gaze hay ride, and in case everyone was not looking, they did a radio broadcast. These efforts, of course, were all done in the name of sweet charity. The publicity, it is said, is necessary to ensure an interestingly long stag line at the debut, so apparently the faith and hope of a successful outcome to the come-out is pinned on the superlative powers of charity.

Formerly a debut was the occasion for the entrance to society of the family's pride and joy and after the formalities she would take her place in all the grown-up circles. Nowadays, sophisticates of 17 or 18, who have been doing the night spots for several seasons, prepare for their "coming out" as if it were the climax in their public career. The girl who has captured the 1939 title of America's most famous deb, Brenda Frazier, 17, is typical of this class. With $5,000,000 back of her, Miss Frazier is advancing through a spectacular program of debutante activities to December 27, when her own bow will take place before a crowd of a thousand—more, if her mother is unable to restrict the guest list.

We may be wrong, but it seems to us the young things of this strata of society are coming out on the wrong feet. Instead of setting up a foundation of sane and sober living, they seem to be framing their lives with the shallowness of ostentation and the tinsel of cheap publicity. Their possession of great wealth should be used with as much care as those who are endowed with musical skill, scientific or educational ability use their legacy. Nelson Rockefeller, one of the five sons of John D. Jr., is credited with a remark that would seem to be a splendid motto for all the princes and princess of the big business kings. He said, "I can honestly say that none of us has ever had a feeling of actually being rich. What we did find out was that we had inherited heavy responsibility toward the family and the world."—St. Thomas Times Journal.

Dr. Marston T. Bogert, recipient of the Priestley Medal, the highest award of the American Chemical Society, predicts that the day is in sight when, if necessary, our food could consist of capsules or pills of concentrated, scientifically correct synthetic nutrients, although at present this would be too expensive.

Wing Commander Hume Addresses St. John's Men's Club Banquet

Stirling—St. John's Memorial Hall was well filled on Thursday evening Dec. 8th, when the officers and members were hosts to their friends for their annual dinner. The guests were welcomed by President Nathaniel Heath and Rev. A. S. McConnell and the dinner prepared almost entirely by the members of the club left nothing to be desired as the capable staff of well-organized waiters served the large number present with more than they could eat of the very finest of food. With the exception of the dessert which was prepared by the ladies, everything which adorned the heavily laden tables was prepared by the men of the club. At the conclusion of the dinner the gathering was led in community singing by Mr. Fred Houchin and an excellent program presented by the following guest artists: Miss Barbara Joan Carr, tap dancer and elocutionist, who in spite of her tender years thrilled the audience with her natural ability in both these arts; readings and comic songs offered by Messrs Smith, talented comedian of Belleville and Payne of Trenton who displayed versatility in dialect specialties.

Guest Speaker Wing-Commander Hume

The guest speaker of the evening was introduced by Rev. F. A. Smith of Trenton and was Wing Commander Hume of R.C.A.F. stationed at the Trenton airport who spoke on the "growth of aviation." Speaking in clear informal tones the speaker outlined the rapid strides taken in the industry which today is only thirty-five years old. No other phase of progress has moved with such speed as flying since it beginning in 1903 when the first flight was made in what was little more than a kite.

In 1914 aircraft became a means of offence and defence, and progress in its development was speeded up. Machines that were accepted in those days as technical achievements have long since been discarded as obsolete and at the present time such constructive competitions as the Snyder Cup races have done much to produce the amazing flying speed of well over four hundred miles per hour. All this progress means much to the people of our day. It reduces space from weeks of separation to only a few hours.

The possibility of war would include all people. We in Canada are not exempt from such aerial dangers either. Few of us realize that with machines available today it would be possible to land an aircraft carrier bearing a brood of some forty five or fifty light bombers and equipped, sufficiently close to turn them loose at Toronto, Winnipeg and Montreal at the same time and return to the brood ship without refueling. While it is hoped that this great enterprise will always be used by man for construction rather than destruction we must face the facts of development and remain abreast of the times so that if an emergency arises we shall be sufficiently schooled in the art to offer protection to our people.

The thanks of the organization and their friends for this very helpful and instructive address ably delivered by one thoroughly familiar with the subject, was expressed by Dr. A. E. Carleton.

Thanks were also extended to assisting artists on the evening's program and to all committee workers who had assisted in making the evening a most successful one. Greetings of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church were extended to the gathering by Rev. W. H. V. Walker.

St. Andrew's Young People's Guild

The regular weekly meeting of St. Andrew's Young People's Guild was held in the church parlours on Monday evening. The evening's program was arranged under the supervision of Mrs. Foster, convener of the Program Committee. The devotional exercises conducted by President Roy Juby included a brief song service, scriptural passages read by Miss Lillian Mathews, with Rev. Walker offering prayer. The business part of the meeting which included the secretary's report of the previous meeting was also directed by the President. An interesting reading presented by Shirley Montgomery was very much enjoyed. Shirley has promise of becoming one of the district's most talented elocutionists. The next number was an instrumental solo by another of the junior members of the organization, Jean McIntosh.

The speaker of the evening was Mrs. H. Foster who dealt very capably with a missionary topic. In her remarks, Mrs. Foster emphasized the need of stimulating greater interest in the missionary endeavour of the Christian Church. Various passages of Scripture, dealing with the subject of spreading the gospel were read by other members of the guild at various points in the address. This part of the meeting was climaxed with the singing of a hymn and the benediction. During the recreation period Mrs. Foster directed a contest and keen interest was taken in several games of Shuffle Board on the newly marked courts. Messrs Wm. Dermedy and Roy Juby were responsible for the arranging of the courts which are painted on the floor. Much interest is being shown as members acquaint themselves with this fine game.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Sandercock of Belleville visited friends and relatives in Stirling.

Mr. Herb Bush of Murray Township and Mr. Wm. Alcombrack of Watertown, N.Y., spent a day this week visiting friends and relatives at West Huntingdon.

Mrs. Alfred Livingston received word on Tuesday that her mother was seriously ill at her home in Rochester, N.Y.

Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Bailey returned home Saturday after spending a few days in Toronto.

The demand for Christmas trees seems very large according to the number of truck loads passing through Stirling enroute to Central Ontario cities. Residents say that more have passed through the village thus far than in any previous year.

The Stirling Hydro Electric staff have completed the erection of the gaily colored Christmas lights which spent the streets of the business section of the town. Merchants of the town have brightened their display windows with all the Christmas decorations and the erection of the large community Christmas tree in its usual spot east of Memorial Park with its array of lights will give the proper Christmas appearance for the arrival of Santa Claus and his big parade on Saturday next. Hundreds of children throughout the entire district are looking forward to his visit eagerly.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York ,Dec. 15 — (AP) — Stocks extended their forward sweep in today's market but late profit-taking cut down many early gains running to 2 or more points.

Buying orders piled up overnight and, for a while after the opening, the ticker tape was behind.

Aircrafts again were in the forefront of the upturn, but even these lost some of their steam eventually. Sperry, at one time in new high ground along with Douglas, United Aircraft and North American Aviation, was down nearly a point at the approach of the final hour. The others, though, remained behind plus signs. Transfers were about 2,000,000 shares.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 15—(CP)—Trading continued through the early part of the session on Toronto Exchange today at a fairly actvie tempo, resulting i n turnover of 49 5,000shares in the first three hours and the industrial and mining indices showed moderate gains. Western oils were under light profit-taking and they posted a minor net loss.

Steel, food, paper, beverage and utility stocks advanced moderately. Brazilian showed a gain of nearly a point. Base Metal shares were uniformly higher, Smelters leading with a gain of about a point or more. Among the medium-price issues Waite-Amulet led with a gain of 25 cents. Higher metal prices supported the market.

O'Brien, selling above the $3 mark was a strong spot in the gold group. McIntyre added a point and other seniors were steady. Home Oil, Okalta, Calgary-Edmonton, Davies and Calmont were off narrowly and other western oils moved quietly.

FIRST APPEARANCE SINCE MISHAP

London, Dec. 15.—(CP Cable) — The Duke of Gloucester today made his first public appearance since he broke his collarbone in a hunting field mishap December fifth. His Royal Highness presided at a meeting of The League of Mercy, read a message from the King and made a speech himself.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford By Financial Service

Kerr Addison

It is understood that Kerr-Addison will this month pay off the last $25,000 upon the original bank loan of $225,000 which went into completion of the mill and mining equipment. The mill is now handling around 670 tons daily, with mill originally rated at 500 tons of everything is working smoothly in all departments. Millheads are running at the usual level and production maintained at $120,000 monthly, although it is quite probable that figure will be exceeded considerably this month. The recent diamond drilling results have given reason to believe that milling capacity may be lifted to as much as 1,500 tons daily before the coming year is spent.

Tremendous progress was made in the past 12 months in the Turner Valley. The field is shaping up into an important producer and once the marketing and distribution problems are adjusted, Alberta will be ranked among the leading oil producers in the Empire. In view of the rapid growth and increasing importance of the area, it is felt that this difficulty can be ironed out and a major oil industry established. While it may require a little patience, the situation bears watching very closely.

International Nickel

International Nickel has been acting very impressively in the market, and, in this connection several reasons might be cited:—

1. Earnings will be more than sufficient to cover the dividend on the common stock this year.
2. It has been officially stated that sales during the last quarter have increased and that the outlook was one of improvement.
3. Robert C. Stanley's review of the Nickel industry at the year-end will undoubtedly cover the progress that the company has made and full particulars effecting it during 1939.
4. A number of prominent New York Stock Exchange houses have been recommending the selling of Anaconda and Kennecott and purchasing Nickel, on the basis that the last two corporations own considerable property in Chile and that Canada just now is by far a safer place to have one's capital.
5. The new construction program to be presented at the next Congress at Washington in connection with the expansion of the American Navy will mean tremendous quantities of Nickel will be used.

Home Oil

When a pool is operating in any stock many rumours are placed in circulation that are not in accordance with fact. As an example of this, a news carrier stated today that the Home-Millarville No. 2 well was a 3600 barrel producer. We immediately checked on this report with sources at the well by wire. We were told that the current flow was between 25-50 barrels per hour and that the test would be continued. This well is not being operated at night.

The Home-Millarville No. 2 well has splendid promise and as a result a large new crude field has been proven. It is not necessary to exaggerate its possiblities — the hard cold facts are sufficient. Incorrect information can do the Alberta field a considerable amount of harm.

Salvation Army Kettle Makes Its Appeal

Today the Salvation Army "pot" made its appearance on Front Street, the symbol that the "Army" is making its Christmas appeal for cheer and relief. Everyone will therefore have an opportunity to contribute to the efforts of the Army to bring Christmas cheer into homes which would be otherwise rather cheerless and to bring some measure of relief at this season.

The S. A. "pot" or "kettle" is one of the best known marks or symbols in the sphere of philanthropy and goodwill.

SEABISCUIT AND STAGEHAND RATED TOPS FOR 1938

Voted the best horses of the year in racing circles were Seabiscuit, left, and Stagehand, right, who captured first place honors in the all-age and three-year-old divisions respectively in the annual poll conducted among turf writers. Seabiscuit came within $36,000 of equalling Sun Beau's money-winning record during the year and of course, beat War Admiral in the famous match race. The Admiral had beaten out Seabiscuit for first place in last year's poll by a scant 18 points. Stagehand, winner of almost $200,000 during the year, had many notable wins to his credit and was an easy winner over Lawrin in the three-year-old voting. Two other divisions were voted on, the two-year-old colts and two-year-old fillies, with El Chico getting top spot in the former and Inscoelda in the latter.

to pieces". He was discussing Nationalism in the Dominions.

Much Strengthening Not Needed

Today, in a speech at the Royal Empire Club, he said "I do not think, despite what I am reported to have said the other day, that much strengthening of the ties between the Dominions and this country is needed."

Mr. Chamberlain spoke today at a luncheon at the House of Commons to celebrate the elevation to the peerage of Lord Bicester, formerly Vivian Smith, partner in Morgan, Grenfell and Company.

The German statesman probably most aware of Britain's financial power, Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, president of The Reichsbank, was not among the guests, although he is a visitor in London. The German financier spent considerable time today at the Bank of England, with the Governor of which, Montagu Norman, he came to London to confer.

Wellington, Dec. 15.—(CP-Reuters)—Prime Minister Michael Savage, head of New Zealand's Labor Government, today said he thought "Britain will find that, when it comes to the pinch, no one will be missing as far as the Dominions are concerned".

Bluenose Skipper 'Spliced for Life' At Halifax Tonight

Halifax, Dec. 15.—(CP)—Captain Angus Walters, skipper of the Schooner Bluenose, and 28-year-old Mildred Butler of Halifax, will walk the aisle in old St. Paul's Church tonight "to be spliced for life".

The couple will honeymoon on the ocean, sailing for Boston after a reception tonight.

DEER FALLS 50 FEET ESCAPING WOLVES

Latchford, Ont., Dec. 15.—(CP) Highway workers today found evidence of a northland tragedy in the broken body of a buck deer. The animal lay at the bottom of a 50-foot deep rock cut, where it had apparently fallen as it made an unsuccessful effect to jump the gap and escape a pack of wolves.

The trail of another deer, apparently its mate, picked up on the other side of the cut and led off into the woods.

Latchford is eighteen miles southwest of Cobalt.

Good Demand for Turkeys at Napanee

It may be the fact that there is a shortage in turkeys this year, or perhaps an increase in the general public's desire to have the succulent birds grace their Yuletide boards, but the annual Turkey Day held in Napanee yesterday saw every available bird picked up by buyers long before closing time.

Prices were quoted at twenty and twenty-one cents for choice rough-dressed turkeys while chickens sold at 13-17 and 18 cents. Very few geese were offered and no quotations were made.

Buyers converged on the market at an early hour and competition was brisk. Vendors, however, seemed willing to part with their stocks at prices a little in advance of early quotations, and by three o'clock in the afternoon, all available turkeys were sold.

Belleville butchers, however, stated today that in all probability quotations would remain around twenty-five and twenty-six cents per pound for choice birds, with varying qualities and weights being offered at commensurate prices.

A small offering of turkeys was available at the city market today where twelve and fifteen pound birds were offered at twenty-five cents per pound. One vendor held out for twenty-eight and thirty cents but business proved dull. A small number of geese were offered at approximately twenty-two cents per pound. Few chickens were on display, and these were quoted at from ninety cents upwards.

POLICE ARE ASKED FOR MAN'S WHEREABOUTS

Belleville police today were asked to seek the possible whereabouts of a man whose name, only, was given as Joseph Kelly, who was known to have been employed in or near this city some years ago. A Toronto firm is desirous of locating Mr. Kelly on a matter of advantage to him, police were informed. Persons knowing any man of this name, who is employed locally, are asked to communicate with local police authorities.

Cheese-Guarding Cats of Belleville Given Publicity Throughout World

Newspaper accounts of Jim Cook's cats, mouse catchers par excellence, which were set to guard the lower portals of the city hall building and the cheese show during British Empire Cheese Exhibition week last month have percolated to the far corners of the Empire.

Despatches regarding the animals have penetrated as far as Australia and New Zealand as well as the British Isles, bringing the City of Belleville unestimated publicity.

The following letter received by Mayor Jamieson Bone this morning is typical:

42 Glendower Road,
Peverell, Plymouth, England.
December 4th.

The Mayor of Belleville.
Dear Sir:

In one of our daily papers I read an article on your cats guarding the Cheese Exhibition, and wanting a pen pal in America, I thought that your town would be an admirable place for a chum.

Could you please ask a girl or a boy, preferrably a girl, if she would like to correspond with me?

"I am fifteen years old, and am learning ship-fitting on His Majesty's Dockyard here, and, also, I am studying statics, science and mathematics. I shall be very grateful to you in return for any trouble you may be put to

Yours sincerely,
Maurice John Wyatt

An accompanying clipping taken from a Plymouth daily newspaper reads: 'Cats Guard Display of Cheese.' Specially trained cats have been put on guard at the exhibition in Belleville, Ontario, Canada, of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association in Belleville .The cats were specially chosen from local warehouses, say Reuter's despatches.

SCHOOL DAMAGED CHILDREN MARCH OUT

TORONTO, Dec. 15.— (CP) — Fire which started in the junior hall of the De La Salle Oaklands school today caused heavy damage, but all of the 80-odd pupils whose classrooms were in the building, marched out quietly. There was no confusion, no panic and on one was hurt. Seventeen pupils from other classrooms also were forced to leave.

Some of the boys even went back into the burning edifice and rescued some of their school books, while another band smashed a door into one of the Senior Fourth classrooms and shoved a piano outside far from the creeping flames.

DEATH PREFERRED TO CRIPPLE'S LIFE

Father Decides Against Operation on Cancer-Stricken Daughter

New York, Dec. 15. — (AP)—A decision that death was better than the life of a cripple was reached today by William Lewis in determining the fate of his cancer-stricken daughter, Dorothy, eight.

Inundated by letters from all over the country, citing pro and con arguments by those who had read of the little Brooklyn cripple's plight, the distraught father made his choice—"She will live or die on both legs".

Surgeons have told him the daughter, afflicted with sarcoma, or cancer of the thigh bone, must die within eight or ten months unless her leg is amputated.

On the other hand, an operation would give her one chance in ten of living—healthy, but a cripple.

"I have made up my mind," Lewis said. "I have gone through torture but in the end I knew I could not consign the child to a cripple's life."

"My reasons are not emotional or sentimental. They are based on the medical profession's own word that an amputation could not be proved successful until five years have passed."

BUDGE VOTED BEST—HENRY, JOHNNY FOLLOW

Three figures who attained international prominence in the world of sport, were voted the outstanding athletes in United States for 1938 in a poll conducted by The Associated Press. Top position went to Don Budge, central figure above, who swept the world's tennis courts clear of opposition before turning pro in the fall. He won the French, British, Australian and American singles crowns, something no one else had ever done. Second place was captured by Hammering Henry Armstrong, left inset, sensational Negro fighter, who, after winning the world's featherweight title near the end of 1937, added the welter and lightweight crowns to his collection to become the only fighter ever to hold three titles at the same time. He later renounced his rights to the featherweight honors. Johnny Vander Meer, right, inset, rookie southpaw with Cincinnati Reds in the National League, took third place in the poll on the strength of the two successive no-hit, no-run games he pitched early in the season.

RANGER DEFENCE TOO GOOD FOR THIS BOSTON ATTACK

Two of the most favored teams in the National Hockey League were battling when this picture was taken in New York, where Boston Bruins had a date with the Rangers. The latter went down before the Bruin dynamiters, 3-0, as Frank Brimsek registered his third shut out in a row. This Boston attack was not completely successful, but it provided plenty of camera action as Mel Hill and Roy Conacher, rookies with the Bruins, made a sorty into Ranger territory, but were forced to the corner by the rival defence pair of Muzz Patrick and Art Coulter. Goalie Dave Kerr stands ready, while Phil Watson has moved back to protect.

Belleville Redmen Move Into Undisputed First Place in Van Horne Series at Kingston

Defeat Kingston City 4-3 Coming from Behind to Win

NO PENALTIES

St. Louis Paced Winners with Two Goals and an Assist

Undefeated and untied the Belleville Redmen moved into undisputed lead of the Van Horne Memorial series at Kingston by virtue of a 4 to 3 victory over the Kingston City sextette last evening. It was the third consecutive win for Eddie Thomas' charges in as many starts and the win practically cinches a play-off berth for the Redmen, who vaulted over the Queen's University entry to take command of the league standing.

Following a scoreless first period Belleville rammed home the first goal of the game, but the homesters rallied to score all of their goals in this period, as the Redmen added a second to make the count 3-2 as the last stanza opened.

St. Louis' solo effort and Bill Jackson's big-moneyed goal from Barriage's pass cinched the piece as the Belleville defence tightened in the third stanza to halt the pressing Limestone City sextette as they were seen striving to notch the equalizer in the dying moments.

‘ Louis paced the winners with two goals and an assist, Storms and Jackson getting the other two Belleville counters. The Redmen played inspired hockey as a unit and well deserved the victory of the night. The Redmen have two remaining games in the Van Horne series, one with Queens and the final of the schedule versus the R.C.A.F. "Flyers."

The lineups:

Belleville: Goal, Watt; defense, Bentley and St. Louis; centre, O. Jackson; wings, B. Jackson and C. Barriage. Subs, Storms, Robinson, Prevost, McCreary, Leary.

Kingston: Goal, Hewitt; defense, Roberts and Nicholson; centre, Burtch; wings, Stoness and Gow. Subs, Scrutton, Crawford, Hagen, Boyd, Atkinson. Referee: R. Dougall.

First Period:
No scoring.
No penalties.

Second Period.
Belleville, Storms (St. Louis) . 5.30
Kingston, Gow (Burtch) 10.10
Belleville, St. Louis 14.00
Kingston, Gow 16.30
Kingston, Nicholson 18.45
No penalties.

Third Period.
Belleville, St. Louis 10.00

RAMBLERS WIN FROM HORNETS

Philadelphia Leading Their Section by Two Point Margin

(By The Canadian Press)

It's enough to bring tears to the eyes of the most phlegmatic coach the way Philadelphia Ramblers have been treating the opposition in the International-American Hockey League. Even when the teams hold the Ramblers from customary terrific scoring outbursts they still don't seem to be able to take the measure of the Philadelphia outfit.

Ramblers latest victory came last night when they topped Pittsburgh Hornets 1-0, while Cleveland Barons were winning by the same score over New Haven Eagles.

Victory for Ramblers put them two points ahead of Providence Reds for the lead in the league's Eastern Division. Barons, in winning, held to their third place spot in the Western Section. Lloyd Roubell gave Ramblers victory with a tally from a scramble in the second period but it was great goaling of Bert Gardiner that kept Hornets off the score sheet. The Cleveland marker was scored by Phil Hergesheimer in the last period.

HAVELOCK JRS. ACCEPT BYE IN JUNIOR 'C' LOOP

Four Other Teams Will Play Double Schedule Ending Jan. 30

FIRST TWO PLAYOFF

Winners Meet Havelock in Two Game Series Goals to Count

When the Havelock Junior Hockey Club agreed to waive group games and accept a bye into the district junior "C" group in the O.H.A. last evening when the five clubs composing the group met under Convener S. R. Burrows at the Hume Arena, the remaining four clubs drafted a double schedule of 24 games duration for the current hockey season.

The clubs represented were Napanee, Picton, Trenton, Belleville "Quintes" and the Havelock club, which agreed to accept a bye into the group finals. Each of the four contesting clubs will have six home and an equal number of road games in the 24 game schedule adopted. At the conclusion of the league schedule the clubs finishing first and second respectively will meet in a home and home game series, goals to count with the winner ultimately meeting Havelock in the group finals, to commence at Havelock.

When the matter of referees was discussed three of the four clubs, Belleville "Quintes", Napanee and Trenton recommended Alex Weir, Brighton and Harold "Bouncer" Holway of Belleville for all games. Picton reserved the right to employ regular O.H.A. appointees, however.

The delegates present were: Picton, Brock Hudgins and Charlie Eedborough; Napanee, Lyn Crossman and Walt Gerow; Trenton, Mr. J. Haffey and Belleville, J. N. Yanover and "Toots" Holway.

The schedule adopted is as follows:

Dec. 27th: Belleville at Napanee.
Dec. 27th: Trenton at Picton.
Dec. 30th: Napanee at Trenton.
Dec. 30th: Picton at Belleville.
Jan. 3rd: Napanee at Picton.
Jan. 4th: Trenton at Belleville.
Jan. 6th: Picton at Napanee.
Jan. 6th: Belleville at Trenton.
Jan. 9th: Trenton at Napanee.

GOODYEARS HELD TO OVERTIME TIE

Oshawa G-Men Nearly Handed Leaders First Defeat

Oshawa, Ont., Dec. 15 (CP)—The strutty Toronto Goodyears can boast no more of an unbroken string of victories dating from the start of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior "A" season. The end came last night in a 3-3 overtime tilt with Oshawa G-Men and the men of Manager Moose Ecclestone were hard-pressed to sidestep a loss after five straight wins.

Had it not been for the veteran Frankie O'Brien, who hasn't played much for Goodyears this season, the tilt might have been a hometown triumph. O'Brien, on the sidelines with an injured chest, scored the first two Toronto goals. Hank Goldup, high up in the league scoring records, scored the other in the third period to knot the count.

Len Chisholm snared the opening home counter in the opening period. Roy Covert and Doc Rowden made up the total in the second frame. The overtime session produced no goals and little aggressive hockey. Jack (Regina) Tisdall of Goodyears suffered a broken nose in the second period.

Uniform Ball Adopted by Major Leagues, Night Ball Allowed in American Loop

Raised Seams of National and Thin Cover of American Chosen

CHAPMAN TRADED

Cleveland and Philadelphia Will Play Night Ball Next Year

(By Gayle Talbot, Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, Dec. 15 (AP)—Having adopted a uniform ball and admitting the inevitability of night baseball, the big league magnates wind up their mid-winter gab-fest today in a joint appearance before Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis.

For the past two days the "old Jedge" has been in seclusion but today he will ask the boys to get down to cases and tell him if they actually have accomplished anything.

Early this morning General Manager Eddie Collins of Boston Red Sox announced the first deal of the meeting for the American League, whose members suffer principally at the hands of New York Yankees.

Chapman Traded

Collins made known he had traded Ben Chapman, veteran outfielder, to Cleveland Indians for pitcher Dennis Galehouse and infielder Tom Irwin. The exchange, Collins said, involved no money.

Collins explained the deal was sought to gain some pitching strength for Boston.

"We feel Chapman is much the best of the players involved and certainly our infield is pretty well set. But we needed some additional pitching and Galehouse ought to help us. We are figuring on Irwin only as protection."

Effect "Compromise"

Otherwise, the big news of the three-day gathering is the "compromise" on a uniform ball— one with the raised seams of the National League and the thin cover of the American.

This, perhaps, could be viewed as an effort to stem the Yankees' batting power, because the raised seams were found last season to give National League pitchers better control and to lend wider sweep to their curves. Yet demonstrations have proved that the ball travels just as far as the old livery sphere when hit solidly.

Night baseball broke down the final barrier when the American Leaguers granted Cleveland and Philadelphia permission to play seven nocturnal games each next season. The National League accepted the lights two years ago.

FARR THINKS HE WILL BEAT NOVA

Says He Will Quit Ring If He Loses Decision

Pompton Lakes, N.J., Dec. 15 — (AP)—The years have not mellowed Thomas George Paul Farr and he still is heard, penurious and tremendously assured. He thinks he will beat Lou Nova, the promising California heavyweight, Friday night. If he doesn't he will quit the ring.

The Welsh heavyweight is as easy to get along with as a wildcat with a toothache these days. Heavy training has not improved his temper. He will, however, talk your arm of at the drop of a sparring partner.

"If I am badly beaten I will quit," he said yesterday. "I will know I have come as far as I can in the ring. I have a little money, not much by some standards, but man when I think of the days I didn't have a bob to my name it's like millions.

"But I do not expect to be beaten. I am entirely confident I can win."

Tommy is in wonderful shape. He is down to 203 pounds and will go in at 204 against Nova.

"I am in good enough shape to beat Mr. Nova or anyone else," said Farr, the blushing violet. "If Gunnar Barlund can knock him down I can knock him out."

Helen Wills Moody Chosen as Heroine In Sports Comeback

New York, Dec. 15 (AP)—Heroine of the outstanding United States sports comeback of 1938 is Helen Wills Moody.

Twenty-four of 70 sports critics participating in the eighth annual Associated Press poll cast their first-place ballots for Mrs. Moody and her achievement in recapturing the Wimbledon championship after a three-year lapse.

Twenty-four other first-place votes went to Foxx for his recapture of the American League batting crown for the first time since 1933. But second and third place support swung the decision to Mrs. Moody who rolled up 113 1-2 points against 97 for Foxx. Points were awarded on a 3-2-1 basis with each expert naming three comebacks in the order of his choice.

LESTER PATRICK FEELS TWO SONS ARE MAKING GOOD

Not Given Any Advantage Because They Play for Their Father

NO SHOP TALK

Treated on the Team Just the Same as Any Others

(By Alan Randal, Canadian Press Staff Writer).

New York, Dec. 15 (CP)—Lester Patrick broke down today and, after considerable prodding, confessed to feeling the Patricks had at last "arrived" in the National Hockey League, now that Pop Lester bosses New York Rangers and sons Lynn and Murray play for him.

Lester, of course, would be less than human if he felt no swelling of paternal pride. But speaking strictly as chief of the Blueshirts' general staff, Patrick felt his boys had done well indeed, and under difficulties not encountered by other rookies.

"In general business a man gives his son a job and nobody say anything," Lester explained. "That seems to be what fathers are for. But not in hockey.

Always Good Athletes

"The few fans who couldn't realize these boys were good athletes long before they saw the N.H.L. found it hard at first to reconcile themselves to a Patrick playing for a Patrick. There seemed to be so many other hockey prospects around."

Actually, Lester pointed out, there was a dearth of good new talent in the fall of 1934 when Lynn a forward, jumped to the Rangers from Montreal's amateur ranks. But that made it no easier for him.

"To those fans who believed Lynn was stealing somebody's job, his errors stood out more than those of his team-mates," said boss Patrick. "Eventually, though, it became evident that Lynn was a real hockey man."

"Muzz" had it easier when he became a regular Ranger defenceman this season. After three years apprenticeship in the Patrick farm system his attitude was that of a professional. And by this time it was evident that nobody, much less a Patrick, got a berth with the Broadway Blues without earning it.

Don't Talk Shop

The Patricks only play hockey together—they don't talk it. The boss doesn't live with his sons and, as Lester made clear, shop talk is not the thing for visitors.

"Hockey—shop talk—has been taboo at our place for years," he said. "Of course," the boys occasionally bring up some point but for the most part it is during open forum with the team where suggestions are welcome from all."

Lynn shows more tendency to offer constructive suggestions than Muzz, sometimes flashing a streak of the acumen that stamped Lester and his brother Frank as hockey masters, even during their playing days.

There is this difference between the Patrick brothers now in the scoring summaries and the father and uncle who scored goals years ago. Muzz and Lynn play together. But Frank and Lester, aside from their single season with Renfrew Millionaires, were opponents, tearing at each other's throat.

After "selling" the Havelock delegates the idea of accepting a bye into the district junior "C" group in the O.H.A., the remaining four Bay of Quinte district junior squads settled away to draft a double schedule of 24 games when they met here last evening. Insofar as Picton and perhaps Napanee, is concerned the double schedule will doubtless prove profitable, but how junior O.H.A. squads in Trenton and Belleville hope to cope with senior clubs at the Hume Arena and the Trent Valley loop at Trenton will be interesting to watch However, the idea of a junior "C" team is to develop players and its only through the medium of group competition that the necessary results will materialize and reach possible reality. Weather permitting the district juniors will swing into action on Dec. 27th, with Belleville "Quintes" at Napanee and Trenton at Picton. The local junior "C" squad then return to the home ice for two games before the seniors swing into action, the fast Picton squad opening here on the 30th of this month and Trenton appearing in Belleville on Jan. 4th, 1939.

Eddie Thomas' Belleville Redmen moved into sole possession of first place in the Van Horne Memorial cup series by virtue of a 4 to 3 win over Bill Gowsell's Kingston City entry last night. The Redmen have yet to be defeated in the Van Horne series in three starts, three wins, is their record to date. Last night's win assures the locals of a play-off berth in the Kingston pre-season series. A rather unique game was seen last night, there was not a single penalty necessary during the entire 60 minutes of play. The Redmen were trailing 3-2 in the second, after a scoreless first stanza, but as has been the case in all previous games the Belleville red-clad outfit have played their greatest hockey while trailing and won in the final canto. It appears as though "Speedy" St. Louis has at least found a position to his particular liking. "Speedy" is not only going great guns on the defence, but also getting his share of goals. Two goals and an assist were his night's contribution last night. The winning goal was a picture, as Barriage went through and made a perfect play for Bill Jackson, who seldom misses that type of hockey opportunity.

Frank (Lefty) Coleman, London, Ont., amateur pitcher, was signed by the Toronto Maple Leaf Baseball Club of the International League yesterday. Coleman has been a power of strength to the Forest City senior O.B.A. mound corps for the past two years and was recommended to the Leafs by a Detroit baseball scout. Coleman will go south with the Leafs for a trial in the spring. If the Toronto Maple Leafs would scout a few more Canadian ball players, instead of taking third-raters from other class "AA" American clubs, they might develop a few players the calibre of Goody Rosen, George Selkirk and other Canadians who have made good under the big top of baseball.

Belittling the efforts of the Belleville Redmen in the Van Horne series, the Peterborough scribe has his trusty "herring" out across the Liftlock hockey trail and informs his readers our build-ups of the locals is purely imaginary and no doubt in time will find the Redmen trailing badly. What a surprise our alleged friend from the Quaker Oats town will get when he learns the Redmen have been undefeated in the Van Horne series and are now tops in the loop standing. Not wishing to appear of the boasting type, but we might merely suggest that Perth, Kingston Garrison and Kingston City are all classed as top ranking senior "B" clubs. The Redmen have triumphed over each and every one of this trio.

A moving picture called "The Duke of West Point" starring Louis Hayward has been completed and is woven around the annual hockey game between the Royal Military College and West Point, the R.M.S. of the U.S.A. The cadet hockey series has been carried on for 15 consecutive years and is referred to by Americans as the "sportingest spectacle on the sports calendar." The R.M.C.-West Point hockey series is not only unique, but historic. To the losing team goes the challenge trophy each year, R.M.C. never having been in possession of the mug because they have never been beaten by the West Point cadets, although one draw was played. The games played in this series furnish the climax of the picture—"The Duke of West Point" and shows Hayward scoring the goal that gives West Point its first victory over the Canadian cadets from R.M.C.

No penalty has ever been inflicted during a regulation R.M.C.-West Point hockey game. Whenever a player was fouled by tripping his opponent stopped and assisted the prostrate player to his feet and the game proceeded as though nothing illegal had taken place. Lester Patrick, of the Rangers, previewed "The Duke of West Point" and gave it a 10-goal rating. The hockey sequences of Canada's thrilling ice game are closer to the real thing than any previous Hollywood attempt.

Although they may have a pocketful of dreams, they are no millionaires', who—the Belleville "Y" junior cagers. It seems the local junior cagers were playing basketball at Albert College Tuesday night and enroute home lost a perfectly good basketball. Now basketballs are of little use to any except those who have a court and baskets at their disposal and as we stated before—the "Y" kids are far from millionaires, so any person who may have found the lost basketball they could kick in with their daily Boy Scout deed and return it. The gesture would be highly appreciated by the kids.

HODGE PODGE — It would appear as though the youthful Phil Cavaretta is about to replace the veteran "Rip" Collins....It is rumoured there may be another meeting between War Admiral and Seabiscuit at Hialeah track in February for the benefit of those fortunate enough to spend their winters beneath the sunny southern skies.. Tommy Farr made a rather drastic statement yesterday to the effect he would quit the ring if Lou Nova won tomorrow night....Nova has won 24 of his 26 professional fights even if he is only 23....The Perth junior squad ran into an abrupt snag when a picked-up team of Kingston kids beat them 4-2 last night.

ARMS BUDGET FOR

1939 or 85 per cent of the actual 1938 government income.

How to be Proportioned

Here is where some of the money will go—

1—To the navy, which Navy Minister Cesar Campinchi declared would have 70,000 tons of warships afloat by 1942. At present, Campinchi said France's navy is "equal" to the combined sea forces of Italy and Germany, although the totalitarian building program will soon place the combined navies ahead.

2—To the air force, which will increase its officers by 1,347 and its non-commissioned officers and men by 18,290 through a measure attached to the budget. This would bring the total air force officers to 3,702, and men, including non-commissioned officers, to 56,000. Much of the air force money will be spent on speeding up French warplane production.

3—To the land army which gets newer and better guns additional motorized equipment and improved fortifications.

Will Back up Warning

Much of the money earmarked for the three branches of the service will be spent in backing up France's warning, that she would fight to hold her empire.

Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet told members of the Chamber of Deputies Foreign Affairs committee Italy must understand "she will never have an inch of any part of French territory no matter what means she uses."

The Foreign Minister also said all the armed forces would be used for defence of Great Britain in the event of an unprovoked attack.

FINANCIAL POWER

"It is this sense which is always with us and which I am sure is in itself a very great influence in preserving the peace of the world".

Mr. Chamberlain's brief reference to Germany seemed to indicate a somewhat stronger line toward the Nazi leadership since the German ambassador and other Nazi representatives boycotted his Tuesday night speech in which he rebuked the German Press for its attack on Earl Baldwin.

Observers were quick to notice that today Mr. Chamberlain differentiated between German statesmen and people. In his Tuesday speech he reiterated his belief that the German and British people never wished to go to war again—the main point of the joint declaration he and Chancellor Hitler signed at Munich Sept. 30.

How to Make Lanterns Foolproof Against Fires Told by District Farmer

"We're getting into the season for barn fires. Each year we have them with big loss of property and stock to the owner," stated Arthur Gillian, Tyendinaga Township farmer this morning.

"One half of the fires you will read about during the next few months will be caused by upset lanterns, oil lanterns kicked over and upset by cows, horses or dropped by the farmer himself. When this happens the oil generally spills on the floor, is ignited by the flame of the lantern, and immediately the whole barn is on fire.

"For years I have been using a system that is foolproof. Any of my oil lanterns can be upset or thrown around or dropped with perfect safety. I'm not afraid of fires around my farm caused by lanterns.

"Just take your lantern," Mr. Gillian advises, "stuff the oil reservoir with cotton batting or fine wool. Then fill it with coal oil. You'll find the lantern holds plenty of oil, and burns just as long—even longer—than one which is simply oil filled. And there is no danger of it spilling when upset."

A DAY of great opportunity and progress is forecast for the prevailing planetary influences. There should be fine openings for the attainment of high ambitions, made possibly by the friendly and liberal co-operation of those of prestige and important pace or authority. It is a time for planning major objectives with assurance and determination.

Those whose birthday it is are on the brink of a year of important opportunity for advancement, enhanced prestige, popularity and the attainment of high goals and ambitions. Personal contacts and preferment of those in place and power may be counted upon for reaching such objectives.

A child born on this day may be capable, versatile and ambitious. It is likely to reach high place and prosperity through its personal worth and dignified and dependable character. It may be lovable, charitable and may figure in public esteem.

Carcassonne

By MARCIA DINSMORE

"Maisie," Eben dropped wearily into a chair and spoke in low tones, that Aunt Amanda might not overhear. "How can I tell her?"

Maisie turned slowly to face him. "Eben, what has happened? Is it the colt?"

He nodded miserably. "I hoped last night it was only a stone in her shoe, but it's her knee, a bad one. We can't possibly go to the fair."

"But, Eben, we must!" Maisie had a sudden moment of panic. "Aunt Amanda has wanted to go to one all her life. She was planning to go to a county fair, you know, when she was taken with her paralysis."

He nodded again, hopelessly. "I know it. I'd give my right arm to get her there. But I don't see how it can be done. We have only one other horse, and he, great lumbering beast, would jolt her to death over those fearful roads before the 20 miles were half covered."

For herself Maisie suffered little, for she loved Eben deeply. But because of Aunt Amanda's coming disappointment she felt just then her only pang of disloyalty.

"Oh, Eben!" she mourned. "Why, they still talk in the village of Aunt Amanda's miraculous cure, after so many years of invalidism, when everybody had long ago given up hope. And she has been so careful for weeks, just so the doctor would let her go to the fair. It seems cruel to keep her at home now."

All the gay plans which had preceded this day, the great day in Aunt Amanda's life, had fallen to dust, and he felt, impotently, that he should somehow have foreseen the catastrophe and forestalled it.

"Good morning, everybody," cried a cheerful voice, with a delicious back country drawl, and Aunt Amanda wheeled herself vigorously into the kitchen, her face aglow like a young girl's on her way to her first party. And indeed it was Aunt Amanda's first party for 50 years. Her hair was white, but her unlined face was almost as fresh as a girl's.

"And to think," she went on, not noticing their dejection, "a county fair after all these years! I had begun to think it was like that French place in the poem. Do you remember the old man who had always wanted to go to—Carcassonne? That was it! He thought it must be the most wonderful place in the world, just because he had never been there. And in the end he never did go. The poem ends, I recall, 'Each mortal has a Carcassonne.'. I'd begun to think a county fair was mine."

"Aunt Amanda," began Maisie bravely, but the old lady interrupted with a fresh burst of enthusiasm.

"Harry told me about it after I was ill—the county fair he never took me to. The grandstand and the clapping, the gay colored clothes, the bobbing red parasols.

"And he told me all about the races, and how the winner was made a hero. All the ladies kissed him, Harry told me, though it didn't seem likely.

"And every lady was presented with a huge bunch of flowers. Maisie, I do hope they give me roses. I love them so.'

A look of amazement had been slowly spreading over the faces of Eben and Maisie. The dull gatherings of tired farmers, the display of farm produce and cattle which to them constituted a county fair, bore no relation to the bizarre and colorful festivities described by Aunt Amanda.

Maisie sighed. Peanut venders, trampled into mud by hundreds of careless feet were her most vivid memory of a county fair. And rain. Oh, almost always rain!

"Aunty," she said gently, and forced herself to go on. "The colt is lame." She did not need to say more, for Aunt Amanda was perfectly familiar with their isolated situation. She knew Eben's poverty and the remoteness of neighbors. Slowly the glow faded from her face. She looked at Eben.

"And we can't go?"

"I'm afraid not." He turned away. "Hang it, Maisie", he muttered. "I'll get her there some way if it takes an arm."

He started for the door, but Maisie suddenly caught his arm. Her eyes were fixed upon Aunt Amanda.

The old lady did not speak for a moment. And yet it was not sadness, entirely, which filled her eyes. She leaned forward. Her voice held a strange quality which seemed almost to be a note of relief.

"Maisie," she said suddenly, "are county fairs really like that as Harry said?"

Eben, from his amazement, was ready with frank denial, but his wife spoke first.

"Something like that, Aunt Amanda," she replied softly, "but ever so much more gorgeous."

The old lady drew a deep breath. "That's all I need to know," she said. "If I really saw one, it might spoil Harry's picture of it all, and I—I couldn't bear that. It is like the place in the poem after all, isn't it?"

She paraphrased dreamily, "I'll never see my Carcassonne."

LIGHTS OUT

Crown Attorney Donnan, informed [illegible] jury that they desired to hear all evidence, suggested further postponement until the physical condition of MacDonald, driver and owner of the ill-fated car, permitted him to appear and testify.

Drawing of Scene

An engineer's drawing of that part of the highway where the accident occurred, several photographs and a statement given by Kenneth Flindall, driver of the parked truck, to police officers were exhibited to the jury. Flindall, who is charged with criminal negligence, was not called by the Crown.

Light conditions at 4.45 p.m. on the date of the accident were "dark and dismal" and all cars on the highway had full lights on, Inspector of Game and Fisheries Herbert McCabe, first witness called told the jury. He was returning from Trenton with prisoners from police court, and was following another car as he neared the scene of the accident. He swerved to the north of the highway near this point, then when the car in front went on, he noticed a truck and trailer with no lights parked on the north side of the pavement near the May Service Station. He pulled to the south side of the road and saw an object, that he later identified as the MacDonald car, across the highway.

"The top was heaved, and had straw on it," he said. Investigating he found a lady moaning in the car and telephoned a doctor. He assisted in placing the injured woman, who was alive, in the ambulance.

Carried No Lights

Frank Smith, who resides near the service station, told the jury his attention was attracted to the truck as it approached by the fact it carried no lights. He saw the MacDonald car approach from the east with its lights on, then heard a crash. Its lights went out. After the impact it swung to the southward and came to rest on the south side of the highway facing in an easterly direction. "The truck was approximately 200 feet away when I first noticed it," he testified.

"I ran to the car and saw Mr. MacDonald who had just got out of it. He was bleeding badly about the face, and appeared excited. He asked me to get his wife out of the car, but I could not get the door open. I then watched for traffic, and waited until police officers arrived," he said.

William May, service station owner, testified he had seen a truck and trailer pull up across his driveway while he was in the house. "It was plenty dark," he said, "and all cars had lights on. I was about to go out and tell the driver to bring his truck in the driveway when I heard a crash." He did not see the approach of the MacDonald car.

H.T.O. H. Caldwell, investigating police officer, told the jury that Flindall told him that he had blown a fuse of the truck and had driven about two hundred yards or more with his lights out because he saw the service station ahead. Stopping there, he changed the fuse, got out of the truck and crawled beneath the point where the truck joined the trailer in search of a short circuit. He had just lain down when he heard and felt the collision.

Carried Regulation Flares

"It was dark at the time of the accident," the officer testified, "as I had to turn my own lights on full."

The truck carried the regulation flares, he said, but no attempt had been made to light them. The driver had told him that he had not had time to put them out, witness testified.

Provincial Officer Everett Smith corroborated former witness' testimony with regard to location of the truck and trailer. He told the jury he had ascertained the truck to be owned by a Mr. N. Haggerty of Wooler, and had taken a written statement from Kenneth Flindall driver of the truck in the Provincial Police Office in Belleville. The statement was read to jury by the Crown Attorney.

Gordon Crake, Belleville garage mechanic, in evidence told the jury that he had examined the lighting system of the truck. He turned the switch on and the lights in the front and rear of the truck went on. There was power from the front to the clearance light, he said, but none was available at the tail-light. He examined the fuse after he had turned on the lights and discovered it to be wrapped in tin-foil. Tin-foil was an excellent conductor of electricity, he said.

Dr. G. S. Cronk testified the cause of death of Mrs. MacDonald as being multiple injuries and a crushed chest.

TAKE THE LEAD OUT OF YOUR LEGS

Get Oxygen in Your Blood and You'll Get the Pep that Sends You Bounding Up the Stairs

People who smother to death die because oxygen has been completely cut off from them. Just as surely you are slowly smothering if your blood lacks red corpuscles. [illegible] corpuscles are your oxygen-carriers. They carry the oxygen you breathe in to every part of your system. Without enough oxygen-carrying corpuscles, your kidneys, liver, stomach and bowels slow down. Your skin gets pale, flabby, often pimply. Your nerves may become jittery—you tire quickly—feel depressed.

What you need is Dr. Williams Pink Pills. These world-famous pills help make more and better red corpuscles and thus increase the oxygen-carrying power of your blood. Get Dr. Williams Pink Pills today at your druggist. See for yourself how quickly this time-proven blood-builder will help give you back your pep. Copr. 1938, G.T. Fulford Co., Ltd.

MANION AGAINST

mitted to Canada.

Predicted Success.

The Conservative leader made his statement as the Canadian government with the governments of other countries, was considering the problem of Jewish refugees from Germany.

Predicting the success of his party at the next general election, Dr. Manion said it was a progressive party, eager to bring justice and fair dealing to all the people of Canada, to all classes and to all districts.

In contrast the Mackenzie King government was a "laissez-faire" government, a do-nothing government". It refused to face the problems of unemployment and lack of opportunity for youth. The first act of a Conservative government would be to appoint a Minister of Youth Welfare.

No Reference To Quarrel.

The Conservative leader made no reference to the quarrel between Prime Minister Mackenzie King and Premier Mitchell Hepburn except indirectly when he advised his hearers to look at the daily papers for proof of his statement more disharmony existed in Canada now than at any time in the past. And this was only three years after Mr. King promised the election of a Liberal government would bring about harmony.

In a brief reference to the recently signed trade treaty between Canada and the United States he predicted loss of the British preference on wheat would injure Quebec and other Canadian ports. So long as that preference remained it caused Canadian wheat shipped to the United Kingdom to move through Canadian ports. Now there was nothing to prevent it going through American ports.

Asked For Support.

In asking the loyal support of Quebec Conservatives Dr. Manion predicted he would make some mistakes. No leader could always be right but occasional differences of opinion need not conflict with party loyalty.

"Remember that while you may differ from your leader, your leader may be right and you may be wrong" he advised. "And remember also that while you have to think for the City of Quebec your leader has to think for the nine provinces of Canada".

7,000,000 Trees Planted in 1938 In Best Places

Toronto, Dec. 15—(CP)—Ontario farmers planted 7,000,000 trees this year where they will do the most good, Provincial Forester J. Zavitz said today. Farmers had noted a shortage of water for cattle and had become drought conscious.

"Old-timers will tell you how they used to get water near the surface, but these wells now are dry," Mr. Zavitz said. "Removal of forests from the watersheds of old Ontario caused our trouble. That is why we have such floods in the spring.

"They not only cut away all the trees, but ditched the land so the water would escape more quickly." Reforestation holds the water back in the spring and helps to keep moisture in the ground all the year.

Among cities and towns with municipal-owned forest plots are St. Thomas, Guelph, Hanover, Beeton, Woodstock, Orangeville and Midland.

DUPLESSIS SAYS

dressing a mass meeting, they alleged the Ontario and Quebec Premiers evidently wished to set up a government at Ottawa that would be "largely controlled by the provincial governments at Toronto and Quebec".

(Premier Hepburn denied the existence of such an alliance.)

"There must be something wrong at Ottawa," the Quebec government leader said when he was asked to comment on the Rogers-Howe allegation. "There are, there, at least three people who are suffering from nightmare." He did not name the persons he meant.

Others Against Provinces.

"It seems at least illogical for men who are preaching the unity of Canada to try, by somewhat unusual talk, and because of their nightmare, to seek to bring about disunity in Canada," he said. "It would look like an effort to bring about disunity through the grouping of other provinces against Ontario and Quebec."

He added:

"Ever since this Union Nationale Government has been in power (2½ years), I am happy to say, and this in the most hearty, sincere and loyal manner, that promotion of the welfare of both provinces for the benefit of the populations of both provinces has been the sincere wish of both provinces, and this is not directed against anyone, but for the benefit of the two provinces.

"We will continue to co-operate, and also we are willing to co-operate with every other province of Canada on a fair and sound basis for the progress of Canada as a whole."

"I have the highest admiration for the very great qualities of heart, of spirit and of mind of my friend, Hon. Mitchell Hepburn," he concluded.

Eden Has Luncheon With Sumner Welles

Washington, Dec. 15—(AP)—Anthony Eden tried to step out of the spotlight which shone on him throughout his first crowded day in the United States capital.

Aside from informal sightseeing, the only engagements for the former British Foreign Secretary were luncheon yesterday at the Oxon Hill, Md., home of Sumner Welles, United States Undersecretary of State, and dinner at the British Embassy.

Welles' luncheon furnished an opportunity for a discussion of international affairs with government officials, such as Eden had with President Roosevelt yesterday. Neither commented on the conversation except to say it was pleasant.

Bob Hope and Shirley Ross will be seen at the Belle in "Thanks For The Memory."

At The Theatres

AT THE McCARTHY

Joe E. in "The Gladiator".

Meet "The Gladiator!" He doesn't look like a super-man, but . . . he can carry the ball unaided through an entire football team! He can break every record in track and field, without even gasping for breath! He can wrestle Man Mountain Dean to a fare-thee-well! He can do anything and everything better than anyone else!

In the film which opens today at the McCarthy Theatre, Joe E. Brown the cave-mouthed comedian makes his greatest appearance! A human guinea pig, unwittingly turned into a superman by the scientific magic of a hen-pecked college professor, Mr. Brown's role is like nothing he has ever before portrayed. It is different, gloriously exciting and hilariously funny. And Mr. Brown supplies the proper balance of whimsy and hokum which makes "The Gladiator" believable in spite of the humorous intent of its Columbia technical staff.

And you will like the other members of the cast, who have never been seen to better advantage. They include June Travis, who makes a most charming leading lady; Robert Kent, who is a convincing campus villain; Lucien Littlefield, the eccentric professor; Ethel Wales, his nagging fuss-budgety wife; Dickie Moore, the boy actor; and Man Mountain Dean, the Hill-Billy who ran a set of whiskers to fame and fortune in the wrestling game and is now duplicating this act in the fields of films and politics.

Three Stooges Comedy.

Providing more laughs in addition to Joe E. Brown, the three stooges, Larry, Moe and Curly, return to the McCarthy Theatre in their latest twenty minute comedy-scream entitled "Three Missing Links" and we assure you that if the feature does not have you rolling in the aisles with laughter, this comedy feature will not only do it, but will also have the tears running down your cheeks. Floyd Gibbons in another of his interesting true adventure stories, "The Night Intruder", another splendid featurette presentation and an all technicolor musical cartoon novelty entitled "Snow Foolin'," add more entertainment. Extra on Saturday will be presented on the screen the opening chapter of the new action-packed serial "The Spider's Web" and on the stage another "Rotary Amateur Show" will be presented for school children.

Duchess of Windsor's Aunt Sails

New York, Dec. 15—(AP)— Mrs. D. Buchanan Merryman of Washington, aunt of the Duchess of Windsor, sailed today in the Italian liner Rex to spend Christmas with the Duke and Duchess at Antibes on the French riviera.

AT THE BELLE

"Thanks For the Memory"

The hilarious struggles of a newlywed couple to get ahead in the world despite the mad ministrations of their fun-loving friends forms the main theme of the new romantic comedy, "Thanks For the Memory", on the Belle screen tonight.

Bob Hope and Shirley Ross are the couple in question, and you will remember them for their inimitable rendition of the number entitled "Thanks For the Memory" in the "Big Broadcast of '38". Others who have featured roles include Charles Butterworth, Otto Kruger, Hedda Hopper and Roscoe Karns.

The plot dips into comedy right from the start. Bob and Shirley have been married a short time and are trying to get along on Bob's salary as a salesman while their friends invade their household, eat their food, use their telephone, and make use of all available facilities. To make matters worse, Bob is trying to write the Great American novel on the side, and is having a tough time doing it with all the distractions around him.

Finally Shirley becomes fed up with the state of affairs and decides to go back to work as a model, so that Bob can concentrate on his novel. That's when the real fun starts, for Bob dislikes trying to keep house and write at the same time. Then complications enter. Bob thinks she's going out with the publisher who may take his book. She thinks he is running around with a little southern gal who lives down the hall, in the person of one Patricia "Honey Chile" Wilder. Before it's all straightened out, there are laughs aplenty.

Bob Hope and Shirley Ross sing a new number in "Thanks For the Memory". It's "Two Sleepy People" and it is the work of the crack composers, Hoagy Carmichael and Frank Loesser, who did the numbers for "Sing You Sinners", the Bing Crosby film.

"Illegal Traffic".

Robert Preston and Mary Carlisle play two youngsters forced to fight for their love, and later for their lives, against an astounding and vicious racket in the screen's newest crime drama, "Illegal Traffic" announced as the companion feature attraction.

Preston is cast as a courageous G-Man who sets out to break up the racket through gangdom's own methods. Miss Carlisle is a girl innocently involved in the mob. In a thrilling and unusual story, Preston joins the "getaway" racket as an airplane pilot and actually aids fugitives in escaping from the law until the right moment to strike comes along.

An entertaining and novel film, "Unusual Occupations" will be presented on the same program.

Scene from "The Old Barn Dance," starring Gene Autry, coming to the Capitol Theatre.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking to himself in his private chair and ma said, I was going to ask you to suy me a new fur coat for Chrissmas, Willyum, but when I stopped for a moments reflexion I realized that my old fur coat is old in name only, I mean it's still perfectly good to all practical intents and purposes, and in fact anybody seeing it for the first time would have no idea of its invisible wear and tear, so why should I put you to the expense of buying me a new fur coat just for theoretical reasons?

That strikes me as a very sensible attitude to take, pop said, and ma said, Even the style of it is beyond reproach, judged by this seasons standards, and it's still admired by my friends and envied by my enemies. In other words all the arguments against it are really for it, so why should I have a new fur coat? she said.

Your unimpeachable logic is equalled only by the soundness of your viewpoint, pop said. You fill my heart with admiration and my pocketbook with renewed hope and I congradulate every head of this family, he said, and ma said, Of course I know you always want me to be the best dressed and smartest woman of my particular circle, so I had a feeling you mite insist, in spite of the way I feel personly.

My deer, it's a woman's world and I do insist, pop said. I'll go so far as to resolutely decline to take No for an answer, I'll see that you get a new fur coat even if it's black mourning fur over my dead body, he said, and ma said, Now Willyum, dont be extreme, but I just knew you'd insist, I cant do anything with you.

And she started to do the bridge problem with a satisfied expression.

THE JURY

Coroner's juries perform a very useful service to the State by investigating the circumstances leading up to fatalities of one sort and another, and more particularly with respect to motor accidents on railway level crossings. But not infrequently they bring in the formal verdict, "No one was to blame." We have no quarrel with such a verdict. But in nine times out of ten the man who is to blame is the driver of the car whose fatal ending is the subject of the inquiry. — Guelph Mercury.

FAIR STREETS

Many of the avenues and streets of the New York World's Fair 1939 have been named, it is announced by Grover A. Whalen, President of the Fair. "Petticoat Lane" runs between the Textile Building and the one devoted to women's apparel. "Fireside Row" reaches along the extensive facade of the Home Furnishings Building. "The Street of Wings" leads to the Aviation Building, and "The Street of Wheels" to the railroad and motor section.

MEAN THIEVES

It is difficult to picture any person with meanness so imbedded in his makeup as to victimize farmers in these trying times. It almost shakes one's faith in human nature to hear of continued thefts of fowl in the wide area surrounding Lindsay, thefts where the majority of a farmer's chickens are sneaked away in the dead of night. There will be little human sympathy for the thieves if and when apprehended.—Lindsay Post.

TENSION GROWS BETWEEN U. S. AND GERMANY

Ex-Convict, Head of Drug Firm, Takes Own Life

F. DONALD COSTER IS IDENTIFIED AS PHILIP MUSICA

Shot Himself in Home After His Re-Arrest Had been Ordered

CLIMAXES HECTIC WEEK

Developments Show Vernard was Musica's Younger Brother

New York, Dec. 16—(AP)— F. Donald Coster, President of McKesson and Robbins, Inc., whose real identity was disclosed as Philip Musica, an ex-convict who became head of the multi-million dollar corporation, shot and killed himself today at his home in Fairfield, Conn.

The Department of Justice in Washington which received first information on the occurrence over its private telegraph wires, first said Coster was "seriously wounded." A Fairfield officer later said the wound was fatal.

News that Coster-Musica had taken his own life came shortly after the United States Attorney's Office here had ordered his re-arrest and that of George E. Dietrich, assistant treasurer, and George Vernard, Canadian agent for the firm on charges of violating the Securities Act of 1934.

Back in 1903 when the Musica family were involved in the collapse of their United States hair company, Philip's father, Antonio, tried to end his life.

Climaxes Busy Week

Coster-Musica's suicide climaxed a week of dizzy developments, starting when it was discovered that the crude drugs department of McKesson and Robbins, under

British Motor Vessel In Need of Help

London, Dec. 16 (AP) — Lloyds' agent at Nagasaki, Japan, cabled today that the British motor vessel Ridley, reported earlier to be in distress in the China Sea, was proceeding without assistance. The Japanese Cheribon Maru was standing by.

An SOS saying the Ridley had struck a "submerged projectile" in the China Sea earlier had been followed by a period of ominous silence.

The call for aid said the vessel's engines were out of action and that there was water in four tanks.

The location given at that time placed the vessel near the southernmost islands of the Japanese group and North of Formosa Island.

The Ridley, a vegetable oil carrier of 3,801 net tons, operated between New York and Yokohama. She normally carried a crew of 38 or 40.

JAIL TERM FOR FRANK DORIAN

Given Two Months for Non-Support in Tweed Court

Tweed, Ont., Dec. 16 (CP)—Frank Dorian, Tweed, was sentenced today to two months in jail on a charge of non-support.

Fred Jeffrey was committed to the Ontario Hospital for a 60-day observation following the hearing of several witnesses. Jeffrey was alleged to have collected money and clothes here last week through telling a story of having his home burned to the ground, leaving him and his small daughter without food or clothing.

JEWS ORDERED TO EXCHANGE LAND

Will Receive from Italian Government Bonds Bearing 4 P.C.

Rome, Dec. 16 (AP)—The Italian cabinet today ordered Jews to exchange all their land and buildings exceeded a fixed value for bonds bearing four per cent interest.

The order carried out provisions of decrees adopted Nov. 10 forbidding Jews to own land with a taxable income exceeding 5,000 lire ($260) a year and buildings the taxable income of which exceeds 20,000 lire ($1,040).

A government corporation will be created to take over Jewish property and operate it pending re-sale as conditions permit. The corporation will issue bonds which Jews will be compelled to accept in payment for their property on the basis of its assessed valuation.

The corporation also will take over the management of Jewish owned firms employing more than 100 persons, issuing its bonds in payment. Last month's decrees forbade Jews to own businesses exceeding this size.

$16,500 FIRE LOSS

Sudbury, Ont., Dec. 16 (CP) — James Brewster, caretaker of the Coronation Club a mile west of here, was burned about the face and received severe cuts on one hand when fire of unknown origin destroyed the building early today. Loss was estimated at $16,500. Brewster was injured as he tried to remove orchestral instruments valued at $2,000.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Dec. 16 (CP)—Snow has fallen near the Gulf of St. Lawrence and light snow near Lake Huron, though in other districts of Eastern Canada the weather has been fair, cold in Quebec and the Maritimes with moderating temperature in the region of the Great Lakes. It is somewhat colder this morning in Manitoba and light to moderate snowfalls have occurred in Northwestern Ontario, Southern Manitoba and in some parts of Saskatchewan. It has been generally fair with moderate temperature in Alberta. A shallow trough of low pressure extends southwestward from Northwest Ontario to Northern Texas, while pressure is high over Quebec and the North Atlantic States.

Lake Superior—Cloudy and mild, followed by light or moderate snow tonight. Saturday, fresh northwest winds; mostly cloudy and somewhat colder with light snowfalls or flurries.

Western Provinces—Fair and moderately cold. Saturday, fair with a little higher temperature.

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Science Service Meteorologist

"Sweet and low, sweet and low,
Wind of the western sea."

Consciously or unconsciously the poet thought scientifically when he spoke of the wind of the western sea, and those lines proclaimed he lived in our temperate zone where the prevailing winds are westerly all the year around. In the winter months they are predominantly so in an east coast, and during the summer on the west coast. Generally speaking, the cold winter winds of the eastern half of the United States and eastern Canada come from the cold interior. We only get east wind in winter when a passing high pressure area lies over the Atlantic Ocean.

EDEN PAYS "INFORMAL" VISIT TO WASHINGTON

Paying a visit to Washington, that was stressed as "strictly informal," Anthony Eden was greeted upon his arrival in the United States' capitol by Sumner Welles, acting secretary of state. With a package of cigarettes between them, Eden and Welles are shown during the first of the "informal" conversations, Eden said he hoped to have with Washington officials.

DEMAND IS MADE FOR DISSOLUTION COMMUNIST PARTY

Right-Wing Parties of Daladier's Gov't Are Making Demands

PAPERS LEAD WAY

By CHARLES FOLTZ

Paris, Dec. 16 (AP)—Right-wing parties on which Premier Daladier depends for the life of his government issued a demand through their newspapers today for dissolution of the French Communist Party.

A total of 430 Paris and Provincial papers, ranging from mildly Conservative to the extreme right, were said to have joined in the "appeal to parliament and the government".

The move came as Daladier was seeking to put France's 126,060,000 franc ($1,732,370,200) budget through the Chamber of Deputies ahead of more controversial issues which might endanger shaky majority.

Some newspapers demanding the Communist dissolution represented parties which long have been at each other's throats. In Paris they included Le Figaro, Le Journal and Le Jour, all three influential newspapers with a nation-wide circulation.

CLAIM THREE CARRIED HOUSEBREAKING TOOLS

Toronto, Dec. 6 (CP)—Six men were in custody here today as police continued a drive to curb an outbreak of minor crime. John Bridges, Harold Switcher and Alfred Vincini were arrested last night on charges of carrying housebreaking tools. John Moran and James and John Yoing were arrested when trapped in a cottage. They were charged with breaking and entering.

HEPBURN PLANS TO VISIT AUSTRALIA TO STUDY METHODS

Attended by Physician and Ordered to Take Vacation

3 OFFICIALS TO GO

Toronto, Dec. 16 (CP) — Premier Mitchell Hepburn will leave shortly after the new year on a voyage to Australia and the opening of the Ontario Legislature, usually about the middle of February, will be set back until around March 1, it was announced here last night.

Health and knowledge are purposes of Mr. Hepburn's planned two months' trip. He will be accompanied by Hon. Colin Campbell, Ontario Works Minister, Chester Walters, Deputy Treasurer and Private Secretary Roy Elmhirst.

In an Empire Club address here yesterday, Mr. Hepburn lauded Australia's action in the refunding of her debt at lower interest charges. Now he will go there to study at first hand administration of the Commonwealth Bank of Australia, social legislation, and general economic conditions.

Australia's remedial measures may not have cured her economic problems, said Mr. Hepburn. Reports conflicted but he was going over to find out.

Will Tell of Trip.

The premier plans to give to the legislature a report on his Australian trip. The delay in summoning the House will, he expects, enable Ontario to know if the federal government will go ahead with its unemployment insurance proposals. If it does not, then Ontario may proceed to establish a form of unemployment insurance of her own.

Mr. Hepburn was attended by a physician yesterday at Queen's Park shortly after he returned from the Empire Club. The doctor ordered him to bed immediately and prescribed a rest. The long rest will come on the sea voyage.

The premier will meet his cabinet today—probably the final meeting before he goes to his farm in Yarmouth Township, near St. Thomas. There he will spend Christmas. He plans sailing across the Pacific right

Insurgent Opinion Sharply Divided

Hendaye, France, Dec. 16 (AP)—Decision of General Franco to restore all civil rights and properties to former King Alfonso sharply divided Spanish Insurgent opinion today on the imminence of a return to the monarchy.

The decree giving Alfonso "all rights that correspond to him as a citizen of Spain" was read by Franco to the Insurgent Council of Ministers at Burgos, and they adopted it yesterday.

One group of Insurgents at this border zone said it was the first step toward restoring the Bourbon Monarchy in Spain, backed by Franco. (Spanish circles in Rome, where Alfonso is living, doubted he would return soon to Spain as a result of the decree.)

3 Super Nova, Exploding Stars, Discovered Bringing Total to Six

Pasadena, Calif., Dec. 16 (AP)—Dr. Fritz Zwicky, astro-physicist of Mt. Palomar Observatory who discovered a Super Nova 600,000,000 times as bright as the sun, has found three more of these giant, exploding stars, bringing his total number of discoveries to six.

This was disclosed today by one of his co-workers at Mt. Wilson Observatory, Dr. Walter Baade. Dr. Baade said the brightest of the six Super Novae Dr. Zwicky has found gave off as much light in its first 200 days as the earth's sun would in 40,000,000 years.

"Had this star exploded in our own galaxy, it would have been easily visible in the daytime. Had it exploded near the earth it might have destroyed us," he added.

Drs. Zwicky, Baade and Rudolf Minkowski set out in 1936 to find ten super novae. Dr. Zwicky was to search the skies for them with the 18-inch telescope, the first set up on Mr. Palomar, while Drs. Baade and Minkowski would study them with the powerful 100-inch telescope on Mt. Wilson. From observations of ten supernovae, they believed they could discovered the laws which govern all such stars.

Already, Dr. Baade said, they have established that:

Super novae are distince from ordinary exploding stars, are about 1,000 times as bright and much rarer.

Only one super novae appears in a galaxy, or star system, in an average of 600 years.

Their spectra show them to be entirely different from any other heavenly object ever oberved. Of elements commonly found in other stars, the astronomers have not been able to identify in super novae a single one. This, they believe, is due to the extremely high temperatures of the exploding stars.

3 Ranking Officers Made Major Generals

Ottawa, Dec. 16 (CP) — Three ranking officers of the permanent force were elevated to the rank of Major General in a special gazette issued today by the National Defence Department. They are Major General W. H. P. Elkins, Major General H. H. Matthews and Major General H. F. H. Hertzberg.

These officers were raised from the rank of Brigadier. All three were recently appointed to high offices in defence headquarters staff.

General Elkins succeeded Major General Clyde Caldwell as Master General of the Ordinance; General Matthews followed Major General C. F. Constantine as Adjutant General, while General Hertzberg as Quarter-Master General, is successor to Major General T. Victor Anderson, who became Chief of the General Staff.

LIBERAL CAUCUS OF ONT. MEMBERS CALLED MONDAY

W. A. Fraser, Trenton, Issued Telegram Calling Caucus

WILL DISCUSS BREAK

Ottawa, Dec. 16 (CP)—A caucus of Ontario Liberal Members of Parliament, Ontario Liberal Senators and defeated Liberal candidates in the last general election has been called to meet in Ottawa Monday, presumably to discuss the break between the Dominion Government headed by Prime Minister Mackenzie King and the Ontario Government of Premier Hepburn.

The telegram calling the caucus was signed by W. A. Fraser, (Lib.-Northumberland), whip of the Ontario Federal Liberal members, and the four Ontario members of the Mackenzie King Government, Postmaster General Elliott, Trade Minister Euler, Labor Minister Rogers and Transport Minister Howe.

Announcement of the telegram was made today from the National Liberal members and other candidates invited are the Ontario candidates who were unsuccessful in the last federal election.

The text of the telegram calling the meeting:

"A meeting of the Ontario Federal Liberal members an dother candidates and members of the Senate is called for Monday, Dec. 19, at 11 a.m. in the Railway Committee room House of Commons. The purpose of the meeting being to discuss recent developments touching particularly the Liberal Party in Ontario. You are urgently requested to be present."

The caucus to be held Monday is altogether apart from the caucus Prime Minister Mackenzie King said he would call immediately after parliament meets Jan. 12, to discuss "in all its implications" the rift between he and Premier Hepburn.

Not Optimistic About Outlook For Peace in Europe

New York, Dec. 16 (AP)—Joseph P. Kennedy, United States Ambassador to Great Britain, said last night he was "not particularly optimistic about the outlook for peace in Europe—but I don't think that's any reason for not trying."

Returning in the liner Queen Mary for a two-month visit, Kennedy said of the pour-power peace pact at Munich:

"No results have been accomplished as yet in the way of appeasement.

"It is difficult to predict the ultimate outcome of it. More than ever, however, I am of the opinion that if war comes, we must stay out of it.

"There are two alternatives to the Munich agreement. One was economic chaos; the other, war. If it is possible to do anything better than war, there is every justification for trying."

COMMON NUISANCE

Tweed, Ont., Dec. 16 (CP)—Found guilty of being a common nuisance and spreading false news, Cecil Revoir was sentenced yesterday to four months definite and two months indefinite in Ontario Reformatory.

Revoir admitted to police that a story he told of being asked by two men to holdup the Bank of Ottawa in Ottawa was false. Police guarded the bank after Revoir made the statement.

CERTAIN INMATES FEDERAL PRISONS MAY BE RELEASED

A "Christmas Present" in the Form of Freedom May be Granted

CONSIDER EACH CASE

The Names of Those Receiving Amnesty Will Not be Disclosed

Ottawa, Dec. 16 (CP)— Justice Minister Lapointe has under consideration a "Christmas present" for certain prisoners in jails scattered across Canada—release from confinement because of good behaviour and recommendations from judicial and jail authorities.

Among cases unded consideration for the Christmas amnesty are some of the 108 unemployed men sentenced several months ago to terms ranging from four to six months for unauthorized begging on Vancouver Streets.

Justice department officials said today the cases of the Vancouver unemployed prisoners would be judged on individual merits just as in the case of any other prisoners across the Dominion.

So far, they said, there has been no request received from Attorney-General Wismer of British Columbia for release of the 08 prisoners before Christmas.

It was not the custom to make public the identity of prisoners allowed their freedom in the Christmas amnesty, the department said.

20 PERSONS FLEE FIRE AT SUDBURY

First Discovered in Cellar Soon Spreads Through Apartment House

Sudbury, Ont., Dec. 16 (CP)—Fire swept through an apartment house at nearby Gatchell early today and forced twenty persons to leave the building in night attire. The fire was believed to have started in the basement.

Mrs. J. Antonini, wife of the building's owner, discovered the outbreak. While her husband attempted to confine it to the cellar, she and a neighbor carried out her five children. Tenants of the second storey, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Solfi and two children and Mr. and Mrs. T. Esposito and two children, jumped from a balcony to safety.

Mrs. Esposito suffered severely-cut hands when she smashed a window leading to the balcony. Damage was estimated at between $5,000 and $10,000. Origin of the outbreak was not known.

SPREAD FALSE NEWS IS FINDING OF COURT

Toronto, Dec. 16 (CP)—Jean Grey, convicted of charges of spreading false news and theft of $50, was given suspended sentence and probation for one year when sentenced today. She was ordered to repay to her employer $50 found to have been missing after she told police she had been held up, tied to a chair and robbed of the money.

Franco-Canadian Relations Fostered by Sir Philippe Roy

Paris, Dec. 16 (CP-Havas)—Hon. Philippe Roy, who retires Jan. 1 as Canadian Minister to France after 28 years spent here furthering Franco-Canadian relations, today told Havas that, while much had been done to bring the Dominion and the republic together, much more can still be achieved. He plans to return to Canada in the spring.

He dreams, for instance, of the day when French theatrical companies will cross every spring to present in Canada the most important hits of the Paris season.

"That idea is dear to me," he said. "I shall do my best to see it realized."

"When I arrived in Paris to replace my predecessor, Hector Fabre, Franco-Canadian relations were relatively slight," he said. "It was the war, in which Canada participated so importantly, that gave these relations the impetus which led to the spiritual union of today.

"I devoted all my energy to co-operating with all the French organizations in the fight for a common victory. Creation of three Canadian hospitals at Dinard, St. Cloud and Vincennes was one of the most important achievements of that period.

"After the war, in 1926, the founding of the Maison Canadienne in the Cite Universitaire, inaugurated by the Prince of Wales marked a new stage in Franco-Canadian intellectual relations.

"When, following the Statute of Westminster the High Commissioner's office became a legation, I tried with all the new strength given me further to develop the relations between our two countries. And in the future, even though I return to private life, I shall continue to devote myself to the great task of Franco-Canadian understanding."

U. S. Seeks Assurances Of No Discrimination Against U. S. Citizens

Hints of Retaliation Raised if Rights Are Jeopardized

DIPLOMATIC TENSION

U. S. Request Covers Rights of U. S. Jews and Catholics in Germany

Washington, Dec. 16 AP)—Diplomatic tension between the United States and Germany mounted today with hints that retaliatory measures might be invoked if American property rights in the Reich are jeopardized further by anti-Jewish and other confiscatory decrees.

This possibility came to light as the United States renewed its seven-months-old quest for adequate, written assurance from Germany that American citizens will not be discriminated against because of their race or creed. The request was so drawn as to cover the rights of both Catholics and Jews.

Question of Debts

Sumner Welles, acting Secretary of State, in making public the latest note delivered this week in Berlin, refused to rule out the question of retaliation, which might arise both in the Jewish connection and in the Austrian debt situation, another point of difference between the two countries.

The United States has sought since April to obtain Germany's assurance that it would assume Austrian debts to the United States and its citizens. Assurances that American citizens in Germany would not be discriminated because of race or creed has been sought.

TWO SHOTS FIRED TO ATTRACT HELP BUT MEN ESCAPE

$25 in Cash and 1,500 Cigarettes Taken from Dominion Store

FIND WATCH CASE

Men Disappear Over High-board Fence in Dark Alley

Hamilton, Ont., Dec. 16 (CP) — Two shots fired in the air by Constable William Thoburn to attract help early today launched an extensive but vain search by police and citizens for two men whom the Constable surprised leaving a branch of the Dominion Store, where $25 in cash and 1,500 cigarettes had been stolen.

The only clue police obtained to the identity of the fugitives was an empty wrist watch case on the face of which a pretty girl's picture was pasted.

Constable Thoburn entered a blind alley off Queen street about one o'clock to check the rear of several stores when he heard a noise in a yard. Barred from entering by a high board fence, strung with barbed wire he lifted himself to the top with one hand while he shone his flashlight with the other.

Two men darted from the grocery store door, leaped over a small fence at the west side and disappeared as Constable Thoburn vainly tried to lift the latch of the high gate with his baton. Failing this, he ran to York street and, when he saw one man sprinting across the lawns, he fired two shots to attract the attention of a nearby gasoline station operator.

A woman, awakened by the shots, telephoned headquarters and Detective Ernest Barrell and Constables James Curtis and William Burgess raced to the scene.

MOUNTAIN LION KILLS PET MULE

Desert Midas Rode 28,000 Miles on 'Slim'

Death Valley, Calif., Dec. 16 (AP) —Death Valley Scotty is sorrowfully alone in the quietude of the desert rocks today. He has lost his closest companion, his favorite old pack mule Slim. Slim, 40 years old, was victim of a mountain lion.

"She's packed a million and a half in plunder," Scotty used to say. "Guess no other mule has done anything like that. I rode 28,000 miles on her through the rocks."

Today the famous 62-year-old desert Midas was out alone with Betty, the last of his old string mules. Betty for 15 years carried his ammunition and medical supplies on pack journeys through the desolate reaches of Death Valley and its forbidden ranges where Scotty is reputed to have mined millions of dollars worth of gold. She is 38.

A few days ago Scotty heard a rather weak braying. He had emerged from his hideaway shack to feed Slim and Betty, his morning custom. Betty alone answered his call.

He found Slim down, with a torn right hind leg. A mountain lion had attacked her. Then he went to the castle he built in the valley, five miles away, and met his partner, Albert Johnson who ended the animal's life with a rifle bullet.

International Bridge Spells Peace In Red Lights

Alexandria Bay, N.Y., Dec. 16 (AP) —Symbolizing the friendly relations between Canada and the United States, colored lights to be erected next week on the Thousand Islands international bridge will spell out the Christmas legend "Peace on earth, good will toward men".

W. Grant Mitchell, executive secretary of the bridge authority, said the legend would appear at the approaches to the short central span, linking Wells Island on the United States side with Hill Island on the Canadian side.

Although winter has cut down the tourist traffic, Mitchell said that approximately 100 automobiles a day were passing over the bridge, in the dedication of which Prime Minister Mackenzie King and President Roosevelt participated last summer.

MOTORIST IS FINED

Brantford, Ont., Dec. 16 (CP) — William Torek was fined $25 and costs of $9.75 today on a charge of failing to keep the emergency brake on his automobile working. The case arose from an accident July 16, when Mrs. Kendrick was injured. A charge of reckless driving was dismissed by a higher court.

LUMBER CO. ERECTS BAND SAW MILL NEAR NORTHBROOK

First work in connection with lumbering operations through the northern section of Lennox-Addington on property recently acquired by the Sawyer-Stoll Lumber Company of Michigan was commenced this week with the construction of a modern band saw mill at Mink Creek near Northbrook. One hundred men have been given work by the Company so far, and more are expected to be hired. The scene of lumbering operations was formerly favored deer hunting country for local residents.

MILK PRODUCERS ELECT JOHN HULME PRESIDENT OF ASSOC.

At the annual meeting of the Napanee branch of the Manufactured Milk Producers' Association held yesterday in Napanee, John Hulme was named president of the organization. The meeting was addressed by Provincial Secretary Milburn, who urged members to take methods by which stronger organization would be possible.

BUILDING PERMITS SHOW SEASONAL LAG

Up to the present mid-month date but one building permit has been issued by the office of the city building inspector, authority to Mrs. S. Fagan, 135 East Dundas Street, to erect a small garage. It is understood that larger construction projects for the city are contemplated, with the alteration of a Front Street building block one of the most important. No application for permits for the work has yet been made.

PROMISE OF SKATING HELD FOR WEEKEND

Excellent skating for the week end on the surface of the bay near the shores and ponds of the district is promised following the sharp freeze of Thursday. This morning the bay was coated with a thick surface of glare ice, with only light patches of snow marked here and there on the windswept surface. A small ice boat, first craft of the season, was observed testing its speed near shore just east of the city.

Ice dealers in the meantime are surveying the bay with appraising eyes, questioning the probability of commencing first work of ice cutting at an early date. Stocks of ice are decidedly low in the city and heavy cutting will be necessary this season.

One Father's Son Sells His Dad the Idea That Swearing is Outdated

Children of the present age no longer think it smart to smoke or swear.

This is the surprising knowledge gained this week through conversation with his 14-year-old son by a prominent business man of the city.

"Kids are different today than when I was a boy," the local resident remarks.

In conversation about school work with his son, the businessman found that more attention was being paid to high marks in school than enjoying the vicarious delights of truancy.

"Kids don't think it smart to hook away anymore", the fourteen-year-old solemnly informed his father. "That's old stuff."

"And about smoking," gently pressed the father, "don't you ever feel like hiding down in the quarry and having a puff?"

"By golly," the kid said. "that wasn't very smart, either.' He said the kids didn't think it was smart for them to steal away and smoke. If they felt they wanted one, why they'd have smoke in public. But none of them seems to want one. They're too busy with other things, the lad told me", chuckled the father.

DRIVER OF CAR HELD IN CUSTODY

Charged with Reckless Driving After Car Crashes Into Engine

Toronto, Dec. 16 (CP)—Six persons escaped injury when an automobile in which they were riding was struck by a railway locomotive at a north-end crossing here today. Robert E. Beauer of Niagara Falls, N.Y., driver of the car, was taken into custody on a charge of reckless driving.

Police said Beauer's machine, proceeding southward, crashed through lowered crossing gates and was struck by a Canadian Pacific Railway engine on the left rear side. After the impact, the car continued its course and crashed through the south crossing gates before overturning into a ditch. The car was wrecked.

Arthur Townsend, also of Niagara Falls, N.Y., and Miss Ann Christie, Toronto, were among the five passengers all of whom emerged from the wreckage without injury.

Modern System Tax Collection Is Recommended

A "more modern system" of tax collection for the City of Belleville, as outlined in a letter received by council from city auditor F. G. Chamberlain will be installed by city council if a recommendation to this effect, passed at last evening's committee meeting is adopted at the next regular meeting of council on Monday evening.

Under the new system each roll will be closed, balanced and audited at the end of each year, and all outstanding accounts owing the city will be transferred to a loose leaf ledger for immediate reference.

It was further recommended in committee last evening, "That an Accounts Receivable" ledger be installed and set up, and accounts be collected, as mentioned in the auditor's letter.

"That proper methods of plant, machinery, lands, buildings and equipment of the city be kept, and inventories made up, as outlined."

Other minor recommendations council will be asked to approve are:

"That the requests of the Women's Christian Association for a grant of $127.00 for cost of indigent funerals, be given.

"That the City Engineer submit a report as to the number of signs now in place on both Campbell Street and Victoria Avenue, and the cost of placing additional signs, if necessary, on both sides of the streets. These are parking signs, it was understood by the recommendation. "That the city engineer at the same time submit a similar report covering both Front Street and East Bridge Streets.

"That the city solicitor be directed to provide in the bylaw for the sale of property to John Hinds for a dwelling to be erected within eighteen months from the date of conveyance."

Interment took place in the family plot in St. Edmunds Cemetery, Stoco, Ont.

LADY WILLISON DIES OF HEART ATTACK

Lady Willison, widow of Sir John Willison, distinguished Canadian journalist, died yesterday afternoon from a heart attack at her residence, 22 South Drive. She had been ill for three weeks.

Marjory Jardine Ramsay MacMurchy Willison was born in Toronto, the daughter of the late Archibald MacMurchy, LL.D., and Marjory Jardine Ramsay MacMurchy. She received her education at Jarvis Collegiate and the University of Toronto. In 1926 she married Sir John Willison, eminent Canadian editor and journalist, as his second wife.

Lady Willison won recognition not only as an author of books, and as a contributor to numerous periodicals, but she was gifted as a book reviewer. She had the distinction of being a special syndicate writer at the Coronation of King George V in 1911.

Rev. D. T. McClintock Named To Act as Interim Moderator

Rev. Dr. Wilson Leaves St. Andrew's Church, Napanee, Shortly to Become Editor of United Church Publication, New Outlook

Rev. D. T. McClintock received word yesterday that the executive of the Belleville Presbytery had appointed him an interim moderator of St. Andrew's United Church, Napanee, during the vacancy caused by Dr. Wilson's appointment to the editorship of the new paper to be published by the United Church of Canada. Dr. Wilson closes his pastorate at the end of this year.

The New Outlook, from which the editor, Mr. Gerald R. Cragg has recently resigned, has this to say of Dr. Wilson.

"The task before him is admittedly hard. To launch a popular paper demands strong convictions about its value, and gifts of a distinctive kind will be necessary to carry the enterprise to a successful end. Mr. Wilson has given clear proof that he has the convictions, and long experience in the field of journalism has given him a background which should be a valuable asset. For many years Mr. Wilson has edited a weekly newspaper in a small Ontario town, and he has thus had peculiarly intimate contact with an important phase of Canadian life. He is a graduate of Queen's and has a good training. He is a minister with a grasp of the problems which confront the Church. Active leadership in both Presbytery and Conference, combined with the discipline of repeated attendance at General Council, has given him obvious advantages. Recent independent experience in the field of religious journalism has made it possible for him to discover by experiment the kind of work he wants to do. The old paper wishes the new paper well, and the members of the present staff join in the sincere hope that Mr. Wilson will find both satisfaction and success in his new work."

City Provides No Christmas Baskets To Relief Families

No provision can officially be made for relief families of the city in the matter of extra luxuries for Christmas, it was stated by Mayor Jamieson Bone this morning, but if citizens, service clubs, and kindred organizations wish to take up the matter of caring for dependent families on the relief rolls, they will be given every assistance by the City and Welfare department, it was added.

Neither government has recognized or provided for anything extra for these families at Christmas, and if the city were to undertake to provide extras for the many on relief, funds would have to be taken directly from the taxpayer of the city, and a lot of them will have to forego many extras and luxuries in order to pay the high taxes on their properties next year," added the Mayor.

"Due to the work and efforts of the various service clubs and other organizations of the city, we believe, however, that few families will be missed at Christmas."

FIRE PRECAUTIONS THAT SHOULD BE OBSERVED BY ALL

Fire Chief Lynch Draws Attention to Safety Rules to Avoid Accidents

GREAT CARE NEEDED

Potential danger to life and property from Christmas decorations such as combustible draperies, scenery, cotton to represent snow in event of fire, is drawn to the attention of merchants and business men of the city, by Fire Chief William Lynch.

Should an accident involving fire occur in a store, the rapid spread of flame in such inflammable material is almost certain to occasion a panic with attendant risks to life, it is pointed out.

A few simple precautions, that follow, may reduce the danger to a minumum and these should be considered essential where large numbers of people, particularly children are gathered.

"See that flammable material is clear of and not hung over heating and lighting devices, steampipes, stovepipes, electric light bulbs, etc."

"See that electric circuits are properly fused, and not overloaded by the addition of temporary lights."

"Examine fire extinguishing apparatus, and see that it or they are in good order and readily accessible."

"Have all temporary decorations removed and safely disposed of as soon as they have served their purpose."

Remember that nothing can render these displays absolutely safe, and that if accidents are not to mar the festive season, constant vigilance and care must be exercised, Chief Lynch stated.

German Foreign Policy Subject of Discussion

"Observers of German political strategy are noting a trend in favour of closer alignment with Russia," maintained Lloyd Van Gorder, late of London, England, at a meeting in the Y.M.C.A. last evening. "It may seem absurd to suggest an accord between Germany and Russia", continued the speaker, "but remember that the Russia of today is not essentially different from either Germany or Italy". The speaker brought many authorities to bear out his contention and warned his audience not to be surprised if startling changes took place in Germany's High Command and Foreign Policy in the near future.

Jewish Persecution

"Palestine is the worst place Jewish refugees could possibly go to." he said "in view of the fact that it will shortly become the 'storm centre' of the world. By all means provide a place of refuge for this persecuted people but in their own interests let it not be Palestine. Italy will strike into that territory from the south, and the Russian-German confederacy from the north—events are even now shaping in that direction. Jewish settlers in Palestine will then be in a most unenviable position, even worse than in Germany today. Great Britain, concluded the speaker, would only solve her troubles as and when she realized her identity with the House of Israel, as distinct from Jewry. Present events and their outcome were clearly foretold in the Bible which ought to be the Guide Book of our race.

Sneeze Uncovers Shoplifter's Store Of Stolen Goods

"There's many a slip twixt the cup and the lip" is an old adage that many believe in, but the stout lady who was doing her Christmas shopping? in a Front Street department store this morning without bothering with the formality of paying for it, discovered that there is many a slip twixt the coat and the dress.

As she stood near a counter, looking at Christmas cards, her face suddenly became distorted with that funny expression that usually precedes a sneeze. A moment later a loud "Atchoo". rang out in the store. Customers turned momentarily. Clerks looked on with amused smiles.

But they looked again in surprise as the lady in question, gazed at something that lay on the floor, then hurriedly left the store.

And well they might for on the floor where the lady had been standing lay a new leather purse, and six pairs of men's socks.

The sneeze apparently had been the means of loosening the woman's coat sufficiently to allow the "presents" to fall to the floor.

CHEESEMAKERS DEBATE ON PLACE OF '39 EXHIBITION

Belleville in Eyes of Importers in Britain is Cheese Centre of Canada, Declare Speakers — Choice of Place of Convention Lies Between Kingston and Belleville

A lull came in a meeting of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association executive held last evening in the city. Much of the business had been disposed of. Remained only the naming of a few more officers and committees, and the selection of a location for the 1939 British Empire Cheese Exhibition, acknowledged by Canada's chief dairy officials as the largest event of its kind in the world.

Belleville and Kingston had been named as the final choice of the executive. Several other Central Ontario centres had been listed but by process of elimination, had been marked off the books.

Frankly, Kingston was favored by a number of the executive, eastern men, who believed that as the Exhibition had now become worldwide, a large city should be given the distinction of housing this important show.

Retiring president, Wilfred E. Coopper of Sunbury, just a short distance from the city of Kingston, had spoken in favor of that city as the location for 1939.

Mr. Coopper was handing over the chair to his successor, Grant Anderson, of Campbellford, the new president, last evening. During the busiest year yet experienced by the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association, which concluded with the largest exhibition of cheese ever held in any country, he had handled the job with distinction and credit to himself and the organization. Members listened when he spoke.

"The best president this Association has perhaps ever had", it was stated by J. L. Irwin, father of the famed exhibition.

"We've been boosting Belleville all along. Why not boost some other place....why not take the convention to Kingston", retiring president Coopper suggested.

"Because", countered some of the other members from Campbellford and Tyendinaga, and Peterborough and Lindsay and Stirling districts, "the name of Belleville has been, ever since cheese was made in Canada synonymous with good cheese. Good, Canadian cheddar cheese. It would be a shame to have the convention moved away from Belleville.

"After all, in the eyes of the British importers, men who have made the cheese industry in Canada, Belleville is THE cheese centre of Canada. Speak of cheese and the name Belleville automatically pops out. In fact, cable services from the Old Country name Kingston as being in the Belleville district."

There the matter stood. Adjournment was made. Again the matter of location, either Belleville or Kingston will come before the executive at its next special meeting.

F. DONALD COSTER

his direct supervision, had apparently built up fictitious assets of $18,000,000.

The man who lived down a criminal past of 25 years ago to become head of the great drug firm turned a pistol on himself as Chief of Police Arthur Bennett was arriving at the Coster's big country home to take him into custody.

"As nearly as I can learn he put a revolver to his head and pulled the trigger," Bennett said.

Developments today showed that Vernard was Musica's younger brother, Arthur, and Federal authorities held it likely that Dietrich was a second brother who dropped from sight after the crash of the Musica finances years ago. They also were checking the possibility that Mrs. Coster might also have had another name in her younger years. The Costers were childless.

Search Fingerprints.

Irving Kaufman, Assistant United States Attorney, also announced he had telephoned the United States Department of Justice at Washington to get a copy of the fingerprints of George Dietrich, assistant treasurer of the drug concern.

Dietrich and Vernard were indicted with Coster for violation of the Securities Act of 1934. Vernard, an agent for the company in Canada, was arrested in Montreal early this week.

The United States Government ordered the immediate re-arrest of Coster, Dietrich and Vernard. The United States Attorney's office ordered the men taken into custody and said bail of $100,000 each would be sought.

Kaufman said he wished to determine if Dietrich also was a brother of the financial wizard whose fingerprints, dug from a file of 25 years ago, revealed him not as a Heidelberg graduate but as a former immigrant boy from Italy — Philip Musica, ex-convict and swindler.

Became Head in 1926.

Coster, or Musica, became head of the McKesson and Robbins firm in 1926, made the business eminently successful and was coasting along in splendor and brilliance until his treasurer's suspicion that all was not well in the crude drugs department started a quiet investigation which brought the firm into federal court a week ago with a petition for reorganization.

With listed assets of $87,000,000 it became increasingly evident through state and federal inquiries in the past week that at least $18,000,000 of these assets were unaccounted for or perhaps non-existent. But it was not until Inspector John Donovan reached the files of an old side-street police station that Coster's real identity came to light.

Coster's past was brilliant, but the new career he had chosen for himself as a respectable corporation head, widely known in Wall Street, was even more brilliant.

Son of Barber

In "Who's Who in America" he gave himself American birth, in Washington, D.C., new parents, and the Heidelberg degrees of Doctor of Philosophy and Doctor of Medicine. There was no hint that he was the son of a Neapolitan barber, who emigrated to the east side of New York.

There was no suggestion in the white-haired dignified man of quiet manner and apparent cultural attainments that his name once was anathema to the very bankers or their sires with whom he associated at the New York Bankers Club. Musica, or Coster, had even made himself younger by seven years.

Investigation Started

As the Federal government, the New York State government and the Attorney General's office in Quebec, where the company supposedly had crude drug warehouses, proceeded with their investigations, there were mounting conjectures as to what Coster had done in the years just prior to 1926 when his gracious manner and beaming personality persuaded Connecticut bankers to back him with $1,000,000 to take over the McKesson firm.

That is, between 1920 when a charge of subornation of perjury growing out of a notorious murder case investigation was dismissed against him and the time when he emerged as the ultra-respectable head of Girard and Company, a Mount Vernon, N.Y. drug manufacturing concern.

UNDERWRITERS MEET

Four speakers featured the regular meeting of the Belleville Underwriters' Association held in the Queens Hotel yesterday and attended by a large number of members. Brief instructive addresses were given by Messrs. Geo. A. Reid, A. Ogilvie, A. E. Ironside, president of the Kingston association, and P. C. McGuire. Newly-elected President James Barclay officiated at his first meeting as head of the Association.

THE CHRISTMAS SEASON

Steadily the Christmas season is marching on and the gap shrinking between "today" and Christmas Eve. Even the weather at last seems to have become conscious of the swift passage of time towards the Christmas festival and has turned to the familiar cold in these parts. It is seasonable, the people say, for health and for trade.

While a considerable volume of Christmas purchasing has been done by those who do not wish to be caught in the last-minute rush when buyers almost swamp the shops, a great deal of trade is anticipated the last day of this week. Then next week will give an entire week to the preparations for Christmas.

The stores present this season one of the finest exhibitions of goods ever assembled at Christmastime. Craftsmanship, imagination and thought in the production and offering of gifts were never at so high a standard as they are seen in the preparations for the Christmas trade this year. Treasures from every kind of workshop and manufacturing plant are there, every single one of these gifts-to-be representing so much labor. Today one can go into a shop in town and come out laden with treasures the like of which not even a Marco Polo in his day could bring back after years of travel in foreign lands. The thoroughness of the expert wholesale buyer who knows what the people need and want is apparent as one glances along the shelves and counters of every shop here.

Today the Christmas shopper is the heir of many ages, climes, customs and fashions. He or she may look for and surely find what will make acceptable gifts.

Modern industry and merchandising have done much for mankind. They have provided articles of exquisite workmanship at reasonable prices, because skilled artisans have been employed in making such goods for Christmas.

Belleville business men have contributed their share towards the festivity of the season, the shops are fairylands of wonder, filled with goods of every kind, there are experienced clerks to serve and make Christmas buying a pleasure.

There are only seven more buying days before Christmas.

FUTURE OF THE EMPIRE

Some thought has been given this week to a question whether there might be such a possibility as the weakening of the ties of the British Empire in a crisis or adversity. Prime Minister Chamberlain assured the British Commons the government had complete faith in the ability of the Empire to cling together. This was said in reference to the speech of Dominions Secretary Malcolm MacDonald on Tuesday on the future of the Empire. Mr. Chamberlain said Mr. MacDonald's words expressed his faith in the survival of the Empire.

Typically British was the witticism when Geoffrey Mander declared that it was the conviction of many people the Empire could not possibly survive the present government. Where in a dictatorial state could such a thing be heard of! Yet it runs true to British humor. It is this which makes possible a free democracy. The Britisher has this quality of laughing at himself which makes him the world's best statesman.

In none of the Dominions or Colonies is there thought of such weakening of ties as would crack up the Empire. Prime Minister Michael Savage of Australia put it for the British free nations as follows: "Britain will find that, when it comes to the pinch no one will be mssing as far as the Dominions are concerned".

There never has been in all history of empires, there is not today, an empire built up of free nations such as the British Empire. These Dominions know their liberty, they are allowed freedom and can think for themselves. They cannot but uphold the British democratic view of government as they have seen it practised in British history. They are an integral part of that development of freedom and cannot contemplate the breaking of ties which would mean the end of what they hold dear. They know that in the Empire they are both strong in their own right and in their imperial ties. In fact the British Empire is greater than the sum total of all its parts. Some empires are weak by reason of their parts. That is not the case fith the British Empire.

A glance at old Roman history shows how the subjugated states of Rome bore their conqueror no good will and no opportunity was lost to throw off the Roman yoke. When the pressure of the surge of populations and the fresh attacks of virile young races in the north became too strong for the Roman Empire which had not thoroughly developed its provinces and given them freedom, these states still felt they were conquered and could not have the devotion to their centre as is manifest in the parts of the British Empire. Britain has fortunately spread her civilization and freedom in her Dominions. It was not so with the Roman provinces, where opportunists waited to seize power. In British Dominions the British policy has been away from the development of the ideal of power and domination, so that there is such a thing as loyalty to a state out of pure love for its institutions, without thought of self but for the good of all. Great as was the Roman state it never had a thought of allowing perfect freedom to any of its possessions. That concept of Empire had not yet been born. It required nearly twenty centuries to bring that about —it required time and in the course of time the British Empire came into being with all its Dominions, free nations in themselves, whose future is not only their own individually but also the Empire's.

"WRONG WAY CORRIGAN" has just finished the story of his life in Liberty Magazine, for which he received a very fat checque. Corrigan's exploit in flying to Ireland when he thought he was flying to California (his story and he is stuck with it), has won him fame and fortune. Many people wonder why all the fuss over Corrigan who broke the law of the land and risked his life on a slim chance—which if he had not succeeded would have won him the title of the world's biggest fool. Toronto Tely featured on its front page an article by its star columnist, Thomas Richard Henry, in which he queries the sense of rewarding Corrigan for his ignorance or foolhardiness. Says Thomas Richard Henry:

> "There must be such a thing as the Midas touch, because some people are able to fall into big money as easily as an only son falls into temptation.
> "Take this lad Corrigan. He is reported to be writing an autobiography, starring in the movies, and a few chores like that, to the tune of some $25,000 a month, when there are good newspapermen who probably have to work two or three months for $25,000. (Did he mean months or years or what have you?)
> "Why does Mr. Corrigan get that kind of money? Sure, he took a chance and pulled a hoax, but why should that put him in a position to say thanks a million to a sucker public?
> "There wasn't as much worthwhile purpose in what he did and he did not take as much chance of being killed as did the chaps who crawled up and tossed Mills bombs into German pill boxes in the late lamented war.
>
> "If the lad who went after the pill box didn't get shot for his pains, and if the right officer saw him, he sometimes got a V.C.
>
> "Did that put him in the Big Money?
> "On the strength of a V.C. you can get a job washing dishes—provided you are a pretty fair dishwasher.
>
> "What happens if a fireman risks his life in a burning building to bring a child out?
>
> "He may get to be a lieutenant by and by if he has lots of pull.
>
> "And how about the copper who goes after a thug with a gun?
> "Nobody wants to read his autobiography—unless he happens to belong to the morality squad.
>
> "The public has goofy ideas on whom to reward with Big Dough, and why? Because it is the public that does it. If the public said 'SO WHAT?' when Mr. Corrigan happened to save his neck, he would have just been out his expenses like the other Steve Brodies that nobody ever hears about."

And that's that; refreshing after all the sweet stuff that has been printed about that foolish lad who tried to go west in a plane pointed east, and became a Near Hero, buried beneath a mound of money and congratulations, instead of a grave in the angry deep, or any other kind of deep. Corrigan received as great or greater ovation in New York City as Lindbergh, being crowned with telephone books and ticker tape as befits a No. 1 wrong-way hero. The fickle public likes a parade and delights in following the Big Drum.

WHEN YOU SEE IT IN THE ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER you can depend that many more will see it near and far—the circulation of the Great Family Newspaper not being confined to the six thousand and some homes in this immediate area. Across mountain-top and valley and river and ocean goes this message of goodwill, contributors, advertisers and staff to all the world. Proof of this comes to hand almost daily, the latest being a letter from England, enclosing an article reprinted from this newspaper in an English newspaper under the caption "Cats Guard Display of Cheese". The letter was addressed to Mayor Jamieson Bone, dated from 42 Glendower Road, Plymouth, England, written in a very readable hand by Maurice John Wyatt. Here 'tiz:

> Dear Sir: In one of our daily papers I read an article on your "Cats Guard of the Cheese Exhibition", and wanting a Pen Pal in America I thought that your town would be an admirable place for a chum. Could you please ask a girl, or a boy, preferably a girl, if she would like to correspond with me. I am fifteen years old, and am learning ship fitting in His Majesty's Dockyard here; also I am studying statistics, science and mathematics. I shall be very grateful to you in return for any trouble you may be put to. Yours sincerely, Maurice John Wyatt.

Seems as though that Cats Guard had accomplished considerably more than just guarding the cheese of the Empire, bringing renewed and widespread attention to Belleville, the Palace of the King . . . CHEESE.

Things are beginning to get busy in the local post office and two new clerks were taken on this morning for the holiday rush. As an evidence of welcome a regular member of the staff informed one of the new men that his first duty would be to turn the knob on the big safe until he found the combination. The industrious new comer turned the knob for twelve minutes by the post office clock before he came to and realized that he was the victim of a practical joke. It will be some time before he hears the last of the joke.

DRAKE'S BRASS PLATE

As the scales of history tilt down on one side of the country they lift on the other. In Virginia a supposed portrait of Captain John Smith turns out to be a painting of Peter John Potemkin, a Russian Ambassador to the court of the Stuarts, who probably never heard of Pocahontas. That is sad, of course. But in California the brass plate supposed to have been set up in 1579 by Sir Francis Drake to claim a new realm for Queen Elizabeth turns out to be genuine.

Scientists testing the battered metal, recently found by a picnicker but in dispute for months, say it is no hoax. There is one other relic of the Golden Hind in existence, a chair at Oxford carved from the decaying timbers of the gallant vessel when she was broken up a century after she had "singed the whiskers of the King of Spain" around the globe. But this brass plate puts Drake in the very midst of his romantic exploits at the moment when, according to some unfriendly London merchants, he had become the "Master Theefe of the unknown world."

An unknown world it was before Drake stood there sturdily and named it "Nova Albion." Cabrillo, for Spain, had been somewhere in the vicinity thirty-four years before but never got his foot on the land. But Drake spent a whole winter there counting the tons of ducats and wrought gold and silver bars he had looted from stately treasure galleons on the way from Cape Horn up that incredible coast. He was in what is now Marin County, where winter is like summer elsehere. There Californian seems to look herself over in a single glass from the peaks of Mount Tamalpais down through groves of great sequoias past flowering meadows to the bright edge of the sea. Sir Francis and his doughty mariners were the first Europeans to rest beside the Golden Gate, but they may have missed its beauties, for their minds were on other things. The narrator of the voyage says prophetically, "There is no parte of the earth heere to be taken up, wherein there is not some special liklihood of gold or silver."

"At our departure hence," the old record continues, "our General set up a monument of our being there, as also of her Majesties right and title to the same, namely a plate, nailed upon a faire, greate poste, whereupon was engraven her Majesties name, the day and yeere of our arrival there, with the free giving up of the province and the people into her Majesties hands, together with her Highnes picture and armes, in a piece of six pence of current English money, under the plate."

That is the record of the plate, now scarcely brass and worth its weight in gold. Perhaps California will change her name, as she should, to Nova Albion.—New York Times.

CANADIAN JUSTICE

They do these things rather well in Canada. Maybe that's why the crime record of the Dominion is one of the lowest on earth. That Body of Yours

Recovery From Appendicitis Without Operation

I have spoken before of visiting a friend and finding him sick with appendicitis. Although not his physician, he asked me to feel the 'tightness' across his abdomen. There was no question about the condition being an acute appendicitis and that Nature was "walling off" the appendix from other organs. I was greatly concerned and told him, that if it were myself or any member of my family an operation would be performed at once and that if he didn't telephone his physician at once, I would. His wife and himself were opposed to operations and told me so kindly but firmly.

I scarcely slept that night as I believed I should have tried further to persuade them to have an operation. I called the home early the next morning and the patient answered it himself and said he was feeling better. I called again and he told me that a 'strange' thing had happened. He felt a sudden desire to empty the intestine and when he did so the waste was composed of pus. The appendix had burst into the bowel and the pus passed out instead of getting into abdomen and causing peritonitis—inflammation.

While this case is unusual, many similar cases have been recorded.

Do cases of appendicitis recover without operation? Yes! Many individuals have recovered from one or more attacks.

The regular correspondent in Italy of the American Medical Association states that Prof. Sicca reported thirty-four cases of acute appendicitis with a limited amount of peritonitis on the first to fourth day of the disease. All of the patients recovered after 'medical' treatment. Among fourteen patients under 'medical' treatment who had acute appendicitis and the peritonitis was widespread only five recovered. Thus in a series of cases af acute appendicitis with a small amount of peritonitis all the thirty-four cases recovered without operation, whereas in fourteen cases where peritonitis was widespread nine of the fourteen died.

What is Prof. Sicca's advice? Should operation be performed when so many recover without it?

As the physician cannot tell, in the early stages of acute appendicitis, just what is likely to happen Dr. Sicca states, "It is advisable to operate whenever possible in the first hours of acute appendicitis as the death rate is then nothing or very slight." Don't delay if your physician advises operation.

LONDON'S AUCTION

The great "clearing house" of London's lost property, situated on the fringe of Covent Garden Market, is now celebrating a century and a quarter of continuous activity.

In 1813 a small auction room was opened in King street, Covent Garden, by a Mr. Machin. His main business was the disposal of pawnbroker's unredeemed pledges and other miscellaneous property.

Today not only do millions of pledges of all kinds, from diamond necklaces to flat-irons, come under the hammer (at Debenham & Storr's, as the firm is now called) but also every single article of property that an absent-minded public leaves behind in public places, on busses, trams and underground trains.

More than 60,000 umbrellas pass through these auction rooms every year, the majority of which are found on busses and tubes. They are auctioned in lots of 12 to go to dealers and second-hand shops in all parts of the country.

In a recent sale of lost property sold by the London Passenger Transport Board, among the lots for disposal were: "142 ladies' hats in sack," "90 articles of ladies' underwear," "Oriental idol, four cricket pads, child's bats and stumps, records, four stands and tripods, brass shell case, shovel, electric toaster, two folding stools, two saws, wood pieces, mop duster," all in one lot.

All the articles lost in the post also come here to be sold, and until one is confronted with one of these sale catalogues one does not realize the extent and variety of postal "casualties."—London Observer.

Modern Scotland Yard

Scotland Yard — thanks to fact and also detective fiction and drama —is probably the best known police headquarters in the world. But unless you are a high police official or a suspected criminal whom the Yard wishes to interrogate, the chances are very slim for an inspection of this famed place.

The other day this correspondent was given the courtesy of a run through the Yard. That part which he was permitted to see dissipates much of the mystery that has been woven around Scotland Yard.

The success of the institution is due in great part to the use of science and to the capacity to take infinite pains in the making of its records. On top of that, of course, comes the shrewd thinking of its crack personel.

x x x x

Scotland Yard has a record of every one of the million-odd criminals or suspects in Great Britain. This record is indexed and cross-indexed in a marvelous way. For instance, in one room there is an index by physical peculiarities. If the man wanted is blind in one eye or has a mole on his forehead or a cyst in his neck or a finger off his left hand, the index will show all the known criminals with that peculiarity.

But that index may yield quite a long list of men. Then the police turn to another index. If the man wanted is a burglar, there is an index as to burglars which specifies the methods they employ to enter a house. There is still another index which shows the various names under which the criminal has lived. The field is thus narrowed down to a few men.

Then there is an inspection of the records of those men. These records show their photographs, their finger prints and all about their lives and ways. The list of suspects is narrowed down some more, because the chances are that some of the men in the list are shown by the records to be serving prison sentences. This group can't include the man who did the latest crime.

x x x x

The finger print department has upwards of a million records, all duly indexed. Inspector Cherrill said that recently the Yard had introduced a unique new system of examining its records. Under this, they can tell within less than a minute whether the finger print of a suspect is in their gallery of prints taken from the fingers of men actually convicted of previous crime.

Connected with this division is the photographic department, which makes some 125,000 photos of faces and finger prints each year. The department also has several flying laboratories in cars which can be rushed to the scene of a crime so that photos may be taken at once.

x x x x

The metropolitan area of Greater London is 700 square miles within a radius of 15 miles from Charing Cross. Twenty thousand men police it.

In addition, there are 70 police cars equipped with wireless telephones. Some of these are openly police cars. Others are the so-called "Q cars"—disguised as private vehicles. They are all directed from the information room.

Another interesting place is the map room. Here are large wall maps showing the entire London area. Every time preventable crimes have been committed, flags of certain colours are stuck in the appropriate places in the map. This applies only to preventable crimes. The police inspectors of every London division can come to this room, study this map, learn at a glance the kind of crimes committed in their division, and decide upon methods to lessen law-breaking.—By Milton Bronner in Hamilton Spectator.

KITCHENS DESERTED

Sir,—would you please allow me space in your paper to answer a statement of Miss Helen G. Campbell's of Toronto. She speaks of present-day mothers being so much smarter than their grandmothers as to cooking and housekeeping and business in general. She speaks of present-day mothers being so superior as cooks. Well, when did you ever see so many eating at restaurants to get a fill-up?

When did you ever see so many can-openers? Mothers nowadays could not cook a meal without a can-opener. When did you ever see so many cigarettes used as by present-day mothers?

Mothers and grandmothers of my day had no time to sit all afternoon and evening at the show and the balance of the night at the card table, and sleep until noon while husband dined at a restaurant.

SWEEPSTAKES PROFITS

It appears that the Irish Hospitals Sweepstakes are a liability instead of an asset to the Irish hospitals. Social workers in Dublin claim that although sweepstakes have raised $65,000,000, supposedly for hospitals, poor people have difficulty securing beds when they are ill, and hospital accommodations in that city of 600,000 is no better than it was when the population was 250,000.—Chatham News.

Directors of Association Favor Decided Expansion Of Cheese Show Next Year

Decision As to Site of Exhibit to be Made in Near Future

SOME PLAIN SPEAKING

Board Favors Associations Having Representation on Certificate Board

Members of the executive of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association will name either Belleville or Kingston as the site of the 1939 British Empire Cheese Exhibition, largest cheese show in the world, it was decided at a meeting of the executive held in the city last evening at which directors were appointed for the coming year.

The meeting, held at the home of J. L. Irwin, honorary president of the Association, East Bridge street, also went on record as favoring decided expansion of the 1939 show which would include also exhibits by the buttermakers of the Dominion and Empire.

A special exhibition committee composed of president, Grant Anderson, Campbellford; J. S. Cook and Son, representing the local exporting trade; P. J. Murphy, Enterprise, and W. H. Morton, Belleville, representing the Montreal exporters, and manager, J. L. Irwin, was named. An assistant to the manager will be appointed at a later date.

Honorary directors appointed are C. E. Lackner, Minister of Dairying for Ontario; Allan C. Fraser, secretary-manager of the National Dairy Council of Canada, Ottawa; and Mackenzie Robertson of Belleville.

Geo. S. Dawkins, Belleville, and John Hall, Foxboro, were named auditors for the coming year.

Mr. W. C. Morrow, past president of the Belleville Cheese Board, was appointed honorary member, and official cheese sales auctioneer.

Honorary Members.

Honorary members named: J. S. Cook and Son, Belleville; W. R. McCreary, Belleville; W. H. Morton, Belleville; R. Hart, Belleville; Dr. A. L. Gibson, past superintendent of the Eastern Ontario Dairy School; L. A. Zufelt, past president of the Eastern Dairy School; C. L. Jewell, manager of the Belleville branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce; T. H. Dredge, manager of the Belleville branch of the Bank of Montreal; J. K. Fraser, manager of the Princess street branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, Kingston; J. K. Patterson, manager of the Picton branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce; W. J. Wiggins, manager of the Napanee branch of the Royal Bank of Canada; H. B. Sandwith, dairy instructor, Kingston; W. E. Morrow, past president of the Belleville Cheese Board; W. H. White, president of the Belleville Cheese Board; Jas. Donahue, publicity manager; Geo. Pollard, Stirling; Mayor Jamieson Bone.

A secretary and treasurer is to be appointed at a later meeting, which will name also the location of the 1939 dairy show and convention of the Central Association.

W. E. Coopper Retires.

In his retiring address last evening, Mr. Wilfred E. Coopper, Sunbury, thanked members of the executive for the support which had been given him during his office as president in 1938. "If you had given your exhibition this year the same support during the final days, it would have been even bigger than the one hundred per cent it was," he chided.

As a member of the Central Ontario Makers' executive for the past nine years, retiring president Coopper declared that he had become wiser as the years had progressed to the point, he believed, where some recommendations could be given for the betterment of the association, one of these he said, would be to have some of the business of the annual convention conducted at the first day's meeting.

"As it has been, we have been putting off much of the work until the last day. In years to come I hope the committees will be appointed on the first day so that resolutions can be presented on the first day, and in the case of the nominating committee and others, that they may be given a chance for some evening wrk if such is found necessary. On the second day all this work can be finished up."

The Spider in a scene from "The Spider's Web," chapter play at the McCarthy Theatre.

"During the year just finished, I did a lot of heavy thinking," continued the past president who stated that even in spite of the fact that he lived some seventy miles distant from Belleville, the headquarters of the Association, he had tried to devote as much time as possible to the job "because during the year we were faced with difficulties which we had never met before.

"I have come to the conclusion that during past years we have been giving too much time and effort and thought to the export end of the industry. Our whole season's meeting of the executive has been marked with undue, I believe, regard to that class of trade. Have we forgotten entirely the men working over the vats because of this?

"I believe that this year the Association will have to be divided into two parts. One body will be concerned wholly with the annual Empire Cheese Show and Exhibition. The second half will have to look after the makers' interests only.

"During the past we have been boosting Belleville, and Belleville only. We've got to branch out, away from this. If we want the support of the men behind us, the makers who form the backbone of the Association, then we've got to take them more into consideration, we've got to give the support to the men who send the cheese to us.

Makes Request

"In the matter of certificates for new makers and factories I believe that the new Minister of Dairying is wholly in accord with our resolution asking that appointments on this certificate board be made from the three principal associations, which will include our own organization. And this is a very important matter, this granting of certificates. You know and I know that we have men working in the industry today, who do not care a darn what kind of product they put out. We on the Association know these men, and we know whether they should be granted certificates.

"We have other problems," pointed out the retiring president. "We have the matter of the appointment of a full time secretary, because our business and our association has grown so big that now we need a man who can devote his full time to the association's work. But if one is to be appointed ,we will have to find the money to pay him. We must go forward, not back...."

"It wouldn't be that we have reached the peak and are now content to rest on our laurels, or fall back, would it?" interjected John Hall, Foxboro.

"I wonder about that," commented the retiring president. "I wonder whether the men behind this association and this industry are not just wondering, too, whether we are forgetting them in our effort at furthering the export end of the matter. I wonder if at times his interest does not lag because of the fact that we do not inject his business more into the regular meetings. Whether or not the novelty of this show and these conventions is not beginning to wear off for him. Is it because he believes we are not doing enough for him? Do we need more missionary work to bring him back with us?

"I'm tickled to death to hand this office over to the new president, Grant Anderson, and all I can ask at this time is that you give him the full support that you gave me during the past year, but more support than you gave the last Exhibition during the final stages of the show," declared Mr. Coopper, extending the compliments of the season to members.

New President Installed

President Grant Anderson in his acceptance of the office declared he believed the past president "got out of the chair a little too soon." "No president can accomplish much in the short time of one year, but Mr. Coopper has done a magnificent job during the past term," he complimented.

Full agreement, that two committees would be needed in future to handle the work of the Association at convention and show time was given by Mr. Anderson, who also concurred with the suggestion, that more interest be displayed in matters affecting the cheesemaker of the country.

"We want to do something for the cheesemaker and his family. This exhibition has now become Dominion and Empire-wide. It has or should become an annual affair dedicated to the interests of all connected with the dairy industry in the country. And I believe, that as we have done too much recently to promote interest in and better conditions for agriculture of the country, that we should feel free and have a perfect right to ask both the Dominion and Provincial governments for substantial grant aid to carry on in future. And we should know each year before prize lists are ever printed just how much aid we can expect to get from the two governments. Our Association has undertaken a national scheme for the betterment of the industry, and should be recognized as such by being given all the support necessary.

"That five cents on the box of cheese collected during certain summer months by the association will look after some sections of the convention, but I don't believe any of our officers should have to go around begging for funds with which to carry on".

Dairy Grader Heard

Mr. J. L. Irwin, Dominion dairy grader, and father of the cheese exhibition which has attained to world wide prominence and exhibits since its inception two years ago on a modest scale, welcomed the new president and thanked the retiring president for the invaluable work, that had been performed by him in office during 1938. "Grant Anderson, who has assumed new responsibilities of office has worked for me in the past, and will be found to do a good job and take a conscientious interest in it. Wilf. Coopper has my whole-hearted admiration in every respect for the ability he has displayed during the past term in office, and while we did not see eye to eye on every question, he conducted the office probably the best it has ever been conducted by any previous president. We all admit that he was let down on the last afternoon of the convention, but many expected that. But still it and the banquet was the greatest success it has ever been.

"The first interest during the coming year is for our cheesemakers. I've never got the idea out of my head, that the cheesemaker is, after all, the man who counts. And anything I can do to make his life a little better will be done".

"This last cheese exhibition has advertised the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association and our cheese show to the four corners of the world. We have received letters from almost every country in it", continued Mr. Irwin. "So successful has it become, that I have had repeated offers to go down into the Province of Quebec and organize there on the same lines. I have had to refuse this, although they would have offered almost anything to get someone to go down there and place them in the position we enjoy today. We have the intense interest of every phase of the dairy industry centred on us and on Belleville, waiting for our next move."

Mr. Irwin agreed, that the exhibition next year, whether it be held in Belleville or Kingston, be conducted under two special committees "But cheesemakers must be represented", he warned.

A vote of thanks for the efficient services of the retiring president and to J. L. Irwin for his untiring energy that has made the annual convention and exhibition possible was moved at this point by Morris Rose, seconded by Samuel Anderson.

Following the meeting members and friends were served an oyster supper after which a social hour was spent.

Silver Dollar Will Commemorate Royal Visit

Ottawa, Dec. 16 (CP)—A new silver dollar, commemorative of the visit to Canada next summer of King George and Queen Elizabeth, will be struck shortly by the Royal Canadian Mint, Prime Minister Mackenzie King announced.

The coin will bear the likeness of King George on one side and a design symbolizing the royal visit on the opposite side. It is not contemplated that the profiles of both the king and queen will be on the coin since the issue of metal money is the sole prerogative of the reigning sovereign.

There will also be an issue of stamps in three series to commemorate the event. The one-cent stamp will be green with the features of the Royal Princesses. A brown two-cent stamp will show the National War Memorial, which his Majesty will unveil next May, while the likenesses of the King and Queen will appear on the three-cent stamps which will be large in size and red as at present.

The new silver dollar will be third in the series issued since Canada first minted a coin of that size in 1935 to mark the 25th jubilee of King George V. A second series was struck for the Coronation year.

Bellevillian Will Head Detroit Chapter

Robert Cecil Gibson, who is the son of the late Charles Gibson of Belleville, and who left Belleville a few years ago for Detroit, will on Monday evening Dec. 19 be installed in that city as Excellent High Priest of Palestine Chapter, No. 159, Royal Arch Masons of Michigan at the public installation of officers. Rt. Excellent Companion E. T. Cherry of Moira Chapter, No. 7, Belleville, has received an invitation to attend the installation.

Refunding of Public Debts Imperative Says Premier In Addressing Empire Club

Toronto, Dec. 16—(CP)—The vital need of building national defences makes imperative a refunding of public debts in Canada, Premier Mitchell Hepburn said yesterday in an address at the Empire Club. The alternative to refunding was national bankruptcy and the loss to investors of the principle of these debts.

"What are we going to do about debt? Let us face it. We have to have a national refunding scheme, provincial, federal and municipal. It has been done in other countries. Yes, in Britain, in Australia."

Advocates of monetary reform were called crackpots and nitwits but their detractors had nothing better to offer.

"My desire is to save our principle—to pay back for value received but we won't be able to do that much longer if we drift along.

Living in New Era

"We're living in a new era. When I was at the Pacific they were worrying about national defence. It is time to take stock and put our House in order because we're going to face the need of national defence.

"The democracies must stand together. In my opinion three nations have agreed on a conquest of the world and the rest of us must stand together and resist the inroads of dictators."

Mr. Hepburn said he recently had been accused of a conspiracy "to rip this country asunder." Canada was worth saving and he was bent on saving it, not destroying confederation.

"I believe in one Canada, not nine Canadas."

Ontario's attitude before the Rowell Commission for the maintenance of provincial rights and revenues was a proper stand. She had not gone to the commission cap in hand, demanding concessions from the federal government as had other provinces.

Contributes Half is Claim

When these other provinces made demands on the federal treasury, it was Ontario's business because Ontario contributed nearly half of federal revenues.

"I believe Ontario has paid its share in regard to confederation and I do not believe she should be asked to pay more."

There were subventions on Alberta coal, Maritimes fish, Western wheat, Martimes potatoes and other things. To all these Ontario contributed. At Sault Ste. Marie was a great industrial concern struggling to get along. Its chief competitor, located in Nova Scotia, received $1,500,000 in subsidies and "our industry at the Soo has to pay its share to subsidize its competitor in the Maritimes."

The Hudson Bay Railway was built simply to satisfy political demands in the west. A federal minister told him so. Last season two small vessels took cargoes of wheat from Churchill.

Guaranteed Wheat Prices

"This year the West had sufficient political influence to force the federal government to guarantee wheat prices." Wheat consumption was falling all over the world yet Canada aggravated the situation by promoting its production. The guarantee would cost the federal treasury 60 to 70 million dollars.

He had been told recently by an Alberta man that near Brooks, Alta., where there is an irrigation scheme, to which Ontario contributed, the wheat subsidy was resulting in lands being taken out of diversified farming and turned back to wheat.

"It is politics, just politics pure and simple. It is a bid to get the votes of the west. But we will create a worse situation than the one we have now."

A Loyal Canadian

"In regard to William Lyon Mackenzie King, this gentleman charges me with conspiracy to destroy confederation. There is no more loyal Canadian than I in this gathering. I love this Canada and am proud to know it is a link in the British Empire.

"I am not only a Canadian, I am an imperialist if you want to call me that.

"Now this Mr. King who charges me with entering into a conspiracy to destroy confederation is the same gentleman who in 1930 got up in parliament and enunciated a policy that did more to destroy confederation than anything else that has happened. King said 'not a five-cent piece for relief to any province with a Tory government'."

"Imagine that man trying to accuse me of conspiracy against confederation. Imagine a leader like that man talking about an appeal to the public on the issue of national unity."

A few scattered hand-claps met this sally. "I'm glad there are some Tories in the audience," said the premier.

Question Affiliations

"Here we had a national leader enunciating a policy with a club. The provincial governments had to be satisfactory to him. I thought we were getting along but he's getting so near the five-cent piece in regard to Ontario, I'm questioning my own affiliations."

Ontario was not complaining about her contributions to the federal treasury but she did object to the charge she was an exploiter of the rest of Canada. Heaven only knew what might have happened to Canada in the depression had it not been for Ontario's natural resources.

Mr. Hepburn justified Ontario's refusal to have anything further to do with the Royal Commission on Federal and Provincial Relations on the ground that the Federal Government had imposed new taxes since the Commission was erected and thereby violated an understanding there would be no additional taxation pending its report.

Must Reduce Debts

There was a drive by the other provinces to transfer the collection of succession duties to the federal government, he charged. Ontario would be the chief loser and would have to impose other taxation should the drive succeed.

Mr. Hepburn said in a recent speech he had estimated there would be a saving of $700,000,000 annually if public and private debts in Canada were refunded at lower rates. The federal government with its railway debts, subsidies for one thing and another was piling up debt but creating no assets. Action to reduce debt charges was urgent.

Ontario was trying to balance revenue with expenses. Debts being taken on had assets behind them. But federal debts were going up.

"Who is the Moses to lead us out of the wilderness. I'd face the issues frankly and squarely. The facts are obvious."

One of Ontario's economy measures was the closing of Government House. There was no measure of disloyalty in that. Suitable quarters had been provided in the legislature building for the Lieutenant-Governor.

Shannonville

Shannonville — The Women's Guild of the Trinity Church were guests of the Rev. and Mrs. A. E. Pepper on Wednesday afternoon at an informal Christmas entertainment. During the afternoon games, contests and social discourse were enjoyed by the guests. A new and novel way of distributing Christmas presents was introduced at the affair by the host. Each member of the guild purchased a Christmas present and when they arrived at the Rectory all the presents were placed on a beautifully decorated Christmas Tree and when it was time to distribute these presents each member of the guild was blindfolded and told to get her present and the result proved to be satisfactory as well as being very humorous. Mrs. A. E. Pepper was presented with a beautiful present by the Guild for which Mrs. Pepper thanked the guild members. A delightful afternoon tea was served at the close of the enjoyable affair. Those who assisted in the serving were: Mrs. William Coles, Mrs. Clarence Hill, Mrs. Jack McDonald, Mrs. (Rev.) A. E. Pepper.

Although snow fell during Wednesday morning the roads were in good condition throughout the day and no accidents were reported in this area.

Local weather prophets who have been telling all and sundry that this is "going to be an open winter" have suddenly disappeared from the limelight since the colder weather has moved in. During the fall when warm weather seemed to be here to stay these gentlemen were willing to wager that warm weather would greet Santa Claus. Now however, these gentlemen are conspicuous by their absence.

Hold Annual Meeting

Climaxing a very successful season the annual meeting of the Shannonville Cheese and Butter Company was held in the Shannonville cheese factory on Wednesday afternoon. A very large number of patrons were in attendance at the meeting at which Mr. Jewell, manager of the Bank of Commerce, Belleville, Mr. Cook, cheese buyer, Belleville and Mr. Charles Brennan, Dairy Instructor, gave short but interesting discourses. The president of the cheese factory, Mr. Thomas Brown, presided at the meeting.

The election of the directors of the factory was held at the meeting at which the directors of the past year were returned to office. The board of directors is as follows: Percy Moore, W. S. Dies, Benjamin Fuller, Herbert Houston, Fred Louis, Sam Geddes. The president of the cheese factory was not elected at the meeting.

Mr. William Kemp of Acme will be the new cheesemaker in the factory succeeding Mr. Zara Bristol.

According to local mail couriers some farmers are still in the throes of fall ploughing. The reason for their lateness in ploughing has been attributed to the dry weather in the early part of the fall which made the earth so hard that it was utterly impossible to do the work.

Bonarlaw

Bonarlaw, Dec. 16.—Miss Margaret Barlow and Mr. M. R. Neal were the prize winners at a euchre and social evening held at Springbrook last Tuesday evening when the Oddfellows of Springbrook Lodge No. 429 invited their ladies to spend the evening after the lodge session was closed.

Seven tables of progressive euchre were played and a bountiful lunch made a pleasant evening for all. Noble Grand J. M. Barlow thanked all for their co-operation and it was decided to hold more such evenings in the future.

Rev. L. S. Wight was a visitor in Bowmanville on Tuesday.

Dr. P. T. Bowlby of Tweed, who underwent an operation at Belleville General Hospital recently was able to be removed to his home this week.

Under the auspices of the Holy Name Society a very successful Turkey Bingo was held in St. Michael's Auditorium last evening. The door prizes were won by Mr. J. Costello and Mrs. Addison Lloyd.

HOLLOWAY STREET WOMAN'S ASSOCIATION

A joint meeting of the Holloway Street Woman's Association and the Avondale Neighbours' Aid was held in the church parlours on Thursday, December 15th, with an attendance of sixty-one. The President, Mrs. A. Sills opened the meeting by all singing "It came upon the midnight clear", followed by prayer by Mrs. C. Walters. Scripture lesson was read and followed by a very inspiring Christmas story by Mrs. J. Cordes.

The reports of various secretaries were given followed by the treasurer's report which showed a very successful year.

Prizes were awarded to four members of the association, Mrs. Newman, Mrs. Sager, Mrs. Hagerman and Mrs. Cordes for their attendance at every meeting during the year. The offering was taken by Mrs. Andrews and Mrs. Hagerman.

Mrs. R. Cameron of Avondale Neighbors' Aid took charge and a Christmas solo "A Gift" was very beautifully rendered by Miss Hazel Denike and a reading "Our Christmas" was given by Mrs. T. A. Tucker in her capable manner. At this time the election of officers for the coming year took place.

A feature of the entertainment was the presence of a very prettily decorated Christmas tree with the exchange of Christmas gifts.

The meeting closed by all repeating the Mispah benediction. A very dainty lunch was served by Mrs. Newman and her group and those assisting with the serving were Mrs. Newman, Mrs. R. Andrews, Mrs. J. Robertson, Mrs. G. Woodley, Mrs. Hinchey and Mrs. H. B. Fetterley.

The following officers were elected for the coming year:

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Vitamins and Fertility

This series on vitamins has stretched out far longer than I ever anticipated, but I hope to finish with them today, for while there are a number of them, we know comparatively little about most of them.

One which we hear a good deal of is Vitamin E. Supposed to have a good deal to do with fertility in humans, it is found largely in the germ of wheat. In my opinion it may be useful, but it is far better to eat a well-balanced diet than to go experimenting with this vitamin.

Up in this country we evidently have plenty of fertility, but I've never known wheat germ to be used by the mothers or fathers of our larger families. Yes, right here we have a birth which is amongst the highest in the world—families of 10 or 11 are average while 15 or 20 aren't at all uncommon — and all without the aid of intensive consumption of Vitamin E. So I wouldn't worry about it.

The last vitamin I will deal with now is Vitamin K. A deficiency in this vitamin causes people to bleed very freely from even minor cuts or abrasions.

The vitamin first came in for some attention ten years ago when it was found that chickens on a large farm were such bleeders that even pulling out a tail feather would cause them to bleed to death. Investigation showed that the diet of these fowl was normal except that the sweet clover fed them was spoiled.

When the scientists got around to examining this sweet clover, they found that bacteria has destroyed the fats in the clover. So it seemed that the substance necessary to prevent the developmnt of bleeding was either this fat or something closely related to it.

Experimenting further with the chickens, they discovered that when alfalfa was added to the diet, the fowl stopped bleeding; later just the fatty parts of alfalfa were used with the same result.

This substance contained in the fat of alfalfa and sweet clover was called Vitamin K, and the knowledge gained about it was then applied to human beings. Blood tests were devised which would show if a person wasn't getting enough Vitamin K in his food It was known that patients with jaundice were pronounced bleeders. The problem of hemorrhage after operation in these patients had always been a serious one to medical men the world over. It looks as this danger can not be minimized by feeding such patients before operations with Vitamin K or foods high in Vitamin K content.

It has been shown that the vitamin is soluble in fats, which explains why it was not present in the spoiled clover. It has not been isolated yet in its pure chemical form, but experiments show that it is present in large amounts in sweet clover, alfalfa, hog-liver oil, cabbage, spinach, and tomatoes. It is not found, however, in cod-liver oil, wheat germ, orange juice, or any of those substances which are well-known for other vitamins content.

You see, Vitamin K isn't as important in our daily lives as those other Vitamins we discussed. There may be many more of them, too, and their discovery in the future may clear up some of those puzzling diseases for which we now have no definite cure.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Your Christmas and You

Presentation

Your gifts, when they arrive at their destination should gaily sing out the news . . . . . "Merry Christmas to you!" And the happy notes of their song are easily assembled—some bright imagination, some high-hearted and colorful gift wrappings, some brilliant ribbons, some simple and charming labels or tags.

Never have Christmas wrappings had such charm and distinction as this year. Our two tried-and-true Christmas friends—cellophane and crepe paper—have reached glorious heights that make us wonder how they could possibly offer anything more original next year. New this year is crinkled cellophane with appliques in raised effect that make them look like jewels . . . .stars, flowers, dots, snowflakes. And there are new wrapping-papers with designs that resemble embroidery, designs in wool-like material in colors that dramatically contrast with the backgrounds.

And such colors . . . they seem to sing, too! Christmas reds and greens have never seemed so bright. Added to the traditional Christmas colors are the increasingly-popular blues, bright shades and deep rich blues the new fashion colors, such as purple, orchid, dusty pink, yellow and maize, frosty white.

Metallic papers are very popular this year. . . .rich golds and silvers and papers with the deep glow of platinum. It is smart to combine these with other types of papers, a double wrapping that gives definite elegance, the transparent outer paper revealing the metallic glow beneath.

Such artistic possibilities in wrappings are a godsend to "dress up" thoughtful little presents that make gracious curtsies to our friends. They give grace and importance to a small box of candy (perhaps some home-made peanut brittle or fudge) to one or two or more jars of jellies or jams or relishes, to a box of relectable home-made cookies, a box of crystallized ginger or glace fruits or nuts, a Christmas candle or box of red candles, some sprigs of holly or mistletoe and other items of the type.

And because we have all seen the disappointed eyes of children who open presents that are "practical". . let's take special care to wrap these utility gifts with some "extra added attraction" in the packaging. Gay wrappings, of course, but tied to the package a giant candy cane, perhaps, or a little box of sweets or a clever toy or game.

Tomorrow—Decorations for the Home

When to Open Gift

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—When I take a gift to my friend's home at Christmas, should I open the gift she gives me in her presence, or wait until I reach my home?

2.—Is it all right for me to type my name inside a Christmas card and also type the address on the envelope?

D.

1—By all means open the gift your friend gives you when you are with her. If you don't you will seem unenthusiastic, unappreciative.

2—No, don't type your name inside your Christmas card, and don't type the address on the envelope. Part of the delight of receiving a Christmas card is to see the handwriting of a friend on the envelope. And writing your name on the card . . and an added message too, if you wish . . . gives the card the personal touch that typing cannot give.

The Stars Say

For Saturday, December 17

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

THERE ARE indications of a particularly lively and perhaps strenuous day, according to the lunar as well as mutual aspects. Nevertheless, there may be much high pressure activity that is not of a particularly harmonious nature. A tendency to rash, impetuous and irritating conduct—may incite enmity, jealousy and opposition. Speculation and new matters may prove gainful if managed with proper restraint.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year of much activity and enterprise, with much to be gained in speculation, new projects and major interests if they are not put in jeopardy by rash, impetuous and tempestuous conduct. The latter would be sure to excite bitter opposition strife and jealousy or hatred.

A child born on this day may have fine initiative and the power to put over important projects by its energy, audacity and determination. At the same time, its indomitable will, impetuosity and perhaps quarrelsome nature may invite defeat and unfriendliness

3rd. Sidney

3rd Sidney—Mr. Wm. Bowers spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Joe Langman, 4th concession.

Miss Margaret May of Belleville spent the week end with her cousins, Miss Vivian and Mr. Bernard May.

Mrs. Arthur Saylor visited relatives in Napanee recently.

Mrs. Harley Hubble spent Sunday and Monday with Mrs. Albert Page, second line.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Saylor, Mrs. Palmer and Mr. and Mrs. S. Westover spent Sunday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Ray.

Sidney Cheese and Butter Factory closed on Friday. Mr. Wm. Wheeler has been engaged as cheese and butter maker for another season.

Mr. and Mrs. E. K. Hubble, Donald, Burton and Harley spent the tea hour on Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. John R. Pound, Thurlow.

Observe White Gift Service

A White Gift Service was observed on Sunday at Bethel Sunday School. The gifts were sent to Alberta.

The service consisted of the following:

Quiet music, "Hark the herald angels sing"; Meditation; Prayer; Scripture, read by Mr. Bryant Casey; Story of the first Christmas Bell, Mrs. Lee Ketcheson; A White Gift Service by the Mission Band. This was introduced with a guitar solo, "Silent Night," by Miss Audrey Robson, while the Christmas story was read by Billie Clarke. Children representing the Wise Men presented their gifts before the manger and sang "We three kings of Orient Are." Little children next presented their gifts and sang "Away in a manger." The Legend of Christmas Tree" was read by Barbara Robson. A solo "As with gladness men of old" was rendered by Miss Mae Stevenson. This number was concluded by all singing "O Come all ye faithful."

A procession was formed of all the S. S. members who came to the front presenting their gifts.

A story "The First Christmas Roses" was given by Mrs. W. Phillips; Hymn, "Songs of joy" was sung by the school. A "White Christmas" exercise by the senior girls, as follows: Spirit of Christmas, Grace Dickey; Pleasure, Jean Fleming; Selfishness, Audrey Robson; Love, Vera Fleming; Mercy, Mildred Ketcheson. Poem, "A Christmas Guest" by George Dickey. Hymn, "Angels from the Realms of Glory." Benediction, Mrs. Lee Ketcheson.

FOXBORO Y. P. U.

The first of a series of Christmas meetings being planned by the Foxboro Young People's Union was held on Monday evening.

In the absence of the president, the vice president, Leon Wilson took charge and opened by calling attention to the aim of the Christmas services, to make Christmas more real, more vivid, more joy compelling and to inspire in the heart anew, the desire to follow the Christ child in spirit and in truth throughout the coming year.

A hymn was sung and Leon Wilson led in prayer. Joan Ketcheson read the Christmas story from the 2nd chapter of Matthew. A reading was given by Garfield Evans, after which Mr. Harry Dafoe sang "The Holy City" in a most impressive manner. Grant Longwell read "The Star of Bethlehem" and a playette entitled "Santa's Helpers" was given. Nama Sine read "They Departed Another Way" and Mrs. Geo. Priest told the story, "The Keeper of the Inn". Joyce Bell gave an instrumental number and Marie Bartlett read "Annie and Willie's prayer." Some junior members sang "Up in Santa Land", after which Mrs. Cook spoke on "Christmas Customs in other Lands." The meeting closed with the young people's hymn and Mizpah Benediction.

These special meetings are under the direction of the five departmental leaders.

Our Pet daytime ensemble has a box coat of sea-foam woollen with tuxedos of sheared beaver and a big tunnel muff of the beaver. It is worn over a matching dress with touches of tinsel embroidery.

Stop and look at one of the season's most opulent evening wraps. It is a tight-waisted, full-length skirted model of snowy ermine with wide bell sleeves made of row on row of silver fox.

Quietly smart is an afternoon frock of soft black silk crepe with finely shirred bodice, finely pleated skirt, square neckline, short sleeves and gold kidskin lower and leaves and belt for trimming.

New sparkle is in costume jewelry this year. As witness a sumptuous necklace made of two bands of rhinestones to catch and hold a bunch of flowers in front. The flowers are of multi-colored semi-precious stones, beautifully cut and set.

Something not seen an every woman is a tailored dinner jacket to wear with a long black skirt. It is hand knitted, of very narrow gold ribbon, and really is beautiful.

GILEAD Y. P. U.

The Gilead Young People held their meeting in the church on Monday, December 12th, with twenty eight present. The meeting was opened by the president and quiet music was played by Miss Ruth Livingston, followed by a song service led by the president, after which Mrs. Clare led in prayer. A hymn was sung. John Huffman read the scripture lesson. Miss Annie Clare sang "Oh Little Town of Bethlehem". Rev. Armstrong gave a very interesting talk on Christmas in some foreign lands. The minutes were heard and business was disposed of. Mrs. Osland Bertrand acted as convener and gave a reading. Norma Clare sang a solo. Readings were given by Ross Livingston, Carman Huffman, Georgina Huffman and George Clare. Misses Annie Clare, Ruth Livingston favored with a duet. Miss Olive Ross and Roy Huffman gave readings. A hymn and the meeting was closed with the Mizpah Benediction. Collection amounted to $1.00 and a donation of $3.00 was given to the Missionary Fund.

Wise to Know About Cosmetics You Apply

By HELEN FOLLETT

IF YOU'RE past 30 you must be a time fighter. Don't let the old gent with the scythe and the long white whiskers worry you. Don't think about him. Just go ahead with your beauty tasks and all will be well.

Cosmetics, next to good health and hygienic habits, are your best props. They oil the skin, keep it clean and smooth. They offer substitutes for natural blushes and put the red-rose tint upon the lips.

But know what you are using, my children. Cosmetic chemists offer many products. Read the direction on the jars and bottles. Some complexions need lubricants, some need astringents, some are crying out for tonic lotions that stimulate the blood streams. It isn't sensible to make a chance selection. Have a talk with the girl at the cosmetic counter; you'll be surprised to find out how much she knows that you've never heard about.

Cold cream is for cleansing and healing a cutaneous surface that is sun or wind burned. Heavy creams are made for the purpose of massage; they give the fingers a firm hold on the flesh. Astringents are designed to correct oiliness, to contract enlarged pores and to make slack tissues firm again.

MARIE WILSON

Selects her cosmetics with the greatest care

Fresh air, sunshine, cleanliness, nourishing food, long hours of sleep and the cultivation of a cheerful disposition—those are Grade A beauty aids. If a woman has poise and a tranquil mind, she is not likely to put crinkles in her face. If she gets plenty of fresh air and exercise, blood streams will go at leaps and bounds, her cheeks will be pink and her eyes bright.

Youth Needs Understanding More Than Punishment

Whatever you may think of modern youth, there is no denying the fact they are the custodians of the future. The world is their oyster, whether you like their way of opening it or not. It will be the approved method after we oldsters have left the scene to them. To try to influence them by urging antiquated methods of past generations is just so much pipe-dreaming.

To an audience that frequently exchanged sly smiles under his nose, Mr. Will Durant, whom you will remember as the author of the "Story of Philosophy", urged a return to the ungentle art of birching adolescents. The admonition occurred at the Thirteenth Session of the National Jewish Forum in Washington, D.C., when he gave five reasons why America is becoming a "sissy" nation.

The five foundations he selected were physical, biological, moral, economic and political. There isn't space to give all of Mr. Durant's findings. But "biologically we face the fact that the class of Americans producing the largest number of children has the least to give them in health, character and ability."

He continued:

"Our moral character, our 'guts' or self-control is diminished because these qualities are no longer forced on us by large families nor the old-fashioned schoolmaster with a cane in his right hand and a book in his left."

Who is to produce the large families which will prevent us from becoming a "sissy" nation— the rich or the poor?

Think over this country's great names. There were no silver spoons at birth in the mouths of Abraham Lincoln, Thomas Edison, Mark Twain and dozens more, who've helped build this "sissy" nation. Rather inconsistently, Mr. Durant seems to feel that the large families, as well as the old-fashioned schoolmaster with the cane on one hand and the book in the other, will prove to be our salvation.

But —you don't have to go any farther for information than today's newspaper to see that teachers who try to save the youth of America by the rod find themselves facing a Police Court judge the morning after. And the complainants are invariably the parents of the youngster who has been whipped.

We really have gone past that stage of education. Nearly seventy years ago, Charles Dickens wrote Nicholas Nicolby, showing the brutalizing effects on youth of schoolmasters "with a book in the left hand and a cane in the right". England and the United States were thoroughly aroused by the effect of such tactics on youth.

At her last press conference, Mrs. Roosevelt said that her conviction grew day by day that it is important to keep in touch with youth; that it is well to follow sympathetcally the trend of organized groups of young people. She concluded, saying with that wise smile of hers, that if we look back into our own youthful past, we find how often we changed our minds.

Sympathy, understanding and tolerance in dealing with youth was what Mrs. Roosevelt advocated, which is a better medicine than caneing. Who are the boys that run away rom home? Who are the girls called "incorrigible?" They're youngsters who have been beaten and cruelly treated at home.

SHANNONVILLE W. A.

The ladies of the W. A. of Shannonville United Church held their annual bazaar and tea in the church hall on Thursday afternoon and evening, December 8th. A profusion of evergreen branches and Christmas trees of all sizes decorated with tinsel and colored lights cleverly arranged about the hall and on the booths gave a festive air to the occasion. Red and green candles in silver holders adorned the tea tables and booths. The white elephant table was in charge of Mrs. Harry Murphy and Mrs. W. Osborne. A fancy work table displaying many pretty and useful articles suitable for gifts was presided over by Mrs. Fred Taylor and Mrs. Arthur Houston. Mrs. (Rev.) Craig and Mrs. Jack Conkell were salesladies for numerous lovely aprons, many different styles and colors to choose from. Mrs. Orval Stratton sold Christmas folders from a small table and Mrs. Willis Wilson had charge of the drawing tub filled with grain with strings sticking out, attached to small articles. This proved very popular with the children at five cents a draw. Mrs. Stanley MacDonald and Mrs. Frank Doxtator were in charge of the mystery booth where many useful articles were displayed. The home cooking table containing homemade buns, fried cake, candy, pies and cake attractively arranged was in charge of Mrs. Sam Elliott and Mrs. Charlie Boulstridge.

Delicious refreshments were served during the afternoon and supper hour by attentive waitresses. Mrs. Allen MacDonald poured tea.

Rev. Mr. Craig was the capable chairman in charge of the program which opened with community singing led by Mr. Clifford Holmes with Miss Roberta Melborne at the piano. The chairman's remarks followed. Reg Terry gave two humorous readings. Jack Pringle favored with a solo and encore playing his own accompaniment on the guitar. Mr. Willis Wilson was heard in several fine solos which were heartily applauded. Manly Mitchell gave two cornet solos with Mrs. Stanley Grills playing the piano accompaniment. Mr. C. Holmes favored with a solo Miss Roberta Melborne accompanying on the piano. Mr. Willis Wilson gave a reading and Miss Helen Vivian rendered a lovely piano solo. The second line quaretette composed of Mrs. Fred Haight, Mrs. Elmer Vivian, Messrs Arnold and Fred Mitchell delighted the audience with a beautiful selection "Sweet Genevieve" , Mrs. Stanley Grills playing the piano accompaniment. "God Save The King" brought the program to a close. The proceeds amounted to $79.60 and the commission from the sale of Christmas folders in charge of Mrs. Orval Stratton brought the total up to $82.70.

The ladies of the W. A. thanked all those who helped in any way to make the bazaar a success again this year.

SUNSHINE MISSION BAND

The Sunshine Mission Band, Foxboro, met on Sunday afternoon in the Sunday School rooms. The meeting was opened with quiet Christmas music by Mrs. Gowsell. The call to worship was given by the President, and responded to by Doris Dafoe. Hymn 298 was sung, followed by Scripture readings by Nama Sine and Phyllis Dafoe. The leader then used the offertory sentence. Offering was taken by Dorothy Read and prayer given by Lois Spencer. Two verses of hymn 299 were sung and all listened to a recitation "Christmas Morn" given by Phyllis Dafoe. Miss Milligan then told the worship story "The Legend of St. Christopher." Hymn 302 was sung, roll call answered and business conducted.

It was decided to send the scrap book to the Hospital for Sick Children. The memory verses, Isaiah 9:6 was given. Mrs. Gowsell then told a beautiful story "Christmas for Little Red Riding Hood." Hymn 304 was sung. The president closed with prayer.

Geo. Cook Re-Elected President W. Huntingdon Cheese Company

West Huntingdon—Some of the farmers here made history more interesting by ploughing until Dec. 12, 1938. At present there is more seasonable Christmas weather.

The West Huntingdon Cheese Manufacturing Co., held their annual meeting in the Orange Hall on Tuesday afternoon when 96% of the stock holders and also a number of visitors gathered to discuss the business of the past year, to draft new regulations and to elect officers for the new year. Mr. Samuel Donnan was chosen as chairman and Mr. Chester Sills was secretary for the meeting. Mr. Geo. Pollard, dairy instructor for this district, gave an address, packed full of information to the patrons. If good cheese is to be produced there must be cooperation between the patrons and maker. Cleanliness was essential. Mr. Pollard paid high tribute to Mr. Tom Heath, local cheesemaker. Mr. Lucas, Manager of Bank of Montreal, also addressed the patrons.

Mr. Kaiser, of Lansdowne, representing the Titan Separator Co. also spoke. Mr. Geo. Cooke was again elected president; Morley Haggerty, auditor; Barton Haggerty, secretary, with the following directors, Harry Thompson, Foster Wilson, Melville Donnan, Aaron Ashley, Charles Fargey and Albert Ashley.

Those securing milk routes were Percy Reynolds, V. Bamber, Judson McGowan and Albert Ashley. Mr. Albert Ashley was appointed delegate to the Ottawa convention. In giving the financial statement, auditor Morley Haggerty showed that 1,241,998 lbs of milk was manufactured into 103,789 lbs of cheese which netted the 26 patrons the nice sum of $14,149.73. The price paid per standard was $28.50.

Endeavors Class

The Endeavors Class was entertained for their December meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Post on Tuesday evening. Rev. W. R. Tristram led the singing of the Christmas hymns with the use of his cornet. He also delighted the gathering with a cornet solo.

Mr. Sandy McCurdy gave the devotional reading. Miss Dorothy Tristram gave a recitation. Readings were given by Mrs. John Moorcroft and Mrs. Frank Hammond. Roll call was answered by each member giving in turn the books of the New Testament. Mrs. Elmer Post gave the financial report for the year which revealed the class funds in a healthy condition. Mrs. W. J. Pitchett and Rev. Tristram gave a duet. In the business period it was decided to remember some of the shut-ins and older residents in the community at Christmas.

Mr. Clayton Wright conducted the election of officers for new year. They are as follows:

Past President, Frank Hammond; President, Sandy McCurdy; Vice President, Clayton Wright; Sec.-Treasurer, Mrs. Elmer Post; Press Secretary, Arthur Wilson; Organist, Mrs. W. J. Pitchett.

A vote of appreciation was extended to Mr. Hammond for his efficient services during the past year. At the close of the meeting, Mrs. Clifford Elliott conducted an amusing contest and Mrs. Post served a lunch.

Social Evening at St. Andrew's

A banquet was held in St. Andrew's Church on Friday evening, when the members gave Rev. Walker and family a reception. The program was of an informal nature and consisted of community singing led by Chester Sills. Solo by Margie Haggerty; Speech by Rev. W. R. Tristram; Song by Muriel Thompson, Jean Haggerty and Joyce Wallace. Short addresses by Mrs. W. Shaw and Mrs. Sills. Mrs. John McInroy gave a reading. Rev. Mr. Walker also spoke on the work of the church and is very optimistic of the future of his work.

Y. P. U.

The Young People's Union of the United Church held their meeting at Mr. Frank Hammond's home on Friday evening. Mrs. (Rev.) Tristram was in charge of the following program: Scripture lesson read by Bill Tristram; reading by Dorothy Tristram; "Why do we celebrate Christmas" by Mrs. Tristram; musical selection by Irene and Margarette Elliott; a reading "The child who saw Santa Claus" given by Mrs. Tristram. The president, Gerald Simpson read the 23rd Psalm followed by all repeating the Lord's prayer. The evening was spent in games and contests. At the close a dainty lunch was served.

Art Ross Pulls Off Smooth Deal by Getting Rookie

LEAFS TIE HAWKS

Rangers Also Held to Draw by the Amazing Amerks

(By Robert Clarke, Canadian Press Staff Writer).

The palm for the smoothest bit of trading manipulation of the hockey season goes today, beyond all doubt, to Art Ross, the sage who guides the National Hockey League destinies of Boston Bruins.

There was a bit of eyebrow lifting two weeks ago when he sold Cecil (Tiny) Thompson, one of the great goalies of all time, to the Detroit Red Wings. True, the Bruins got $15,000 in cash and a player thrown in but the wise ones weren't quite sure of how the Boston team would fare with Frankie Brimsek as a replacement.

Many figured that rotund Jack Adams, manager of the Wings, got the better of the deal for the veteran Thompson still is good for several more seasons of bang-up hockey. And the experts saw a question in whether the Bruins would be as great with Brimsek in the nets.

That was just six Boston games ago that the switch was made and all the questions have been answered in full by the Bruins, in general, and Brimsek, in particular.

Secures Fourth Shutout

The Bruins have won five of those six games, all in a row, and Brimsek, a rookie with only a year in the minors behind him as professional experience, has scored four shutouts.

His fourth shutout, making him undisputed leader among N.H.L. netminders, came last night when the Bruins defeated Montreal Canadiens 1-0 at Montreal, on a third period goal by Ralph (Cooney) Weiland. At the same time in New York, the Rangers and Americans played to a 1-1 draw in their second intra city clash of the season, while Chicago Black Hawks tied 4-4 at home with Toronto Maple Leafs.

But the bit that must give Ross a chuckle and cause Adams to toss about in his sleep is the fact that Wings only two years ago had tabs on Brimsek as an amateur and passed him up. Brimsek, born in Eveleth, Minn., played two amateur seasons with the Pittsburgh Yellow Jackets in the eastern United States League and the Jackets are a stepping stone to Pittsburgh Hornets, a farm team for Detroit.

Gottselig Bags Two

Lean Johnny Gottselig, leading pointmaker in the N.H.L. with nine goals and an equal number of assists, came through for two goals and aided in another for the Hawks against Leafs. Murph Chamberlain was the leading light for the Leafs with two tallies.

Big Earl Seibert got another of the Hawk goals, while Mush March added the other. George Parsons came through for a Toronto tally in the first period while Harvey (Busher) Jackson got the remaining Leaf goal.

At New York, Phil Watson sent the Rangers ahead in the second period but Americans tied up the game soon after the start of the final session on Art Chapman's goal.

BUMMER STIRLING GOING TO RETIRE HE TELLS KINSMEN

Sarnia Half-Back Star with Imperials for Ten Years

A GREAT PLAYER

Stirling Has Counted 493 Points in His 10 Years with Sarnia

Sarnia, Dec. 16 (CP)—One of the greatest figures in the history of the Canadian gridiron, Hugh (Bummer) Stirling today stepped to the sidelines to join mates, who have brought football fame to this small border city.

Stirling did not reveal his reasons for leaving the game after 10 years of service with Sarnia Imperials, when he spoke last night to the Kinsmen Club of which he is President-elect for next year.

The loss came as a severe jolt to hopes of the Imperials who have won eight consecutive Ontario Union titles, two Eastern and two Dominion championships behind the terrific punting of the Bummer. His retirement breaks up the great backfield, that for years made the Imperials among the most-feared clubs in football.

Only Alex Hayes, veteran quarterback, remains of the old guard. Orm Beach, giant half who co-starred with Stirling, was killed in an explosion before the 1938 season got underway. Norm Perry, now Sarnia's Mayor, and Rocky Parsaca have left the game to younger men.

A triple-threat man the 32-year-old star, who came to Sarnia after a sparkling career as a junior at St. Thomas, counted 493 points in his 10 years of senior competition. He was a superb ball carrier and forward passer, besides being ranked among the best booters of all time.

The big fellow closed his career with a good season, being selected by coaches and sports writers as secondary defence half on The Canadian Press all-eastern team. In his 10 years as a senior Bummer crossed opposition lines for 26 touchdowns, kicked 16 field goals, booted 260 singles and place kicked 55 points after touchdowns.

From whence did the word NEWS derive—was the interesting subject of discussion recently brought up in our inner sanctum, where only the 'bon ton' congregate. After serious consideration of the word arguments pro and con the final analysis was discovered in a recently published encyclopedia; the latter of course being a compilation of essential facts gathered from all branches of the world's knowledge. Here we found the word NEWS, was derived from the first letter of the four cardinal points of the compass—namely North, East, West, and South. Take the first letter of those four words and true enough you have the word NEWS. So instead of labouring on a North-East-West-South-paper, we find the more up-to-date term—Newspaper. Unique, if not interesting.

Manager George Gay is labouring feverishly, if one could attain warmth during yesterday's cold spell, endeavouring to get a foundation for ice at the Hume Arena. Mr. Gay and his assistants have already gained the essential foundation or bottom for a fine ice surface. The floor or hockey cushion at the arena was carefully levelled this fall, thus assuring speed and leveliness when the time arrived when the mercury fell below the freezing point. "If we can get any break in the weather at all, we should have the arena open for skating in a week's time at least, but these continued mild spells wipe out our foundations as fast as we can make them," woefully stated Mr. Gay as he read today's weather probabilities.

Dizzy Dean sent the Exchange Club of Danville, Ill., into nervous extra innings recently, when he was late for a speaking engagement at the organization's noon-day luncheon. The loquacious Chicago Cub pitcher had put up at a hotel in nearby Champaign, Ill., the night before and on the morning of Dizzy's date in Danville, a committee from the Exchange Club motored over to get him. It seemed like a reasonable hour for anybody to be up, but the committee found Dizzy still in bed. Finally aroused, the pitcher took his time eating breakfast, then went to a barber shop for a shave. Although the shop was crowded, Dizzy did not reveal his identity and quietly awaited his turn. After he finally was shaved, the committee whizzed him to Danville where the hungry lunchers had waited on him for an hour. Diz then compensated his listeners with a laugh-provoking stories and wound up by telling his audience that "the St. Louis Cardinals lost their greatest asset when they sold me. They are definitely on the downgrade over there in St. Louis," he added, with all seriousness.

Local hockey fans repeatedly ask us—how come the sudden success of the Belleville Redmen? The answer is quite simple— TEAM PLAY. The Redmen are playing as a unit this year and having the desired results. Right now Skipper Thomas has one highclass complete front line, two sets of refence, two goalies and a couple of other good forwards. Give the Redmen one more wing player, who knows what to do with the rubber when inside the opponents' defence, and they're potential champions in any average hockey loop in Ontario.

A real old time baseball fanning bee took place in Belleville early this week when "Peeney" Mills met Yammy Jamieson, veteran Kingston hurler. Now it seems that years ago Jamieson made some crack about "Peeney" being lucky when he connected for a solid base blow one fine summer's afternoon in Kingston. Mills reached first base and replied to Jamieson—"the day you strike me out I'll quit playing baseball." But then many a true word is said in a gest, because Jamieson did finally strike Mills out on a wide curve at the Fair Grounds one day several seasons later. "You didn't quit playing that day," reminded Jamieson. "No?, Well I quit at the end of that season, as I promised," came back Mills. For the matter of records—Jamieson only did strike Mills out once during his lengthy and colorful mound career for the Ponies, but to whiff the veteran Mills was no easy task for any amateur pitcher as Mills seldom went down swinging, especially in the clutches.

Badminton, like polo, originated in India and was introduced to the western world by British Army officers. Throughout Canada the game has progressed by leaps and bounds since the war. It is estimated over a million shuttlecocks, (the "bird" with which the game is played) are used annually in Canada. The game is growing in popularity in the U.S.A. of late and although the Yanks have caught to Canada in numbers participating in this winter recreation, they have not equalled the Dominion in ability according to Jack Purcell, world's champion badminton player. In badminton the action or pace is terrificially fast, much more so than tennis although the bird may not travel as fast as a tennis ball. Canadian players are recognized as the best badminton players in the world and Belleville sportsdom will have the opportunity of seeing some of the best badminton players in Canada in action at the armouries on Saturday night. President Bob Brown announced today Rod Phalen and Jack Sibbald, two of Canada's ranking amateur badminton players and two exponents of this popular indoor pastime will give exhibitions of the game at the armouries Saturday night for the education of local players and those in any way interested.

The odds are about even on the Farr-Nova bout tonight, although Farr should be favored, if one could favor either man. Let us compare these two men, who have never met before nor has either fought any man whom the other has beaten. Farr is 24 and a veteran of 74 fights, Lou Nova, the California hopeful is one years younger, but has only had 25 professional fights in his short ring career. Nova has only lost one of his fights, while it is natural to expect Farr has lost more than that, 3 to be exact. About the only thing in Farr's favour is his great courageousness, proven in his fight with Joe Louis when he stood up to resemble a human punching bag before a terrific onslaught of leather. From this corner it would seem as though Farr is on the well known spot, he must win handily over Nova or it's curtains and we cannot see the rugged Welsh coal miner winning a decisive battle against a lithe youth, who has been fighting regularly for the past eight months.

HODGE PODGE—There seems to be no stopping the Boston Bruins, they beat Canadiens 1-0 to give goalie Brimsek another shutout last night....The Bruins have won their last five starts and have only lost two games in 12 played thus far in the N.H.L.....As a matter of fact the Bruins were the only ones to gain much ground last night, the Leafs and Chicago playing a draw as did Americans and Rangers....Looks like a runaway for the Beantown sextette.... Bill Cowley, of the Bruins and brother of Dan Cowley, is home in Ottawa on sick leave, a wrenched knee is the cause....There's no joy in Sarnia today—"Bummer" Stirling has announced his retirement from the gridiron....There goes the Imperials into about the same category as the Peterboro squad.... Stirling was Sarnia when it comes to football....They do say the South California students play a rough and tumble style of hockey, the Trojans literally bumped the Queens sextette into a tie last night.

Lacrosse Players Warned Not to Visit California

Toronto, Dec. 16 (CP)—Canadian lacrosse players planning to migrate to California this winter were warned today by the Canadian Lacrosse Association that such a step would automatically bring a two-year suspension from the Dominion body. The association said that certain California interests are attempting to attract Canadian players to a league in that state this winter.

"Past experiences with similar United Sates interests has been very disastrous for Canadian players who were left when the leagues were financial failures," the association said in a statement. "The Ontario and British Columbia Association and the C.L.A. are refusing players permission to go to California.

"There is no truth in the report that three British Columbia clubs are going —to California,—and it is very doubtful if any player from this province will break the rules as officials are very firm on this point. Ontario players are advised not to be misled—only to find themselves out of organized lacrosse for a period of two years."

CLEVELAND STOPS HERSHEY BEARS

Indians Now in Tie for Second Place with Syracuse

Hedshey, Pa., Dec. 16 (CP)—Cleveland Barons finally are hitting the stride that brought them a sectional championship last year in the International-American Hockey League. The Barons took a 2-1 victory here last night over Hershey Bears to move into a second place tie with Syracuse Stars in the Western Section.

Phil Hergesheimer, youthful wingman presently sought by Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League, tallied the first Cleveland goal in the first period. Red Hamill followed with the lone Hersshey tally in the second. Harry Currie scored the winner for the Barons.

Most of the excitement, however, was provided in two fist fights both involving Hamill. The big red head, with the great junior team of Copper Cliff Dedmen two years ago, exchanged blows with Currie in the third period and when referee Burke tried to part them he attempted to attack the official.

In the last four seconds Cunningham and Hamill came to blows, Hamill again finally becoming embroiled with the official. Members of both teams became involved in the fight, which was subdued and then broke out again. Hamill had to be carried to the dressing room afterwards.

WINNER OF FARR-NOVA BOUT WILL MEET JOE LOUIS

Heavyweight Crop Not Very Healthy at Present Time

FARR SHOULD WIN

Tonypandy Tommy 7-5 Favorite to Take Californian

(By Alan Randal, Canadian Press Staff Writer).

New York, Dec. 16 (CP)—No matter who wins the Duke in Madison Square Garden's ring tonight, be it rugged Tommy Farr from the Welsh coal pits or Lou Nova, the handsome Californian, it seems most probable Joe Louis will tackle the victor before next summer's bloom begins to fade. ....

The winner of the 15-round Farr-Nova go shapes up as the only logical contender for Louis' heavyweight chown, unless, of course, some young white hope that is a white hope comes booming out of nowhere in a great hurry. But that seems unlikely.

As matters stand, Nova, a former footballer who won 27 of his 29 fights, ranks as the only formidable but untested white hope. The hard rock from Tonypandy is his test—a wicked assignment.

Aside from Farr and Nova the only other ranking contender in sight—though possibly the term is gross exaggeration—is Maxie Baer. And there has scarcely been a country-wide clamor for another Louis-Baer match though neither Tommy nor Lou would mind meeting the one-time California madcap on the way to a shot at Louis if necessity demands it.

If Lou beats tough Tommy one can expect to hear the drums beating immediately for a Louis-Nova get-together. Farr, should he take Lou's measure, will land just about back in the spot he enjoyed when he came here about 18 months ago to do battle with Joe and astounded one and all by staying 15 rounds with the chocolate-colored champion.

Already a three-time loser in the United States—to Louis, Jim Braddock and Baer—Farr has announced his intention of retiring if he loses to Nova. Meanwhile Louis feels obliged to fight Farr and, he hopes, erase the stigma Tommy left by lasting the route. On the strength of his ruggedness and past experience, of 22 15-round bouts, Tonypandy Tommy at about 205 pounds, is the 7 to 5 favorite to pass Lou.

Police Blotter

Provincial Police yesterday arrested Gerald Gunning, Tweed, and held him in custody on a nominal charge of vagrancy pending further police investigations. Gunning was arrested about a year ago in connection with an alleged attempted extortion plot near Tweed, authorities revealed today.

Residents on Pinnacle Street became highly indignant and registered complaints regarding the unloading of a large transport, which resulted in so much noise the residents' sleep was disturbed. Police halted the undue noise and warned the operators to discontinue such practices on city streets.

Last night's sudden blasts of coldness from out of the north not only resulted in the mercury falling near the zero point, but saw a general influx of transients seeking warm sleeping quarters at the police station when 21 sought shelter from the wintry blasts.

RESCUE PARTIES FIGHT GALES

Attempt is Made to Reach 18 Survivors of Stranded Craft

Juneau, Alaska, Dec. 16 (AP)—Rescue parties, fighting wintry gales and raging seas, raced against time today to reach eighteen survivors of the stranded motorship Patterson, marooned on the beach near Cape Fairweather.

The shipwrecked sailors sent word to the coast guard cutter Haida, standing by the wreckage of their craft, last night by means of an improvised flashlight signal system that all were weak from exposure and sore feet and that they had enough food to last two more days.

Two of their members are sick, they reported. Two others of the crew perished when the veteran Alaskan whaling ship went aground early Monday morning.

Flier Forced Back.

Pilot Sheldon Simmons, who attempted to fly three guides to the spot yesterday to aid the party was forced back to Juneau by a heavy sleet storm.

The guides were taken aboard the coast guard patrol boat Morris, a shallow craft vessel, which Captain Sam Sandvik, veteran halibuter, said he believed he could pilot to within seven miles of the wreck scene.

If the Morris is able to find a landing spot a rescue party, led by the guides, will go overland to where the party is camped and bring the sailors back to the boat.

PINKY HIGGINS TO DETROIT FOR AUKER, WADE

Boston Needed Pitching Strength, While Tigers Got Third-Baseman

TIGERS QUITE STRONG

Expect This Team to Give Yankees Strongest Opposition

New York, Dec. 16 (AP)— The baseball men have left this old trading post after three riotous days during which the conversation went round and round, and in calm retrospect today it looks as though Detroit Tigers of the American League did more good for themselves than any other club.

In landing third-baseman Pinky Higgins, a proven star, in yesterday's major trade with Boston Red Sox, the Tigers finally boarded up their blind spot. Now all Manager Del Baker has to worry about is where to play Rudy York.

Neith Boston Red Sox, who finished second in the junior loop, nor Cleveland, which staggered in third, appears to have benefited materially from what small trading was done, so Detroit must automatically become the choice to chase New York Yankees to the wire next year.

Cleveland acquired the veteran outfielder, Ben Chapman. The Red Sox got three fair-to-middling pitchers in Elden Auker and J. Wade from Detroit and Denny Galehouse from Cleveland. The Sox were in desperate need of mound replacements, since old Lefty Grove seems to have pitched his arm away.

In giving up Auker and Wade, Detroit gambled mightily that Fred Hutchinson, its expensive young pitching prize from Seattle, will live up to his price tag. The Tigers gave two seasoned players, Jo-Jo White and Tony Piet, and a lot of owner Walter Briggs' money for the 19-year-old, who won 25 and lost seven last year.

At The Theatres

AT THE CAPITOL

Tour for Talent

The third of Ken Soble's "Tour for Talent" programs will resume at the Capitol Theatre this evening in conjunction with the regular night's performance. These Friday night amateur contests at the Capitol bring anxious aspiring youthful talent in the entertaining world before the microphone, where they compete for greater honors and recognition in the entertaining world.

The winner of the "Tour for Talent" contests at the Capitol Theatre will ultimately appear on Ken Soble's All-Canada radio broadcast after winning before a Belleville audience. In addition to the eight amateurs to appear on the Capitol Theatre stage this evening, petite six-year-old Barbara Neal, of Gananoque, winner of last week's program, has been invited to return as a special guest artist to augment tonight's amateur show.

A capacity house welcomed the amateurs last week to be afforded high class entertainment.

"The Old Barn Dance"

Gene Autry, the Number One Cowboy of the Screen, is not long-removed from the plains of Oklahoma. Less than ten years ago, the popular cowboy star, currently appearing in "The Old Barn Dance" Republic musical western now showing at the Capitol Theatre, was riding the range on his father's ranch near the Oklahoma-Texas border.

Autry had been singing and playing the guitar from the time he was 10 years old, and in 1929 he left the ranch to go to Sapulpa, Oklahoma, where he worked as a telegraph operator for the Frisco Railroad. Here he established a wide reputation with his cowboy singing. He and Jimmy Long, another railroad man, wrote many western ballads together, and their "Silver Haired Daddy of Mine" has since become one of the best known songs of its type ever written.

In 1930, at Jimmy Long's insistence, Gene went to New York to seek an audition with the Victor Recording Company. For three days he waited in the lobby, unable to secure the audition. Finally, he took out his guitar, and before the amazed employees of the company could stop him, he was calmly singing and playing a well-known western tune. An official of the company heard him, and Gene got the audition.

The verdict was that Autry had plenty of talent, but was in need of experience.

Back to Oklahoma he went to secure that experience, and over stations WKY in Oklahoma City, and KVOO in Tulsa, he became widely known as "The Oklahoma Yodeling Cowboy." Less than a year later, the American Recording Company offered him a contract, and the singing cowboy was on his way to fame.

In quick succession he recorded for every major company, and then became the star of the National Barn Dance radio program, over WLS in Chicago.

M. J. Siegel, president of the American Recording Company, also held an interest in a motion picture company in Hollywood. Through his influence, Gene, together with Smiley Burnette, who had been with him on the Barn Dance program, came to the west coast and starred in a serial, "The Phantom Empire." The company that made that picture, now known as Republic Productions, Inc., has Autry under a long term contract, and has made all of the highly successful Autry pictures.

In "The Old Barn Dance" Gene appears as the leader of a group of cowboy entertainers who rescue a number of farmers from the attacks of an unscrupulous tractor Company. The picture is full of action and singing, and is considered the best of a long list of Autry successes.

AT THE McCARTHY

"The Gladiator"

Man Mountain Dean, heaviest of the heavyweight grapplers, tussles tunnel-mouthed Joe E. Brown three falls to a finish for the world's wrestling championship in "The Gladiator", year's best comedy now at the McCarthy Theatre. Brown, who holds the world's standing broad grin title, is cast in the major role, as a scientifically-created superman whose misadventures make the new film one of the most unusual, and most entertaining, ever to come from Hollywood. A David L. Loew production directed by Edward Sedgwick, "The Gladiator" also has in its cast such well-known players as June Travis, Robert Kent, Dickie Moore, Lucien Littlefield and Ethel Wales.

Three Stooges Comedy

An excellent added treat, the three stooges in their latest comedy featurette "Three Missing Links" is a howl from start to finish, and another Floyd Gibbon's true adventure story "The Night Intruder" packs enough thrills and excitement to make one grasp the arms of their seats. "Snow Foolin" is also an outstanding winter sports' subject, in addition to the feature presentation, these three short subjects provide ideal entertainment for the entire family.

"Rotary Amateur Show"

In addition to the above screen programme at the McCarthy Theatre, Saturday matinee performance will include as a special attraction, proceeds to benefit Belleville Rotary Club, on the stage another Rotary 'Amateur Show' for Belleville school children, the amateur talent to be presented will thoroughly be enjoyed and parents are urged to come with, or let their children come to this matinee they will long remember. The new chapter play "The Spider's Web" will also be on the screen.

AT THE BELLE

"SUBMARINE PATROL"

Mention the term "Navy picture" and most movie-goers immediately think of superdreadnaughts heaving in the ocean swells to the strains of "Anchors Aweigh." They think of gold braid and hallowed tradition and the splendid young-men of the Naval Academy.

All this is very fine; it is good dramatic material. But it is probably neither as fine nor as dramatic as the great story out of which 20th Century-Fox has fashioned "Submarine Patrol." Because "Submarine Patrol", while based on the most heroic chapter in the whole history of naval warfare, is no more a typical "Navy Picture" than "Alexander's Ragtime Band" was a typical musical.

It is Director John Ford who says so, the man who made "The Informer" "Wee Willie Winkle" and "The Hurricane", and who climaxed his Award-winning career with this new picture, which comes next to the Belle.

According to Ford, "Submarine Patrol", tells the incredible story, for some strange reason overlooked until now, that has lain neglected in the Navy's archives for some twenty-odd years. It is the story of America's wartime "Splinter Fleet"—those tiny oft-ridiculed, wooden patrol boats, designed to clear the U-boat infested lanes of the Atlantic, and some of them manned by the sorriest crews of civilian odds and ends ever to board a fighting ship.

From every walk of life they came—taxi drivers, social registerites, soda jerkers, farmers—expecting a soft berth aboard the sub chasers, for no one thought the "Splinter Fleet" would see any real action. And then, suddenly, they were steaming out of Brooklyn Navy Yard under secret orders, to face an ordeal by fire such as men seldom encounter even in wartime—and men they proved themselves to be!

Darryl F. Zanuck, in charge of production, is said to have given considerable thought to the selection of his cast. With one or two exceptions he deliberately chose players whose names are seldom seen alone in lights, yet their dramatic characterizations, under Ford's masterful direction, are what give "Submarine Patrol" its real punch, according to preview critics.

Handsome Richard Greene is seen in the role of the young social registerite who joins up as Chief Engineer, and who promptly fally in love with Nancy Kelly (a promising newcomer to films), whose father is the skipper of a munitions freighter which Greene's ship is assigned to convoy across the Atlantic. Others in the cast are: Preston Foster, George Bancroft, Slim Summerville, Joan Carradine, Jean Valerie, Henry Armetta, Warren Hymer, Douglas Fowley, J. Farrell MacDonald and Maxie Rosenbloom.

Based on a boom by Ray Milholland, the screen play was written by Rain James, Darrell Ware and Jack Yellen. Gene Markey was associate producer.

"Submarine Patrol" is the latest Movie Quiz $250,000 contest picture to play at the Belle Theatre.

"Thanks for the Memory"

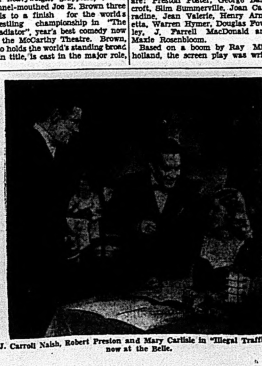
"Illegal Traffic"

Teamed together for the first time, Mary Carlisle and Robert Preston play the romantic leads in the new crime thriller, "Illegal Traffic", a picture of a "getaway and shakedown" racket, which is the companion hit. Preston has the role of the young G-man who outwits the racketeers, while Miss Carlisle plays a young girl innocently mixed up with the gangsters through the activities of her ne'er-do-well father. Others in the cast are J. Carrol Naish, Larry Crabbe, Regis Toomey and Judith Barrett.

Charlie McCarthy, Edgar Bergen and Charlie's new hate-mate, Mortimer Snerd are appearing on the same program in unusual occupations.



J. Carroll Naish, Robert Preston and Mary Carlisle in "Illegal Traffic," now at the Belle.

Showgirl Model for Fake Venus Which Duped French Art World

Paris, Dec. 16.—A Polish night club entertainer pointed proudly to herself today and announced she was the model for the "Venus of the Turnip Patch" which French experts first hailed as a perfect example of ancient Greek sculpture, but now fear is a clever fraud.

The French Department of Fine Art started an investigation to discover if a young Italian sculptor had hoaxed the most eminent savants and if so what to do about it.

"You can imagine how all the excitement amuses me," said shapely Anna Strudinka, who works in a Lyons night club. "All the time this marvellous Venus was just a statue of me."

Discovery of the statue, buried near Saint Etienne in south-central France, has resulted in a battle royal that has the nation snickering. The battered marble Venus was called "Venus de Brizet" after the little hamlet near which a peasant unearthed it during spring ploughing. The find brought experts from Paris and many parts of France to Brizet, where they unanimously pronounced the statue, which lacks one arm, a nose, and legs from the knees down, a perfect example of the Neo-Attican period. It dated, they said, from the reign of Augustus or Hadrian and was a contemporary of the Venus de Milo.

Jean Conon, the peasant who found it, promptly set it up at his farm house and charged tourists and savants alike two francs 50 centimes (6½ cents) to look at it.

Both the French press and European art magazines carried accounts of the discovery. The government issued a decree classifying it as one of France's art treasures which could not be sold abroad without official permission.

Then along came Francesco Cremonse, a 31-year-old Italian sculptor living near Saint Etienne. He paid his entrance fee to see the Venus, listened to the experts' opinions, and calmly announced he had made the statue and buried it himself.

The resultant howl was heard around the European art world. It tickled the average Frenchman, who likes nothing better than a chance to laugh at experts fooled at their own game.

"Sure it's mine," said Cremonse when the experts called his claim 'absurd'. "I buried it there in 1936."

"Why? Well nobody paid any attention to my work and I think its a lot better than many things in museums. So I thought that if somebody dug up my Venus in a place where traces of the Roman occupation had been found. . . ."

"But," said the experts, "the Venus de Brizet is of Italian marble from Canara."

"I know," said Cremonse, "and it cost me plenty to buy the stone and have it shipped here."

To clinch his argument the sculptor invited everyone to come to his workshop. There he produced a marble nose, an arm, and legs—the very parts missing from the Venus de Brizet.

"I broke them off myself before I buried it," he explained. "It's rare to find an old statue in perfect condition and I thought the experts might suspect something."

Gonon, the peasant, is inclined to side with the sculptor and not with the experts. Nevertheless, he has refused to let Cremonse fit his pieces to the battered marble lady. His eye is on the tourist trade, which has been good since the fight started.

Police Blotter

Following complaints that a transient had taken a can of salmon from Alexander's grocery store on Station Street last night, local police arrested a man who gave the name of Russell Northmore, transient. Later Mr. Alexander informed police he personally had recovered the salmon. Northmore was held on a charge of intoxication, and given 14 days in today's local police court.

Peterborough police reported the theft of a 1931 model Dodge sedan bearing licence plates 28-R-4. When stolen a spare tire, carried on the front cowl fender was missing, police were informed.

Transients continue to seek warm sleeping quarters at the police station these cold bitter nights. Last night 16 were billeted in the cell block.

DEMAND IS MADE

Agent of Union.

The appeal flayed the Communist party as one which "seeks both civil and foreign war and which is only an agent of the Soviet Union", and accused the Communists of sabotaging France's national defence, of fomenting strikes and "of arousing French workmen against foreign states."

It concluded:

"It is up to the government to take decisions according to the law to insure the safety of the nation. Eighteen European nations have dissolved the Communist Party in order to become masters in their own house. We must do likewise."

Daladier's newspaper, L'Oeuvre, did not print the appeal.

Called Blackmail.

Leftists condemned it as "political blackmail", interpreting it as an open threat by the right-wing to withdraw their votes from the premier and wreck his government unless he dissolved the Communist Party.

Before the appeal was published Leon Blum, former Socialist Premier, called Daladier a "prisoner of the right" and predicted "they will be exacting payment soon".

The premier in a speech to parliament last week, which brought him a vote of confidence by the narrow margin of 74 votes, attacked the Communists. He accused them of starting and supporting the 24-hour general strike Nov. 30 as a political measure.

Joe Triner, the Illinois boxing commission, is in town trying to interest Mike Jacobs on a couple of indoor shows in Chicago before the season's over....Mike may try to pair Henry Armstrong with Davey Day or Joe Louis with Bob Pastor there after New Year's....Still stringing with the underdog, this corner likes Lou Nova to trip Tommy Farr tonight, despite those 6 to 5 and 7-5 odds....Lou's right hand shots should turn the trick.

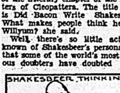
Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was looking at the comics without laughing and ma said. Willyum, I wonder if you can give me some ideas for a paper I'm suppose to write for tne next meeting of the litterary chapter of the Dawters of Cleopattera. The title of it is Did Bacon Write Shakesbeer? What makes people think he did, Willyum? she said.

Well, there's so little actually known of Shakesbeer's personal life that some of the world's most famous doubters have doubted that there ever was sucn a man, pop said. There is scarcely a line of his handwriting in existance, to say nothing of actual letters to him or from him, while on the other hand Bacon, who lived during the period when Shakesbeer's plays were first produced, was a prominent litterary figure of the day and a genius.



But my goodness, Willyum, if he wrote anything as famous and wonderful as Hamet, for instants, why didn't he speak up and say so and get himself a little credit for land sakes? ma said, and pop said. That's a very practical query my deer, but if there was an answer to it there couldn't be any question.

Well tell me some more, Willyum, give me some more suggestions, ma said, and pop said, Well, certain serious doubters have spent their lives digging into Shakesbeer's works and bringing up codes wich they claim prove that Bacon was really Shakesbeer.

Well then who was Bacon, could it of been Shakesbeer? ma said, and pop said Yee gods you're proberly the first to think that line up.

I think I'll stop in the lyberry and makes notes from an enclycopedia, ma said, and pop said. That's a splendid idea, because you cant ask it questions.

And he got in back of the sporting page and ma started to do the bridge problem.

The next minute he heard a whir and something whizzed by his head and took his derby with it.

CHAPTER III

In the space of two steps Paul's manner was transformed from the domineering one he used with the help to the dignified, courteous manner he employed toward well-paying guests. This was none other than William Anthony Deverest—darling of society and hoped-for prey of every romantic debutante. His patronage of the Devon Arms had been responsible for more than coming out party in its grand ballroom, or the larger roof garden. If anything was wrong, it must be set right at once.

Paul's quiet, catlike tread did not herald his coming, and the young man swung around abruptly at Paul's smooth question: "Is there anything I can do, sir?"

"He was looking for Jan Payson, Mr. Harris, and I was just telling him—" put in Molly.

"That Miss Payson is no longer with us," Paul finished quietly. "Miss Elkins is taking her place and will be glad, I am sure, to carry out any commission—"

"But she said she worked here!"

"Yes—ah—yes. She did. At the magazine counter."

"Was she fired?" Deverest demanded, and his tone was so brusque that Paul tactfully evaded a direct answer.

"She was late." Paul's lips thinned to a disapproving line.

Bill Deverest grinned boyishly and ran a hand through his already far from smooth hair. "Yes, I know," he said. "I guess I was responsible for that, in a way."

The manager's eyes widened slightly, but he gave no other indication that these words had started a new train of thought in his quick brain. It was one thing for a clerk to be late, but it was another for a valued customer to admit that he had been the cause of her tardiness. Molly's expression became so open-mouthed at the young man's declaration that Paul thought it better to edge Deverest gently away from the switchboard.

"Miss Payson has been promoted—ah—that is," he said carefully, she will work during the evenings, starting tomorrow."

"Oh!" There was disappointment in Tony Deverest's monosyllable. "Say, do you promote people by making them work harder hours?"

"No," Paul said hastily, "of course not, Mr. Deverest. Miss Payson will—will only work for a few hours at night. She—she's to be in the new floor show," he added with a sudden burst of inspiration "We have a very [illegible]pular roof garden you know, Mr. [illegible]erest, and we are planning some specialties for the holiday season. You will be interested in seeing our new show, I know.'

"What? Oh yes, of course."

Tony Deverest was suddenly conscious that the pale eyes looking at him so earnestly were a little too bland for comfort. He realized that his innocent intention of taking Miss Payson to dinner by way of apology for the day's mishap was being interpreted in a more serious light by her immediate employer. Panic gripped him. From early boyhood he had been trained to avoid publicity. He realized from bitter experience that even his simplest gesture could be misconstrued by the press to have a deeper meaning. He flushed now under Paul's veiled scrutiny and inwardly blamed himself for not giving his invitation, or trying to give to, in a less public manner.

"I just wanted to make sure Miss Payson was all right," he stammered. "I mean, I just wanted to see her for a moment—"

"Of course." Paul's manner was diplomacy itself. "We are always glad to see you here, Mr. Deverest. I am sorry Miss Payson is not in, but she'll be here the next time you come," he promised.

"Well—" Tony Deverest turned the chauffeur's cap in his hands as if he had never seen it before. "My man's day off," he explained to Harris. "I'm chauffeuring myself around town. Well, see you again."

He felt that this was not a graceful exit, but it was the best he could do, and anyway it took him out of sight of the hotel manager's knowing smile. He'd never go back there again!

Paul Harris recognized opportunity when it whirled through the ornate doors of the Devon Arms and he now proceeded to seize it. He consulted the round-eyed Molly whose expert manipulation of the switchboard interfered not at all with her interest in the life around her.

"Jan Payson's telephone number? Sure, she had one somewhere. Wait a minute. One moment, Madam. I'm ringing your number, sir. Jan didn't have a telephone of her own, but—No, Madam, they haven't answered yet. Here it is. It's Jan's landlady's telephone. Ring Mrs. Mallord, Butterfield—Here's your party, sir.

"No," Paul Harris decided hastily. Let it go."

He retreated to his office to consider. A telegram? No, a note. He'd send one of the bellboys with it. With the employes' directory open before him, he observed that Jan lived fairly close by. He'd go himself!

Never one to put off the thing that needed doing, Paul noted with approval that the rain had stopped and, pausing only long enough to get his hat and overcoat, he was off down the street. It did not occur to him until he was nearing the number Molly had written on a slip of paper that his clothes would be noticeable in the neighborhood where he was going. Paul lived in an atmosphere of luxury so long that he had conveniently forgotten that such streets as the one he now turned into still existed. For a minute he thought of going back, but then, remembering Deverest's interest in the girl and the value of his patronage, he walked firmly on.

The street had a depressing and watchful stillness about it that could be felt even when the children's shrill screams broke the silence. Because it was a holiday the dilapidated stores were closed, in most cases obviously, with a rusty padlock. The dirt incrusted windows with their shabby displays of stale bread or wilted vegetables looked even more uninviting than usual. But no number of closed doors could smother the odors that emanated from them on every side. The stench of discarded fish overwhelmed him as he passed a row of garbage cans outside of what was called a "Cape Cod" restaurant.

A group of boys on the corner were dressed in a weird conglomeration of their fathers' cast off clothes, plus feathers from their mothers' hats. Their faces were blacked with burnt cork, their noses reddened, and a few had pasted frayed twine to their chins to simulate beards. Thanksgiving masquerade! Paul averted his eyes hastily and hoped that they would let him pass unnoticed. But at that moment the tallest boy caught sight of his smooth derby and his gleaming white crepe scarf. He was evidently too shocked for words, but the other boys waited for no command from their leader. As one they turned and raced across the street, their hands outstretched, their voices whining in supplication.

"Give us a penny, Mister."

"Don't pay no attention to him, Mister, give it to me...."

"No, it's my turn...." They crowded in front of him.

"Can't you make it a nickel, Mister?"

Paul shook his head and, still not looking at the ragged urchins, he continued determinedly on his way. The disappointed mutterings behind him were, he knew, directed at his "stinginess" and were unfavorable in the extreme. But luckily the house he was looking for, with its broken brownstone steps and rusted railings, was just across the way. Paul breathed a sigh of relief and stepped off the curb. The next minute he heard a whir and something whizzed by his head and took his derby with it. The hat rolled ahead of him in drunken circles and finally came to rest in a puddle of dirty water near the opposite curb. Paul did not need the howls of glees that came from raucous throats to tell him where the missile came from. He did not pause, but let the hat lie where it was and took the brownstone steps two at a time.

It was some satisfaction to hear one of the boys say in a hoarse voice, "Chee, Jack! He's goin' in your house. Now you'll ketch it!"

CHAPTER IV

Jan looked at Dora and Dora looked at Jan. The sick girl's fingers were lightly smoothing the pale blue satin of the chaise longue on which she lay. Jan was sitting precariously on the edge of a deep wing chair beside a tiny fireplace tiled in pale blue.

"I still can't believe it," she said to Dora.

"But, darling, it was only a question of time before somebody realized how good you are. I've always told you that you have an awfully pretty voice and that you really dance very well."

"But a place in their new floor show! And right after he'd just fired me! And then moving us to this lovely, lovely suite—"

Dora, although her face was pale from the strain and emotional upheaval of the last few days, would not admit that there was anything unusual in Jan's sudden good fortune. She adored her younger sister and had often dreamed of success for her. But even she had not imagined that they could be so quickly transported from the squalid bedroom - and - kitchenette at Mrs. Mallord's to this beautiful suite at the Devon Arms.

"Mr. Harris looked so mad, too, as he came in that day," she remembered. "And those dreadful boys knocking off his hat — no wonder! But he's really the kindest person in the world, I think," she added fervently.

"M-mm, yes," Jan agreed absently. All she knew of Paul Harris had not led her to second Dora's opinion, yet she could not deny that he had offered—even insisted—on her having this new position at what was surely a fabulous salary. She had been unable to believe it that day and now, two days later, it still seemed something of a dream. There must be, she knew, something more to it than Paul had told her. But with Dora's childlike enjoyment of the lovely rooms and their sunny view of the river, with the trays of orange juice and milk that came up at regular intervals, no matter whether she was rehearsing or not, with the glorious Arabian Nights atmosphere of it all, Jan could not quarrel.

She prayed that she could keep the dream a reality for a few weeks. If only she could sing or dance a little better! But they seemed to like her anyway — at least Zambrini, the orchestra leader, who had been coaching her in a cute little song, had smiled when she finished her number that morning. His round little body fairly bounced with approval as she turned to him at the end.

"Zat ees eet," he had declared in his funny high voice. "You do eet joost like zat zee opening night. Remember!" His cherubic face attempted a serious expression. "Eet ees a Christmas song. You sing eet simple, like a leetle girl. Joost at the end of each verse you look up sideways—so—like you make fun. But no Broadway—nonono—or Zambini tear zee hair out!"

A knock at the door interrupted the girl's thoughts and made Dora jump.

"I forget and think it's Mrs. Mallord again," she laughed shamefacedly. Jan patted her shoulder reassuringly, as she went to the door.

"I am Mary Elizabeth Howard," a smart young woman announced. "This is my assistant, Pringle," she added, nodding toward the drab woman who stood beside her laden with a number of cardboard boxes.

Jan knew the name—a Howard "creation" was the ultimate in sportswear or evening frocks, even for the patrons of Devon Arms. But it was surprising to see Miss Howard herself. She was a thin wisp of a girl, scarcely taller than Jan herself, with sparkling dark eyes and dark hair piled high under a fantastic turban. Her suit, as she walked past Jan and into the blue and white sitting room, was startlingly simple, Jan noted, but its soft blackness clung to her figure with the grace of a perfectly cut garment. Dora was looking almost frightened as the visitor advanced with determination and motioned Pringle to put her boxes on a long refectory table.

"But—but you must have the wrong suite!" Jan protested when she could find her voice.

"Oh, no!" Miss Howard moved quickly about the room, adjusting the shades, pushing back the furniture with quick, birdlike movements. "You're Jan Payson, aren't you?" At Jan's nod she continued. "I'm to do you an evening dress and a few sports things. Mrs. Harris said you are to appear in the new floor show."

"Oh!" said Jan, and for the life of her she could not think of another thing to say.

But Miss Howard was in no such predicament. She flung herself into a chair and proceeded to rap out orders that Jan did not even think of hesitating to follow. She slipped out of her well-washed kimono and proceeded to allow the silent Pringle to encase her in what Miss Howard referred to as "the correct foundation for evening"— to help her don stockings finer than Jan had ever seen in her life—and to fit her slender feet into a pair of evening sandals studded with "jewe's." Dora gasped as she looked at them and Miss Howard threw in a word of explanation in her crisp, hurried tones:

Pringle, by this time, was sliding something that shimmered and rustled over Jan's head. She gazed into the mirror in astonishment as Pringle, beh'nd her back, manipulated fastenings that tightened the brief bodice so that it outlined her slender figure in what Jan thought, privately, was a very flattering manner The white taffeta looked like frost on a window pane. It was cut on severely simple lines, dropped off the shoulders and just touched the floor all around. Here and there, all over the skirt, were shining flowers that reflected the blue of the walls. Jan touched one with her finger and discovered that it was made of tiny bits of mirror fastened, goodness knew how, to delicate silk.

Jan was sitting precariously on the edge of a deep wing chair beside a tiny fireplace in pale blue.

"But, Miss Howard!" she burst out, turning a perturbed face to the bright-eyed young woman who was making a note on the small pad she had taken from her hand bag. Miss Howard looked up.

"It's perfect for you," she announced. "And," with a smile, "You're perfect for the dress. I seldom have a chance to say anything like that to my customers, Miss Payson. As one working girl to another, I'll let you in on a trade secret; it's usually my problem to make an overweight dowager look a frail eighteen, and it's some problem! But the fat ones are the girls who run to money," she sighed.

"That's just it," broke in Jan eagerly "This seems such an expensive dress. I don't know that I can afford...."

"Oh, you're not paying for it yourself. Didn't Paul Harris tell you? As a matter of fact, when he gave me the order for your outfit it was a scoop for me. Two other houses wanted their names on the Christmas program."

"But is Mr. Harris paying for it?" Jan persisted.

"My name on the program is an advertisement for my house," Miss Howard explained a little wearily. "Other customers in the Devon Arms will see you and I'll get enough orders to pay me for your clothes many t'mes over, I hope. Besides, you're an important person now—don't you know that?"

Jan turned back to the mirror to hide her expression. There it was again! That secret, knowing look that she had surprised on Paul's face more than once since that incredible moment on Thanksgiving afternoon when he had told her she was to have a part in the floor show. She had seen the same look on other faces, too, as if the whole world knew some extraordinary reason why she should be pampered and petted in this way. But there was no such reason. It was all a mistake. And sooner or later the mistake would be discovered and this lovely dream would come to an abrupt end.

In the days that followed Jan found herself far too busy to follow any clues to the mystery that surrounded her. She and Dora lived in a k'nd of ecstasy.

"They do like my singing, Dora," Jan would report, coming home from a rehearsal. "And Zambrini the orchestra leader, you know, says that I have 'rhythm in my feet.'"

"I told you so!"

Dora's voice was almost strong as she caroled her loyal acceptance of praise for Jan. Shining days seemed to run into one another It was two days before "Opening Night" for the new floor show in which Jan was to appear; then it was the night before, then the big night itself.

Then the night was over, and it hadn't been such a big n'ght after all.

HEPBURN PLANS

after the New Year.

Stringent Economy.

The Commonwealth of Australia, where Mitchell Hepburn, Premier of Ontario, intends to go early in 1930 to study economic conditions, achieved what is described as a remarkable comeback from the depression through stringent economy.

Following several years of falling national income, a conference of the federal and state governments was called in 1931 to consider measures to restore solvency and avoid default.

The Premier's Conference, as it was called, adopted and carried out an ambitious program. It embodied a 20 per cent reduction in all adjustable government expenditure, including salaries and pensions; conversion of internal debts of the governments on the basis of a 22½ per cent reduction of interest; additional taxation; reduction of bank interest, and relief of private mortgages.

Pronounced Successful.

By June, 1937, the plan was pronounced successful. Finances of the Commonwealth were again on a satisfactory basis and the combined revenues of the Commonwealth and the six states exceeded expenditures by £966,000 (Australian) (about $3,864,000).

By that time the public service salary cuts had been restored and substantial remissions made in all fields of taxation. It was estimated that conversion on operations in London since 1932 have saved Australia more than £3,250,000 a year in interest.

The Australian Government Railway Lines, which comprise all but 811 miles of a total mileage of more than 27,900, have been a paying proposition. The gross earnings of all government lines in 1935-38 was £41,301,549 of which £11,533,678 was net earnings, representing a return on the total cost of 3,41 per cent.

The government of the Commonwealth is a coalition, called the United Australia Party, headed by Prime Minister Joseph Lyons who was re-elected late in 1937.

DON'T TRUST STRANGERS

It seems to be a human weakness to trust strangers beyond all reason and common judgment. Travelling with some ladies recently while they were relating experiences which they and some of their friends in Bowmanville had had with salesmen and pedlars whom they did not know. One had squandered $15.00 in a picture racket; another had given her husband's suit to a cleaner which suit hasn't been seen since. While another had heard of a local merchant who had paid for several hundred calendars which are still undelivered and address of the city slicker is unknown. To this list might be added the several advertising salesmen which merchants in this and other towns have contributed to without a cent's worth of return. We are just telling of these incidents as a matter of news. We have got beyond warning people of such rackets for it seems to be of no use. Barnum was right when he said a sucker was born every minute, and they enjoy being fleeced, it would seem.—Bowmanville Statesman.

ANTHONY EDEN

About a decade ago Anthony Eden was referred to as "that terrible young man who wants peace so much." He had earned a Military Cross in finding out what war was like. As a rising diplomat he strove, against obstacles now fully realized, to perpetuate the spirit of Locarno and to extend the pacifying influence of the League of Nations. He showed a natural devotion to the strength and dignity of his own country, but it was joined with a larger loyalty to European civilization. Refreshing one's memory of his training and record one recalls that he once wrote art criticisms for a Yorkshire paper, that his collection of French classics in the sixteenth centuries is not to be despised, and that he made a special study of Oriental languages. But his adventures in art and erudition did not blunt the edge of his courage, as he showed conclusively in the crucial test he had to meet last February.

No messenger could have come at this time better equipped to explain England to America. Mr. Eden will find here a hearty welcome and a receptive audience that will spread far beyond the walls within which he speaks.—New York Times.

ADD FARM PERILS

George Birch, one of the best known farmers in the township, had a terrifying experience with their bull the other day, and can thank his stars that the bull which attacked him had its attention attracted just at a time that it was proceeding to maul Mr. Birch in a way that would surely have been fatal. Seeing that the animal had got loose and was in the yard near the barn, Mr. Birch undertook to drive the bull back to the stable, when it turned on him and before he realized what was going on, had him down, straddled him, and was pawing at him, and trying to gore the man with its horns. Mr. Birch managed to get hold of the ring in the bull's nose and stopped the onslaught for a short time, but was again thrown to one side, just when the attention of the frenzied animal was drawn away, and Mr. Birch scrambled up and made his getaway. No matter how valuable an animal it was, it is going to the cannery.—Colchester Correspondent in Amherstburg Echo.

"THIS MAY HURT—"

Anesthetic dentistry has made notable progress through the years, but even now very few climb into the dentist's chair for rest and relaxation. However, a psychological distillation of human obstinacy may accomplish all that the pain-killers have failed to achieve, according to Dr. Arthur Klatzkin.

Dr. Klatzkin's recommendation is to tell the patient flatly that it does hurt. If this is said at just the right moment and with the touch of commiseration, it arouses the sufferers' combativeness, he declares, to the point of denial. "Poor Mrs. Whiffletree," sighs the man with the drill. "Now I'm hurting you." Mrs. Whiffletree promptly bristles and snaps. "No you're not, either!" The psychological factors back of this demonstration are that Mrs. Whiffletree knows very well that it hurts, but wanted to say it first. Being denied this privilege, she is so annoyed she instinctively flies to the other end of the argument and virtually gives herself a fixation.—New York Times.

VEST BAROMETERS

We hasten—says the Philadelphia Record—to publicize the findings of Mr. Phil Cooper. Mr. Cooper, a cleaner and dyer of New York, makes a hobby of collecting the statistics of his industry, and analyzing them. Other men read bumps on foreheads, Mr. Cooper reads spots on vests.

He reports that more gravy stains had to be removed by cleaners and dyers after Thanksgiving Day this year than in any year since 1929, and in that year a lot of hands were shaking while people wondered how much further the market would fall.

Mr. Cooper's grand total for this year is 6,450,000 stain removals, and he concludes: More spots, more gravy; more gravy, more business.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Dec. 16. — (AP) — Stocks attempted to resume the rallying stride in today's market but, with the exception of scattered favorites, the direction was moderately downward.

A few Aircrafts, Coppers, Oils and Specialties managed to attract mild buying power. Many recent leaders, though, failed to retain small gain posted after a slightly lower opening.

Transfers were about 1,200,000 shares.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 16—(CP)—A boiling market in Home Oil provided about the only feature in the early trade on Toronto Exchange today. The Oil group as a whole was up in the index and the Golds also added a small index gain. Base Metal and Industrial Groups recorded minor losses.

Volume was down from the two previous sessions.

Home Oil traded about 70,000 shares in the first four hours and advanced to 2.74 against a close at 2.26 on Thursday. Davies also improved slightly while Okalta, Calgary-Edmonton and the cheaper Western Oils did little better than hold their ground.

Golds were only slightly higher and the leading Base Metals, Nickel, Noranda, Hudson Bay, Waite-Amulet and Anglo-Canadian weakened.

The Senior Oils, Steels, Utilities and Foods displayed mild weakness. Brazilian was sold for a loss of 1 1-2 on the news that the Board of Directors failed to vote a dividend.

Say Ancient Rifle Used in Shooting Of Buck Deer

London, Ont., Dec 16 (CP) — An ancient rifle, reputed to have been issued to soldiers at the time of the Crimean War, has been seized by Provincial Police as the weapon with which Roy McDonald, West Williams farmer, shot a buck deer.

When he came before County Magistrate Hawkshaw today to be fined $20 and costs for shooting the deer, McDonald said he didn't use the old rifle, but another one. However, Provincial Constable L. Shipley has seized the old gun.

When Constable Shipley and Chief Constable George Tanton of Strathroy visited McDonald's home, they had no trouble discovering a deer had been killed, A savory odor led them straight to a piece of venison cooking on the kitchen stove

McDonald told Magistrate Hawkshaw he shot the deer because he needed meat. He said he has six small children to care for the deer was on his land, but that did not save him from a court penalty.

BATTERY STOLEN FROM CAR IN A GARAGE

One person's needs may prove another person's misfortune, at least that is what Lorne Weese, Carrying Place farmer thought when he found the battery of his automobile stolen this morning.

Sometime during the night burglars entered Mr. Weese's private garage, removed a newly charged battery from his automobile and added insult to injury when they stole the tools with which they removed the battery. The garage was still locked when Provincial Constable William McBrien arrived to investigate the robbery this morning.

The robber had gained entrance through a rear window, but had not caused sufficient noise to disturb the residents.

MOST POPULAR STOCKS

The magazine 'Gold' in the issue out yesterday announces results of a questionnaire among Toronto stock brokers as to the "best buys" in Canadian gold stocks listed on the exchange and selling under $6.00 per share. Seventy-eight brokers were queried and final returns showed East Malartic to be in first place with 67 votes, second spot going to Pamour Porcupine, that issue garnering 53 votes. The next eight of the first 10 ran as follows:-MacLeod Cockshutt 49 votes; Kerr Addison 46 votes; Central Patricia 43 votes; Preston 41 votes; Powell Rouyn 37 votes; Beattie 34 votes; Kirkland Lake 32 votes and Macassa 31 votes.

The next 15 selected ran in the following order; Hard Rock, Uchi, Chesterville, Pickle Crow, Perron, Moneta, McKenzie Red Lake, Leitch, Sylvanite, Little Long Lac, Tech Hughes, Madsen, Malartic Goldfields, Premier and McWatters. In all over 60 individual mines were selected by the brokers.

The magazine points out that many brokers recommended Eldorado but this was ignored in the compilation since gold stocks only were requested. The magazine feels, however, that Eldorado would have been included in the first 10 had the list been thrown open to all mining companies.

Toronto, Dec. 16 (CP)—Brantford bacon hog prices made their third advance of the week today with liveweights gaining 15 cents to take top position in that class. Other markets held steady.

Liveweights — Brantford $8.75, Chatham $8.50, Hull $8.50, London $8.65, Peterborough $8.65.

Dressedweights — Barrie $11.65, Chatham $11.60, Hull $11.70, Stratford $11.75, Kitchener $11.75, London $11.75, Peterborough $11.55.

Stronger Prices for Top Grade Eggs

Toronto, Dec. 16—Stronger prices appeared for top grade eggs on the local produce market yesterday, but no change was reported in butter.

Improved buying in wholesale channels reflected better retail sales or the egg market, resulting in firmer prices in the ungraded and graded divisions. Fresh receipts arrived in small volume, barely sufficient for the demand, and offerings kept well cleared. Ungraded eggs changed hand at 29c for grade A-large, 25c for medium, 24c for pullets, 22c for B's and 19c for C grades, while graded shipments were absorbed at 32c to 33c for grade A-large, 28c for medium, 27c for pullets, 25c for B's and 22c for C grades. The retail section of the market maintained former levels.

Although current receipts were extremely light and movement out of storage limited, supplies were ample for requirements on the butter market. Trading was spotty, with traders continuing to purchase on a "hand-to-mouth" basis. Prices remained unchanged.

Butter Firms at Montreal

Montreal, Dec. 16 (CP)—Prices firmed slightly for butter, eggs and cheese on open produce markets Thursday, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported. Demand improved, with export demand a contributing factor for cheese. Potatoes remained unchanged.

Creamery butter to retailers were 22 1-2c to 23c a pound and solids sold for 22c to 22 1-2c.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases were offered at 34c a dozen for A-large, 27c for A-medium, 26c for A-pullets, 24c for B-large, 23c for B. Medium and 21c for C. Receipts: 876 cases.

Konrad Henlein, Sudeten Nazi leader, is pictured in a polling booth as he cast his ballot in the elections for the German Reichstag. Thirty deputies were elected to office in a list headed by Fuehrer Hitler, Henlein and Karl Frank. The ballot read, "do you acknowledge our Fuehrer Adolph Hitler, the liberator of Sudetenland, and do you give your vote to the list of the National Socialist German labor party?" Beneath was a circle for the answer "ja", or yes, and a smaller circle for "nein" or no. One report had Hitler receiving 99.2% of the total votes cast. Another report indicated over 25,000 ballots were cast against Hitler.

In Praise of Famous Names

The manufacturer of any good product, who advertises it consistently in the daily newspapers can, in the course of time, make his product famous.

Everybody knows and uses products whose names are famous because of the vision, faith, courage and enterprise of the owners of them.

They were not famous in the beginning, but the owners proceeded to make them "household words" by means of persistent advertising in daily newspapers. The goodwill value of these names is fabulous; so much so, indeed, that one or more of the plants in which these products are manufactured could be destroyed with less loss to the owner than the loss of the trade name.

You, too, can build sales and goodwill for your products and services by advertising in the Canadian daily newspapers.

LESTER COUL IS CONVICTED

To be Sentenced Later for Chicken Thefts in District

On his own admission while giving testimony as a crown witness in another case, Lester Coul, Cooper, was charged and convicted of the theft of eight chickens, the property of John Tracey, Belleville, when he appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., in today's local police court. Sentence was reserved until Monday, however.

Lester Coul, George Coul and James Gifford, all of Cooper, appared on the chicken stealing charge. Gifford, who was represented by Frank Cushing, local barrister, pleaded not guilty. "I have no evidence against this man," admitted Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C., after consulting police. The charge was immediately dismissed against Gifford, who was called as a witness in the charge against George Coul who also entered a plea of not guilty.

Gifford stated the two Couls and himself had come to Belleville on the night of December 7th last and he had purchased some wine, which they consumed at a Cemetery St., residence. Gifford later admitted he had found two chickens hidden beneath the back seat of his automobile but did not know how they got there. "Lester Coul took them home in a bag", he said. Plainclothes Constable Fred Isard stated he found feathers in Gifford's car during his investigation and later arrested the trio at Cooper.

When Lester Coul was called he said—"I took the chickens. I pulled the heads off six chickens in Mr. Tracey's barn and hid three underneath the back seat of the car."

"So you killed six and only took three? Why that's what skunk does —kills for the love of killing," sarcastically added Mr. Donnan and He asked His Worship for a conviction of Lester Coul upon his own admission of guilt. Mr. Donnan urged severe punishment be handed down in this case. His Worship enlarged the matter for sentence, however.

POLICE COURT

William Richardson and Gordon Richardson, both of this city, were given suspended sentences when they appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., in today's police court for sentence today. The Richardsons had previously pleaded guilty to the theft of a quantity of brass and copper, from their employer. Jacob Goodman, local barrister, appeared on behalf of the accused men and assured His Worship the offence was an initial one and that restitution had been made.

Stanley Archer, Belleville, was given a year's suspended sentence when he appeared on a charge of the theft of a watch "I understand this young man can obtain employment and learn a trade if leniency is shown," interrupted Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C. Restitution having been previously made, His Worship consented to give the lad a chance to make good and rendered the suspended sentence.

Joseph Seames, Belleville, was convicted of driving a car while intoxicated and was given seven days in the common jail. "I understand this young man was the best off of three who had been drinking and was attempting to get the car, which did not belong to him, home safely," pointed out Gordon Robertson, local barrister, who appeared for the accused.

Ray Dickie, Holloway, was given into the custody of his father after restitution had been made when the lad appeared on a charge of theft. Dickie, as an agent, had failed to make returns for sales completed, the court learned in a previous sittings. "Will you go home and help your father, who is here to pay your debts?" asked Mr. Donnan. The lad agreed to the suggestions of the court and was given into the custody of his father, who made restitution, amounting to $15.00.

An inebriate was given 14 days while a domestic case, held in camera, concluded the proceedings.

Lindsay, Ont., Dec. 16 (CP)—John W. Campbell, former County Constable for Victoria County, was committed for trial here today on a charge of perjury.

Imperial Veterans Hold Draw for Ten Prize Tickets

Any doubts His Worship Mayor Jamieson Bone may have had regarding his popularity with the members of the Imperial Veteran's Club of Belleville, were rudely dispelled last night, when the city's chief magistrate in a brief visit to the club's annual pre-Christmas meeting, was greeted with vociferous applause when he entered the Armouries, while veterans stood up and cheered him after a very brief address.

"Keep your powder dry" he told the veterans", and your chins up." The only reason I wanted the Mayor's job for another year was to keep things stirred up, so that something will be done to change present conditions and make this city and country a good place to live in." Mayor Bone rushed away from civic duties for a few moments to address the veterans.

Following the business part of the meeting in which decision was made to hold the annual Christmas tree and entertainment for veterans' children, in the Armouries on Dec. 23rd, President James Shepherd conducted the draw for ten prizes for tickets sold to raise money for the Children's Chirstmas Fund. Little Miss Phyllis Head of Wellington, Ont., drew the tickets from the drum while the lucky winners were cheered to the echo. The winners, in the order named: S. M. Pringle, No. 1519, one quarter beef; A. Little, No. 894, Belleville, one-half pig; Mrs. Turner, 330 1-2 Front Street, No. 819, turkey; Carl O'Hara, 17 S. Park St., turkey, No. 208; Mrs. Haley, 36 Herkimer Street, No. 1101; L. Hopkins, Bettes Street, No. 79; T. Hall, No. 831, 362 Bleecker Ave.; A. G. Snare, R. R. 3, Belleville, No. 135; Percy Ford 106 1-2 Slater St. No. 1305; R. P. Coleman, Bank of Montreal, No. 868.

A pleasant social hour was enjoyed by the veterans following the meeting in which out-of-town veterans were introduced. Conspicuous among these was James Findlay, of Wellington, Ont., one of the few remaining Imperial soldiers of the unit that provided the emergency Union Jack that flew over Baghdad, after its capture by General Maud during the Great War.

Official Denial Br. Somaliland To be Given Italy

J. F. Sanderson
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 16.—(CP Cable) — Official denials were made today of Paris reports that Prime Minister Chamberlain would offer British Somaliland to Premier Mussolini when he visits Rome in January.

"Nothing whatever is known of any such proposal," it was stated in official Whitehall circles.

The report, which was branded "pure nonsense", claimed Mr. Chamberlain would cede British Somaliland to Italy in return for full application by Italy of non-intervention committee's plans for the withdrawal of all foreigners fighting in Spain.

Meanwhile the Prime Minister refuses to answer all questions concerning the agenda of his Rome talks. He also declines to bind himself to follow any particular policy, insisting on a free hand to further his policy of European appeasement.

"NEWS TO US" SAY WESTERNERS

Edmonton, Dec. 16.—(CP)— A statement by Premier Hepburn of Ontario in an address at Toronto yesterday that Alberta farmers were turning from mixed farming to wheat growing was "news" to officials on the Alberta Department of agriculture.

"We have no information such a change is taking place,'" J. R. Sweeney, Deputy Minister of Agriculture said today. "In fact, our information concerning the Brooks and other areas is quite the contrary."

40 Fishing Boats To Begin Training

Victoria, Dec. 16—(CP)—Next February more than 40 sturdy fishing boats will chug into the Esquimalt naval base near here to begin a month's training as units in the defence system of the Pacific coast.

Details of the scheme to establish a fishermen's reserve in British Columbia as an auxiliary to the Royal Canadian Navy were disclosed today by naval authorities. A similar reserve probably will be formed on the Atlantic coast next winter. Recruiting for the British Columbia reserves was begun last June and since then 42 boats and approximately 200 men have enrolled. For 26 days next February they will be trained in signaling, manoeuvring exercises, firing practice, the use of navigational instruments and pilotage.

NEW POST OFFICE LIKELY FOR TWEED

Tenders are being called by the Dominion Department of Public Works for the construction of a new post office in Tweed, states the Commercial News. Bids are being asked on the revised plans for the project prepared by the architect. The job was originally tendered for on November 1937, but prices submitted then were rejected on account of difficulty in connection with the site.

Ald. Robertson Declared Elected by 5 Votes

Kingston, Ont., Dec. 16—(CP)— Ald. H. N. Robertson was declared elected by five votes, after the recount held by Judge E. McLean this morning.

At the municipal elections two weeks ago, it was announced that Alderman Robertson and Alderman A. E. Harbeson had tied with 451 votes each in Ontario ward, Dr. A. E. Ross and H. C. Nickle being elected in that ward, and a tie existing for the third man. Subsequently City Clerk Wyatt cast a deciding vote to elect Alderman Robertson, but application was made by Alderman Harbeson for a recount

Today the recount showed 457 votes for Robertson and 452 for Harbeson.

A Cup of Brown Sugar

By MYRTA A. L. DAVIES

.. was spring time, as sweet and bright a spring time as ever came to Fenton-town. Every square white house had its patch of fresh green grass around it, its bird-nest-builders, its gardens just coming to life.

Best Knight, sitting by her mother's bedside, sewing on a pink kitchen apron, tried to tell the little invalid how lovely everything was, how the rambler leaves were coming out, how blue the sky was, and didn't she want to put on the rose wrapper and sit up so she could see the sun sparkle on the lake?

"No, dearie," said the tired voice. "What do I want to see the lake every day or two for, Bessie?"

"It's beautiful. It'd cheer you up. You get downspirited just lying there thinking of things that aren't pleasant."

"What other things have I got to think about?"

It was such an old question. "You've got me, for one thing." Bess tried to smile. "And you've got as neat a little house as there is on the road, if I do keep it so — And you've got—father."

"Lot he does to make things pleasant for me. He's one thing I haven't—got."

"He works hard, mother, on the farm and teaming out, and he never complains. And, I know there isn't one thing in the world father wouldn't do for you, if he could."

Bess' mother shook her head. "You know as well as I do," she said crisply, her eyes on the great gabled house over the high stonewall. "I don't have to tell you, Bess, all I'd have to do to make your father refuse to do anything for me would be to say to him, 'You go over to Jess Thornton's, and, well, let's say, borrow a cup of brown sugar.' Expect he'd do it? Never.

"Lying here thinking, as you say, do you supopse I haven't been thinking most about the Thorntons and how we haven't spoken a word to each other for four years—not since old Jess didn't bring back the horse rake he borrowed, and your father spoke to him about it and there were words? And—think of it—Clara Thornton and I in school together, the best friend I ever had, and her never coming in to see me in those four years—I ask you, isn't your father to blame for that?"

"Not wholly, mother. Jess Jr., and I used to be good friends too, you know, and his father won't let him speak to me, and father won't let me speak to him. Neither family wants to give in, and—"

"You did use to care a lot about Jess, Bessie."

"I do now, mother. Only I won't do anything to make things any worse than they are now—I—he's getting on fine at electrical school, Aunt Ann says, and he's fine, mother—but—"

After supper Mr. Knight came into the sitting room, answering his wife's call, a small tanned man with a kindly, questioning light in his eyes.

"I want you to go over to Clara Thornton's," said the wife abruptly, her eyes challenging the man, "and borrow a cup — of brown sugar. Over to Clara's."

The man stood still. "What's that, mother?" he shammered.

The woman repeated the question, and something in the tone, something hot and eager and wistful behind the challenge, so far behind that even the sick woman was hardly conscious of it, made the man come swiftly to the bedside and kneel down.

"Why, mother," he said gently. "You know what you're asking?" I'll get the sugar for you, over to the store. I thought we had a plenty."

"I want a cup of Clara Thornton's brown sugar," she said, and put her hand in her husband's.

The man got to his feet. "You're going to get it," he said, gently.

In the moonlight, Bess and her mother saw him going over the high stonewall.

"It seems like that he was just waiting for me to ask him," sobbed the little woman, "and I never knew."

Awful minutes.

"If Clara shouldn't let him have the sugar—if they shouldn't let him in—"

"Perhaps they've just been waiting for one word, too, mother—"

The minutes were like hours. Suddenly Bess' mother leaned toward the window.

"They're coming she whispered. They're on the piazza. Get me into my rose wrapper, and I'll sit up in the big chair. They're coming over here—all of 'em, Clara and Jess and young Jess. Bessie—and your father's bringing the cup af brown sugar. Hurry Bess, can't we have some pop corn for 'em? I feel sort o' hungry like. And look, girl, did you ever see how pretty the lake looks in the moonlight, and how it smells o' spring all through the house?"

NAZI PARTY IN CZECHO-SLOVAKIA FORECAST

Two Firemen Injured in $100,000 Fire at Thornbury

NEWS ODDITIES AND BRIEFS

BANDITS CRACK SAFE NOT OPENED SINCE 1917

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Dec. 17 (CP)—The would-be safe-cracker who knocked the dial off the Steelton town hall vault the other night is just an old meanie. The vault hasn't been opened since 1917 when Steelton amalgamated with Sault Ste. Marie and the combination got lost. Officials were quite sentimental about it, too.

ABSENT-MINDED WITH CHRISTMAS CARDS

Evanston, Ill., Dec. 17 (AP)—They chalked up another mark against the mythical absent-minded professor today. A well-dressed elderly man carefully deposited 200 stamped and addressed envelopes in the waste paper box in Fountain Square. Passers-by notified policeman Lowell Peterson who retrieved the envelopes, apparently containing Christmas cards. "Probably some absent-minded Northwestern University professor," said Peterson as he stuffed the letters in a mail box.

DECAPITATE BANDIT IN DRIVE ON CRIME

Nuremberg, Germany, Dec. 17—(CP-Havas)—Willi Heller, 24, died on the guillotine at midnight for wounding a taxi-driver in a robbery attempt four days ago.

He had been sentenced to death by a special court only a few hours earlier, along with his companion in the crime, Hanna Muendel, 21. The swift punishment was part of a government drive to cut short a wave of banditry in the Reich.

Chancellor Hitler commuted Fraulein Muendel's death sentence to life imprisonment.

THE WEATHER

Toronto Dec. 17 (CP)—A trough of low pressure, moving eastward across the Great Lakes, has caused snow, with part rain in southern districts, over the greater part of Ontario though elsewhere the weather has been generally fair. It has been rather cold from the Ottawa Valley eastward and it is colder this morning in Northwestern Ontario. It is comparatively mild in Saskatchewan and Alberta with rising temperature in Manitoba. Pressure is high over a large part of the western states and over the Grand Banks with a disturbance centred well off the south Atlantic coast.

Lake Superior — Fresh northwest winds; partly cloudy and colder with snowflurries in east portion. Sunday, partly cloudy and cold, followed by moderating temperatures in western districts with local snowflurries.

Manitoba—Fresh to strong southerly winds; partly cloudy and milder with scattered snowflurries. Sunday, fair and comparatively mild.

Saskatchewan and Alberta—Fair and comparatively mild today and Sunday.

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Science Service Meteorologist

Economics of wind! We have to thank the wind for many of the larger characteristics of our climate. According to its direction, wind brings to us the cold of the North and the warmth of the South, thus bringing about a more uniform temperature to the earth than would otherwise be the case. Wind carries the moisture of the sea - inland, especially where there are no mountain barriers to interfere. The cold north and northwest winds of the winter season bring vigor to man, insure nature's ice crop, which is still being used; and they stimulate all industries which cater to the business of keeping us warm.

TANGLED SKEIN OF HIGH FINANCE SLOWLY UNRAVELS

Believed Donald Coster Helped to Finance One War

EIGHT INQUIRIES

Authorities Move Quickly Against Three Brothers Left in Firm

By HAL BOYLE

New York, Dec. 17 (AP) — Still more sensational disclosures of the incredible web of international financial intrigue spun by P. Donald Coster, the wizard whose magic failed him, were forecast today with ten investigations seeking to unravel the tangled skein.

The breath-taking developments yesterday, climaxed when Coster ended his two-lives-in-one by firing a bullet into his brain, indicated the suspected milking of the $87,000,000 McKesson and Robbins Drug Company of $18,000,000 in assets was only one of his many far-flung extra legal activities which extended into Canada.

May Tie Up Assets.

The Canadian government sought to tie up assets of the company in Canada where vast crude drug reserves reputedly were stored. Investigators were seeking to determine whether any assets actually were in the Dominion or whether they might have existed on paper only.

At Ottawa it was learned the Income Tax Division of the National Revenue Department has issued writs of conservatory attachment against assets of the Canadian affiliates of McKesson and Robbins.

(Issuance of the writs, which will in effect temporarily attach the assets of the companies related to the drug concern, is a preliminary step in the Canadian government's investigation into the financial affairs of the companies.)

COL. W. P. MULOCK SUPPORTS KING

Assailed Those Who Attacked Prime Minister in Address

Toronto, Dec. 17 (CP)—Col. William P. Mulock, M.P. for North York, last night declared himself 100 per cent behind Prime Minister Mackenzie King in his disagreement with Premier Hepburn of Ontario.

Speaking before the Hebrew Liberal Club, Mr. Mulock pleaded for unity in Canada and stated that "statesmen and politicians should work for the good of this country rather than tear it asunder."

"I am a Liberal and I intend to remain a Liberal, 100 per cent behind Prime Minister King," he said. "In so far as I can in my own small way I intend to support him."

Mr. Mulock assailed Prime Minister King's attackers and in a brief address told of the work of the King government in reducing Canada's national debt.

"I can remember when Mr. Hepburn went up and down Ontario speaking on behlf of Mr. King's party," he declared. "I don't quite understand a man's change of opinion in this way."

EXPOSED SWINDLER COMMITS SUICIDE

P. Donald Coster, LEFT, indicted president of the McKesson and Robbins, Inc., third largest drug firm in the United States, killed himself at his suburban estate at Fairfield, Conn., after investigators looking into an $18,000,000 shortage in the listed assets of his firm, discovered that his real name was Philip Musica and that he had been convicted on grand larceny 25 years ago. It was revealed that George E. Dietrich, assistant treasurer of the company, RIGHT, was in reality Musica's brother. Another brother, going under the name of George Vernard, is also being held by authorities. Samuel Reich, attorney for the dead man, is shown behind the two accused brothers.

MAN IS WOUNDED WHILE ATTEMPTING TO ROB COTTAGE

Caretaker of Summer Homes Surprises Pair at Work

TRAIL IS LOST

Ascona Point, Dec. 16 (CP) — One of two men surprised while burgling a summer cottage at this Sturgeon Lake resort was wounded early today by a rifle bullet fired by Harold Hillis, caretaker of several homes on the point. The men escaped by fleeing along the ice covering of the lake.

Hillis, superintendent of Windweep Farm, surprised the men in the cottage of Robert Fennell, Toronto, as he returned home from a school concert. He went to his home for a .22-calibre rifle, poked it through a partially opened window shutter and fired at the burglars at work inside the house.

The men burst from the cottage and fled to the lake as Hillis again fired his rifle. The caretaker and Provincial Constable David Adair, brought from Lindsay, 13 miles southwest of the point, followed a trail of blood on the ice for a considerable distance. The trail was lost when the men took to the shore.

Hillis said he noticed lights in Mr. Fennell's palatial summer home and went to investigate, taking his rifle with him. "When I got close to the cottage I heard the sound of breaking glass," he said. "When I got within twenty yards I saw the shutter on one of the windows was half open.

"I could hear the two men inside and I shot through the lower part of the shutter. I thought at the time I had hit one of the men and I saw them go out on the lake. When they were running on the ice I took another shot at them."

HELD IN SWINDLE

Probing the affairs of McKesson & Robbins, Inc., third largest drug firm in the U. S., investigators discovered that George Vernard head of one of the Canadian branches of the firm, is in reality a brother to Philip Musica, who, using the alias of F. D. Coster, was president of the huge firm. Coster committed suicide after hearing an order for his arrest had been issued, while Vernard is being held on bail. An $18,000,000 shortage in the assets of the firm is being investigated.

YELLOW RIVER FLOODS COVER SIX DISTRICTS

Dykes Broken Near Kaifeng and Waters Pour Southward

NEW INUNDATIONS

Shanghai, Dec. 17 AP)—Ney Yellow river floods inundating six districts of Northern Kiangsu Province were reported today in dispatches from the endangered area, approximately 400 miles northwest of Shanghai.

Flood waters were said to have broken through river dykes near Kaifeng, Honan, and poured as far southward as Kiangsu's northernmost tip.

Meanwhile Chungking dispatches quoted the Chinese Vice Minister of Air, General Chen Cheng, as estimating Japanese casualties at 270,000 men during Yangtse Valley fighting from June through September. Of these 96,000 were killed in action.

Chen said 30,000 Japanese soldiers had been sacrificed to gain 50 miles along the Anchang Railway since the fall of Kiukiang July 26.

The Chinese official estimated in all 1,000,000 Japanese were engaged in fighting and garrisoning the already captured territory, 600,000 of them fighting in the Yangtse valley.

No Christmas Carols to Be Sung At German Yuletide Festivities

Berlin, Dec. 17 (AP)—Instructions on how to celebrate Christmas in acceptable Nazi fashion have gone forth from various cultural departments of the National Socialist regime. Emphasis is laid on the principle that observance of Yuletide is an ancient Germanic custom and should be followed as such.

"Under National Socialism Yule has regained its ancient traditional character of winter Solstice rejoicings," one order observes. "Our Germanic forefathers celebrated Yule which is older than Christ and which Christendom borrowed from the Germanic prototype."

In several cities members of girls' Hitler organizations have indicated they will sing no more Christmas carols. Other orders are to the effect that the place for religious Christmas exercises is church and must "on no account be introduced into community celebrations".

Christmas plays must not be performed in schools. Instead, reversion to the old custom of presenting dramatic versions of ancient legends bearing on the battle between light and darkness, good and evil, is recommended, with full allowance for old local customs. Christmas trees are as popular as ever however.

The Orthodox Christian view toward Christmas is retained by Bishop Theodore Heckel, who was appointed in 1934 to have charge of "the church foreign affairs department". In a Christmas message sent today, on behalf of the home church, to evangelical communities abroad he said:

"The message of the Gospel must always stand in the midst of strife. After one year of war perils avoided, it behooves Christians of all the world to kneel by the manger and render thanks, but also to pray for strength to continue peace work already begun.

THREE BUILDINGS, SEVERAL STABLES ARE DESTROYED

500 Telephone Lines Put Out of Commission by Blaze

WIND ASSISTS FIREMEN

Occupants of Three Apartments Forced to Flee in Night Attire

Thornbury, Ont., Dec. 17 (CP)—Damage of more than $100,000 was caused early today when the worst fire in fifty years destroyed or damaged three buildings and several stables here. Two firemen were injured slightly fighting the blaze. Thornbury is about 25 miles east of Owen Sound.

Five-hundred telephone lines were put out of commission when the fire, which broke out in G. D. Binkley's general store, destroyed the Bell Telephone Company office. The town's public library, a fraternal order's meeting hall, two hardware stores and at least three stables were gutted.

Only the fact a south wind was blowing the flames away from other nearby buildings prevented the blaze

WALKS ON LEDGE TO ARREST MAN

Roy Penny, Toronto, Held on a Charge of Housebreaking

Toronto, Dec. 16 (CP)—Patrol Sergeant Richard Carr walked along a narrow ledge on the second storey of a Toronto home in his stockinged feet last night and arrested Roy Penny, 25, Toronto, on a charge of housebreaking. Penny was crouching behind a chimney adjoining the premises he is alleged to have burglarized.

While a cordon of police officers watched from below, Carr jumped four feet from house to house, drew his revolver and ordered Penny to emerge with his hands up. Penny offered no resistance. The two descended to the ground by a ladder.

Police said Penny had jewelry in his possession taken from the home of Arthur Gynn. Police were called to the scene after a passer-by heard the sound of breaking glass. Carr entered the house and stepped out on the ledge in further search when he discovered the house was empty.

ROYAL FAMILY AT WINDSOR

London, Dec. 17 (CP-Havas)—The fiking and queen, accompanied by Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret, left Buckingham Palace yesterday for the Royal Lodge at Windsor, where they will spend the week-end.

TO MARRY COUNTESS?

Rumor going the rounds of London's drawing rooms hath it that curly-haired and handsome Robert Sweeny (ABOVE), native San Franciscan, now resident of London, will be the next husband of Countess Court Haugwitz-Reventlow, better known as the former Barbara Hutton, heiress to the five-and-ten millions. Sweeny, who won the British amateur golf championship in 1937, recently requested British authorities to hold up final papers that would make him a British citizen. Lookers-behind-the-scenes-for-ulterior-motives point out that in the event Sweeny does wed the countess when she is freed from her Danish count, the marriage would restore her American citizenship—a goal now said to be one of her main ambitions.

WOULDN'T LEAP AGAIN INTO TIDE 'FOR THOUSANDS'

Lumberjack Who Jumped Two Hundred Feet Into Tide Suffers Bruises

NOW IN HOSPITAL

By JOHN DAUPHINEE

Vancouver, Dec. 17 (CP)—Gordon (Oscar) Erickson, the Swedish lumberjack from Vancouver Island who bettered Steve Brodie's act by leaping 200 feet into the choppy rip tide of the harbor mouth, complained today "it wasn't half as much fun as I thought it was going to be".

Erickson is in the police-guarded psychopathic ward at Vancouver General Hospital, his back a mass of bruises from hitting the water at 75 miles an hour.

Jumped For Fun.

"I jumped just for the fun of it," he said. "I wish I hadn't. I wouldn't do it again for many thousand dollars."

Late Thursday the 31-year-old tree feller from Jordan River, B.C. climbed to the railing of the new Lion's Gate suspension bridge, threw off his overcoat and jumped off backwards. He was hauled from the water by a ferry passenger who jumped overboard to the rescue.

"I guess it's a miracle I'm alive. The doctors say I must have hit my back first because that's where I'm bruised.

"But that wasn't what happened. I doubled my arms over the top of my head and went in head first That's all that saved me."

No Charge Laid.

Police said he was being detained for observation. No charge has been laid against him.

But it's the police angle that worries Edickson most, the red-haired logger admitted.

"They haven't said anything but I guess they can fine me or even send me to jail for jumping off," he said. "That's what I keep thinking about.

"You can say definitely I wasn't trying to commit suicide," he continued in his quiet, accented voice.

"I just jumped for fun. I guess I was a little drunk at the time."

No Doubt of It, He says.

His eyes lighted when he was told the general belief is that New York's Steve Brodie didn't make his publicized 100-foot jump from Brooklyn

Grand Duke Vladimir Denies Rumor He Will Consult With Adolf Hitler

Paris, Dec. 17 (CP-Havas) — A settlement of the 20-year dispute dividing leading members of the Romanoff dynasty and other White Russians may be effected here tomorrow by Grand Duke Vladimir, pretender to the throne.

The 21-year-old Grand Duke, who arrived here yesterday enroute to Germany, will try to effect the reconciliation in a meeting with representatives of all Russian monarchist factions at the Hotel Rochefoucauld.

Competent monarchist spokesmen emphasized the Grand Duke's visit to Germans is of private character, involving Christmas visits to his relatives.

In an interview with Havas the young head of the Romanoffs dismissed reports that during his stay in Germany he would consult with Chancellor Hitler on a move to set himself up on the throne of a new Ukrainia.

Denial of reports that the pretender's visit to Germany is linked with plans to create a Reich-dominated independent Ukraine carved from the Soviet Union, Poland, Rumania and Czechoslovakia was made by many competent sources. Addressing newspapermen he said:

"There is no reason why Hitler or German authorities should invite me to see them during my trip to Germany. However, if such an invitation should be made I probably would refuse."

In answer to a question, the Grand Duke said it was difficult to tell whether monarchists sympathies are prevalent in the U.S.S.R. due to the scanty information coming across the border.

Party on German Lines Envisaged on Czech Soil, Even Including Guards

Prague Newspaper Makes Announcement of Plan for New Future

SLOVAKIAN ELECTION

Sunday's Vote for New Diet Patterned on Totalitarian Models

Prague, Dec. 17 (AP)—Formation in the near future of a German National Socialist Party in Czechoslovakia patterned after Nazi organizations in the Reich was announced today by the newspaper Prager Zeitungsdienst.

Thus Germans still remaining in the reshaped republic—approximately 35,000 of them—apparently are to come under Nazi control though theoretically they are under Czechoslovak sovereignty.

The newspaper which announced imminent formation of the party is the organ of Ernst Kundt, formerly a Sudeten Party sub-leader.

To Practise National Socialism.

"It is self-evident that Germans must have liberty to profess and practise German National Socialism," the paper declared.

The organ envisages a party organized exactly along German lines so that sub-organizations such as the Labor Front, Hitler Youth, Food Front and other economic institutions would be established. Even the formation of SS Black-uniformed Guards is contemplated on Czech soil.

Bratislava, Czecho-Slovakia, Dec. 17 (CP-Havas)—In an election modelled after those in totalitarian states, Slovakia will elect its first autonomous diet tomorrow. The only official list, that of the government, is expected to receive a vote of 85 to 90 per cent.

The newly elected diet will meet in mid-January to confirm the autonomous government headed by Joseph Tiso, draw up a constitution for the autonomous province, and prepare for new elections next year.

The first diet will have one deputy for each group of 20,000 voters, but is limited to a maximum of 70 members. The official list is headed by Premier Tiso and Karol Sidor, Slovak vice-premier and a member of the Czecho-Slovak cabinet.

The election will take the form of

PRIME MINISTER SIXTY-FOUR TODAY

Rt. Hon Mackenzie King Spe.nds Birthday Working at Desk

Ottawa, Dec. 17 (CP)—Prime Minister Mackenie King celebrated his 64th birthday today by working as usual. He was at his desk at Laurier House early this morning, opening and reading the hundreds of letters and telegrams of congratulation he received.

The Prime Minister, who was born Dec. 17, 1874, plans no birthday party. He will be at his desk all day but will not make his usual daily trip to his office in the East Block.

Flowers sent by well-wishers filled his study and mailmen and telegraph messengers were his first visitors. The Prime Minister looked fit on his birthday, having seemingly recovered from the attacks of sciatica which curtailed his activities during the summer. A month's rest in the West Indies this fall aided him to regain his health.

LIBERAL CAUCUS HAS NO POWER TO OUST HEPBURN

Likely to Consider Motion of Confidence in Premier King

TO MEET MONDAY

Ottawa, Dec. 17 (CP)—When the caucus of Federal Liberal members, Liberal defeated candidates and Liberal senators in Ontario meets here on Monday the first business likely will be consideration of a resolution expressing confidence in the leadership of Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

A prominent Liberal here today said he expected the next step would be to consider whether, in view of Premier Hepburn breaking with Mr. Mackenzie King and since Mr. Hepburn is head of the Liberal machine in Ontario, a new Liberal organization in the province should be built up to act independently of the Ontario premier.

No Power to Oust Hepburn.

The caucus would have no power to read Mr. Hepburn out of the Liberal party, this parliamentarian said, because it will represent only Ontario. The Liberal party is a national institution and the only way a member of the party could be read out would be following action of a national caucus such as will be held after parliament opens next month when all provinces will be represented. Men have been read out of a party in the past by the national party leader after a national caucus had decided such a step should be taken.

The view here is that while a national caucus could read a man out of the national party, it would lack authority to read him out of the provincial party. However, it is argued Mr. Hepburn has already dissociated himself from the national party.

Until the break-up between Mr. Hepburn and Mr. Mackenzie King, the National Liberal Federation acted as a Federation of the Provincial Liberal Associations which supported the party in both Federal and Provincial elections. The only exception was in Quebec where each county is a separate unit acting directly with the national organization.

Playmates Rescue Boy as Schoolbag Catches on Ice

Lindsay, Ont., Dec. 17 (CP)—Quick action by seven-year-old Paul Power's playmates saved his life yesterday when the youngster fell through the ice of the Trent Canal locks here.

Paul's school bag caught on a jutting piece of ice, momentarily preventing him from plunging into the deep water. His companions, Jack Cain and Vernon Power, grabbed the bag and pulled him to safety.
